PURPOSE OF THIS COMMENTARY.

THE object of this important Commentary is unique. It is to exhibit the History of the Hebrew Monarchy in a connected narrative, with everything necessary for its elucidation. Thus it commences with the agitation of the Israelites for a more permanent form of government, strengthened and made irresistible by the misconduct of Samuel's sons; and ends with those portions of the prophetic books which throw light upon the purpose of the Hebrew Monarchy, the reasons of its fall, and its survival in that which was ever the true reason of its existence—the spiritual reign of David's Son. And throughout, the inner feelings of God's Church of old are shown by the introduction of those Psalms which, either by external evidence or by the nature of their contents, seem either to be contemporaneous with the events recorded, or to have been expressly written to celebrate them. And when read thus in juxtaposition with the history, it is marvellous how clearly their true data and connexion manifest themselves. Many a doubt as to their time and origin passes away, and we feel that we have in the Psalms the spiritual interpretation of the historic facts and the light in which they were regarded at the time by the more pious portion of God's people. They raise the history to a higher level, and that not one imaginary, but evidenced by the national poetry, and actually the standpoint of the true worshippers of Jehovah throughout the nation's history. The poetry of a nation is ever the true index to the national character, and that of the Jews holds a position infinitely nobler than that of any other race of men; and the Editor has done well in thus bringing together the events and the inspired commentary upon them.

DIVINE DISAPPROVAL OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KINGLY FORM OF GOVERNMENT—WEAKNESS OF THE THEOCRATIC RULE.

The establishment of kingly rule was undoubtedly a part of the Divine purpose, and as such was looked forward to in the Book of Deuteronomy (ch. 17. 14-20). It was, indeed, an essential part of the preparation for the kingdom of the Messiah; and in lower matters it gave the Israelites greater national security and more rapid progress in civilization than they had ever enjoyed before. Without the kingdom they could scarcely have worked out the purpose for which they were called into being.

Why then, we may ask, was it so strongly condemned by Samuel and by God (Hos. 13. 11)? The reason is not far to seek. The form of Israel's government up to this time had been that of God's direct control. Jehovah was Israel's king, and His will was to be learnt of the priest by the Urim and Thummim (Num. 27. 21). Now, had the people been living in an advanced stage of holiness, this would have been the best form of rule. It was an ideal government, but unfit for men half civilized, and still in a low state of morality; for its success depended upon their faith and trust in their God. As Aristotle teaches us, the corruption of the best is the worst, and the Theocracy as actually administered provided neither for the safety nor for the progress of the people. Something of the sort is attempted in the Papacy. The ideal is high: the actual performance is ruinous. So it was with the government of Israel. Moses, who was king in Jeshurun (Deut. 33. 5), with rare self-renunciation, reserved no special rank or privilege for his own sons. They sank at once to the level of ordinary Levites, and the Levites were left in poverty. Had the Israelites been fit for the theocratic government the position of the Levites would have been a noble one. As it was, they were scarcely more than mendicants (Judg. 17, 7 sqq.). Similarly, Moses had arranged no political machinery by which the tribes could act as a united body. They were like the United States of America without the solidifying influence of the Federal Government; and thus, only on very rare occasions could they be induced to act together. Each tribe had some sort of patriarchal government, being ruled by the "heads of the fathers' houses"; but its action was irregular, spasmodic, and destitute of administrative machinery, and, therefore, of coercive power. It failed in punishing even the most atrocious crimes, and every man's lust was his law. "In those days there was no king in Israel; every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judg. 17. 6; 21. 25). Four times in the Book of Judges we have this lamentation over the want of a king uttered in connexion with the record of unscrupulous wickedness, and the whole book bears witness to the miserable effects of this absence of political organization.

GROWING FEEBLENESS OF ISRAEL IN PALESTINE—LONG SUPREMACY OF THE PHILISTINES, AND DEGENERACY OF ISRAEL.

It was this national weakness which made the Israelites unable, after the death of Joshua, to complete the conquest of Canaan (Judg. 1). Nay, more; about a century afterwards the tables were completely turned upon them, and the Canaanites, under Jabin, king of Hazor, a town which Joshua had destroyed (Josh. 11. 10), for twenty years were the masters of Northern Palestine. Jabin's was no conquest from without by Moabites, or Ammonites, or Midianites; it was the uprising of the conquered race, and the reduction of the Israelites for a time to the abject position to which Joshua had condemned the natives. Undoubtedly this re-conquest of Palestine had been long preparing, and witness is borne to this by the Canaanite king having taken the old name of Jabin—the Phœnician title of the ruler of Northern Palestine. Had there been any form of federal government such a reversal of position would have been impossible. The central power would not have permitted the Canaanites to re-establish themselves in so strong a position as Hazor. And even when the ferocity of Sisera had driven the people to desperation, all those portions of Palestine which had not felt, as yet, the weight of his hand, stood aloof in indifference. Ephraim, the key-stone state, did nothing. Judah, destined to play so important a part in the future, is not even alluded to in Deborah's triumph-song. Evidently nothing was expected from it. It was the smaller tribes—Zebulun, Issachar, Naphtali—which, guided by the wisdom of Deborah and the skilful generalship of Barak, stayed the progress of this re-conquest. The revolt was an act of desperation on their part, and it was this desperation probably which made the charge of the ten thousand down the slopes of Tabor so irresistible.

And always, in Israel's extremity, the right man was raised up to save the nation from extinction. But, as we read the Book of Judges, we can come to no other conclusion than that its vitality was rapidly waning. Under Gideon Israel was powerful, and though the civil war which followed his death weakened it, yet it maintained its independence for a long period under a succession of comparatively insignificant judges. But when we reach the age of Samson its independence is gone. From the Egyptian records we know that in the days of Rameses III., that is, about Samson's time, the power of Egypt was diminished, and the Philistines became the dominant people of Southern Palestine.* With these ancient records the Bible is in full accord; for, in the introduction to the history of Samson, it says: "The Lord delivered the children of Israel into the hand of the Philistines forty years" (Judg. 13. 1). The evidence of these records enables us now to form a just estimate of the greatness of the internal reformation wrought by Samuel, and of his bravery and that of Saul; for it was with no ordinary nation they had to contend, and at the commencement of the struggle the Philistines had fortified posts in all the land of Israel (1 Sam. 10. 5; 13. 3), and had disarmed the whole nation (1 Sam. 13. 19-22).

It was the immorality of the people which had sapped the national strength. Had they been chaste and temperate, they would have led free, happy, and prosperous lives. The Book of Judges sets them before us as a sensual race, though brave, intelligent, and, as we see in the case of Samson, possessed of wit and humour. What then God and Samuel condemned in their seeking after a king was, that they had shown themselves unworthy of having God for their ruler. The cup of their wickedness was full when, * Dr. Brugsch in his History of Egypt under the Pharaohs, which has been translated into English, shows from the Monuments that the Pharaohs of the Eighteenth Dynasty were lords paramount of Southern Palestine, and held Gaza and other Philistine strongholds by garrisons. But under the Nineteenth Dynasty Rameses III. was assailed at the commencement of his reign by a powerful confederacy, including not only Greeks and Cypriotes, Hittites and Philistines, but even Sardinians and Sicilians. At first the confederacy was successful, but gradually Rameses gained the ascendancy, and after some years of struggle was victorious both by sea and land. But his power was so broken that though he subsequently invaded Palestine, yet it was not more than a raid, and the Philistines gained their freedom, and under the name of Pulista appear henceforward frequently upon the monuments. It was not until the reign of Rehoboam that the Egyptians again appeared in force in Palestine. This new light thrown upon the Bible history has a most important bearing upon the History of the Hebrew Monarchy. We now understand how the Philistines were able to hold the Israelites in such long subjection; and how the struggle with them prepared the way for the empire of David. Trained during Saul's reign in a fierce warfare with this brave and well-armed people, the Israelites were able, on emerging victorious, to win for David all the adjacent countries. His empire was, as we have seen, necessary to enable Israel to work out its Divine mission, but there was always the certainty, with Egypt and Assyria in the background, that Israel's empire must be temporary. Not Israel, but that kingdom of which Israel was the type, was to be the heir of the four great world-monarchies, and fill the whole earth (Dan. 2. 35).

at the tabernacle of Shiloh, priests set the example of lust and defiled the sanctuary itself. The punishment quickly came in that defeat in which Eli's sons were slain and the Ark captured. With what barbarous cruelty the Philistines destroyed Shiloh we read in Ps. 78. 60-64; and its fate left so painful an impression upon the hearts of the Israelites that the town was never rebuilt, and the mention of its name by Jeremiah as a warning to Jerusalem so filled the people with rage and horror, that they wanted to put the prophet to death for his ill-omened reference to it (Jer. 26. 8, 9).

ISRAEL'S REPENTANCE UNDER SAMUEL.

As the result of so terrible a disaster, the Philistines tightened their hold upon Israel. We may be sure that Shiloh was not the only place where the conqueror trampled down the vanquished; and not merely was Israel disarmed, but lest it should make weapons for itself it was left without tools, and the farmers had to go down to the land of the Philistines to get repairs even for their agricultural implements. Probably this extreme severity was exercised only in Benjamin and parts of Judah, the districts where Samuel and subsequently Saul were most active. No wonder, then, that when at Eben-ezer, the spot previously so fatal to the nation, Samuel had discomfited the Philistines, the people longed for greater security. In reading the summary of the results of this battle in 1 Sam. 7. 13, 14, we must remember that the custom of the Hebrew annalist is to look onward to the ultimate results of an action and describe them as if immediate. The cause includes the effect; and the repentance of the people, brought about by Samuel's efforts, and crowned with the Divine approval at Mizpeh, contained within it the complete deliverance of the nation. Israel's regeneration was wrought first in the hearts of the people: its restoration to Jehovah's favour was shown by the victory at Eben-ezer; finally, Saul and David, as Samuel's instruments, wrought out the legitimate effects of Samuel's work in setting Israel free from the yoke of foreign dominion. Undoubtedly Samuel was the greatest and wisest of Israel's heroes, and the recovery of the nation was his work.

CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY DURING SAMUEL'S RULE.

Had the repentance of Israel been complete and the lives of the people holy, the nation would have been content and have rejoiced in the personal government of their God. It fell far short of this, and its deliverance as yet was only partial. Its actual condition in Samuel's days was that described in 1 Sam. 13. Philistine outposts still held strong positions throughout the land; the people were still disarmed, but Samuel's victory made the Philistines careful not to provoke the people by wanton acts of cruelty, and they thus enjoyed a fair amount of personal liberty; and Samuel himself took care for the orderly administration of justice in the chief districts of Benjamin, with which the history in this part of the Book of Samuel is concerned. But even this limited degree of independence seemed to the people to rest upon the life of one old man. His sons were not treading in his steps, and at his death, what was to be their fate? They were not capable of looking upwards and of seeing their true Ruler; they needed greater earthly security. They had proved their bravery upon many a well-fought field; but who was to be their leader? Their great lawgiver, Moses, had left them without any national organization. He had meant them to be something higher than one of the nations of the earth—even a spiritual people living in communion with God. They had deserted Him and were living in sin. For such the legislation of Moses was insufficient; for they needed safety and protection. They must have someone to summon them together, to marshal them, and take the command, and unite their strength for any great effort. At present they were not a nation, but were tribes with no more cohesion than the sands. They needed something to consolidate them and make them into a rock.

Saul's Energy and Defects.

A king, therefore, was politically a necessity, and Saul proved the practical wisdom of the popular demand. But for his energy the people of Jabesh-gilead would have been deprived each of his right eye as a reproach to all Israel. But Saul rose equal to the occasion, because he had a Divine appointment giving him the right to command; and it was probably the knowledge of his right that made the people ready to obey. During his reign the power of the Philistines was diminished, and Israel's freedom increased; but the complete realization of the nation's hopes was frustrated by Saul's personal faults. Miserably jealous, looking askance at every man of merit, brooding over every achievement of others as a wrong done to himself, he became the victim of deepest melancholy, and by it at length his mind was unhinged. Had he cherished and loved his noble son Jonathan, and David, his true and faithful lieutenant, the battle of Gilboa would either never have been fought, or would have completed Israel's deliverance. It was Saul's persecution of David, and the consequent weakening of his power, which gave the Philistines the opportunity of recovering from their earlier defeats; and Saul's tragic death was the avenging upon him of that gloomy temper, which had embittered his latter days, and turned his many noble qualities into meanness and treachery.

RESULTS OF DAVID'S DESERTION OF HIS COUNTRY, AND OF THE MURDER OF ABNER.

A defeat so total brought back Israel's worst days. Once again the Philistines reduced the whole country west of the Jordan to obedience, Hebron alone excepted, and the adjacent district, wherein David maintained some degree of independence: while Ish-bosheth and Abner, the real ruler, fled far away to Mahanaim, beyond Jordan, in the hill country of Gilead. And this miserable state of things continued for several years, chiefly because of the unworthy act of David in deserting his country and becoming a vassal of the Philistine king of Gath. Placed there in a false position his whole conduct was a tissue of deceit and treachery, though happily he was saved from the worst effects of his crime by the suspicions naturally entertained of him by the Philistine lords. But now when Saul had fallen, and the eyes of all would naturally have turned towards the man whom God had chosen to be the heir of the kingdom, men doubted far and wide of his loyalty, and long years passed before he could take possession of Israel's throne. He had proved himself a traitor, and had even accompanied the Philistine army on its march for the subjugation of Israel. David was a man of faith, but his faith had failed. He had felt himself secure enough to take Abigail to wife, but he had grown weary of being hunted up and down, and to obtain ignoble rest he became untrue to his country and his God. And had not the distrust of the Philistines rescued him from the dilemma, what would have been his conduct at Gilboa? Would he have taken part in slaying his king, and crushing his nation? or would he have been doubly a deserter, and betrayed the Philistines as he had betrayed his country? Whatever might have been his choice, in either case his lot would have been infamy.

He was saved from infamy, but his misconduct had disabled Israel. For seven years and six months David at Hebron, and Abner at Mahanaim, made feeble resistance to the Philistines; but at length the conviction prevailed that internal security could be obtained only by having a king, who could gather to one head the energies of all the tribes. It was this which had made the people gather round Saul, it now made them look toward David. For evidently, in spite of Abner's capacity, safety was not to be found in the house of Saul. Had Jonathan lived, the people would have been content with him, and he would have recalled to his side his dear old friend. That friend was now Israel's only possible champion, and the vigour of his rule at Hebron was in strong contrast with the feebleness which prevailed at Mahanaim. Wearied with a tedious struggle the people at length agreed to make David their one king. But ill-luck still pursued him, and the union of the tribes under his rule was made unhappy by the foul murder of Abner. For necessarily David would fall under the suspicion of having connived at this base deed.

It was partly these two crimes, David's desertion to the Philistines and Joab's murder of Abner, which, rankling in the minds of the people, made them so ready to join in the rebellion of Absalom; and the example of a divided kingdom also prepared the way for the final disruption of the tribes in the reign of Rehoboam. The traditions of Saul's house and the remembrance of his kingdom lived on. Shimei, in cursing David, gave public utterance to what thousands probably felt. Had the nation with one consent elected David to the throne after the battle of Gilboa, he would have ruled over a united and loyal people. As it was, the house of Saul had its adherents for generations among the northern tribes, just as the Stuarts had theirs until the last representative of the race had died. The race of Saul continued until the Captivity (1 Chron. 8. 39-44), but it sank into obscurity, and its place was taken by adventurers belonging to the great tribe of Ephraim. And this long dissension and the many evils arising from it would have been spared, if David had been content to wait upon God, and submit to the many discomforts of his hard lot. And these probably would have been endurable had not David multiplied wives. His position could not have been very trying, when he could take first Abigail and then Ahinoam to wife. His besetting sin was his lust for women. Probably his wives grumbled at his unquiet life; it was vexatious to live in constant expectation of sudden flight. Women like to have things in good order and comfort. To please them he became a deserter, and sowed the seeds of great future trouble for himself, his posterity, and all Israel.

SOCIAL PROGRESS DURING SAUL'S REIGN.

In his elegy upon the death of Saul and Jonathan, David not only acknowledges the martial qualities of the two heroes, but also the great progress of the nation in social matters under Saul's rule. "He had clothed the daughters of Israel in scarlet delicately, and had put ornaments of gold upon their apparel." Such beauty of dress betokens a considerable degree of national prosperity, and some amount of foreign trade. The scarlet dresses would be imported by caravans from Tyre, and even if the golden ornaments were the work of native artificers, still there must be ample means with which to purchase; for if there were no demand for their goods such artificers would not be called into existence. No one would wear scarlet or purchase trinkets in a state of misery so abject as that described in 1 Sam. 13. The people would live from hand to mouth, and would hide away their corn and stores that they might not be stripped of them by marauders.

GREATNESS OF DAVID'S GENIUS.

When power was concentrated in David's hands, he carried on Saul's work with far greater ability and success. Chequered as was his moral character, there can be no doubt of the greatness of his genius both as warrior and as statesman. His piety was sincere, his generosity noble, but withal he was a libertine. Yet strong in his passions, he was strong also in his virtues, and richly endowed with great mental gifts. When a mere boy he had perceived the feebleness of the boastful Goliath, as he stalked along in his showy panoply. A man so overweighted must fall, he felt, before a light-armed soldier assailing him with missiles. In every subsequent campaign he had proved victorious; and in the raid referred to in 1 Sam. 18. 27, abhorrent as it is to the whole spirit of civilised warfare, David had displayed the qualities necessary for the guerilla warrior. He had shown even greater skill in foiling all Saul's continued efforts. And when the kingdom was his own, David not only rescued Israel from foreign dominion, but established a mighty empire, embracing not merely the bordering states, but reaching to the Hittites of Hamath on the Orontes. Little did the Israelites, when clamouring to Samuel for a king, dream of such wide extended rule. They thought only of leave to plough and reap in security: their children saw themselves masters of what was to them the whole civilised world.

PURPOSE FOR WHICH EMPIRE WAS BESTOWED ON ISRAEL.

Now, what was the Divine purpose in this? If Israel was called into being, as we believe, for a special purpose, in what way did David's wars promote this purpose? We can clearly see now that if the Israelites were to be a strong and enduring people, fit for high and noble work throughout centuries of oppression and ill-usage, they must have a history that would give them self-respect. They were to be God's witnesses for the unity of His nature; and of them as concerning the flesh, the Christ was to come. Now, as we see them in the times of the Judges, they were a rough uncultured people, with many sterling good qualities, but wholly unfit for any spiritual or intellectual, or even for any moral work. They were tough fighters, but nothing more. It was David who raised them from this low state; who welded them into an organic whole, who gave them imperial thoughts, and made them such as they have ever shown themselves henceforward in their history, an heroic people. It was to David's empire that they ever looked back, and in their worst distresses the remembrance of it gave them strength to dare and to endure. They felt sure that they were God's people, that He had made them for no mean end, and that He would preserve them until they had done His work. So the Maccabee looked back to David's rule as "the throne of an everlasting dominion" (1 Macc. 2. 57); and every pious Jew looked forward to the coming of the Messiah, to be the heir of the "everlasting covenant" (2 Sam. 23. 5), and to restore the Davidic kingdom. Other kingdoms might rise and fall: this was that stone cut out of the mountain without hands that must crush all other empires and religions, and fill the whole earth (Dan. 2. 35). The Jew mingled many an earthly aspiration with his diviner hope; but the earthly passes away, and the spiritual alone remains. The kingdom of the Messiah is taking the place of the earthly type. But it was the Davidic kingdom which gave and formed this type, and which largely contributed to make the Jews a nation noble enough to be the worthy instruments for accomplishing God's great design.

ISRAEL'S ADVANCE IN INTELLECTUAL CULTURE.

But the Messianic people must be a cultured race capable of understanding the teaching of the Christ when He came, and of communicating it to others. Now it was Samuel who laid in the Schools of the Prophets the broad foundation of Israel's culture. But for those Schools, there could never have arisen that line of prophets who were not merely teachers of righteousness but the intellectual leaders of the people. Granted that to Samuel's initiation must be referred all that was best in later Israel, yet we must equally grant that the court of the kings was also a necessary condition for the formation of an intellectual people: and among them David, Solomon, and Hezekiah were the chief promoters of learning. When we think of the miserable condition to which Israel was reduced after the battle of Gilboa, and then call to mind the splendours of David's court, with its seers, psalmists, recorders, &c., crowded with learned men as well with warriors, we can the better understand both the great service which Samuel did for Israel in raising up for it men fit to serve God in church and state; and also the high natural endowments of the Israelites in making such good use, first, of the opportunities afforded them by Samuel, and, subsequently, in recovering so rapidly from the overthrow of their institutions by the Philistines. No people could so quickly have attained to such intellectual splendour as surrounded David's throne, had they not been a race endowed with high gifts of genius.

DAVID'S STATESMANSHIP IN MAKING JERUSALEM THE CAPITAL.

In all this progress David led the way; but there are two particulars especially in which he largely contributed towards making the Jews the Messianic people. Never was there a more statesmanlike act than that whereby he made Jerusalem the centre of the religious life of Israel. As we have seen, the tribes had no cohesion; Jerusalem, belonging itself to no tribe, was made by him the capital, in order to bind them together, and to be the symbol of the national unity. He placed there the Ark of God—in due time to be deposited in a splendid Temple—and there he fixed the royal court, to which the people were ever coming for the administration of justice. How powerfully these influences wrought in making Israel one nation we learn from the fears of Jeroboam, that if the people were allowed to attend the religious services in Jerusalem they would soon return to their allegiance to the house of David. Vast numbers of men belonging to the ten tribes did abandon houses and lands in order that they might live where they could enjoy the Temple-service (2 Chron. 11. 16). They came even in such numbers as to make Judah, with its one tribe, a match for the far larger realm which had broken away from it; and to stay this exodus, Jeroboam set up similar services at the two ancient sanctuaries of Beth-el and Dan.* But a still higher effect of the holy influences of Jerusalem was that they kept Judah true to its God. If we compare the kings of Israel with those of Judah, we find them certainly not inferior in warlike or mental gifts, but absolutely beneath them in moral and religious worth. And with one or two miserable exceptions, the kings of Judah fostered in the nation those moral qualities which made the Jews fit to be the progenitors of the Christ.

DAVID'S ADDITION OF PSALMODY TO THE MOSAIC RITUAL.

But David wrought a change in the national worship perhaps even more important than his choice of Jerusalem to be the capital, and the placing of the Ark on the holy hill of Zion. The Mosaic ritual was full of typical instruction, and it continues to be replete with teaching for us. Probably it taught the Hebrews very little. The shedding of the blood of the sacrifice bore witness to them of no profound truth. It was the service of God, and a religious act, and no more. They, perhaps, thought chiefly of the feast that usually followed the sacrifice, and so, with irreverent hearts,

* Beth-el seems to have been a well-known place in the time of Abraham (Gen. 12. 8), though some think that the name is used there by way of anticipation. But subsequently it became a heathen sanctuary, as we gather from the Phœnicians having given the name Bethulia to certain magical stones, supposed to be endued with life, and which apparently were carved in imitation of the stone set up by Jacob. It is, moreover, recognised as a great religious sanctuary in Judg. 20. 18, 26, 31; 21. 2. In the Authorized Version it is translated House of God, but the Septuagint and Revised Version rightly render it Beth-el. No "House of God" as yet existed. Dan is supposed to have been a religious sanctuary from its antiquity, as it is mentioned in Gen. 14. 14, and Deut. 34. 1. It was scarcely possible to establish any form of worship except in places already held sacred.

they sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play (Exod. 32. 6). It was David who, with the consent of the nation signified through its chief officers and the captains of the host, introduced a distinctly spiritual service of sacred song (1 Chron. 25). It is noteworthy that not merely the recitation of the Psalms, but also the instrumental music, is called "prophecy," that is, the speaking for God. Now, these musical services were no new thing. They were not invented by David. What he did was to introduce them into the Temple, and make them rank side by side with the Mosaic ritual. Samuel was their real author, and from his days they have lasted onwards to our own times. Even he, probably, found religious chants in use among the people, and he made them the especial form of Divine Service in his Schools. And solemn and inspiring must these services have been! For we find, first of all, Saul's messengers, and then Saul himself, so carried away with enthusiasm at what they heard and saw, that they gave up their purpose of seizing David and joined against their will in chanting the praises of God (1 Sam. 19. 20-24). But, if it was Samuel who first gave form and method to the spiritual aspirations of the devout Israelite, it was David who made psalmody a regular part of the public worship of the nation, and installed it in the sanctuary itself.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS A PROOF OF ISRAEL'S SPIRITUAL ELEVATION.

Now, if we would estimate aright the value of these two chief acts of David, let us ask ourselves what united Israel at first, and subsequently the kingdom of Judah would have been without Jerusalem? and what would the Temple have been without its psalmody? And how great would have been our own loss! All Christendom has reaped the benefit of David's acts; for music has ever formed a large part of its public worship, and the Book of Psalms has been its best manual of public and private prayer and praise. And it is only when we read the Psalms in connexion with the history that we learn the true worth of the Hebrew nation. It is a poor record that we read in the Books of Kings and Chronicles, alike of the kings of David's line and of the people; but how pure and spiritual are their hymns, and what a singular depth of piety do they exhibit! Grant that they are not always on a level with Christ's teaching, especially as regards the forgiveness of enemies, and the returning good for evil, yet even these maledictory Psalms have a good side in their burning love of justice, and their intense conviction that God will be on the side of right. But, as a whole, how true a spirit of devotion breathes throughout the Psalms! and how worthily do they give expression to the best feelings, even of a Christian, though here and there they fall far short of the teaching of Him whose new commandment was love.

THE PSALMS CONTRASTED WITH CLASSIC POETRY.

God seems, in these our days, to have poured out again upon His Church the spirit of psalmody. Hymns are written of exquisite beauty and fervent devotion; but the Psalms still form our best book of praise. It is no small matter that, in such rough and untutored times, hymns should have been written which hold their rank even when placed side by side with the most spiritual songs of Christian times. But, if we compare Hebrew poetry with the poetry of Greece and Rome, we cannot but be impressed with its pure holiness, contrasting so strongly with the wantonness of classic song. For, not at one period only, but throughout a long succession of ages, it was the glory of God which inspired the poetic fervour of the Hebrew race. We cannot understand what the nation was except by studying the Psalms; and one great use of this Commentary is that it combines the Psalms with the narrative, and constantly they throw great light on one another, and the Psalms are found to fit admirably into the place assigned to them, and to give the key for the explanation of the historic facts.

To David then we owe Jerusalem, the centre of Judah's religious being, and the type of Christ's kingdom. We owe to him also the addition of a pure element of devotion to the Mosaic ritual, and the introduction of psalmody into the public worship of Jehovah. It made that worship more directly spiritual, and it has bestowed upon us the Book of Psalms. He also gave the nation greater intellectual activity, and a vigorous political life. And then, upon his reign, followed an era of great temporal prosperity, of profuse magnificence, of brilliant but unchaste splendour, and of consequent decay. The wisdom of Solomon degenerated into the folly of a woman-ridden voluptuary, and the gorgeous luxury of his life, and his vast expenditure upon buildings, sapped the foundations of his throne. The cost of the Temple had been provided by David; its erection gave Solomon a taste for architecture; and he continued to raise one costly edifice after another, even when they had to be erected by forced labour, and by money wrung from his subjects. To an agricultural people heavy taxation is especially onerous. The Hebrews were to be a nation of farmers cultivating their own lands with the help of servants, that is, slaves born in their house or bought with money. There was to be no trade, and no accumulation of capital. Their ideal citizen was Jesse, the rich farmer of Bethlehem, with abundant oxen and sheep, and fields of corn, but doing most of the work with his own hands, and those of his sons. To him an ass load of bread, a skin of wine, and a kid, seemed a handsome present to send to his king (1 Sam. 16. 20). What would Solomon have thought of such a gift? Flesh was not an everyday article of consumption in Israel, but Solomon's daily supply was ten fat oxen, twenty oxen straight from the meadows, a hundred sheep, and game in abundance. And the service of his table was equally imperial. Even in his hunting box in Lebanon the vessels were all of pure gold. Such lavish cost meant the oppression of the people; but the Hebrews looked back to his reign as their golden era, and extolled his glory, and mused with pride upon his fleets and their cargoes of costly Oriental wares. Even to this day the wisdom of Solomon is regarded in the East as more than human, and jins and efreets tremble at his name. His good beginning is alone remembered, the cloak of oblivion is drawn round his miserable end.

LAVISH SPLENDOUR OF SOLOMON'S REIGN—EMPIRE NOT A PERMANENT GIFT TO THE MESSIANIC PEOPLE.

Yet even Solomon's reign had its use. It served as a glorious halo round the picture of Israel's national greatness. David had made them masters of a mighty empire; in Solomon they had possessed a king whose wisdom exceeded that of other men, and whose splendour cast a bright radiance upon even their lowest degradation. It thus gave dignity to their character, and helped to form in them that unbending firmness which has carried the Jew unchanged through long ages of affliction. But God gave them earthly empire and material splendour for only a very short period. It was not His will that the Messianic people should be one of earth's conquering races. They had a nobler task set before them; and soon the realm of David was rent asunder. Even in the times of the Judges we see causes at work which made it difficult for Ephraim and Judah to bear the yoke evenly. David had aggravated these differences when, as the result of his desertion to the Philistines, there was a seven years' strife between him and Ish-bosheth. He did his best by the choice of Jerusalem and the increased beauty of the Temple-services to bind the nation together. Had Solomon made full use of these uniting influences the tribes might have been welded into one nation, but he broke the bond when he built upon the holy hill temples for Ashtoreth and Chemosh, and Milcom and Molech. The people might endure heavy taxation and forced labour when the object was to rear palaces for their king, or for Pharaoh's daughter, but not when the money was to be wasted on fanes for the abominations of the heathen.

SOLOMON'S POLYGAMY NOT APPROVED BY PROPHETS.

For ever onward from Samuel's time the "sons of the prophets" had laboured assiduously for all that was true and holy, and Solomon's conduct was most distressing in their sight. When Ahijah condemned it in Jehovah's name, and foretold the rending away of ten tribes and their bestowal upon Jeroboam, we are to understand by this act that the whole prophetic body placed themselves in opposition to Solomon, and having tried in vain to change his purpose, then more or less openly showed their disapproval. And how powerful they were we learn from Rehoboam disbanding his army and not daring to go to war with Israel because Shemaiah forbade his doing so. Now the act of these two prophets proves that the disruption of the kingdom was in accordance with God's will, and the proximate cause of it was Solomon's sensuality and consequent lapse into idolatry. His polygamy may have been a part of his costly magnificence, but it was contrary to the spirit of the Mosaic Law, and the habits of the people. A vast harem was an institution borrowed from the customs of the heathen world, and it led naturally to the indulgence of the foreign women in the practice of their idolatries. It was to the credit of the Hebrew women that so many of Solomon's wives had to be brought from abroad. Now the reason why idolatry is ever so strongly condemned in Holy Scripture is that it went hand in hand with moral impurity, and it was for chastity and righteous conduct that the prophets ever laboured. It was they who kept the flame of pure religion burning in the hearts of the people, and we may feel sure that it was mainly to them that we owe the Book of Psalms. Such men could not but feel shame and indignation at the impure splendour of Solomon's court.

ELIJAH'S INTERPRETATION OF THE "STILL SMALL VOICE"—HIS WORK AND THAT OF OTHER PROPHETS IN THE NORTHERN KINGDOM.

And how great was their influence in forming the Messianic kingdom and keeping it true to its purpose we learn from the history of Elijah. That great prophet of action, who stands forth as the mighty witness for God, was taught at Horeb that the right way of working is not by the display of strength and vigour, but by the "still small voice," that is, the calm appeal to the human conscience. And how did he interpret this teaching? We find the latter years of his life devoted to the re-establishment of the prophetic colleges. Jezebel had destroyed them, and put the prophets to death. The unchaste worship of Astarte set up by her at Samaria was impossible as long as the prophets of Jehovah were numerous and powerful to resist it. She destroyed them: but Elijah, too powerful after the great day at Mount Carmel for Ahab to dare openly to oppose him, gathered once again together the few who remained, and drew others round him. His last earthly work was the visitation of the Schools of the Prophets at Gilgal, at Beth-el, and at Jericho. And after his translation, the whole activity of Elisha, his successor, seems to have concerned itself with their guidance and maintenance. Once again under him the prophets wrought effectually among the Israelites for chastity and honesty and virtuous living. But we may doubt whether they ever had among the ten tribes as strong an influence as in Judah. They had there the help of the priesthood and of the Temple-services, and their chiefs, like Isaiah, were the chosen advisers of the kings. Yet even in the North the influence of men like Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, and Amos was very great. Of the latter, Amaziah, the high priest at Beth-el, when begging king Jeroboam II. to expel him from the country, said: "The land is not able to bear all his words" (Amos 7. 10). And thus Judah and Israel, shorn of their splendour, and destitute of political power, were yet the appointed field for the development of true religion, and for the preparation for the coming of Christ. It was a hard struggle that the prophets and the believing portion of the people maintained against the many adverse influences which wrought for moral decay: but it was this struggle which so elevated their whole character. As regards the mass of the people, it is a miserable picture which Hosea and Amos draw of the licentiousness rampant in Samaria and in the Northern tribes; and the victorious career of Jeroboam II. availed nothing for their rescue. They fell; and it was their immorality which wrought their ruin. And though vice was not so prevalent in Judæa, yet even there degradation was going on. The long reign of Manasseh was more powerful for evil than those of Hezekiah and Josiah for good. And the Assyrians carried Judah also into captivity, and Jerusalem and the temple of Jehovah were burnt with fire.

DIFFERENCE IN THE FATE OF JUDAH AND ISRAEL.

But great is the difference now in the fate of the two portions of the people of God. The ten tribes disappear. Whatever may have been their fate then, or whatever may be in store for them in the future, yet as a fact they had no more part or lot in the preparation for Messiah's kingdom, nor do we know anything certain about their present position. They had failed utterly, and God used them no more. But, as regards Judah, the extracts from the writings of the prophets given in this Work show that God's dealing with her was in love. In her death there was new life. As Isaiah had foretold, the crushing of the grapes in the cluster was in order to bring forth the new wine (Isa. 65. 8, 9). What to the eye of man could seem more hopeless and forlorn than the long string of captives toiling onward in their weary way to Babylon! Their route marked by the bodies of those who in sheer exhaustion lay down to die! They themselves without hope, and welcoming death in their despair. We know from the pictures carved on the Assyrian monuments how inhuman would be their treatment on their journey, and how terrible their misery. Yet they were God's Church, and in them, in the providence of God, was contained the new wine that was to cheer and bless the whole world.

OF THE PROPHETIC WRITINGS.

The juxtaposition of these extracts with the narrative constantly serves to give the right meaning to the prophetic writings, and to show what was their primary purpose. But it has a higher use. For by their help we are able to understand the way in which God's Divine plan for man's redemption was working itself out. Thus doubtless those left behind in Judæa bewailed the hard lot of that band of captives torn from house and home, and dragged to Babylon to people its waste places. Those left behind were spared, they thought, this extremity of misfortune, and might still enjoy their cities and fields. But Jeremiah lifts the curtain, and teaches just the reverse. In chap. 24 (p. 633) he shows that those carried captive to Babylon were chosen by God for a higher purpose. They were put there for safety, for their good; and after the promise of even earthly prosperity in their new home, God speaks to them of better things. "I will give them," he says, "a heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart." Zedekiah and the people left behind at Jerusalem were but as a basket of figs too decayed to be eaten, and put aside as worthless. They were too bad for it to be worth while to carry them to Judah's new dwelling-place.

THE JEWS AT BABYLON.

It was to comfort God's elect that Jeremiah foretold that the captivity at Babylon would last seventy years (Jer. 29. 10). But as this is the ordinary duration of human life, they were to go as men who would leave their bones in the Chaldean land, and they were not merely to build houses there, and marry, and carry on trade, but be good and loyal citizens, and labour and pray for the peace of the city, which was now their home: "for in its peace shall ye have peace" (Jer. 29. 7). But they were to be supported in this cruel wrench from their native land by the sure conviction that God was with them; that they were His Church, and that the promise was theirs; and then at the end of seventy years their children would return to the holy land, would rebuild Jerusalem and the Temple, and would dwell there until Messiah came. There can be no doubt that this promise not only strengthened the hearts of the people, but helped greatly in that reformation of conduct and belief which changed them into that band of pious and trustful men who returned from exile with Ezra, and who from that day forward never wavered in their firm faith in their God, nor in their adherence to the central truth of which God had made them the keepers, that the Lord Jehovah is one and the only God.

RECAPITULATION.

Lastly, these extracts show what was the ultimate purpose of God in establishing monarchy in Israel, and under the veil of an earthly kingdom they reveal to us the nature of the true kingdom of God. Alike Isaiah and Jeremiah at Jerusalem, Daniel and Ezekiel in captivity, and the other prophets, explain to their countrymen of old and to us now the nature of the rule of David's promised Son, and the extent and perpetuity of "the throne of the kingdom that was to be established for ever" (2 Sam. 7. 13).

The empire of David, the wisdom and splendour of Solomon, the struggles of the divided kingdom, all had their typical meaning; and they, and still more directly the Divine teaching of the prophets, were all preparing Israel for the discharge of the great duty to which God had appointed its children, of being the teachers of mankind, and as those among whose institutions Christ was to be brought up, whose sons were to be Christ's companions, the depositaries of Christ's doctrines, and His Missionaries to make disciples of all mankind. We can understand Hebrew history only by seeing it in relation to Christ, and as we look back upon the strange course it has run we see in His coming its reason and explanation. And as these were given beforehand in the writings of the goodly fellowship of Judah's prophets, both the history and these writings gain in clearness by being brought close together.

THE JEWS AN ENDURING MONUMENT OF GOD'S PROVIDENCE.

Finally, the Jews remain to this day a wonderful monument of God's marvellous providence in their discipline and formation. Greek and Roman, Assyrian and Egyptian pass away. New races take their place, and the small remnants of those who erst held empire are absorbed in the uprise of tribes and nations unheard of until they burst upon and overran the old world and swept its decaying civilization away. Not so the Jew. Moulded and tempered in God's own furnace, he lives on. Great has been his work in the past, great possibly is the work for which he is reserved in the future. And when we see how high are the qualities of the Jews, and how indestructible the race, and how firm and patient they are in endurance, and how energetic in action, we are prepared to find no ordinary record in the Histories of Judah and Israel, and in the details of the training which have made the Jew what he is.

1 SAMUEL VIII.

1 S. viii.—1. Old.] Aged about 60 (the chronology is very uncertain); he died about 1060 B.C.—Judges.] See mary. refs. Eli had been H. P. as well as judge; Samuel—though a Kohathite Levite only (1 Chr. 6. 22, 23), and not of priestly family—either eclipsed the H. P. or temporarily superseded him. See chs. 10. 22 and 14. 3, notes. 2. Joel, Abiah.] i.e. Jehorah is God, Father is Jehorah. Samuel probably so named his sons—if born before ch. 7. 4—as pledges of his faith. In 1 Chr. 6. 28 Joel's name is omitted, rashni meaning and the second one (so Syr. Arab.).—Beer-sheba.] The southernmost sanctuary (Amos 5. 5), about 57 m. S.W. of Ramah. Apparently Samuel held his justice-seat at the frequented sanctuaries (r. 4). 3. Lucre.] In A.V. means ill-gotten gain (rendered corretousness, Ex. 18. 21).—Perverted.] Heb. as in Deut. 16. 19; cp. Ex. 23. 6, 8. They wrested judgment to screen the rich and powerful (cp. ch. 12. 3; Isa. 1. 23). 4. Elders of Israel.] Elders of tribes (Deut. 31. 28; ch. 30. 26, &c.) and of towns (ch. 11. 3, note; 1 Kin. 21. 8) are mentioned. The tribal organisation was based on a patriarchal system of representative government (Introd., p. 3), each tribe being ruled by chiefs or 'princes' and the heads of the fathers' houses (i.e. families or clans, Ex. 6. 14, &c.). See ch. 10. 19, note. Here, evidently, the entire people is represented and the national assembly speaks through an executive council (cf. 2 Sam. 5. 3; Num. 11. 16, 24, 25).—Ramah.] i.e. the high place; see ch. 9. 12, note. If Er-Ram, Ramah was 4 m. N.—if Nebv Samu'el, 5 m. N.W.—of Jerusalem. Samuel visited the sanctuaries (Sept. for A.V. places in ch. 7. 16; cp. ch. 10. 3) of Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpeh, on circuit yearly; but his birth-place, Ramah, was his head-quarters, where he had built an altar unto the Lord (ch. 7. 17). Samuel may have moved the Tabernacle, with its sacred vessels and furniture, to Ramah after Eli's death (see ch. 14. 3, note); Nob and Gibeon, where it is found later, were within a few miles of Ramah. Shiloh remained desolate after its destruction by the Philistines (1 S. 7. 8, 58-64; Jer. 7. 12). The Ark was at Kirjath-jearim (till moved by David, ch. 7. 2; 2 Sam. 6. 3), and no effort seems to have been made to preserve the unity of the nation by a restoration of the worship of the Sanctuary (ch. 9. 12, note). Apparently, even the prerogative of Aaron's line was in abeyance; indeed, no priest is mentioned between ch. 4. and ch. 14. 3; the corruption of the priesthood and degradation of the public worship (chs. 2. 12, 17 & 3. 13) would account for this. But the use by the pious of the patriarchal sanctuaries, the 'high-places,' would proportionately increase (r. 2, note). 5. Old.] About 70 (r. 1, note).—A king to judge us.] Israel craved chiefly a military leader (r. 20; cp. ch. 9. 16)—Samuel's civil administration being unimpeachable (ch. 12. 5)—but with hereditary succession (see Judg. 8. 22, 23). The wish and its gratification had been foreseen and fore-determined; see Deut. 17. 14-20 (the elders seem to quote r. 14).—Like all the nations.] During the period of the Judges, Israel had been gradually falling to the level of her heathen neighbours in morals and religion. After the sack of Shiloh, as if in despair, the people abandoned itself to the worship of Baalim and Ashtaroth; Samuel rescued it by about 20 years of missionary effort (ch. 7. 3-14), and, after a national abjuration of idolatry, was enabled to commence its deliverance from the Philistines (chs. 4. 9 & 12. 11; Introd., p. 5). But the tribes were still disunited

<sup>6</sup> But the thing displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the LORD. <sup>7</sup> And the LORD said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for <sup>g</sup> they have not rejected thee, but <sup>h</sup> they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them. <sup>8</sup> According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt even unto this day, wherewith they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee. <sup>9</sup> Now therefore hearken unto their voice: howbeit yet protest solemnly unto them, and <sup>i</sup> shew them the manner of the king that shall reign over them.

<sup>10</sup> And Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people that asked of him a king. <sup>11</sup> And he said, <sup>k</sup> This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: <sup>l</sup> He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots. <sup>12</sup> And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots. <sup>13</sup> And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. <sup>14</sup> And <sup>m</sup> he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants. <sup>15</sup> And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his servants. <sup>16</sup> And he will take your menservants, and your maidservants, and your godliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work. <sup>17</sup> He will take the tenth of your

(Introd. p. 3), and the increased power (Introd., p. 4) and revived domination (chs. 9. 16 & 10. 5) of the Philistines, and the renewed aggressiveness of Ammon (chs. 11. 1 and 12. 12), precipitated Israel's demand for a king. Moreover, Samuel had no fit successor (v. 3). 6, Displeased. Israel's demand, though made constitutionally, amounted to a condemnation of the Theocracy and of Samuel (ch. 12. 2-12). Nor had the elders first enquired of Jehovah (1 Chr. 10. 14, p. 75). Samuel would be mortified at this disclosure of the unworthiness of his sons (v. 5 with ch. 12. 2), but he would feel still more keenly Israel's fickleness and ingratitude to her Covenant-God, her want of faith, and her undervaluing of her privileges. The Chosen Nation wished to abandon the old grand ideal of direct government by its Heavenly King; it thus confessed its own unworthiness of such solitary pre-eminence.—National unity through the Theocracy, or direct kingship of God, which had been revealed and established through Moses—'the kingdom of heaven,' the sovereignty of the LORD among men, invisible but perfect—was a conception far too spiritual for Israel as yet.—Prayed. Cf. chs. 7. 8, 9 & 12. 23 & 15. 11. Samuel laid his perplexities before God. Probably he also interceded for Israel in her sin. 8, So do they. Compare Jer. 2. 5-13. Israel's conduct does but exhibit her characteristic and fatal perversity (cf. 2 Kin. 17. 7-18).—Unto thee. No servant may look to fare better than his master (Matt. 10. 24). Samuel's righteous indignation is tenderly rebuked. 9, Now therefore. Or, And now (resuming from 'unto thee' in v. 7). Cf. [1 S. viii. 6-17.]

Hos. 13. 11 & Introd., p. 2; Israel's impatience, self-will, and mistrust, was her sin (see also v. 20, note). The desire was not essentially wrong; the monarchy was contemplated in the counsels of God (v. 5, note), and in David was to become the vehicle of the Promises.—Shew, &c. Israel should not have her own desire without previous warning of the changes that a monarchy and court would cause in her simple agricultural and pastoral life: of what her king might become, if he degenerated (as Saul did) into the normal despot.—Manner. i.e. the (usual) privileges of a king of the nations; Vulg. jus regis. 11, Run before. See 2 Sam. 15. 1, note. The king's royal state. 12, Captains, &c. Usual (chs. 17. 18 & 18. 13 & 22. 7; 2 Kin. 1. 9, &c.) and ancient (Deut. 1. 15) officials, civil and military. A standing army is meant (chs. 13. 2 & 14. 52; cp. 22. 7), the highest and lowest divisions being specified (ch. 18. 13; 2 Kin. 1. 9).—Them. i.e. Some of your sons. Forced labour was a chief cause of the Secession (1 Kin. 5. 13-16 & 12. 4).—Ear. From Lat. aro, Sax. erian, to plough; hence earth, earable ground. 13, Confectionaries. Rather, perfumers. The A.V. confection is any compound of an apothecary. Cf. Exod. 30. 35. On perfumes as a royal luxury see Ps. 45. 8; 2 Kin. 20. 13; Matt. 2. 11. 14, Comp. ch. 22. 7 and 2 Sam. 16. 4, but contrast 1 Kin. 21. 2-7. 15, The tenth. A second tithe.—Officers. i.e. Court-officials; Heb. cunuchs (Gen. 37. 36). 16, Will take, &c. So Solomon sent 30,000 men to labour in Lebanon (1 Kin. 5. 13); cp. Jer. 22. 13.—Young men. i.e. Of your households (home-born sheep; and ye shall be his servants. <sup>18</sup> And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD <sup>a</sup> will not hear you in that day.

<sup>19</sup> Nevertheless the people <sup>o</sup> refused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, Nay; but we will have a king over us; <sup>20</sup> that we also may be <sup>p</sup> like all the nations; and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles. <sup>21</sup> And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he rehearsed them in the ears of the LORD.

2.—The King is Designated.

1 SAMUEL IX.

1 Now there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was <sup>a</sup> Kish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Bechorath, the son of Aphiah, a Benjaminite, a mighty man of power. <sup>2</sup> And he had a son, whose name was Saul, a choice young man, and a goodly: and there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he: <sup>b</sup> from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people.

slaves or hired servants). Or, read with Sept. oxen, herds (ch. 12. 3, note). <sup>17</sup> Servants.] Lit. slaves. Freedom will be lost. <sup>18</sup> Cry out.] Under this new 'oppression.' So they appealed to Rehoboam against the burdens of Solomon's magnificence (1 Kin. 12. 4).—Hear.] i.e. listen and deliver. <sup>19</sup> Said.] Politically, this deliberate decision of the elders was wise (Introd., p. 6). They were weary of the intermittent judgeships and of desperate struggles for liberty alternating with a precarious peace. <sup>20</sup> Like, &c.] Their wish was not to develop and perfect their own institutions, but to escape from the rigour of the Mosaic law—and to enjoy national independence, without the conditions of faithfulness to God or of repentance after unfaithfulness. Their consciousness of inferiority indicates a growing national sentiment.—Judge.] Be civil governor and administer justice (ch. 7. 17).—Go out.] i.e. to war. <sup>21</sup> Rehearsed.] i.e. repeated. <sup>22</sup> Hearken.] Samuel's unwillingness needed a threefold command (vs. 7, 9).—Go, &c.] The assembly was a truly representative body. How well founded was the people's confidence in Samuel. 'Everything was ripe in Israel for the change, but it was due to the moderation and disinterestedness of Samuel that the revolution was made without bloodshed or armed struggle. Samuel yielded to the popular demand: and the nation trusted him so thoroughly that they left the choice of the king entirely to him, and permitted him to settle the terms and limits of the monarchy.'

1 S. ix.—A parenthetical narrative (chs. 9—10. 16) now recounts the introduction of the future king to Samuel, and Samuel's inspired action thereupon.—<sup>1</sup> Kish.] A comparison with Chronicles gives the order—Kish, Ner, Abiel, Zeror, Bechorath, Aphiah (or Abiah), Becher, Benjamin—8 generations for over 600 years. Amongst the names omitted from this abridged genealogy are Matri (ch. 10. 21) and Jehiel, called 'father of Gibeon,' which possibly means 'founder of Gibeon.'—Power.] Marg. substance (see 2 Sam. 19. 32, note, 'great'), i.e. agricultural wealth—so R.V. marry; R.V. valour. Kish's 'house' was not hereditarily a leading one (ch. 9. 21). <sup>2</sup> Choice.] Possibly = unmarried (Deut. 32. 25, Heb.); or, young man simply, i.e. in the flower of manhood (R.V., but marry, as A.V.).—Higher.] So Virgil describes Turnus, and Homer Ajax. Saul must have approached 7 feet. All Eastern sculpture shows the prevailing reverence for stature. Samuel himself was disposed to choose Saul's successor by the 'height of his stature' (ch. 16. 6, 7). <sup>3</sup> Asses.] Of great value for riding, or as beasts of burden. Cf. 'And ye who ride forth on white asses, as princes and counsellors ride.'—Phineas's Deborah. The unsuitableness of the land of Israel generally for the use of horses, and perhaps the language of Deut. 17. 16, led to a lasting preference of asses (and later of mules), which excited the ridicule of other nations, e.g. 2 Kin. 18. 23.—Servant.] Tradition says Doeg, afterwards Saul's chief herdsman (ch. 21. 7). <sup>4</sup> Passed, &c.] Saul's home was Gibeon of Benjamin (called also 'of God' ch. 10. 5, 6).

passed through mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of <sup>c</sup>Shalisha, but they found them not: then they passed through the land of Shalim, and there they were not: and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not. <sup>5</sup>And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave curing for the asses, and take thought for us.

<sup>6</sup>And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city <sup>d</sup>a man of God, and he is an honourable man; <sup>e</sup>all that he saith cometh surely to pass: now let us go thither; peradventure he can shew us our way that we should go. <sup>7</sup>Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, <sup>f</sup>what shall we bring the man? for the bread is spent in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what have we? <sup>8</sup>And the servant answered Saul again, and said, Behold, I have here at hand the fourth part of a shekel of silver: that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way. <sup>9</sup>(Beforetime in Israel, when a man <sup>g</sup>went to enquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called <sup>h</sup>a Seer.) <sup>10</sup>Then said Saul to his servant, Well said; come, let us go. So they went unto the city where the man of God was.

The Heb. root = hill recurs in such names as Gibeon, Geba, Gibeath. See ch. 10. 10, note.—[Mount Ephraim.] Rather, the hill country of Ephraim. This name extended nearly through Benjamin (2 Chr. 13. 4 & 15. 8), and at least as far as Samuel's home, Ramah (ch. 1. 1; cp. Judg. 4. 5). Shalisha and Shalim are unidentified. <sup>5</sup> Land of Zuph.] i.e. the neighbourhood of Ramah; so called after Samuel's ancestor (ch. 1. 1).—[Take thought.] In Elizabethan English this means 'become anxious'; cf. Matt. 6. 25. In ch. 10. 2 the same Hebrew word is translated 'sorroweth'. <sup>6</sup> Behold, &c.] It is strange that Saul, living so near, needed to be told this, which 'all Israel' had known for many years (ch. 3. 20). It shows that hitherto he had taken little interest in public affairs.—[City.] i.e. Ramathaim-Zophim; a dual name for Ramah, implying that it stood on two hills, or consisted of two quarters (chs. 1. 1 & 8. 4, note). Probably the later Arimathæa. 'Zophim' = either the watchers or 'the descendants of Zuph'.—[Man of God.] i.e. a prophet.—[Honourable.] i.e. honoured; referring rather to his public estimation as seer than his dignity as judge. Judges might be no less esteemed than kings, and in authority be equal to dictators; but having no regal state, and their functions being ordinarily limited to private and local matters, they were less well-known.—[Way, &c.] R.V. journey whereon we go, i.e. how to attain our object.—<sup>7</sup> A present.] A rare word, perhaps the technical term for a fee of this kind, half payment and half gift. As compared with 'the bread,' the quarter-shekel would be a very large fee (P. Smith).

Food was a customary present to a prophet (1 Kin. 14. 3; cp. Ezek. 13. 19). Some present is essential in the East, when approaching a superior or an equal. A peasant brought once to Artaxerxes simply his hands full of water from a stream, having nothing else, and was rewarded with 1000 darics and a gold cup for his inventive determination to be courteous. <sup>9</sup> Beforetime, &c.] An editorial note—'Seer' (ro'eh), now degraded (cp. Isa. 30. 10), was formerly as respectful a title as 'prophet' (nabi).—[Seer.] More exactly, looker, the Heb. root being raah, 'to look,' see in vision.' Sept. ὁ βλέπων, Vulg. Fidens. The word did not utterly die out (1 Chr. 9. 22). Nor was prophet (nabi) never used before; Sept. προφήτης, Vulg. propheta (Gen. 20. 7; Deut. 18. 15; Ex. 7. 1 & 15. 20; Num. 11. 24; Judg. 4. 4). Some have both titles, e.g. Gad, 2 Sam. 24. 11, where however the Heb. of seer is chozeh, from chazah, 'to see,' Gk. ὀψάω. The chozeh differs from ro'eh in that he is called the king's seer; ro'eh, simply the seer, is coupled with the names of Samuel and Hanani only; the nabi is no one's but the Lord's. Heman, Jeduthun, Asaph are called chozeh; Iddo is usually 'seer,' Nathan always 'prophet.' The seer beheld things invisible to mortal sight. The prophet (the Heb. root means to boil or bubble over) poured forth from his heart, willing or unwilling, like a bubbling spring, what God had poured into it (2 Pet. 1. 21). He was the interpreter, medium, spokesman for God (Ex. 4. 16 & 7. 1; see Intro. p. 12). He might speak in ecstasy (see ch. 10. 5, note). He might predict the future; but the prominence which imagination attaches to this gift has obscured the other functions of the prophets, esp. public and private religious teaching (cp. ch. 12. 23). Prophet is the wider word, including seer, and frequently occurs in the Pentateuch. That Samuel was a seer was noteworthy, for 'from the time of Moses to that of Samuel the direct communications from God to man appear to have been very rare' (ch. 3. 1; cf. Ex. 33. 11; Num. 12. 8); nor is any prophecy or prophetic message recorded since Deborah's, except Judg. 6. 8 and ch. 2. 27; cf. Amos 8. 11. On 'prophecy' in its widest meaning and on Samuel's guilds of the prophets, see ch. 10. 4, notes, Introd., pp. 10, 12, 11-16. <sup>11</sup> Found. Rather, lit on.—Going. Rather, coming. The wells were generally outside the city wall; this explains Judg. 5. 11. <sup>12</sup> Came to the city. Probably from making his circuit (ch. 7. 16, 17).—Sacrifice. Comp. ch. 16. 2, note. Some service of thanksgiving (v. 13).—High place. The Heb. bamoth—distinct from sheph (cf. Num. 23. 3), which means a bare hill—is used in the singular of the artificial high places and altars both of God and of idols (1 Kin. 15. 14, note). [Its plural bamoth, used rarely for natural heights, means, in Num. 21. 19, Bamoth-Baal, translated 'the high places of Baal' in Num. 22. 41.] It is not always clear whether of the two kinds the Heb. describes.—Samuel probably erected his altar (ch. 8. 4, note) on this high place; such altars and worship of the true God were relics of the old patriarchal religion, and are spoken of in the Books of Samuel without any doubt of their propriety, whereas in the Books of Kings they are condemned. Worship at a central sanctuary was now suspended, the Ark and Tabernacle being separated (ch. 7. 2). As to place, the requirement was (Ex. 20. 21), 'In all places where I record My Name, i.e. in appointed places only; and apparently God's Name, i.e. His Presence (cf. 2 Chr. 20. 8), could be associated in strict legality with the Ark only, in its proper Sanctuary, the Holy of holies. The monumental Reubenite altar at Jordan (Josh. 22) serves to show, by the indignation aroused, how the Law was then generally understood. Later, exceptions became common, as common probably as previous to the occupation of Canaan, when 'every man did whatsoever was right in his own eyes' (Deut. 12. 8), though then the (neglected) Law was very strict, and every slain clean beast was regarded as a peace-offering (Lev. 17. 3-6), and might be slain only at the Tabernacle door. On entering Canaan, permission was of necessity given (Deut. 12. 15) to slay beasts for food elsewhere. The first 'place' of God's choice in Canaan was Shiloh (Jer. 7. 12); and the next specifically named is Jerusalem (Is. 78. 69). Between - whiles irregularity was allowed. After the building of the Temple, we read of nothing in the way of approval of the general use of high places, though God may be said to have 'winked at them. Previously, their special use on particular occasions, and by men acting under Divine influence, is frequently recorded, as by Moses, Gideon, Manoah, Samuel, David, Solomon (Deut. 27. 5; Judg. 6. 25 & 13. 16; 1 Chr. 21. 22; 1 Kin. 3. 4); but after the building of the Temple, by Elijah alone, and under plainly exceptional circumstances (1 Kin. 18. 30). In the northern kingdom at that date they were almost a necessity; for its national 'places' were unsanctioned by God, and polluted by calf-worship, and it was the policy of Jeroboam and his successors to make Jerusalem inaccessible. Elijah even laments their destruction (1 Kin. 19. 14). The deep-rooted attachment to the high places not even the most pious kings could eradicate. No doubt one objection to their use was the danger that the worship of idols, as celebrated on Canaanite 'high places', might creep in with its impure orgies. Some 'high places' may have owed their existence to misinterpretation of the permission of Deut. 12. 15; but mainly, without doubt, they were due to men's natural willingness to sacrifice religion to convenience. <sup>13</sup> Eat. i.e. feast on the peace (i.e. thank-) offering (Lev. 7. 11-19; cp. chs. 1. 9 & 16. 2-5, 11).—Bless, &c. The first recorded 'grace.' For similar priestly acts of Samuel, see chs. 13. 8, 9 & 16. 5. Some think that he temporarily superseded the corrupt priesthood (ch. 3. 12; cp. ch. 8. 1, 4, notes).—Bidden. i.e. the chief citizens (v. 22). <sup>14</sup> City. Some scholars read 'gate, with Sept. <sup>16</sup>To-morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines: for I have <sup>o</sup>looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me. <sup>17</sup>And when Samuel saw Saul, the LORD said unto him, <sup>p</sup>Behold the man whom I spake to thee of! this same shall reign over my people.

<sup>18</sup>Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the seer's house is. <sup>19</sup>And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the seer: go up before me unto the high place; for ye shall eat with me to-day, and to-morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart. <sup>20</sup>And as for <sup>q</sup>thine asses that were lost three days ago, set not thy mind on them; for they are found. And on whom <sup>r</sup>is all the desire of Israel? Is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house?

<sup>22</sup>And Samuel took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the parlour, and made them sit in the chiefest place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty persons. <sup>23</sup>And Samuel said unto the cook, Bring the portion which I gave thee, of which I said unto thee, Set it by thee. <sup>24</sup>And the cook took up <sup>v</sup>the shoulder, and that which was upon it, and set it before Saul. And Samuel said, Behold that which is left! set it before thee, and eat: for unto this time hath it been kept for thee since I said, I have invited the people. So Saul did eat with Samuel that day.

The rite of consecration, hitherto appropriated to the Aaronic priesthood, is extended to the Theocratic king, hence entitled The Lord's Anointed (see ch. 12. 3, note); it was a consecration for life (see ch. 15. 30, note).—Captain.] i.e., inheritance. The full description of the Theocratic king—on 'captain,' see ch. 9. 16, note: 'his inheritance'=my people Israel (ib.). God designated and the people elected both Saul and David. After 2 Sam. 7. 12-16, the office became hereditary, being entailed by God on the 'son' of David. 2. Thou shalt find.] Saul, doubtless, marvelled 'How shall this be?' Three confirmatory 'signs' are given him (cf. Mark 14. 13), indicating that common cares were now to cease (v. 2), giving him an earnest of the homage and privilege that awaited him (vs. 3, 4), and assuring him of the gift of God's Spirit (v. 6). The high place was above the town.—Garrison.] So David bridled the kingdoms of Damascus and Edom, his vassals (2 Sam. 8. 6, 14); see ch. 13. 3, note.—Company of prophets.] It had been part of Samuel's work to give permanence and effectiveness to the prophetic functions, so notably revived in his own person (ch. 3. 21 & 4. 1). The Talmud gives Samuel the title of Master of the Prophets. We hear nothing of prophets as an organised body before his time. Samuel was the Founder and Originator (cf. Acts 3. 24 & 13. 20) of the Order of the Prophets; he gathered young men into societies, colleges, or guilds, under a head whom they called Father (ch. 10. 12 & 19. 20), or Master (2 Kin. 2. 3). The Prophets were students and expounders of the Law, preachers of morality and religion, speakers for God on every occasion. Amos 7. 14 seems to imply that popular expectation looked to Divine inspiration descend on them alone. They were frequently employed as God's messengers (2 Kin. 9. 1, &c.). Such guilds are found later at Bethel, Jericho, and Gilgal (2 Kin. 2. 3, 4 & 1. 38), and apparently now at Gibeah and Ramah (see 'Naioth,' ch. 19. 18, 20, notes). Sacred music and poetry formed part of their

The correspondence of v. 8 with ch. 13. 8, 9 suggests that the commencement of an organised rebellion against the Philistines, in pursuance of Saul's mission to deliver

Israel from her most mighty foe (ch. 9. 16), is meant here. The king was to act only under Samuel's direction as 'authorised adviser' or 'prophet-counsellor.' The deliverance was to be unmistakably God's act and to be obtained through Samuel's intercession. This limitation of the royal initiative should test Saul's fitness to be king (ch. 13. 13), and remind Israel publicly of the nature of the Monarchy.—Gilgal.] The first spot in Canaan pronounced 'holy' (Josh. 5. 15). There the Tabernacle rested until moved to Shiloh (Josh. 18. 1; see 2 Sam. 19. 15, 40). Politically, Gilgal had succeeded its ruined neighbour Jericho as the city of the fords of the lower Jordan and of the N.W. oases of the Dead Sea basin. Samuel seems to have foreseen that, after the election of the king at Mizpeh (v. 17) which the Philistines would regard as an act of rebellion, it would be necessary to shift Israel's gathering-place to Gilgal (5 m. from Jordan and 2 m. from Jericho, with Gilead as a refuge in rear; cp. ch. 13. 7, 12). <sup>9</sup>. Heart.] 'The centre of the whole mental and spiritual life, of will, desire, thought, perception, and feeling.' <sup>10</sup>. The hill.] Rather, Gibeah (v. 13); the regular word for such high places, in particular instances followed by a name (ch. 9. 4, note).—Prophesied.] Once again (ch. 19. 23) Saul acted as a 'son of the prophets,' though no member of any such guild, and the proverb of v. 12 was confirmed. <sup>11</sup>. Knew him.] 'Gibeah of God' therefore was his own city. <sup>12</sup>. Their father.] *Sept. Some scholars emphasize 'their'; i.e. As to parentage, why not he as much as they? what has birth to do with prophecy? (cp. Amos 7. 14, 15). <sup>13</sup>.] The access of religious fervour led Saul to worship God at the high <sup>14</sup>And Saul's uncle said unto him and to his servant, Whither went ye? And he said, To seek the asses: and when we saw that they were no where, we came to Samuel. <sup>15</sup>And Saul's uncle said, Tell me, I pray thee, what Samuel said unto you. <sup>16</sup>And Saul said unto his uncle, He told us plainly that the asses were found. But of the matter of the kingdom, whereof Samuel spake, he told him not.

<sup>20</sup>And when Samuel had <sup>d</sup>caused all the tribes of Israel to come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken. <sup>21</sup>When he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the son of Kish was taken: and when they sought him, he could not be found. <sup>22</sup>Therefore they <sup>e</sup>enquired of the LORD further, if the man should yet come thither. And the LORD answered, Behold, he hath hid himself among the stuff. <sup>23</sup>And they ran and fetched him thence: and when he stood among the people, <sup>f</sup>he was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward.

<sup>24</sup>And Samuel said to all the people, See ye him <sup>g</sup>whom the LORD hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people shouted, and said,

[1 S. x. 17-27.] The future king—privately designated and anointed by Samuel, and instructed by him as to his mission, and encouraged in it 'by signs following'—is now to be selected publicly, by the sacred lot, from a representative assembly of all Israel. The procedure may be gathered from Num. 1. 18; Josh. 7. 13-18, and ch. 14. 38-E, and v. 20, note.—<sup>17</sup> Called together.] The narrative is resumed from ch. 8. 22.—Unto the Lord.] This expression (as also before the Lord, v. 19) sometimes is equivalent to in God's sight or in God's name (Gen. 27. 7; ch. 15. 33), but more commonly implies that the Ark, or the Tabernacle, or the H. P. with Urim and Thummim, were present (but see v. 22, note).—Mizpeh.] Of Benjamin (Josh. 18. 26); Heb. the Mizpah, i.e. the watchtower. The site is disputed; if it be (1) the hill Nebi Samuel (i.e. Prophet Samuel), Samuel's reputed burial-place about 5 m. N.W. of Jerusalem, which some identify with Ramah, it was the most conspicuous spot in the neighbourhood, commanding a view of Jerusalem (Tristram), but if (2) Scopus (in Gk. watchman), it was the broad ridge to the N. over against Jerusalem (1 Mac. 3. 46); see 2 Sam. 15. 32, note. The 'family' was subdivided into houses or households (Josh. 7. 14). <sup>20</sup> Was taken.] Similarly Achau was detected (Judg. 7), and Jonathan (ch. 14. 41); probably by the rolling out of a black or marked stone from a box, or from the sinus or bosom-folds of the High Priest's dress (cf. Prov. 16. 33). <sup>21</sup> Matri.] Cf. ch. 9. 1, note. <sup>22</sup> Enquired, &c.] The technical phrase for ascertaining God's will through the H. P. is not mentioned between chs. 4 & 14. 3, a period of about fifty years; see ch. 8. 1, 4, notes.—If, &c.] Heb. Is anyone (save ourselves) yet come hither?—Stuff.] Rather, baggage. The assembly was like a camp, many having come from a distance (see ch. 17. 20, 22, notes) and attack by the Philistines being probable (cp. ch. 7. 7 & 2 Sam. 5. 17). <sup>23</sup> Higher.] Cf. ch. 9. 2, note. <sup>24</sup> Chosen.] Cf. Deut. 17. 15; neither the tribe (Gen. 49. 10), nor the man (ch. 13. 14), would have been God's choice; and in fact God never reckoned Saul as His choice (2 Chr. 6. 5).—Shouted, &c.] Saul was a king after Israel's own heart. in displeasure (Hos. 13. 11).—God, &c.] Heb., Sept., Vulg., Let the king live. <sup>25</sup> Manner . . . book.] Cf. ch. 8. 9, note & App. This writing (Vulg. legem regni) was probably placed with the copy of the Law beside the Ark (Deut. 31. 26), 'for a witness' or protest against any breach. It was the constitution—probably based on Deut. 17. 14–20, and possibly embodying conditions prescribed by the elders (cp. 2 Sam. 5. 3)—a charter establishing and defining the king's position, in relation to Jehovah and the people, as a viceroy sitting upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel (1 Chr. 28. 5). The other contents of 'the book' we may gather from Ex. 24. 7; Deut. 28. 61; Ex. 17. 14; Josh. 24. 26. <sup>26</sup> A band.] R.V. the host, but marg. men of valour. The king needed a bodyguard, for the Philistines had a garrison at or near Gibeah (ch. 10. 5). Or, the force, i.e. the noble and valiant as opposed to the worthless who rejected Saul. <sup>27</sup> Belial.] Rather, worthlessness; a description of the unbelieving section of the assembly, considerable in influence if not in numbers (some render 'the' by certain), and including the disappointed tribes and individuals. The Heb. phrase occurs 13 times. In 2 Sam. 22. 5 & 23. 6 (see notes), it again describes the opponents of the Lord's Anointed. Belial often appears in A.V. as if a proper name, prob. because used for Satan in 2 Cor. 6. 15. This use of a noun expressing quality in the genitive in lieu of an adjective is due partly to poverty in adjectives, partly to that vividness of phraseology which belongs to Oriental languages.—Save us.] i.e. be our deliverer from the Philistine oppressor (ch. 9. 16) and Ammonite invader, like the judges (cp. chs. 8. 20 & 12. 12). Saul was unknown and his tribe weak (ch. 9. 21).—Presents.] i.e. tokens of a recognised sovereignty (cp. Matt. 2. 11). Probably their contempt of Saul was not due to his youth and inexperience alone, but to his origin also. Had he sprung from Reuben, they might have seen in him the representative of Jacob's firstborn; if from Ephraim, 'the shepherd, the stone of Israel' (Gen. 49. 24), the heir of the firstborn of Rachel; if from Judah, the Sceptre, the Lawgiver, the Lion (Gen. 49. 9, 10), and the heir, since Reuben, Simeon, and Levi had been disinherited. —Held his peace.] Observe Saul's self-control and conciliatory prudence; also his pious, wise, and generous decision in ch. 11. 13.

1 S. xi.—1. Then.] Rather, And. Sept. inserts about a month after; but the Heb. text indicates no time. The Chronology of Saul's reign is most uncertain.—Saul had returned to his ordinary pursuits (ch. 10. 26 with vs. 4, 5), awaiting the 'occasion' and inspired impulse for action (ch. 10. 7).—Nahash came up.] See ch. 12. 12; 2 Sam. 10. 2. 'After the renewed apostacy of Judg. 10. 6, Israel was abandoned to Ammon and the Philistines, and they threatened to divide her land between them. Ammon claimed Gilead S. of the Jabbok, but Jephthah repelled the invasion (Judg. 11. 13–33). Now, after about a century of peace, Ammon seems to have again invaded Gilead and met with little resistance, the invasion culminating in the siege of Jabesh.—Jabesh-Gilead.] Jabesh in the N., and Ramoth in the S., were commanding towns in Gilead, i.e. the wooded mountains E. of Jordan having on the other three sides the plateaux of Bashan, Moab, and of the Arabian wilderness, all exposed to the incursions of nomads, the children of the East (including Ammon). Gilead extends from the edge of the plateau of Moab to the R. Yarmuk, and is divided by the R. Jabbok. <sup>2</sup> Right eyes.] To incapacitate them for war (cp. Judg. 1. 7, 8). Nahash's contemptuousness is a measure of Israel's weakness. <sup>3</sup> Elders of Jabesh.] The heads of the chief families were the governing body of a city. For

The time was desperately short for all Saul had to do; but there would be no commissariat difficulties, as now; each man brought his own provisions. Swift runners also abounded in the East (2 Sam. 18. 19 & 2. 18).—Come out. i.e. surrender (cf. 2 Kin. 18. 31). <sup>5</sup> Herd. Rather, oxen, i.e. with his team. See v. 1, note. Jabesh, having alone disobeyed the national summons against Benjamin (Judg. 21. 8), had been extinguished—except 400 virgins subsequently married to the survivors of Benjamin. This connection gave Jabesh a special claim on the Benjamite king of Israel, and the elders sent direct to Gibeah of Saul. Saul's successful response to their appeal probably prompted their valiant rescue of the bodies of the Benjamite king of Israel and his three sons (ch. 31. 12). <sup>6</sup> Came. Rather, came mightily, as upon Samson (Judg. 14. 19, same Heb.), Sept. ἐφάλατο; Vulg. insilivit. <sup>7</sup> Yoke.] i.e. a couple. which are kept in place by a leathern or a wooden collar, i.e. a half-oval hoop or two vertical bars fixed under the yoke. The yoke is sometimes straight, sometimes curved to fit above the neck; it enables the cattle to draw; it also prevents their pushing one another with their horns. Like other everyday things, the Bible often uses it as a figure, e.g. of the slavery of Egypt (Lev. 26. 13), of afflictions (Lam. 3. 27), of Judaism (Gal. 5. 1), and of Christ's lighter service (Matt. 11. 30).—Sent.] So the unhappy woman's bones were sent (Judg. 19. 29). Benjamin was the sufferer then, and Jabesh the sympathizing friend.—Whosoever.] Cp. Scott's Lady of the Lake, 3. 10:

'Woe to the wretch who fails to rear
At this dread sign the ready spear!
For, as the flames this symbol bear,
His home, the refuge of his fear,
A kindred fate shall know.'

This first 'occasion' proves the transformation of Saul (ch. 10. 6, 7, notes). Apparently, Samuel accompanied Saul (v. 12); otherwise, the king names Samuel here in support of his claim to be Israel's champion, which some denied (ch. 10. 27). The result was the uniting of Israel—'with one consent, rather (as marg.) 'as one man.' The general response is a step towards the fuller acceptance of the king.—After Saul . . . Samuel.] Probably the battle cry (cp. Judg. 7. 18). Saul recognises the special relation of the Prophet to the Theocratic king. <sup>8</sup> Numbered.] i.e. mustered, formed the general levy into an army.—Bezek.] If Ib-zik, W. of Jordan, 14 miles N.E. of Shechem on the road to Bethshan and about 16 miles from Jabesh Gilead.—Israel.] Already distinguished from Judah, as in 2 Sam. 2. 10 & 5. 5, &c.—but including Benjamin.—Judah.] Her contingent, the same as in ch. 15. 4, is quite disproportionate. <sup>11</sup>And it was so on the morrow, that <sup>n</sup>Saul put the people <sup>o</sup>in three companies; and they came into the midst of the host in the morning watch, and slew the Ammonites until the heat of the day: and it came to pass, that they which remained were scattered, so that two of them were not left together.

<sup>12</sup>And the people said unto Samuel, <sup>p</sup>Who is he that said, Shall Saul reign over us? <sup>q</sup>bring the men, that we may put them to death. <sup>13</sup>And Saul said, <sup>r</sup>There shall not a man be put to death this day: for to-day <sup>s</sup>the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

It was one long night's march (cp. ch. 31. 12). <sup>11.</sup> In three companies. So Gideon also (Judg. 7. 16). The defeat was so complete that Ammonites are not mentioned again till their king Hanun insults David, and Ammon, after a long and dangerous war, is subdued by him (2 Sam. 10).—Morning watch. i.e., the 3rd, from 2 till sunrise. The Jews called 10 to 2 the middle watch (Judg. 7. 19), and from sunset till 10 the 1st watch. The Romans divided the night into 4 watches (Mark 13. 35). <sup>13.</sup> Saul said. An illustration of Saul's good qualities (cp. chs. 9. 21 & 10. 13, 16, 22, 27) before he gave way to self-will. <sup>14.</sup> Go to Gilgal. Samuel now acts on the national recognition of Saul's mission as a deliverer (cf. ch. 10. 27) to procure his formal and universal acceptance as king. Samuel does not seem to have referred to this visit to Gilgal in ch. 10. 8 (see note there), when telling Saul, for his encouragement, that he would not be expected, and, for his warning, that he was not to attempt, to act independently of his aid and countenance: and, upon the whole, it seems probable that he then referred to the future, but indefinite, commencement of the national rebellion against the Philistines (ch. 9. 16). <sup>15.</sup> Made Saul king. Possibly anointed him publicly; so Sept., cp. ch. 12. 3, 5.—Before the Lord. Cf. ch. 10. 17, note.—Rejoiced greatly. Held [1 S. xi. 10—xii. 3.]

As animal food is little eaten in warm climates, peace, i.e. thanksgiving, offerings were the chief occasions of feasts of meat.

1 S. xii.—1. I. Samuel had now founded (chs. 8. 22 & 10. 25) the Hebrew Monarchy—one limited by Moses' Law and the Prophetic word—his own office under it being that of Prophet-counsellor to the king. The king was formally installed, and both king's and people's constitutional rights and duties had been defined. Samuel retained the civil and religious authority of his judgeship till his death (chs. 7. 15 & 15. 33); indeed, ch. 22. 2 suggests that Saul's civil government was not successful. 2. Walketh before you. As a shepherd (John 10. 4) i.e. civil ruler and military leader (Jer. 23. 4). The king's public life is begun (e.g., v. 3).—With you. Samuel, quoting the two pretexts for a monarchy (ch. 8. 5), challenges the assembly to impeach his administration, and points out that it can call his sons—now become private individuals—to account. 3. Behold. R.V. omits. the Greek Messias, Sept. the Christ—belonged already to the H. P. (Lev. 4. 3) and imported sanctity of person (cp. ch. 24. 6; 2 Sam. 1. 14); it is here first applied to Saul, and seems henceforward to be limited to the Theocratic King (see Lam. 4. 20; ch. 10. 1, note) to whom Samuel's mother had prophetically given it (ch. 2. 10). It proclaimed that the king represented the power and authority of Israel's Covenant-God. It also contained 'the pregnant germ of a great future,' for the Promises, 'Israel's hope,' were hereafter to centre in an ideal Davidic king (2 Sam. 7. 12-16).—De . . . ass. Selected, as in the 10th Commandment, as an agricultural people's chief valuables. Cf. Num. 16. 15.—Bribe. Lit. a covering. Rather, a ransom; the rich or powerful offender escaped from justice by sharing his plunder with the judge (see ch. 8. 2; Isa. 1. 23, p. 443). Sept. adds, καὶ ὑπόδημα, ay, even a pair of shoes; the addition appears in Eccles. 46. 19; cf. Amos 2. 6 (p. 433) & 8. 6.—To blind. A play of words. Cf. Gen. 20. 16. Perhaps 'vale (i.e. a present) to veil mine eyes.'—Restore. So Zacchæus (Luke 19. 8). <sup>6</sup>. It is. Rather (with Heb.) even. Samuel takes up their reply with emphasis. Sept. has, The Lord is witness.—Advanced. Or appointed. Lit. made.—Brought, &c. God had become Israel's King at the Exodus. <sup>7</sup>. Stand still. Rather, stand forth (so v. 16). Present yourselves as defendants.—Reason. Rather plead, i.e. in vindication of Jehovah's direct kingship, the Theocracy, which (with its visible expression, Samuel's judgeship) the people's demand condemned (ch. 8. 7) unjustly. Lit. deal as judge.—Righteous. Jehovah had kept the Covenant: not so Israel. Nay more, notwithstanding Israel's repeated apostasy and adoption of the gods of Canaan (Baalim and Ashtaroth) since Jehovah planted her therein. He had never, to this day ('you,' cp. ch. 7. 3-14), failed to deliver her—on her repentance—from the consequences of her unfaithfulness. <sup>9</sup>. Sold. A total abandonment (1 Kin. 21. 25; cf. Judg. 2. 14 & 3. 8; Ps. 44. 12). The corresponding opposite expression is redeem. Note here, and in ch. 9. 16, &c., sold, oppression, cried unto the Lord, save, Spirit came upon, and other expressions characteristic of the Book of Judges; and the correspondence between v. 10 and Judg. 10. 10. Baalim and Ashtaroth. Plurals; the worships of Baal and Ashtoreth (sun and moon) being many. Each state had its own, each place almost, a different cult for each aspect under which sun or moon could be adored. In the temple of the sun at Cuzeo in

of the year the rays of the rising sun would fall on it and illuminate the whole temple. The existence of this is specially interesting as confirming the statement, and widening its application.—'The better we get to know the ancient faiths of the world and their history, the more plainly does it appear that at their root they possessed a common origin, and that similar ruling ideas ran through them all.'—Dykes on Ps. 19, Expos., 1879. The primary religions of our race had an astronomical basis. Original notions of law, order, life, dominion were derived from the heavenly bodies. Ashtoreth was the female reflection of the sun-god, viewed in as many aspects; till the days of Solomon, who re-introduced her worship, the plural Ashtaroth alone is met with. Baal and Ashtoreth, the husband and the wife, represented the reproductive powers of nature: hence the lewd and wanton orgies associated with their worship. Israel's recurrent adoption of these religions during the period of the Judges had been punished by the withdrawal of Jehovah's protection, without which Israel was unable to maintain her independence. Samuel's reformation (ch. 7. 4; see Introd., p. 5) had resented Israel from these Canaanitish influences, yet Samuel fears a relapse (v. 21) and points out that, under the Monarchy, apostasy must inevitably produce the same consequences as under the Theocracy (v. 25; cp. Judg. 2. 11-20). See 1 Kin. 11. 5 & 18. 18, notes. 11. Sent. &c.] Note the order:—

Jernb-baal.] 'Let Baal plead,' i.e. defend himself. So Sept. and Syr. The Hebrew letters of the two words closely resemble one another.—Samuel.] Cf. chs. 7. 7-14 & 8. 5, note. God's 'righteous acts' are brought down to the present day. 13. Ye have chosen.] Cf. ch. 10. 24, note.—Desired.] Rather, asked, i.e. of Samuel. But it was Jehovah who had answered them and had guided the Prophet. 14. If, &c.] The condition of Israel's preservation and progress will remain the same under the Monarchy, viz., Faithfulness (to the exclusion of all other worship, v. 21) to the invisible King who had granted a visible king.—Rebel.] i.e. by serving other gods.—Then, &c.] Rather, and will be, both you and your king that reigns over you, followers after the Lord your God—well. A similar sentence is found in Ex. 32. 32. 15. As . . . fathers.] Sept. and against your king (cp. v. 25). 16. Great thing.] A confirmatory 'sign' was expected (Jn. 7. 3; Matt. 12. 39) of a prophet. Samuel invokes—beyond the Divine testimony to his uprightness and teaching—a convincing intimation from Jehovah to the people that their demand, though granted, had been an act of rebellion against His will (c. 20; ch. 8. 7, 8). Cp. Num. 16. 30. Note the ascending scale of Samuel's appeal, of which this was the climax—to prudence (ch. 8. 11–18), to gratitude (ch. 10. 18, 19), to terror (cp. Mk. 8. 36; Isa. 5. 4; 2 Cor. 5. 11). The event attested the reality of the Divine government of Israel which the king was to represent, and the continued efficacy of Samuel's prayers (c. 23; ch. 7. 3; comp. Jas. 5. 17, 18). <sup>17</sup> Wheat harvest. Wheat is sown (whenever the former rain has softened the ground for ploughing) in November or December. The latter rain comes in March or April; wheat harvest in May, threshing immediately after. 'To-day' means at present. <sup>18</sup> Greatly feared. Thunder in Palestine is quite unknown in summer (Jerome); in ordinary seasons, this holds good still. The thunder was as a confirmation by God's 'voice' (Ps. 29. 3; cf. John 12. 29). Rain in harvest became proverbial of the unlikely (Prov. 26. 1). <sup>19</sup> Appalled, the people confess its sin and cries for mercy.—Evil. Rather, wickedness, as in vs. 17, 20. <sup>20</sup> Said. Not wishing to weaken Saul's authority, but bound, as prophet, to make known God's mind. It is doubtful whether the words were well received by Saul, whether the seeds of future disagreement were not here sown.—Yet. Or, only. Israel's forgetfulness of God in prosperity and her proneness to idolatry proved incurable: hence the final rejection of the Ten Tribes (2 Kin. 17. 7–23) and the overthrow of the Kingdom of Judah (2 Kin. 21. 1–15). <sup>21</sup> For then should ye go. Rather omit, with Sept.—Vain things. Lit, emptiness (Heb. tolu, A.V. 'void,' Gen. 1. 2). In Elizabethan English, 'vain' means empty (cf. 'vain persons,' i.e. adventurers, good-for-nothings, Judg. 9. 4). Here, idols are meant. Compare 'an idol is nothing in the world,' i.e. non-existent, a non-entity (1 Cor. 8. 4); 'a lie' (Isa. 44. 20). <sup>22</sup> For his great name's sake. i.e. lest He should seem to the Gentiles to be less than Almighty, True, Faithful. To this Moses appeals (Ex. 32. 12, 13) when Israel's very existence was at stake. God's 'name' means Himself and His perfections. <sup>23</sup> Pray. God names Moses and Samuel as intercessors of prevailing power (Jer. 15. 1; cf. Ps. 99. 6).—Teach. R.V. Instruct . . . in. The lesson follows (vs. 24, 25). Intercession and teaching summarise the work of the prophets, and Samuel had provided for a constant succession of teachers and preachers in his guilds of the prophets. <sup>24</sup> How great things. Perhaps, the great marvel, this present token of His power, the rain, which no idol could have sent, as Jeremiah declares (Jer. 14. 22; cp. Num. 16. 30). <sup>25</sup> Israel should not enter upon her new career in perilous self-complacency. Monarchy without faithfulness would not deliver her.—Consumed. Perhaps a reference to the lightning of the storm; the recent display of God's power suggested destruction—at least of Israel's property (c. 17; ch. 23. 1, notes).

which the LORD will do before your eyes. <sup>17</sup> Is it not <sup>a</sup> wheat harvest to day? <sup>o</sup> I will call unto the LORD, and he shall send thunder and rain; that ye may perceive and see that <sup>p</sup> your wickedness is great, which ye have done in the sight of the LORD, in asking you a king.

<sup>18</sup> So Samuel called unto the LORD; and the LORD sent thunder and rain that day: and <sup>q</sup> all the people greatly feared the LORD and Samuel. <sup>19</sup> And all the people said unto Samuel, <sup>r</sup> Pray for thy servants unto the LORD thy God, that we die not: for we have added unto all our sins this evil, to ask us a king.

6.—Saul's Disobedience. The first Sentence on Saul.

1 SAMUEL XIII. 1-22.

1 S. xiii.] There must be a considerable interval between chapters 12 and 13, and possibly between vs. 1 and 2, and between vs. 2 and 3 of ch. 13. Saul was a young man in ch. 9. 2 (A.V. choice, see note), now he has a grown son. He has organised a national force. His own character has greatly developed; the self-mistrustful and retiring king-elect is now the self-reliant and even presumptuous king. Seemingly, the historian passes abruptly to the closing years of Saul's reign, to explain Saul's forfeiture of the kingdom (v. 13; 2 Sam. 7. 15) and of God's special favour and grace (ch. 10. 6) and to sketch his decline, parallel with the disciplining of David, the king designate, 'a man after God's own heart.' Hervooy allows ten years at the outside for chs. 13-31. Kirkpatrick for chs. 17-31. 1.] Apparently, two numbers are wanting in the Hebrew text—which is the customary heading to future reigns. Render, Saul was (thirty) years old when he began to reign, and he reigned (? thirty) and two years over Israel.

Heb. (so A.V. marg.) the son of one year (= a year old) in his reigning. Probably Saul was now not less than 35 years of age. Sept. omits v. 1 altogether (but in a later recension thirty is inserted); and v. 2 in the Hebrew has no grammatical connection with v. 1. 2. Saul.] Rather, Now Saul.—Three thousand men.] Always under arms; a picked (ch. 14. 52) nucleus for the people (v. 4) i.e. the general levy or militia; probably added to the bodyguard (cf. ch. 10. 26), either after Saul's victory over Ammon or two years after his accession. The retention of the 3,000 men and the dismissal of the rest point to an interval of peace and preparation (ch. 10. 8); but their disposition here indicates a first step towards revolt from the Philistines, who at the outbreak of hostilities had a garrison at Geba (v. 3). Perhaps this garrison had moved from Gibeah (ch. 10. 5) when Saul occupied Michmash and thereupon Jonathan had occupied Gibeah. Gibeah, Saul's home, and Geba (v. 3, note) were 3 miles apart.—Michmash, &c.] The probable positions are as follows:—

Michmash and Geba stood on the E. edge of the plateau of Benjamin on the N. and S. side respectively of a precipitous ravine (Wady es Suweinit, 'the true head of Wady Kelt'); a bridle-path connects them; cp. Isa. 10. 28, 29. The Wady Kelt runs up from the plain of Jordan near Jericho—whence also the great W. trade route to the Mediterranean ascends the ridge N. of the Wady (cp. ch. 17. 2, note) to Michmash, Ai, and Bethel on the watershed.

and, crossing the mount of Bethel (probably the heights along the watershed) and the plateau, descends to the Shephelah or Lowland (see ch. 17. 2, note). A.V. the vale, and to the plain of Philistia by the pass of Beth-horon and valley of Ajalon. Michmash, standing considerably lower than Geba, on a sort of saddle, backed by an open and fertile corn valley, was a very important strategic position.—Tent.] i.e. home (2 Sam. 18. 17 & 20. 1, 22, &c.).

<sup>3</sup>And Jonathan smote <sup>c</sup>the garrison of the Philistines that was in Geba, and the Philistines heard of it. And Saul blew the trumpet throughout all the land, saying, Let the Hebrews hear. <sup>4</sup>And all Israel heard say that Saul had smitten a garrison of the Philistines, and that Israel also was had in abomination with the Philistines. And the people were called together after Saul to Gilgal.

<sup>5</sup>And the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight with Israel, thirty thousand chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and people as the sand which is on the sea shore in multitude: and they came up, and pitched in Michmash, eastward from Beth-aven. <sup>6</sup>When the men of Israel saw that they were in a strait, (for the people were distressed,) then the people <sup>d</sup>did hide themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in high places, and in pits. <sup>7</sup>And some of the Hebrews went over Jordan to the land of Gad and Gilead.

As for Saul, he was yet in Gilgal, and all the people followed him trembling. <sup>8</sup>And

3.] Henceforward to ch. 14. 46, the record of a war of independence waged against the Philistines serves to display Saul's character in 3 typical episodes (ch. 13 & ch. 14. 19, 24) and to explain his forfeiture of the continuance of the kingdom in his family; while in ch. 15, the record of the Amalekite war explains similarly his rejection as Theocratic king and abandonment to himself and his own devices (ch. 15. 26, 28; cf. ch. 18. 12). The immediate cause of each successive sentence pronounced by Samuel is an act of impulsive self-willed independence, the exact contrary of the patient unquestioning faith due from the Theocratic king.—Jonathan.] Cp. ch. 14. 6, 10. Jonathan's simple reliance on Israel's covenant-God seems to be contrasted with the contrary failing of Saul. The deliverance was eventually granted by his means (ch. 14. 1, 4, 17, 45).—Garrison.] See ch. 10. 5. Four words, slightly differing, are so translated, of which the two that are mase, seem generally to mean the men who form the garrison (2 Sam. 8. 6; ch. 13. 23; cf. 1 Kin. 4. 5, where it is rendered 'officers'); and the two that are fem, the keep, or 'statio', containing the garrison (ch. 14. 12; Ezek. 26. 11). By this military post, the Philistines appear to have bridled the N., i.e. Benjamite section of the central plateau, and controlled the W. passes up to it (r. 5)—perhaps in consequence of the national movements of chs. 8 & 11, and of the election of a Benjamite as king of Israel (cf. ch. 7. 7; 2 Sam. 5. 17).—Geba.] Saul's position (Bethel to Gibeath with Gilgal for a base) being thus completed (r. 2, note), he—evidently with Samuel's inspired co-operation—gives the signal for a general revolt, naming Gilgal as the rendezvous. Cp. ch. 9. 16 & 10. 8.—Let the Hebrews hear.] i.e. the news and the order implied in the proclamation to come and join Saul in the war which should now follow. By such feats the Judges had roused the dispersed people. 4. A.] Rather, the garrison (Var., R.V.).—Gilgal.] Gilgal was in the plain of Jordan, 'in the E. border of Jericho.' Here Saul could secure both water and provisions and his communications with the northern tribes through Gilead. Gilgal (see ch. 10. 8, note) was probably chosen also for its sacred and military associations, and because remote from the Philistines. 5. Beth-aven.] E. of Bethel (ch. 14. 23, note). The Philistines, swarming up the W. passes, seized the great N. route along the watershed, and the cross-route through Michmash—which Saul probably abandoned upon their advance—and thus isolated Benjamin and Judah. 6. Strait.] 3,000 opposed to a countless host. But 30,000 chariots—a number without parallel, and quite disproportionate to the cavalry—must be a scribe's error for 1,000 or for 300, letters serving in Hebrew as numerals, with one or more dots or dashes to denote hundreds, thousands, &c. (cf. Judg. 4. 3; Ex. 14. 7; 2 Sam. 10. 18; 1 Kin. 10. 26; 2 Chr. 14. 9 & 12. 3; Ps. 68. 17).—Distressed.] i.e. overwhelmed; lit. driven (Heb. as ch. 14. 24; Isa. 53. 7). The promptitude and numbers of the Philistine invaders checked the response to Saul's summons, and, being hopelessly outnumbered, all the people (r. 7; cp. 2 Sam. 15. 23), i.e. Saul's following, gradually fell away (r. 11).—Hide.] So the inhabitants of numberless villages are driven by the Bedouins to hide at this day (cf. ch. 14. 11). Caves abound around Michmash, and indeed in all the limestone region of Palestine.—Thickets.] Or, clefts.—High places.] Rather, holds or holes; perhaps towers;—a rare word rendered 'hold' in Judg. 9. 46. Vulg. antris; Sept. βόθροις.—Pits.] Vulg., rightly, cisterns; Sept. λάκκοις. Cf. Lev. 11. 36 (Heb.). 7. Hebrews.] Omit some of. The writer reverts to the original meaning of the word Hebrew—one that comes from the other side. Cf. Gen. 14. 13, where Abram is so called, as the settler from beyond the Euphrates. But Sept. οἱ διαβαίνοντες διέβησαν τὸν Ἰορδάνην, 'the crossers', i.e. those who were purposing to cross, 'crossed Jordan'.—Gad and Gilead.] In rear of Gilgal.

he tarried seven days, according to the set time that Samuel had appointed: but Samuel came not to Gilgal; and the people were scattered from him. <sup>9</sup> And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt offering to me, and peace offerings. And he offered the burnt offering. <sup>10</sup> And it came to pass, that as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, behold, Samuel came; and Saul went out to meet him, that he might salute him.

<sup>11</sup> And Samuel said, What hast thou done? And Saul said, Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at Michmash; <sup>12</sup> therefore said I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication unto the LORD: I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt offering. <sup>13</sup> And Samuel said to Saul, Thou hast done foolishly: <sup>9</sup> thou hast not kept the commandment of the LORD thy God, which he commanded thee: for now would the LORD have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever. <sup>14</sup> But now thy kingdom shall not continue; <sup>4</sup> the LORD hath sought him a man after his own heart, and the LORD hath commanded him to be captain over his people, because thou Man's extremity is God's opportunity. 9. A.] Rather, the (so r. 12), and insert the before peace offerings. The victims awaiting Samuel's arrival are meant.—Offered.] Not necessarily by his own hand; see ch. 14. 3, but comp. chs. 8. 4 & 9. 13, notes. Saul prefers generalship and worldly policy to the prophet's intercession and guidance; cp. ch. 14. 19. 10. Came.] Before the seventh day was ended (cp. ch. 1. 3; 1 Kin. 3. 4).—Salute.] Saul always pays Samuel the highest outward respect (cp. ch. 28. 14). 11. What hast thou done?] Saul had forfeited God's support and the benefits to be anticipated from Samuel's intercession—perhaps a second Ebenezer (cf. ch. 7. 7-14, which offers some striking parallels).—Scattered.] Saul lacked Jonathan's simple faith (cf. ch. 14. 6-10). 12. Forced myself.] Saul ever makes excuses. Without obedience, Saul's sacrifice must be unacceptable to God (cf. ch. 15. 22). The superstitious formal character of Saul's religion is here illustrated (cp. chs. 14. 33 & 15. 25, 30 & 27. 3). He called on God to help him in what he was about to do, instead of waiting to know what his King would have him do. Saul was expressly forbidden to begin the war of independence without Samuel's instructions (ch. 10. 8). 13. Foolishly.] i.e. sinfully, as often in A.V. Folly is the contrary of wisdom, i.e. 'the fear of the Lord.' Obedience to the Word of the Lord spoken by Samuel was a condition of Saul's appointment (chs. 10. 8 & 15. 1). The Divine choice of Saul which, upon his obedience, would have been now confirmed is annulled.—Established.] Samuel himself had hoped it would be so, and was disappointed (ch. 16. 1). Saul had violated the first principle of the Monarchy, viz. the dependence of king on prophet (ch. 10. 8, note), their co-ordinate position under God. 'Saul's insensibility to the obligations of his office constituted unworthiness of it.'—For ever.] Probably till his family, in direct line, became extinct (see Gen. 49. 10). 14. Not continue.] The sentence of transference. Yet action is deferred (ch. 16. 1): and ch. 15. 29 suggests that, if Saul had repented, the sentence was not irrevocable.—God's threatenings, like His promises, are conditional. But Saul instead of seeking forgiveness indulged his self-will. When he failed to see the wisdom or policy of the Word of the Lord he declined to obey it: he decided to act for himself. So the alienation between Israel's visible king and Invisible King grew yearly, until a second and yet more public manifestation of Saul's determination not to submit his will to God's will drove the reluctant Samuel to pronounce the doom of disobedience in yet stronger terms, viz. personal rejection.—Sought.] The fact was revealed to Samuel, not the man (ch. 16. 6).—David must have been very young at this time, certainly under 20 (ch. 16. 12 & 17. 56). He was only 30 when he began to reign (2 Sam. 5. 4). Probably we must allow 4 years for Saul's service, 4 years for outlaw life, 2 years nearly for sojourn among the Philistines.—A man ... heart.] i.e. one not self-willed, but ready to submit his will to God's. Observe the paraphrase in Acts 13. 22, Which shall fulfil all my will. The man whose heart is right is the man after God's own heart, sins, even gross sins, notwithstanding. To the last, when carried away by no sinful passion, David's will was to do God's will as king. No family grief, or consciousness of having fallen, or desertion by his people, could lead him to retire in the spirit of a Charles V. It shows how healthy and true were David's penitence and faith, that after Absalom's rebellion he could return to organize his people anew, to direct them to the last with all his power.—Captain.] The title of the Theocratic king; see ch. 9, 16, note. <sup>15</sup>, Samuel arose., &c.] Preceding Saul (Heb. text)—Saul returned, probably to Ramah, by way of Gibeah (perhaps to visit and encourage Jonathan). <sup>17</sup> The insurrection having failed, and the bulk of his picked force having deserted, Saul is obliged to effect a junction with Jonathan, and to look on whilst Benjamin is ravaged.—Gibeah of Benjamin.] ‘After my visit to the spot, 1881, I retain very decidedly the opinion that Tuleit el Ful represents Gibeah of Saul. It is true that no distinct traces of ruins exist, but the hill has been artificially scarped and seems to have been a strong fortress. Tuleit el Ful meets the conditions of the topography and of Isa. 10 as no other place that I can find does.—Tristram.—Numbered.] i.e. mustered, organised (ch. 11, 8, note). <sup>16</sup>, Gibeah.] More probably, as Heb., Geba (r. 3), distant a little more than 2 miles from Michmash across the ravine (Porter). The relative positions of Saul and the Philistines are now reversed (vs. 2, 3). <sup>17</sup>, Three companies.] Disregarding Saul—who was south of them—one body went N.E. towards Ophrah and the highlands of Ephraim. Westward, a second body crossed the watershed towards the Beth-horon Pass; and a third went S.E. towards the V. of Zeboim, probably Wady abu Dub’a, which would open to their raids the whole district of the ‘midbar,’ or pastoral highlands of Judah. The operations of this third party would certainly not extend to the Ghor, or valley of the Jordan, but would cover the region between Bethany and the heights overhanging the north end of the Dead Sea, through which the modern road from Jerusalem to Jericho passes. The raiders could thus raze the whole Benjamite highland (ch. 14, 23, note), the superiority of the Philistine forces paralysing Saul and limiting him to a policy of defence and observation (Tristram). Perhaps these parties disarmed the Benjamites (v. 19).—Ophrah.] Probably the prominent conical hill Et Taiyibeh, and the ‘Ephraim’ of Josh. 18, 23; 2 Chr. 13, 19; John 11, 54 (5 m. E. of Bethel, Jerome). <sup>18</sup>, Beth-horon.] The pass between the upper and nether Beth-horon (2 m. long) at the head of the valley of Ajalon affords the easiest access from the W. to the central highland (v. 2, note). By it the Philistines were destined to flee panic-stricken (ch. 14, 23, 31).—Looketh to.] Rather, overlooketh.—Zeboim.] ‘Means hyenas, and is identical with the Arabic Dub’a’; see plan, p. 16.—Wilderness.] Desert valley of the Jordan (Josh. 8, 15). Stanley calls it ‘barren tract.’ The Heb. midbar means uncultivated or pastureable land. The N. end of the basin of the Dead Sea has luxuriant oases, at Jericho, Ain Duk, and Shittim. Lower down, beyond these, except just within reach of the Jordan, only in spring is verdure seen. No towns or villages are met with on Jordan’s banks. <sup>19</sup>, Smith.] Cf. Judg. 5. 8. Agricultural implements, clubs, arrows and bows, and slings, would be the Hebrew weapons (cf. v. 22, note), whereas the Philistines had armour and the best of weapons (ch. 17, 5-7, 38, 39), which they could import from Greece. The ascendancy of the Philistines had apparently increased with Samuel’s declining years (ch. 7, 13, 14 & 9, 16), and Saul’s election and victory at Jabesh would provoke repressive measures (ep. ch. 7, 7; 2 Sam. 5, 17). But some regard this disarmament as the result of the invasion of vs. 5-7, and as limited to Benjamin (all the places named are in Benjamin) whence Saul would draw the bulk of his standing army. At any rate, Saul’s fortunes were now at their lowest ebb; even the selected 2,000 had dwindled to 600. Israel’s weakness at this time cannot be explained without fuller information as to its relation with the Philistines between Samuel’s victory at Mizpah and the oppression described here.—Hebrews.] Probably they used the name contemptuously; but it was used otherwise (ch. 13, 7 & 14, 21); always, however, in O. T., it is the distinctive national name of Israel. <sup>20</sup>, Sharpen.] i.e. by forging.—Share, &c.] The ancient Eastern plough—still in use, unmodified, in Palestine—is much ruder and simpler than ours, having neither breast (the long iron curved like a wave), nor coulter (Lat. cutter, i.e. the perpendicular knife adfixed to his axe, and his mattock. <sup>21</sup> Yet they had a file for the mattocks, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and to sharpen the goads. <sup>22</sup> So it came to pass in the day of battle, that <sup>p</sup> there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan: but with Saul and with Jonathan his son was there found.

This slipe pushes in front of it the share (Sax. sceran, to cut; a solid iron point, like an arrow-head with one barb, the hinder part being hollow and receiving the slipe) which burrows through the ground. Though the coulters appear in very ancient reliefs, it is unknown now in Palestine. The Heb. for 'coulters' (rendered ploughshare in Isa. 2. 4; Joel 3. 10) may mean the iron spud or scraper at the reverse end of the goad. The wheel is of later date (cf. *Virg. For hammer-and-anvil work they were dependent on Philistine smithies.—Goads.] Shamgar slew 600 Philistines with an ox-goad (Judg. 3. 31), viz. a stout stick with an iron point, used to prick the oxen at the plough. Ahiah or Ahijah = brother of Jehorah; Ahimelech = brother of the king, i.e. God; see marg. ref. and at ch. 21. Both names may represent one person (for other cases see 1 Chr. 6. 27, 34; 2 Kin. 23. 34). Or, Ahimelech the son of Ahitub (ch. 22. 9) may be a younger brother and successor of Ahiah. If Samuel had been H.P. (ch. 8. 1, 4, notes), the office seems to have returned to Eli's line, in Samuel's old age; see ch. 10. 22, note. But some think that even now Ahiah did not offer sacrifice, but only equipped of God.—Priest in Shiloh.] i.e. Eli. If the Tabernacle was still at Shiloh, this title may belong to Abiah; but Shiloh never reappears as a chief religious centre after the disaster of Aphek. The 'tent of meeting,' being portable, was renewed; probably by Samuel (ch. 8. 4, note).—Ephod.] Means a vestment (Gk., ἐπιπαις; Lat., superhumeralis); a short sleeveless shirt, like a front and back apron, with shoulder-straps and girdle. The High Priest's (Lev. 8. 7, 8) ephod was woven with blue, purple, and scarlet, embroidered with gold; the names of 6 tribes were cut on a stone, set in gold as a button on each shoulder. The 'breastplate of judgment' or divination was attached to this ephod; hence its mention (cs. 18. 37). The priestly ephod was of fine linen (shesh); those of ch. 2. 18; 2 Sam. 6. 14 of ordinary linen (bod). 4. Passages.] Rather, passes, i.e. lateral ravines. The Wady, 4 m. circumcised.] The thought would add fuel to faith and courage—circumcision (though practised by some other nations of antiquity) being the rite by which the Hebrews were distinctively marked as a people separated to God. Cf. Gen. 34. 14; Jer. 9. 25, 26. This term of reproach is applied specially to the Philistines (ch. 17. 26, &c.). Jonathan's faith was based on Israel's covenant-relation to Jehovah (so David in ch. 17. 45–47, cp. Heb. 11. 34); he also reflected that the Philistines had no such privilege. Hence the sting of the Philistine triumph over the Lord's Anointed (2 Sam. 1. 20). 7. Behold, &c.] Like 'Here am I,' implying readiness to be quiet and obey. 9. Tarry.] Var. Be quiet. 10. Sign.] i.e. of God's will = an enquiry (margin, revel.). Jonathan's faith was rewarded; and God wrought the promised deliverance by his hand and not by Saul's (r. 1, 17, 45). Saul's share was limited to the pursuit, and that he marred. 11. Holes.] Cf. ch. 13. 6; Judg. 6. 2 & 15. 8; ch. 22. 1 & 23. 25 & 24. 3; 1 Kin. 18. 4; Mark 5. 3. 12. Shew.] Using the word jeeringly (as it is used in Judg. 8. 16). For the ark of God was at that time with the children of Israel. <sup>19</sup>And it came pass, while Saul <sup>n</sup>talked unto the priest, that the noise that was in the host of the Philistines went on and increased; and Saul said unto the priest, Withdraw thine hand. <sup>20</sup>And Saul and all the people that were with him assembled themselves, and they came to the battle: and, behold, <sup>o</sup>every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great discomfiture. <sup>21</sup>Moreover the Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan. <sup>22</sup>Likewise all the men of Israel which <sup>p</sup>had hid themselves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philistines fled, even they also followed hard after them in the battle. <sup>23</sup><sup>q</sup>So the LORD saved Israel that day: and the battle passed over <sup>r</sup>unto Beth-aven.

post communicated their panic.—Quaked.] Evidencing Jehovah's interposition. Cf. Exod. 19. 18; Ps. 68. 8.—Very great.] Heb. of God (p. 70, note); cp. ch. 7. 16, note, App. B. 16. Beating, &c.] In panic, the Philistines attacked one another (cf. Judg. 7. 22); hence the great noise (qs. 19. 20; cp. Isa. 9. 5, 'confused noise'). The Heb. is rendered multitude here, and noise in v. 19. Both are correct. It means a concourse of people, including the idea of noise and tumult (2 Chr. 20. 2; Ezek. 26. 13). The often composite and unequally disciplined forces led against Israel would be peculiarly liable to sudden mutual mistrust and panic (see 2 Kin. 7. 6; 2 Chr. 20. 22, 23). 18. Ark.] It might have been fetched temporarily from Kirjath-jearim (compare the next clause with Judg. 20. 27; see also 2 Sam. 11. 11 & 15. 24). But we should probably read with the Septuagint—'the ephod, for he bare the ephod at that time before Israel' (see v. 3), especially as Saul was seeking an oracle, which was procured through the Urim and Thummim in the High Priest's ephod (ch. 23. 6, 9 & 30. 7, 8, where the same word is used for 'bring,' a word inapplicable to the Ark). 19. Withdraw, &c.] i.e. Abandon the inquiry. Saul could endure no delay (cf. v. 35). The contrast of Jonathan's reliance on Jehovah brings into strong relief Saul's unfitness to be the Theocratic monarch. Jonathan this day eclipses Saul. 21. Moreover, &c.] R.V. Now . . . as beforetime.—Hebrews, &c.] i.e. renegades, or forced levies of soldiers or servants. Or, perhaps, actual slaves. Sept. δοῦλοι, (Hebrews and slaves in Heb. are very similar.) Even when the land had been so long theirs that they would be indifferent to the taunt latent in their ancestral name Hebrews, they preferred the sacred name Israelites which characterised them distinctly as God's own. Its abrupt flanks, broken by precipitous ravines only—on the E. too crooked, narrow, and waterless for traffic, and on the W. mere torrent-beds—were unapproachable or easily defensible; a waterless wilderness protected it on the S. But it was accessible directly from the N. along the watershed, and from the E. and W. by passes (ch. 17. 2, note) of which the least difficult were by Beth-horon and Michmash (ch. 13. 2, note). Hence its 10 north-most miles (to 3 m. N. of Bethel) were a constant battleground.—The Philistines had now one or more garrisons planted there.—Unto Beth-aven.] Rather, by, i.e. beyond Beth-aven. Beth-aven, i.e. House of naught, originally the name of the wilderness (midbar) E. of Bethel, was later interpreted, of vanities, i.e. idols (Hos. 4. 15; Amos. 5. 5). The Pass of Beth-horon (see ch. 13. 18, note) would be the Philistines' home-ward road after crossing the central highland—issuing on which, from the north end of the Pass of Michmash, they would pass S. of Bethel. See sec. 6, plan.—This victory, though disastrously incomplete through Saul's impulsiveness (rs. 19. 24), was the turning point of Israel's fortunes. Saul evidently kept the Philistines at bay (chs. 17. 1 & 14. 52) till his persecution of his able lieutenant David, and his growing despotism and his favouritism as regarded his own tribe, alienated many of the noblest spirits in Israel and paved the way to the catastrophe at Gilboa. And though Saul's really great life was frittered away in repelling aggressive neighbours, he left behind him a nation trained for war, and had prepared Israel once more for conquest.

Their faintness did not stop Gideon's men (Jdg. 8. 4-9); contrast also Joshua's pursuit over the same ground (Josh. 10. 10-14). The value of a victory mainly depends on the victor's power to pursue and destroy all cohesion in the enemy (v. 36). But Saul's zeal was bad generalship. this day. <sup>34</sup>And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his sheep, and slay them here, and eat; and sin not against the LORD in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox with him that night, and slew them there. <sup>35</sup>And Saul <sup>2</sup>built an altar unto the LORD: the same was the first altar that he built unto the LORD.

<sup>36</sup>And Saul said, Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning light, and let us not leave a man of them. And they said, Do whatsoever seemeth good unto thee. Then said the priest, <sup>a</sup>Let us draw near hither unto God. <sup>37</sup>And Saul asked counsel of God, Shall I go down after the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into the hand of Israel? But <sup>b</sup>he answered him not that day. <sup>38</sup>And Saul said, <sup>c</sup>Draw ye near hither, all the chief of the people: and know and see wherein this sin hath been this day. <sup>39</sup>For, <sup>d</sup>as the LORD liveth, which saveth Israel, though it be in Jonathan my son, he shall surely die. And Saul and Jonathan were taken: but the people escaped. <sup>42</sup>And Saul said, Cast lots between me and Jonathan my son. God forbid: <sup>j</sup>as the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground; for he hath wrought with God this day. So the people rescued Jonathan, that he died not.

Their home was Caphtor, according to Amos (Amos. 9. 7; cf. Jer. 47. 4; Gen. 10. 14), i.e. the great Capht, the N. Delta. They appear to have adopted the language of the Avim, whom they dispossessed, and to have dropped the custom of circumcision, i.e. if it prevailed so early in Egypt. The River of Egypt (Wady-el-Arish) was their southern boundary, and they occupied the sea coast up to Ekron, aiming even at the mastery of the whole Shephelah (ch. 17. 2, note). The Heb. of A.V. borders, literally circles, refers probably to the districts round each town of their Pentapolis (Ekron, Ashdod, Ashkelon, Gath, Gaza). Philistines are first named in Canaan in Gen. 21. 32; in Exod. 14. 17 they are mentioned as a warlike nation. Judah could not occupy this part of its allotment, for, like all peoples of the plains whom Israel failed to subdue, the Philistines had chariots (ch. 13. 5; 2 Sam. 1. 6). Shlangar, Samson, and Sammel obtained only temporary successes against them. They were the most highly organised of Israel’s foes, and in Samuel’s time were ‘strengthened by a constant influx of immigrants, and by the importation of arms from Greece’ (Payne Smith). —Took him.] i.e. into his ‘school of heroes,’ the picked 3,000 (chs. 13. 2 & 24. 2 & 26. 2). So he ‘took’ David (ch. 18. 2; cp. ch. 16. 18).

10.—Saul's Commission against Amalek.—Saul again Disobedient.

1 S. xv.—1. Also. Rather, And Samuel. See ch. 13. 3, note. 'Me' is emphatic. This solemn preface reminds Saul of the conditions of his kingship and of Samuel's authority. Israel's king is but God's viceroy, subject to His Word.—Now therefore. Samuel's warning and appeal implies a development of Saul's wilfulness, which is the only measure of the interval between chs. 14 & 15. 2. Remember. R.V. have marked, marg. will visit; cp. 2 Sam. 21. 1.—Amalek, &c. A nomad people, partially settled (v. 5). Amalek inhabited the S. border of Canaan (Num. 13. 29), which Moses calls by their name in Gen. 14. 7, and roamed the wildernesses of Paran, Sinai, and Shur to the border of Egypt (chs. 15. 7 & 27. 8). At Rephidim they disputed Israel's entry into their pastures (Ex. 17. 8; cp. Num. 22. 4), and at Hormah joined the Canaanites in the successful defence of the passes into the Negeb (Num. 14. 45). Till then the chief nation of these regions, they were condemned through Balaam to extinction for opposing God's people and His will (Num. 24. 20). Later, they aided Eglon of Moab (Judg. 3. 13) and Midian (Judg. 6. 3) to oppress Israel, and the time for the execution of the ban of extermination recorded in Deut. 25. 17-19 was probably precipitated by bloody forays on the S. Tribes (v. 33, cp. ch. 30. 1). Saul must sooner or later have warred against Amalek; but God through His prophet directs 'the play of national sentiment' and prescribes the time and conditions which should test Saul (cp. ch. 10. 8) and bring home to the people the principles of the Theocratic Monarchy.—Did to Israel. What is done to God's people is done to God (Matt. 23. 40). Hence the exemption of the Kenites (v. 6).—Laid wait for. Rather, set himself in the way against him. 3. God orders a sacred war (comp. Num. 31); the prohibition of all spoil marked it as one of God's judgments on sin (v. 18).—Go, &c. This is probably the war summarised in ch. 14. 48.—Utterly destroy. The Hebrew charam means devote; whether as holy or accursed, that whereon or whereon God is to be honoured, ἀναθήμα or ἀνάθεμα, to be treasured or destroyed, the circumstances decide in each case. When we duly measure the heinousness of sin and the greatness of God's Majesty, then we cease to wonder at the sternness of such commands as this.—Spare them not. The sword of the conqueror is not unfrequently described as the executioner of God's doom on sinners, the scourge of His justice (e.g. the Assyrians and the Chaldeans, Isa. 10. 5 & Ezek. 21; cp. 14. 21). 4. Telaim. May be Telem (cf. Josh. 15. 24) in Judah's S. E. border; but Gtgal (Sept. and Joseph.) would be more likely. The numbers in Sept. and Josephus also seem more probable, viz. 400,000 and 30,000.—Judah. Cf. ch. 11. 8, note. 5. A. Rather, the (only or chief) City, or Ir-Amalek (so Ar- or Ir-Moab, A.V. 'the city of Moab' in Num. 21. 28 & 22. 36).—Laid wait. Marg. fought; R.V. marg. strove; but a torrent-bed (A.V. valley) is more suited for an ambush than for a battle.—Valley. Heb. Nahal, Greek χευαῖος, Arab. Wady, a torrent-bed, wet or dry; see ch. 17. 40, note 'brook.' Elijah was to hide in the Cherith, and to drink of it (Stanley). 6. Kenites. Balaam had foretold that they should survive till an Assyrian captivity (Num. 24. 22). To this branch of the Midianites, which retained the knowledge of God, belonged Jethro—whose services and those of his family (Ex. 18; Num. 10. 31) won the lasting friendship of

<sup>12</sup>And when Samuel rose early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to <sup>r</sup>Carmel, and, behold, he set him up a place, and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal. <sup>13</sup>And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul said unto him, <sup>s</sup>Blessed be thou of the LORD: I have performed the commandment of the LORD. <sup>14</sup>And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? <sup>15</sup>And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: <sup>t</sup>for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

The Amalekites appear later in ch. 27. 8 & 30. 1; 2 Sam. 8. 12; 1 Chron. 4. 43; Esth. 3. 1. 9. Spared.] Probably with mingled motives; sympathy (like Ahab's, 1 Kin. 20. 32), pride (like Adoni-bezek's, Judg. 1. 7), and covetousness (like Achan's, Josh. 7. 1). — Ozen.] Rather, herd. The word bakar is used without distinction of age or sex. — Fatlings.] Lit. the seconds, but this may mean lambs of the 2nd season, i.e. superior lambs, the ewe being mature; or (Bochar), 'two-year olds'; Lat. bidentis (v. 15). 11. It repenteth me.] As God's hand represents to man His active interference, God's eye and ear His observation and attention, so His repentance represents His purposed change of dealing. Opera mutat, non consilium (Augustine). Repentance in man denotes change in himself. Repentance in God denotes change in man. Change of design and regret are alike impossible to God; but 'a change in the attitude of man to God necessarily involves a corresponding change in the attitude of God to man'—here God's repentance expresses that He can no longer bear with Saul as Theocratic king (cp. 1 Pet. 3. 20). — It grieved.] Or as

Jon. 4. 1), was angry; see 2 Sam. 6. 8, note. Samuel's honour would suffer by the rejection of his anointed one; and he realised the danger to the nation if the new form of government proved a failure. But sorrow for the sinner supervened quickly (ch. 16. 1). — Cried, &c.] Cp. chs. 7. 8, 9 & 12. 18. Samuel interceded for Saul if haply he might yet repent and be forgiven. 12. Carmel.] In the S. of Judah, in the hill country; see ch. 25. 2, note. — Place.] Rather, monument (so R.V.); lit. hand (cf. 2 Sam. 18. 18, note); a proof of Saul's self-satisfaction. A sculptured hand (found in Phœnicia) might perhaps be an emblem of power and possession. — Gilgal.] The national place of assembly at which Samuel had pledged the king and people to unconditional obedience to Jehovah, was twice to witness His condemnation of the king for disobedience. 13. Blessed, &c.] A friendly or even congratulatory greeting. — I have, &c.] Observe the inevitable descent of an unrepentant heart from bad to worse. Saul's moral character thoroughly breaks down. He never rightly saw his faults or shortcomings; self-excuse ever rose to his lips. Here, he claims credit for good intentions, even for religious and commendable zeal, and then aggravates his disobedience by falsehood and hypocrisy. Dread of consequences (vs. 25, 30), immediate and temporal, alone forced an admission of guilt, but conviction of sin did not produce repentance. Contrast David (2 Sam. 12. 13). 15. They.] True or false, the excuse proved Saul's unfitness to be Theocratic king. — Ozen.] Cf. v. 9, note. — To sacrifice.] Probably an afterthought, to conciliate Samuel.

1 SAMUEL XV. 16-35.

<sup>16</sup> Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the LORD hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on. <sup>17</sup> And Samuel said, "When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel? <sup>18</sup> And the LORD sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until they be consumed. <sup>19</sup> Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the LORD?

As in obeying the voice of the LORD?
Behold, <sup>a</sup> to obey is better than sacrifice,
And to hearken than the fat of rams.

<sup>23</sup> For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft,
And stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry.
Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD,

<sup>24</sup> And Saul said unto Samuel, I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words: because I <sup>d</sup>feared the people, and obeyed their voice. <sup>25</sup> Now therefore, I pray thee, pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD.

Or, Samuel contrasts Saul's former modesty with his present presumption (v. 23). 18. Sinners.] See v. 2, note. 19. Fly upon.] Ravenously—implying that covetousness, greed for the devoted things (cp. Deut. 13. 17), was the real motive. 20. Saul repeats that he has obeyed substantially. He points to Agag in proof of his own obedience, and alleges that the people spared the cattle for sacrifice only (v. 21). 21. Things . . . destroyed.] Rather, devoted things (cf. v. 3, note), which, as cherem, were not their's to employ in this or any other way (Deut. 13. 15-17; cp. religion, and unfolds the eternal spiritual truths which underlay the transitory system of the Law. Disobedience is the cardinal sin; it renders the most solemn acts of worship useless and even wicked. A rebellious wilful temper is as offensive to God as any kind of idolatry. Samuel's successors echo his words (marg. refs.). 23. Rebellion.] Saul had deliberately opposed his royal will to God's explicit command.—As.] i.e. as bad as.—Witchcraft.] i.e. divination; an allusion, if not to Saul's destruction of the wizards (ch. 28. 9), to the general abhorrence of such superstitions.—Iniquity.] Lit. nothingness; Heb. aren; often used for an idol. Rather, idolatry.—Idolatry.] Rather, teraphim (cf. ch. 19. 13, note).—Rejected.] Without 'place of repentance' (v. 29). 24. Feared the people.] He preferred popularity to duty. 25. The conversation had been private, but Samuel's withdrawal would mean public disapproval of the king. Saul asks for the prothe word of the LORD, and the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Israel. <sup>27</sup> And as Samuel turned about to go away, <sup>f</sup> he laid hold upon the skirt of his mantle, and it rent. <sup>28</sup> And Samuel said unto him, <sup>g</sup> The LORD hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou. <sup>29</sup> And also the Strength of Israel <sup>h</sup> will not lie nor repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent.

<sup>30</sup> Then he said, I have sinned: yet <sup>i</sup> honour me now, I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD thy God. <sup>31</sup> So Samuel turned again after Saul; and Saul worshipped the LORD.

<sup>32</sup> Then said Samuel, Bring ye hither to me Agag the king of the Amalekites. And Agag came unto him delicately. And Agag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past. <sup>33</sup> And Samuel said, <sup>k</sup> As thy sword hath made women childless, so shall thy mother be childless among women. And Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the LORD in Gilgal.

<sup>2</sup> And Samuel said, How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the LORD said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, <sup>3</sup> 'I am come to sacrifice to the LORD. And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and <sup>4</sup> I will shew thee what thou shalt do; and <sup>5</sup> thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee. <sup>6</sup> And Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Beth-lehem. be fulfilled and the Davidic-Messianic kingdom is founded.—David's character is shown in the narrative following to be the exact opposite of Saul's. <sup>2</sup> Take, &c. i.e. exhibit the serpent's wisdom. <sup>3</sup> Concealment of a good purpose for a good purpose is clearly justifiable.—To sacrifice. Samuel's position is anomalous; civil judge (ch. 7. 15), though Saul was king; sacrificer, yet not a priest (ch. 14. 3). His office and ministry represented the higher spiritual law, of which Moses' Law—the stepping-stone to Christ—was only the transitory and imperfect embodiment, and its ceremonies the pledge. <sup>4</sup> Call. i.e. invite to feast on the peace offering; cp. ch. 9. 12, 13, 22. Jesse's grandfather, Boaz, was 'a mighty man of wealth' (Ruth 2. 1).—Anoint. See ch. 10. 1, note. <sup>5</sup> Beth-lehem. Formerly Ephrath (Gen. 48. 7), about 5 m. S. of Jerusalem, destined, because David's ancestral home, to be the birth-place of Jesus the Christ (ch. 12. 3, note; Mic. 5. 2).—Trembled, &c. Lit. went with trembling to meet him. What might such a visit portend? perhaps a charge of local mal-administration. <sup>6</sup> Sanctify. See Lev. 7. 20; Ex. 19. 10, 15. had two daughters, Zeruiah (mother of Abishai, Joab, Asahel), and Abigail (mother of Amasa). <sup>6</sup> When, &c. In the interval between the sacrifice and the feast, Samuel obtained in Jesse's house the desired private interview.—Eliab. See ch. 17. 13, 28. In 1 Chr. 27. 18, Elihu.—The Lord's Anointed. i.e. the king (chs. 10. 1 & 12. 3, notes). <sup>7</sup> Cf. Heb. 4. 13. Eliab was, in externals, another Saul. <sup>8</sup> Shammah. Probably Shimeah (2 Sam. 13. 3) is the more correct form. Jesse's sons recur in 2 Sam. 13. 3 & 21. 21. <sup>10</sup> Again. Rather, So. Jesse's 8th son is not named in 1 Chr. 2. He may have died shortly after this, or have been the son of a concubine. <sup>11</sup> Youngest. David = beloved, the darling of the family; compare the title Jedidiah (2 Sam. 12. 25) by which God signified his acceptance of Solomon. Jesse thought David too young or too insignificant to be sent for, though near at hand; cp. Eliab's words in ch. 17. 28.—Keepeth the sheep. David's life disciplined his character for his high destiny. Following a humble, perhaps despised, calling (ch. 17. 28; Amos 7. 14, 15) in the wilderness, exposed to wild beasts (Mark 1. 13; ch. 17. 34; Amos 3. 12; Jer. 49. 19), the good shepherd would learn self-sacrifice and self-reliance, while the solitude would prompt reflection and communing with God, and the isolation and danger would develop his faith and trust on Him.—Sit down. i.e. to the sacrificial sent, and brought him in. Now he was <sup>x</sup>ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. <sup>y</sup>And the LORD said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he. <sup>13</sup>Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and <sup>z</sup>anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and <sup>a</sup>the Spirit of the LORD came upon David from that day forward.

So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.

feast. 12. Ruddy.] i.e. red-haired; from the Saxon rudu; Vulg. rufus; Sept. πυρράκης. His eyes would probably be blue (margu, 'fair of eyes'; so Sept. μετὰ κάλλους ὀφθαλμῶν); but the beauty of them would rather be due to genius, kindness, and sincerity.—To look to.] Rather, in appearance.—Anoint.] As in Saul's case, a prophetic designation of the man whom God, in His own way and at His own time, would place upon the throne—a secret sign and declaration of God's preordained purpose—and probably the sacrament of fitness for the mission. Apparently, unlike Saul, David was not informed why he was anointed. It was left to his discretion to guess, to his discretion to keep silence. 13. In the midst.] Can only mean in their presence (Kirkpatrick). As yet, probably, David's destiny was unsuspected by himself, his father, or his brethren; Eliab's words (ch. 17. 28) scarcely decide the point either way, ignorance or jealousy might have prompted them (cf. Gen. 37. 20). The purpose of the anointing would not be plain to them then as to us now. The perception of Jonathan and Abigail (chs. 20. 13 & 23. 17 & 25. 30) was not general. The recognition of David's destiny seems to have been gradual, and due to a growing sense of his fitness and of his favour with God and man (r. 18).—Came upon.] Rather, came mightily upon (see ch. 11. 6, note & cp. ch. 10. 6, 9).—Samuel seems to have had a guild of prophets at Ramah (Naioth, ch. 19. 18–24, notes). If David did not actually join this guild, he doubtless spent much time in Samuel's company, and was influenced and educated for his high calling by the prophet; see Introd., pp. 10, 12.

1 S. xvi.—14. Spirit departed.] The inspired assurances and assistances ceased. Grace was withdrawn, and direct assaults of the Evil One were permitted. Saul, no doubt remorsefully conscious of his decline, grows melancholy, and a hasty temperament gets the dominion over him. 'As the paroxysms of insanity become more frequent and violent, the brave though untractable warrior sinks into a moody and jealous tyrant.'—Evil spirit.] Rather, The evil spirit, as in r. 23. This melancholy spirit proceeded (παρὰ Κυρίου) from the presence of God, came to execute God's bidding (1 Kin. 22. 19; Mark 5. 8), but proceeded not from God (πνεῦμα Κυρίου) as did the Spirit of Divine Inspiration. (cp. ch. 18. 12.—Troubled.] Marg. terrified (so R.V. marg.). 16. Before thee.] i.e. who 'stand before' thee (r. 22), thy personal attendants.—Harp.] The kinnor (see ch. 10. 5, note), invented by Jubal, a guitar rather than a harp. Some such instrument has been found among almost all nations. The nebel was larger, less simple. The nebel-azor, a ten-stringed harp, was larger still. 18. Servants.] Not the word used in rs. 15–17, but young men as in ch. 14. 1: perhaps of the bodyguard. Possibly fellow pupils under Samuel at Naioth (P. Smith).—Cunning.] Saxon, cunnan, 'to know.' So 'cunning in music.'—Shaks. In Elizabethan English the word had seldom the evil meaning of 'subtle.' Under Samuel (r. 13, note), David's talent for music would be developed; probably Samuel's services at Ramah were the model playing, and *ſ*a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in matters, and a comely person, and the LORD is with him.

of David's musical services for the Temple (1 Chr. 23. 5 & 25. 1, notes, pp. 163, 166). Perhaps David had already composed some psalms, e.g. Ps. 8; and in fact prudent in matters (Heb. speech, margin) means, literally, skilled in composition. Cp. Eccus. 47. 8, 'With his whole heart he sung songs and loved Him that made him.'—A man of war. Lit. a mighty man of valour, i.e. in capability (comp. chs. 14. 52 & 18. 2). David is no longer a mere boy (v. 11, note), but a stripling of promise able to defend his sheep.—The Lord is with him. So Abimelech and Potiphar (Gen. 21. 22 & 39. 3) recognised God's blessing on the lives of Abraham and Joseph. 20. Bottle. Cf. ch. 25. 18, note.—Sent, &c. Cf. ch. 9. 7, note. 21. Loved, &c. Saul's power of feeling and inspiring affection (cf. chs. 24. 5 & 31. 5 & 15. 35) testifies to the natural nobleness of his disposition. The verse probably relates the result of David's defeat of Goliath, or Saul would have recognised him in ch. 17. 55; thus to name an ultimate result out of date, in immediate connection with the cause, is very common with Hebrew writers (e.g. v. 54). But only under mental aberration would the king have seen David, and he therefore might well fail to recognize the lad under other circumstances. To suppose that Saul did not recognise the minstrel in the champion because he had meanwhile passed rapidly, as Orientals do, from youth to manhood, is to contradict ch. 17. 42; it is better to regard this verse as parenthetical and anticipatory. But see chs. 17. 1, 55 & 18. 6, notes. 22. Stand before me. i.e. enter my service, see v. 21, margin, refs.; cp. 1 Kin. 17. 1, before whom I stand. 23. When. i.e. whenever (see ch. 18. 2, 15). Refreshed. i.e. soothed and his thoughts diverted. dedicated in ch. 10. 10-12. The Mémoires of the French Royal Academy (1707) give a remarkable instance of cure of madness in six days simply by music. Only singing boys could soothe Charles IX. when wakeful under the horrible recollections of St. Bartholomew's Day. Philip V. of Spain was cured of a deep dejection, incapacitating him from all business, simply by the music of Farinelli. —Departed. When probably David would return home, till summoned again; see ch. 17. 15, note. David's first visit was probably short, and Saul's malady may not have recurred before ch. 17. 55; it would grow in intensity, and the paroxysms would become more frequent as, in addition to brooding over his own decline, he came to entertain jealous suspicions of David (ch. 18. 9).

1 S. xvii.—1. Now, &c. Chs. 15 & 16 form a parenthesis. The main subject, i.e. the rise of the Davidic Monarchy, is now resumed.—The most ancient MS. of the Sept. omits large portions of chapters 17 and 18. Being some 600 years older than the earliest extant Hebrew MS. it carries great weight. The Septuagint is now known not to have been written (as long supposed) by 72 elders by order of Ptolemy Philadelphus. It was, however, written at Alexandria, and as early as the 3rd and 2nd centuries B.C. The author of Eccus. (16, 19; 160 B.C.) quotes ch. 3. 12 from it. The MS. known as the Vatican (B) is ascribed to the 4th century; that known as the Alexandrian (A), in the British Museum) to the 5th. The LXX. agrees in the main with the Hebrew text. But here it is remarkable that the matters in which the Hebrew text differs from the shorter and perfectly self-consistent narrative of the Septuagint appear, when put together, to be almost undoubtedly fragments of another Azekah, in Ephes-dammim. <sup>2</sup> And Saul and the men of Israel were gathered together, and pitched by the valley of Elah, and set the battle in array against the Philistines. <sup>3</sup> And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and there was a mountain between them.

<sup>8</sup> And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? am not I a Philistine, and ye s servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. <sup>9</sup> If he be able to fight with and self-consistent narrative. If we may here accept the more ancient and shorter Sept. text as the true text, the well-known difficulties of the earliest period of David's history are removed; such events recorded in the Heb. as do not fit into the Sept. consecutive narrative would be additions of a later time (see r. 55, note).—Shochoh.] Or Socoh; now Shuweikeh in the Wady Sunt. Lower down, on the opposite side of the wide vale, is Ephes-dammim (cp. 1 Chr. 11. 16, p. 158). Saul is now able, on his W. frontier (see ch. 13. 2, note), to resist the Philistine inroads. 2. By the valley.] Rather, in the vale (emek) of Elah, i.e. the terebinth (ch. 10. 3, note), now called El Sunt, from its acacias. The seaward valleys of Judah, i.e. of the Shephelah (A.V. vale, valley, Josh. 15. 33), are comparatively shallow and broad, for the plain of Philistia runs up into the hills of that Lowland in long arms (Heb. emek). Rocky ravines, fringed with shrubbery and containing the shingly beds of the upper tributaries of the main torrents, continue these valleys into the much loftier central highland. Counted from N. to S., five such valleys, Ajalon, Sorek, Elah, of Zephathah (Maresiah), and of Lachish, divide the Shephelah, and figure in Israel's military history; the valleys of Elah and Sorek were the scene of Samson's exploits, and are connected, as Sorek with Ajalon, by easy passes. This Lowland, being favourable to their kind of warfare, i.e. forays varied occasionally by a pitched battle, was long a debatable land between both nations. 3. A.] Rather, the mountain (bis).—There, &c.] Variorum, the ravine (Heb. gai, the torrent-bed of the vale, 'impassable except in certain places') was between them. 4. Champion.] Lit. the interval between two armies, and so the man who for the time occupies that position. In v. 51 the Heb. is different.—Gath.] See r. 52, note.—Height.] The Anakim (Num. 13. 22) were found by Joshua (11. 22) only in Gath, Gaza, and Ashdod. There is no evidence that giant races have ever existed, but 'individual instances of monstrosity' are well authenticated. For other such champions, see 2 Sam. 21. 16, p. 151.—Cubit . . . span.] A cubit, i.e. the knuckles or fingers are included (cp. the 3 ells). Two spans (Heb. sit = 9 in.) make a cubit; a span here (zereth) = a hand-spread, the full extent of the outspread fingers and thumb (Var. T. B., p. 36); Goliath therefore would be 9 ft. 9 in. at least. Loushkin, the Russian Imperial drum-major, was 8 ft. 5 in.: Chang is 8 ft. 6 in. The Hebrews regarded (as the last survivor of a traditional giant race, the Rephaim, because of the dimensions of 'a bedstead of iron' (perhaps a sarcophagus of black basalt) 13½ ft. in length. The skeleton of O'Brien, in the Museum of the College of Surgeons, proves him to have been 8 ft. 1 in. Pliny names two men measuring 10 ft.; and Josephus one of 7 cubits. 5. Brass.] Cf. 2 Sam. 8. 10, note.—Coat, &c.] Heb. clothed (marg.) in a shirt of scales (sewn, overlapping, on cloth or leather; Lat. lorica squamata). The weight, about 150 lbs., is three times the weight of Augustus the Strong's. Allow for Goliath's other armour and arms (prob. 2 cwt. in all) and the unwieldiness of this 'moving tower of bronze' is obvious. David perceived his advantage as a light-armed mountaineer. Probably Goliath could not have risen if overthrown, as was the case with Italian knights in their battle with the French in 1495. 6. Greaves.] To cover the shins. It is an old French word, without singular.—Target.] So Sept., Vulg.; Heb. as in r. 45, A.V. shield, where an offensive weapon seems to be meant. The Hebrew word is translated lance, shield, spear, but never 'javelin' (cf. Josh. 8. 18; Job 39. 23). Marg., a gorget, a small shield for the throat, which could be swung round behind at pleasure. 7. Beam.] To which, in the familiar hand-loom, the warp was attached.—Shield.] To cover the whole body. me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and <sup>o</sup>serve us. <sup>10</sup>And the Philistine said, I <sup>a</sup>defy the armies of Israel this day; give me a man, that we may fight together. <sup>11</sup>When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

<sup>20</sup>And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him; and he came to the trench, as the host was going forth to the fight, and shouted for the battle. <sup>21</sup>For Israel and the Philistines had put the battle in array, army against army. <sup>22</sup>And David left his carriage in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and saluted his brethren. <sup>23</sup>And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion, the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name, out of the armies of the Philistines, and spake <sup>q</sup>according to the same words: and David heard them.

God.*] See v. 43, note.—The living God.] As distinguished from the false gods of the Gentiles. St. Paul, coupling living with true (1 Thess. 1. 9), explains its meaning. There is but one God that has real existence (see 'vain,' ch. 12. 21, note, & Hab. 2. 18–20). This was the thought wrapped up in that Name, Jehovah, held almost unutterable by pious Jews (misapprehending Lev. 24. 16), of which the meaning is undoubted—'The Eternal, the 'I am, the 'Self-existent'—though the original pronunciation is doubtful (? Yahveh); A.V. LORD or GOD. The Jews commonly in reading substituted Adonai (Lord), but Elohim (God) when Adonai is joined with Jehovah. Jehovah is a proper name denoting God as the Covenant-God of His people Israel (Ex. 3. 14, R.V. marry); its loftiest combination, 'Jehovah of Hosts' (v. 45), corresponds in part to Ζεύς στρατός or Παλλὰς φοβεστράτη, but towers above those titles; Jehovah-tsebaoth is the King of Glory (Ps. 24. 10; cf. Isa. 6. 3, 5, and the Te Deum). The meaning of hosts or armies (A.V. Sabaoth) is uncertain; Sept. Σαβαώθ, παντοκράτωρ δυνάμεων, Vulg. exercituum or virtutum. But Sabaoth includes all powers invoked in the Benedicite, grandly vague, sublimely indefinite, from definite angels, men, animals, to the indefinite Powers (gravity, friction, &c.) and Works of the Lord. Earthly armies (Ps. 44. 9), the heavenly bodies (Isa. 40. 26), and spiritual beings (1 Kin. 22. 19) are clearly included. Israel, we might expect, would chiefly during the Monarchy need to be reminded of the three-fold truth conveyed in the Name, viz. that Jehovah is the only and universal King, the only God of battles i.e. Giver of victory, and that armies other than human are ready for His people's defence. The title is peculiar to the historical and prophetic books of the Monarchy (from ch. 1. 3); it is not found in Ezekiel and Daniel.

28. Wilderness.] See v. 15, note.—Naughtiness.] i.e. good-for-nothing-ness, real badness; cf. 'Things naught and things indifferent' (Hooker). 29. Cause.] Ich, word, rendered manner in v. 30; = conversation. 'A soft answer,' probably meaning, Why such wrath about a mere casual question? Eliab unconsciously pays a tribute to David's youthful exploits and spirit (ch. 16. 18). Apparently David, like Joseph, suffered from the jealousy of his brethren. In after-life, his 4 nephews, Zeruiah's 3 sons and Abigail's son, occupy the place of brothers (Stanley). 34. David said, &c.] In these simple words we see that difference between David's character and Saul's, which constituted his fitness, and Saul's unfitness, to be the Theocratic king. The stripling's faith procured success and rekindled the nation's spirit (vs. 11, 24); the faithful and patriotic as well as the adventurous gradually adopted David as their father's sheep, and there came a lion, and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock: <sup>35</sup>and I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him. <sup>36</sup>Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear: and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God. <sup>37</sup>David said moreover, 'The LORD that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and <sup>o</sup>the LORD be with thee.

PSALM XXIII.

A Psalm of David.

- <sup>1</sup> THE LORD is my shepherd;—I shall not want.
<sup>2</sup> He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
 He leadeth me beside the still waters.
<sup>3</sup> He restoreth my soul:
 He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

I will fear no evil: for thou art with me;

- Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
<sup>5</sup> Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies:
 Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
 And I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever.

<sup>38</sup>And Saul armed David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail. <sup>39</sup>And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go; for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these: for I have not proved them. And David put them off him. <sup>40</sup>And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, even in a scrip; and his sling was in his hand: and he drew near to the Philistine.

Tristram thinks that a long maned (and fiercer) lion also existed in Palestine. And the Philistine cursed David by his gods. <sup>44</sup>And the Philistine <sup>45</sup>said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field. <sup>45</sup>Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: <sup>46</sup>but I come to thee in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast <sup>47</sup>defied. <sup>46</sup>This day will the LORD deliver thee into mine hand; and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give <sup>48</sup>the carcases of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; <sup>49</sup>that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel. <sup>47</sup>And all this assembly shall know that the LORD <sup>50</sup>saveth not with sword and spear: for <sup>51</sup>the battle is the LORD's, and he will give you into our hands.

Awake to help me, and behold.

<sup>5</sup> Thou therefore, O LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel,

Awake to visit all the heathen:

Be not merciful to any wicked transgressors. Selah.

For who, say they, doth hear?

Thou shalt have all the heathen in derision.

For God is my defence.

<sup>10</sup> The God of my mercy shall prevent me:

God shall let me see my desire upon mine enemies.

Scatter them by thy power; and bring them down,

O Lord our shield.

<sup>12</sup> For the sin of their mouth and the words of their lips

Let them even be taken in their pride: And for cursing and lying which they speak.

And let them know that God ruleth in Jacob Unto the ends of the earth. Selah.

And go round about the city.

Yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning:

For thou hast been my defence

And refuge in the day of my trouble.

For God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

1 S. xix.—18. To Samuel.] An indication of much previous intercourse (ch. 15. 13, note, ad fin.); David at once turned to Samuel for protection and counsel.—In Naioth.] Perhaps (so vs. 19, 22, 23; ch. 20. 1) in the college or home, i.e. of the prophets, at or near Ramah. Naioth seems to be a quasi-proper name, meaning enclosures (opposed to field), or dwelling places—in the Chaldee, House of Study, i.e. Students' Lodgings. This home of religious worship and learning, where students (later named sons of the prophets) were educated, and common religious exercises nurtured and developed spiritual gifts, would be a kind of sanctuary; it seems at least to have been deemed safer than Samuel's own house in Ramah. 20. Appointed.] Heb. set over, R.V. head (A.V. officer, 1 Kin. 4. 5); cf. v. 24 and ch. 10. 5, note. Similarly, Elisha was the accepted Head (2 Kin. 2. 15) of the college at Jericho. In Samuel's day, such colleges seem confined to the Mount Ephraim district of Benjamin; compare the allusion in 2 Kin. 5. 22. But the large number of prophets found later in the Northern Kingdom points to the existence of other colleges there—whether originated by Samuel is doubtful. They would be naturally self-extending (2 Kin. 6. 2). These prophetic guilds were neither wholly religious nor wholly secular: formed an educated rather than a sacred caste. But the religious element predominated. The people were ready to view their members as holy men, men likely to receive the rarest and greatest gift—inspiration (Amos 7. 14). In 2 Kin. 4. 42 the first-fruits, rightfully the priests' alone, are offered to their 'master.' The extent and strength of the influence, secular and religious, of Samuel's prophetic guilds cannot be minutely traced, but the elevation of the tone of the national life, which is plainly visible in the history of the reigns of David and Solomon, must be largely attributed to them (see Introd. p. 10). 'We have, however, no actual proof of their existence except in the days of Samuel and of Elijah and Elisha.'—Prophesied.] i.e. joined in the choruses of praise (so Targum); any religious uninspired service, esp. if musical, was called prophecy (cf. ch. 18. 10, note). Saul's heart was moved even before he fell in with this company of the prophets (v. 23). It would be perhaps this same company which Saul had encountered before (ch. 10. 5). Then they were returning from worship at Gibeah. But company in ch. 10. 10 means a procession (R.V. band) of prophets; another word here implies a regularly organised body, a choir. 22. Well.] Lit. a pit, i.e. a cistern hewn out of the rock.—Where, &c.] As if Saul doubted their awaiting his arrival. 24. Two similar attempts to arrest Elijah were frustrated by fire from heaven (2 Kin. 1. 10, 12).—He.] Rather, he also.—Before Samuel.] The only meeting of king and prophet since ch. 15. 35.—Naked.] i.e. stripped to his linen ephod, without meil (cf. ch. 18. 4, note) or beged (v. 13, note). Cf. 2 Sam. 6. 14; Isa. 20. 2; John 21. 7. So Livy says of Cincinnatus, that he was ploughing naked, and merely called for his toga when appointed dictator. So also Virgil says, Nudus ara.—All, &c.] More deeply overmastered than any, Saul is exhausted by the tempest of his emotions and throws himself down as one dead.—They say.] i.e. hence the proverb, &c. Once more, but in vain, Saul feels the miraculous influence. He is among the prophets, but not of them. He bows 'before Samuel' their president, and takes 'his former place in the devotional assembly,' but—notwithstanding associations, and the present warning of a mysterious overpowering restraint put upon his servants successively and then upon himself—Saul's selfwill prevails. The king refuses to learn the lesson that in seeking David's life he is fighting against God. Cf. chs. 20. 31 & 24. 20 & 26, 25.

17.—David appeals to Jonathan.—Their mutual Covenant.

I SAMUEL XX.

<sup>1</sup> AND David fled from Naioth in Ramah, and came and said before Jonathan, What have I done? what is mine iniquity? and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life? <sup>2</sup> And he said unto him, God forbid; thou shalt not die: behold, my father will do nothing either great or small, but that he will shew it me: and why should my father hide this thing from me? it is not so. <sup>3</sup> And David sware moreover, and said, Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes; and he saith, Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved: but truly as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but a step between me and death.

<sup>9</sup> And Jonathan said, Far be it from thee: for if I knew certainly that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, then would not I tell it thee? <sup>10</sup> Then said David to Jonathan, Who shall tell me? or what if thy father answer thee roughly? <sup>11</sup> And Jonathan said unto David, Come, and let us go out into the field. And they went out both of them into the field.

<sup>12</sup> And Jonathan said unto David, O LORD God of Israel, when I have sounded my father about to morrow any time, or the third day, and, behold, if there be good

1 S. xx.—1. Fled.] Some reconciliation to David resulted from the king's visit to Ramah (rs. 5, 27), yet David was afraid to put himself within Saul's reach without further assurance. Secretly returning to Gibeah, he appeals to Jonathan, protesting his innocence of any treasonable act or design. 2. Will do, &c.] Rather, doth . . . sheweth (lit. uncovereth mine ear, so v. 12; cf. ch. 9. 15, note). Gen. 42. 15).—A step, &c.] David does not seem to recover the shock of Saul's successive attempts (ch. 19. 9-23) until ch. 22. 3. 5. New moon.] See marg. refs. and 2 Kin. 4. 23; Ps. 81. 3. This Feast might be the New Moon of the 7th month (Tisri, October) i.e. the Feast of Trumpets, or the ordinary New Moon Feast. It lasted two days (v. 27), and was an important festival. 6. Then say.] The excuse was probably based on fact; David may even have visited Bethlehem before 'the third day.'—There is a.] Rather, It is the—annual sacrifice of the family, i.e. clan or father's house (ch. 8. 4, note), a great occasion. Domestic sacrifices, relic of patriarchal times (cf. Job 1. 5 & 42. 8), to which the head of the family summoned its chief members, may have never wholly died out; but they are not recognised in Moses' Law. 8. Brought, &c.] Jonathan's covenant (ch. 18. 3) had been accompanied by an invocation (ep. v. 12) of Jehovah as witness and vindicator.—Notwithstanding,] i.e. that covenant,—if thou believest me guilty.—Thyself.] As king's son.—Bring,] i.e. surrender. 9. Far, &c.] Heb. of 'God forbid' (v. 2).—Certainly.] R.V. at all. 10. Or what if.] Rather, if perchance. 11. Field.] i.e. the open country; sadeh (the smoothed, i.e. harrowed), rendered field, country, land (cf. Ruth 4. 3), commonly means cultivated land, as distinguished from town, garden, wilderness.—Then, as now, uninclosed. 12.] Sept. better, God knows that I will question my father; thus avoiding the change from the second person to the third.—Any time.] toward David, and I then send not unto thee, and shew it thee; <sup>13</sup> the LORD do so and much more to Jonathan: but if it please my father to do thee evil, then I will shew it thee, and send thee away, that thou mayest go in peace: and <sup>14</sup> the LORD be with thee, as he hath been with my father. <sup>14</sup> And thou shalt not only while yet I live shew me the kindness of the LORD, that I die not: <sup>15</sup> but also <sup>1</sup> thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever: no, not when the LORD hath cut off the enemies of David every one from the face of the earth. <sup>16</sup> So Jonathan made a covenant with the house of David, saying, <sup>16</sup> Let the LORD even require it at the hand of David's enemies. <sup>17</sup> And Jonathan caused David to swear again <sup>17</sup> because he loved him: for he loved him as he loved his own soul.

<sup>24</sup> So David hid himself in the field: and when the new moon was come, the king sat him down to eat meat. <sup>25</sup> And the king sat upon his seat, as at other times, even upon a seat by the wall: and Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place was empty. <sup>26</sup> Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, he is <sup>26</sup> not clean; surely he is not clean. <sup>27</sup> And it came to pass on the morrow, which was the second day of the month, that David's place was empty: and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, Wherefore cometh not the son of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday, nor to day? <sup>28</sup> And Jonathan answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem: <sup>29</sup> and he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city; and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren. Therefore he cometh not unto the king's table.

But nothing shakes Jonathan's fidelity, either to his friend (v. 31) or to his father (2 Sam. 1. 23).—Thou son, &c.] Probably he meant that Jonathan was self-willed from his birth, and in that respect no credit to his mother. But the Heb. is literally son of the girl of following, i.e. one so low and brazen as [1 S. xx. 13—30.]

the perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own confusion, and unto the confusion of thy mother's nakedness? <sup>31</sup>For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom. Wherefore now send and fetch him unto me, for he shall surely die. <sup>32</sup>And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, "Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?" <sup>33</sup>And Saul <sup>2</sup>cast a javelin at him to smite him: <sup>3</sup>whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David. <sup>34</sup>So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger, and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for he was grieved for David, because his father had done him shame.

<sup>35</sup>And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him. <sup>36</sup>And he said unto his lad, Run, find out now the arrows which I shoot. And as the lad ran, he shot an arrow beyond him. <sup>37</sup>And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee? <sup>38</sup>And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make speed, haste, stay not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master. <sup>39</sup>But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter. <sup>40</sup>And Jonathan gave his artillery unto his lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city. <sup>41</sup>And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times: and they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David exceeded. <sup>42</sup>And Jonathan said to David, <sup>2</sup>Go in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the LORD, saying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever.

And he arose and departed: and Jonathan went into the city.

1 SAMUEL XXI. 1-9.

to court the man. To revile a man's mother is, in the East, the greatest insult.—The confusion, &c. i.e. No one will believe you are the son of me, if you so tamely yield up my kingdom. 'Confusion' expresses the shame of disgrace (cp. ch. 22. 8). <sup>33</sup> Cast. Rather, brandished, as in ch. 18. 11; see v. 25, note.—A javelin. Rather, his spear (ch. 19. 9, note). <sup>34</sup> Shame. By publicly accusing David of treasonable designs, Saul insulted and wronged Jonathan's friend. <sup>35</sup> Time. Or place. <sup>40</sup> Artillery. From ars. 'Artillery = guns and bows.'—Latimer. The chief weapon in the art of war has now usurped to itself the name. <sup>41</sup> Toward. Rather, near.—The South. Heb. Negeb, or (?) ergab, the stone heap (Ezel in v. 19); so Sept. (bis).—Bowed. To pause and bow at regulated intervals is the proper Eastern mode of approaching a prince.—Here affection overlaps the bounds of ceremony. David 'exceeded,' i.e. broke down, for he was about to lose, not only friend, wife, family, position, fatherland, but even the ordinances of religion (ch. 26. 19,

1 S. xxi.—1.] Nob was about two miles from Gibeah and from Jerusalem, if on the crest of the second hill north of Olivet (cf. 2 Sam. 15. 32, note). According to Isa. 10. 28-32, Nob was a day's march for an army without baggage from Geba (p. 16, plan) and was within sight of Jerusalem. The Tabernacle being there (cf. ch. 8. 4, note), Nob was now a priestly city (ch. 22. 19, note), 'a little colony of 85 priests with their families and herds.' There to some extent (in the absence of the Ark, 1 Ch. 13. 3), the national services had been restored.—Ahimelech. See ch. 14. 3, and note. David was a high official, and Saul's son-in-law (v. 11; ch. 22. 14).—Afraid, &c. Rather, came to meet David trembling; Heb. as ch. 16. 4 (which see). Saul asserts that the H.P. was aware that David was a fugitive from him (ch. 22. 17). <sup>2</sup> The king, &c. The lie was not unpunished. Remorse me a business, and hath said unto me, Let no man know any thing of the business whereabout I send thee, and what I have commanded thee: and I have appointed my servants to such and such a place.

<sup>3</sup> Now therefore what is under thine hand? give me five loaves of bread in mine hand, or what there is present. <sup>4</sup> And the priest answered David, and said, There is no common bread under mine hand, but there is <sup>c</sup> hallowed bread; <sup>d</sup> if the young men have kept themselves at least from women. <sup>5</sup> And David answered the priest, and said unto him, Of a truth women have been kept from us about these three days, since I came out, and the <sup>e</sup> vessels of the young men are holy, and the bread is in a manner common, yea, though it were sanctified this day <sup>f</sup> in the vessel. <sup>6</sup> So the priest <sup>g</sup> gave him hallowed bread: for there was no bread there but the shewbread, <sup>h</sup> that was taken from before the LORD, to put hot bread in the day when it was taken away.

<sup>8</sup> And David said unto Ahimelech, And is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste. <sup>9</sup> And the priest said, The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in <sup>k</sup> the valley of Elah, <sup>l</sup> behold, it is here wrapped in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it: for there is no other save that here. followed (ch. 22. 22).—It is not suggested here that David came to consult God through the H.P. as to his future course, or that Ahimelech enquired for him (see ch. 22. 15, note).—Appointed my servants.] Rather, the young men (as v. 4) I have directed (Var.). Apparently the fact, for David's men shared the bread (Mark 2. 25, 26); see ch. 22. 20, note. <sup>3</sup> Present.] As if David's business allowed no time to make even unleavened bread (ch. 29. 24), or (as some argue from v. 6) it was the Sabbath. <sup>4</sup> Common.] Unhallowed. The shewbread, lit. presence-bread i.e. set in God's presence, was changed on the Sabbath (Lev. 24. 8). The 12-gallon loaves, after standing a week on the golden table, were eaten, but only by the priests and only in the (Var. a, so R.V.) holy place. <sup>5</sup> Women, &c.] Cf. ch. 16. 5; Exod. 19. 15.—Three days.] Lit. yesterday and the third day; a common phrase variously translated, with the general meaning of late. But David had been in hiding three days (ch. 20. 24, 27, 35).—Since, &c.] Rather, When I came out, the vessels of the young men were holy, though it was but a common journey (i.e. had no religious object); how much more then to-day shall they be holy in their vessels (Var.; so R.V.).—Vessels.] Cf. ch. 17. 40, marg. ('bag' = vessel, Heb.), and note. Some understand bodies [but of the N.T. use of vessel (2 Tim. 2. 21; 1 Thess. 4. 4, &c.), there are no examples in O.T.]: others, clothes or wallets. At any rate, the holy bread would not be desecrated by any ceremonial uncleanness, either of the men or of their equipment.—Bread.] This word is more easily supplied after lit. Lit. and the way is profane, although it (the bread) be sanctified to-day in the vessel. R.V. marg. Or, and it may be used as common bread, and especially since to-day it will be holy in respect of their vessels.—In a manner.] The Talmud urges that the bread had been already removed and replaced by fresh. Or, Ahimelech may have reflected that, by the higher law underlying the letter of the Law (ch. 15. 22, note), necessity would sanction his treating the shewbread as common bread, even if that day made sacred by being set on the golden dish. <sup>6</sup>] Ahimelech perhaps regarded the urgency of the king's commission as a sufficient excuse; but our Lord justifies his act because the Law was observed in its spirit.—Was.] Var. had been. <sup>7</sup> Detained.] Perhaps it was the Sabbath. But before the Lord indicates a ceremonial reason (cp. shut up, Jer. 36. 5)—a vow (Acts 21. 23-27), uncleanness, leprosy (Lev. 13. 4, 11, 21) have been suggested.—Doeg was evidently a proselyte.—Chiefest . . . herdmen.] i.e. Constable (comes stabuli), an important office; cp. 1 Chr. 27. 29, 30; 2 Chr. 26. 10. <sup>9</sup> A cloth.] Perhaps the cloak, i.e. Goliath's; cp. Isa. 9. 5. Goliath's sword was probably of the ordinary Grecian pattern (P. Smith);—David welcomes this memorial of God's help: it should have revived his faith.

19.—David in Exile—at Gath.

1 SAMUEL XXI. 10—XXII. 1.

<sup>10</sup> And David arose, and fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish the king of Gath. <sup>11</sup> And the servants of Achish said unto him, Is not this David the king of the land? did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying,

"Saul hath slain his thousands, And David his ten thousands?"

PSALM LVI.

To the chief Musician upon Jonath-elem-rechokim, Michtam of David, when the Philistines took him in Gath.

He fighting daily oppresseth me.

<sup>4</sup> In God I will praise his word, In God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

In thine anger cast down the people, O God.

Are they not in thy book?

This I know; for God is for me.

<sup>10</sup> In God will I praise his word:

In the LORD will I praise his word.

I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

I will render praises unto thee.

That I may walk before God in the light of the living?

<sup>13</sup> And he changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrambled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard. <sup>14</sup> Then said Achish unto his servants, Lo, ye see the man is mad: wherefore

1 S. xxi.—10. For fear.] Cf. ch. 20. 3, note, and contrast ch. 17. 37. David must have been well-nigh mad with mental anguish.—The sight of Doeg made him expect prompt pursuit (ch. 22. 22), and perhaps suggested the enquiry for a weapon, and even his flight to Gath.—Went.] For refuge and a livelihood (cf. v. 15). David, during all Saul's persecution, was never either unpatriotic or revengeful.—Achish.] Cf. Ps. 34, note. Gath, at the mouth of the V. of Elah, was the nearest of the five chief Philistine cities (see ch. 17. 2, 52, notes). <sup>11.</sup> King is loosely used of Achish also (see Ps. 34, title, p. 49).—Sing in dances.] The choruses sang or danced alternately to the beating of timbrels, &c. See ch. 18. 7, note. <sup>12.</sup> Sore afraid.] Because he was recognised by Achish's suite as the champion of Israel (cf. ch. 18. 30), while his following was not sufficient to protect him, much less (as later) to command respect.

[PSALM LVI.—Upon, &c.] This seems to mean Lyric (comp. Ps. 59, note, p. 42) to the tune of The mute dove of them that are far off, or of the far off terebinths, some familiar melody of the time. In God in vs. 4, 10 is equivalent to by God's help. It is the burden of the psalm. <sup>4.</sup> Word.] The unfulfilling word of promise. <sup>8.</sup> Bottle.] Named as a frequent place for keeping treasures, especially travellers' treasures—water, milk, &c.; or perhaps there is reference to the lachrymatories, tear-bottles in use at funerals. In either case the purport is care for the tokens of my sorrow. <sup>13.</sup> Light of the living.] i.e. the clear daylight (cf. Job 33. 30; Ps. 27. 13).]

1 S. xxi.—13. Changed his behaviour.] Heb. as in the title of Ps. 34 (p. 49).—Mad.] An Oriental still regards a madman as possessed and quasi-sacred, and would treat him with a pitiful, contemptuous forbearance.—In their hands.] i.e. in their presence, or when then have ye brought him to me? <sup>15</sup> Have I need of mad men, that ye have brought this fellow to play the mad man in my presence? shall this fellow come into my house?

[PSALM XXXIV.—Achish the Abimelech would probably be more correct. Abimelech means father of a king, and was possibly the dynastic title (Gen. 20. 2), like Pharaoh, &c.—but whether the lords (seranim) of the five cities were hereditary or elective is uncertain. <sup>7</sup> Angel.] Recalls Josh. 5. 14 and Gen. 32. 1; cf. ## 20.—David an Outlaw—at Adullam. His Band.

1 SAMUEL XXII. 1, 2.

And when his brethren and all his father's house heard it, they went down thither to him. <sup>2</sup> And every one that was in distress, and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him; and he became a captain over them: and there were with him about four hundred men.

1 CHRONICLES XII. 8-18.

<sup>8</sup> And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David into the hold to the wilderness men of might, and men of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were <sup>a</sup> as swift as the roes upon the mountains; <sup>9</sup> Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third, <sup>10</sup> Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth, <sup>11</sup> Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh, <sup>12</sup> Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth, <sup>13</sup> Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh. <sup>14</sup> These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand. <sup>15</sup> These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it had overflowed all his <sup>e</sup> banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

<sup>16</sup> And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah to the hold unto David. <sup>17</sup> And David went out to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it. <sup>18</sup> Then the spirit came upon <sup>f</sup> Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

Debtors, or their children, became temporary slaves (2 Kin. 4. 1, &c.).—Discontented.] Heb. 'bitter of soul' (= weary of life, Job 3. 20). The novel burdens of royalty (ch. 8. 11-18) and of a standing army, and the misrule resulting from Saul's impulsive and arbitrary temperament had already alienated many; on Saul's favoritism, see r. 7.—Captain.] Strict disciplinarian also (ch. 25. 15)—so that the band (formed for mutual protection only) made friends throughout its haunts in Judah (ch. 30. 26-31), and was rarely betrayed to Saul. The control of such adventurous spirits tested and developed David's talent for command; their devotion to him and his own chivalry are illustrated in 2 Sam. 23. 14-17.

1 CHRON. xii.—<sup>8</sup>. The hold.] Some identify this with Ziklag or Engedi; more probably it was Adullam and the hold of 2 Sam. 5. 17 and 1 Chr. 11. 15.—To.] Rather, towards; R.V. in.—Men . . . battle.] R.V. men trained for war.—Buckler.] Var. spear (so R.V.).—Lions . . . roes.] Cp. ch. 11. 22, p. 159, 2 Sam. 1. 23 & 2. 18. <sup>14</sup>. One, &c.] Marg. one that was least could resist (Var., R.V. was equal to, but R.V. marg. as A.V.) an hundred, and the greatest a thousand; cp. ## 21.—David in Moab. He returns into Judah.

1 SAMUEL XXII. 3-5.

<sup>3</sup> And David went thence to Mizpeh of Moab: and he said unto the king of Moab, Let my father and my mother, I pray thee, come forth, and be with you, till I know what God will do for me. <sup>4</sup> And he brought them before the king of Moab: and they dwelt with him all the while that David was in the hold.

<sup>5</sup> And the prophet <sup>a</sup> Gad said unto David, Abide not in the hold; depart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the forest of Hareth.

22.—Saul Massacres the Priests of Nob.

1 SAMUEL XXII. 6-23.

<sup>6</sup> When Saul heard that David was discovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah under a tree in Ramah, having his spear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him;) <sup>7</sup> then Saul said unto his servants that stood about him, Hear now, ye Benjamites; will the son of Jesse <sup>b</sup> give every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds; <sup>8</sup> that all of you have conspired against me, and there is none that sheweth me that <sup>c</sup> my son hath made a league with the son of Jesse, and there is none of you that is sorry for me, or sheweth unto me that my son hath stirred up my servant against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

1 S. xxii.—3, Mizpeh.] Unidentified: a common name meaning watch tower.—Moab.] A natural refuge for the great grandson of Ruth, who had made Bethlehem her home—and unfriendly to Saul (cf. ch. 14. 47).—Come forth.] i.e. from the hold at Mizpeh; they were too old (ch. 17. 12) to share David's life. 4, All, &c.] Throughout David's wanderings from hold to hold (Payne Smith). 5, Gad.] Possibly already known to David in the schools of the prophets;—the word 'prophet' denotes a pupil of Samuel's. He probably came hither while David was waiting to 'know' God's will (v. 3);—perhaps specially sent by Samuel (Gad is not again mentioned till he re-appears during David's reign as 'the king's seer,' 2 Sam. 24. 11; cp. 1 Chr. 29. 29 & 2 Chr. 29. 25)—perhaps specially in answer to David's prayers.—Depart into Judah.] Gad's message calls for an act of faith: David must not take refuge in a heathen land (ch. 26. 19), but must return to face danger and hardship within Saul's dominions (cp. ch. 27. 1, note) in the territory of his own tribe. He must trust to God's protection, and while the discipline of such a life was fitting him to become the 'captain over the Lord's inheritance,' he was destined to increase his influence with all Israel by his exploits as the champion of his tribe (cp. 2 Sam. 2. 1).—Forest.] Heb. yaar (cf. 2 Sam. 15. 6-8) implies thorny, almost impenetrable thickets (trachas) rather than a woodland of timber trees.'—Hareth.] Perhaps Kharas, about 3 m. above Keilah or Adullam, on the W. edge of the central highland, on the highway between Shochob and Hebron (p. 1, note).

1 S. xxii.—6, Discovered.] Probably by the concourse of v. 2.—Abode . . . a tree.] Variorum, was sitting . . . under the tamarisk-tree (so R.V.), i.e. holding a council under it; cp. ch. 14. 2 & Judg. 4. 5. The tamarisk, a familiar bush in our sea-side gardens, in the East becomes a spreading tree; cp. ch. 31. 13, note.—In Ramah.] Rather (translating ramah) on the height; but perhaps there was a district of Gibeah.—Spear.] Cf. ch. 18. 10, note. 7, Saul said.] Blinded by suspiciousness and animosity, and enraged at David's escape and re-appearance at the head of an organised force (which he interprets as an insurrection), Saul publicly accuses his chief officers, his own tribesmen, of a conspiracy of silence while Jonathan was inciting David to rebel. Doeg, probably a renegade (cf. ch. 14. 47), eagerly asserts his innocence by an exaggerated counter-charge against the 11. P.

The son of Jesse.] A contemptuous description of David; perhaps in contrast with my son.—Give . . . fields, &c.] Which Saul could only do by confiscation (e.g. the Gibeonites, 2 Sam. 21. 1, note). Saul's hold on the nation was diminishing. He suggests that David's favours would be reserved for Judah, as his own had been for Benjamin. 8, Shew-

PSALM LII.

To the chief Musician. Maschil, A Psalm of David, when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech.

And lying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.

He shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling place,

And root thee out of the land of the living. Selah.

And shall laugh at him:

But trusted in the abundance of his riches,

And strengthened himself in his wickedness.

<sup>8</sup> But I am like a green olive tree in the house of God:

I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever.

And I will wait on thy name; for it is good before thy saints.

<sup>11</sup> Then the king sent to call Ahimelech the priest, the son of Ahitub, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nob: and they came all of them to the king.

<sup>12</sup> And Saul said, Hear now, thou son of Ahitub. And he answered, Here I am, my lord. <sup>13</sup> And Saul said unto him, Why have ye conspired against me, thou and the son of Jesse, in that thou hast given him bread, and a sword, and hast enquired of God for him, that he should rise against me, to lie in wait, as at this day? <sup>14</sup> Then Ahimelech answered the king, and said, And who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the king's son in law, and goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house? <sup>15</sup> Did I then begin to enquire of God for him? be it far from me: let not the king impute any thing unto his servant, nor to all the house of my father: for thy servant knew nothing of all this, less or more. <sup>16</sup> And the king said, Thou shalt surely die, Ahimelech, thou, and all thy father's house.

<sup>17</sup> And the king said unto the footmen that stood about him, Turn, and slay the priests of the LORD; because their hand also is with David, and because they knew when he fled, and did not shew it to me. But the servants of the king <sup>18</sup> would not put forth their hand to fall upon the priests of the LORD. <sup>18</sup> And the king said to Doeg, Turn thou, and fall upon the priests. And Doeg the Edomite turned, and he fell upon the priests, and <sup>19</sup> slew on that day fourscore and five persons that did wear a linen ephod. <sup>19</sup> And Nob, the city of the priests, smote he with the edge of the sword, both men and women, children and sucklings, and oxen, and asses, and sheep, with the edge of the sword.

Doeg . . . slew.] Doeg probably had a following of Bedawin-like men ready for any bloodshed, reverencing nothing.—Saul thus unconsciously executed the sentence of chs. 2. 31 & 3. 12 upon Eli's house; Abiathar only escaped, and, when David organised the priests for the future service of the Temple, Ithamar's house contained only half as many fathers' houses as Eleazar's (1 Chr. 24. 4).—Ephod] (cf. ch. 14. 3, note. Their official dress made Saul's impiety the more glaring. 19. Nob.] See ch. 21. 1 & 2 Sam. 15. 32, notes. (Corder identifies Nob with Mizpah.)—Saul even treated Nob as if devoted (ch. 15. 3, note) like Amalek, and dealt with the city of the priests (where perhaps he had restored the service of the Tabernacle 'in his zeal for the Lord') as the Philistines had dealt with Shiloh. This act must have alienated the best men in Israel, and turned their thoughts to David. 20. Abiathar escaped.] Perhaps Abiathar remained at Nob when Saul summoned all the priests to Gibeah. Probably he acted for his father (as Eli's sons for Eli), and it may have been his hand that fetched the shewbread (cf. Mark 2. 26). He took refuge with David (ch. 23. 6), bearing, as successor to the High-priesthood, the Ephod with the Urim and Thummim; thus Saul transferred God's oracle to David.—Henceforward, Abiathar shared all David's 'afflictions.' For the closing events of his life see 1 Kin. 1 & 2. 21.] Is. 21–23 anticipate the later conversation. 22.] With characteristic tenderness of conscience (ch. 24. 5), David accuses himself of having caused this tragedy.

1 S. xxiii.—1. Told David.] In the forest of Hareth. His first enterprise—the relief of Keilah—shows David pursuing his former career (comp. ch. 18. 27, 30). This fact, which might have allayed Saul's suspicions, only stimulated him to capture David. —Keilah.] A fortified city of the Shephelah of Judah (marg. ref.), now Kila on a steep hill on the W. side of the Wady es Sur (head of V. of Elah), about three miles above Aid-el-Ma (Adullam); see ch. 22. 1, notes. —Threshingfloor.] A level plot of ground (called now baidar) about 50 ft. in diameter, beaten till hard. Flails are used for small quantities (Ruth 2. 17) of corn, the larger being commonly trodden by oxen or threshed with a wooden sledges (mowrej) having jagged stones fixed to the bottom, the driver standing on the sledge; cf. Isa. 41. 15, 16. The grain is piled in a very high heap in the centre, awaiting the winnowing fork or shovels. The floor was usually on a hill top or some exposed spot, where the wind could be used in winnowing (cf. Ps. 1. 4 & 35. 5; 2 Sam. 24. 16). This incident fixes the time—directly after harvest. 2.] The outlaw is authorised to do Philistines, and save Keilah. <sup>3</sup> And David's men said unto him, Behold, we be afraid here in Judah: how much more then if we come to Keilah against the armies of the Philistines? <sup>4</sup> Then David enquired of the LORD yet again. And the LORD answered him and said, Arise, go down to Keilah; for I will deliver the Philistines into thine hand. <sup>5</sup> So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and smote them with a great slaughter. So David saved the inhabitants of Keilah.

[cir. 1061.] <sup>7</sup> And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah. And Saul said, God hath delivered him into mine hand; for he is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars. <sup>8</sup> And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to besiege David and his men. <sup>9</sup> And David knew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him; and <sup>d</sup> he said to Abiathar the priest, Bring hither the ephod. <sup>10</sup> Then said David, O LORD God of Israel, thy servant hath certainly heard that Saul seeketh to come to Keilah, <sup>e</sup> to destroy the city for my sake. <sup>11</sup> Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O LORD God of Israel, I beseech thee, tell thy servant. And the LORD said, He will come down. <sup>12</sup> Then said David, Will the men of Keilah deliver me and my men into the hand of Saul? And the LORD said, They will deliver thee up. <sup>13</sup> Then David and his men, <sup>f</sup> which were about six hundred, arose and departed out of Keilah, and went whithersoever they could go. And it was told Saul that David was escaped from Keilah; and he forbore to go forth.

And they told David: wherefore he came down into a rock, and abode in the wilderness of Maon. And when Saul heard that, he pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon. <sup>26</sup> And Saul went on this side of the mountain, and David and his men on that side of the mountain: <sup>p</sup> and David made haste to get away for fear of Saul; for Saul and his men <sup>q</sup> compassed David and his men round about to take them. <sup>27</sup> But there came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come; for the Philistines have invaded the land. <sup>28</sup> Wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, and went against the Philistines: therefore they called that place Sela-hammahlekoth.

1 SAMUEL XXIV.

<sup>4</sup>f And the men of David said unto him, Behold the day of which the LORD said unto thee, Behold, I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good unto thee. Then David arose, and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privily. <sup>5</sup>And it came to pass afterward, that <sup>g</sup>David's heart smote him, because he had cut off Saul's skirt. <sup>6</sup>And he said unto his men, <sup>h</sup>The LORD forbid that I should do this thing unto my master, the LORD's anointed, to stretch forth mine hand against him, seeing he is the anointed of the LORD. <sup>7</sup>So David <sup>i</sup>stayed his servants with these words, and suffered them not to rise against Saul.

But Saul rose up out of the cave, and went on his way. <sup>8</sup>David also arose afterward, and went out of the cave, and cried after Saul, saying, My lord the king. And when Saul looked behind him, David stooped with his face to the earth, and bowed himself. <sup>9</sup>And David said to Saul, <sup>k</sup>Wherefore hearest thou men's words, saying, Behold, David seeketh thy hurt? <sup>10</sup>Behold, this day thine eyes have seen how that the LORD had delivered thee to day into mine hand in the cave: and some bade me kill thee; but mine eye spared thee; and I said, I will not put forth mine hand against my lord; for he is the LORD's anointed. <sup>11</sup>Moreover, my father, see, yea, see the skirt of thy robe in my hand; for in that I cut off the skirt of thy robe, and killed thee not, know thou and see

The caverns around, in the 'rocks of the wild goats' (i.e. Syrian ibex, cp. Ps. 104. 18), were constantly the haunt of outlaws. <sup>20</sup>And now, behold, <sup>21</sup>'I know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand. <sup>21</sup><sup>22</sup>Swear now therefore unto me by the LORD <sup>23</sup>that thou wilt not cut off my seed after me, and that thou wilt not destroy my name out of my father's house.

1 SAMUEL XXV. 1—44.

And David arose, and went down <sup>c</sup> to the wilderness of Paran.

1 S. xxv.—1.] David, mistrusting Saul's remorse (ch. 24. 18), retires southwards. This chap. gives a detailed example of David's whole state of life at this period.—[Down.] One of the noteworthy accuracies of the Bible. About 5 m. south of Hebron, the highland (ch. 14. 23, note), which for a day's journey becomes increasingly arid, descends by a sudden step to a kind of tableland which is bisected by the upland vale running from N. of Hebron to Beersheba and thence west to Gerar and the sea. This tableland again breaks down S. in a series of descending terraces, and is now little better than a barren waste, from neglect of the ancient system of water-storage, but it shows signs of extensive cultivation even in comparatively modern times. The intermediate region, between the highland about Hebron and the desert of the Wanderings (Et Tih), is called in Heb. the 'Negeb,' i.e. the dry or parched land, A.V. the South (ch. 27. 10, note). Ain Gadis (Kadesh, Num. 13. 17, 22) is taken as the S. limit.—[Paran.] The continuation of the limestone steppe, S. of the Negeb. It is now known as Et Tih—a desert partly pasturable, with some permanent vegetation round a few springs and watering places in the larger valleys (wadys), and with some cairns, stone huts, and other traces of primeval inhabitants and evidence of a better water supply formerly. In David's time, it must have borne the same relation to the then settled 'Negeb' which that wilderness bears now to Palestine. Into this desert—the home of half-nomad half-settled Amalek, represented now-a-days by the Bedawin in manners and mode of life (ch. 27. 8, note).—Nabal (as king Uzziah later, 2 Chr. 26. 10) sent his flocks afield. And the protection afforded by David's band against the jealousy and marauding propensities of such people, and against the wild beasts, would be invaluable to the flock-masters (ch. 30. 26-31). The shepherds still descend in spring from the highland to the excellent pasturages along the edges of the wildernesses of Judah and of Beersheba under the protection of the Bedawin.—[Psalm 120. 5 (cf. Gen. 25. 13, 18) may refer to this period.—Sept. reads Maon for Paran, but David seems to have been gradually driven southwards. 2. Possessions.] Marg. business.—[Carmel.] Of Judah (cf. ch. 15. 12; 2 Chr. 26. 10); marg. the fruitful fields. Ziph, Carmel, and Maon, about 4 m., 10 m., and 11 m. respectively S.E. of Hebron, stood on a fertile plateau, 9 m. long by 3 m. wide—one of the rich and rare breaks in the highland—about 500 feet below the general level, and overlooking the wilderness of Judah (Jeshimon).—[Great.] i.e. in agricultural wealth (cf. 2 Kin. 1. 8; 2 Sam. 19. 32).—[Goats.] Particularly adapted to the sterile parts of mountain districts; they run with sheep. 3. Churlish.] Sept. σκληρός (cf. Matt. 23. 24).—[Of Caleb.] i.e. Nabal inherited part of the lot promised to Caleb (Num. 13. 22 with 14. 24) and wrested by that hero from the Anakim (Josh. 14. 6-15 & 15. 13, 14). 5. Young men.] i.e. warriors (so throughout); see ch. 21. 2, note 'servants.' 6. To him, &c.] Or, shall ye say, All hail! Lit. To him that liveth! Var.; cf. ch. 10. 24; Dan. 6. 21; live in Heb. sometimes means be prosperous and happy (Ps. 69. 32 & 119. 77). 8. A good day.] Cf. 'a feast and a good day' (Esth. 8. 17). Sheepshearing, be-

<sup>9</sup> And when David's young men came, they spake to Nabal according to all those words in the name of David, and ceased. <sup>10</sup> And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, <sup>k</sup> Who is David? and who is the son of Jesse? there be many servants now a days that break away every man from his master. <sup>11</sup> <sup>l</sup> Shall I then take my bread, and my water, and my flesh that I have killed for my shearers, and give it unto men, whom I know not whence they be?

<sup>23</sup> And when Abigail saw David, she hastened, and <sup>a</sup>lighted off the ass, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, <sup>24</sup> and fell at his feet, and said, Upon me, my lord, upon me let this iniquity be: and let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak in thine audience, and hear the words of thine handmaid. <sup>25</sup> Let not my lord, I pray thee, regard this man of Belial, even Nabal: for as his name is, so is he; Nabal is his name, and folly is with him: but I thine handmaid saw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didst send. <sup>26</sup> Now therefore, my lord, <sup>b</sup>as the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, seeing the LORD hath <sup>c</sup>withholden thee from coming to shed blood, and from <sup>d</sup>avenging thyself with thine own hand, now <sup>e</sup>let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to my lord, be as Nabal. <sup>27</sup> And now <sup>f</sup>this blessing which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that follow my lord. <sup>28</sup> I pray thee, forgive the trespass of thine handmaid: for <sup>g</sup>the LORD will certainly make my lord a sure house; because my lord <sup>h</sup>fighteth the battles of the LORD, and <sup>i</sup>evil hath not been found in thee all thy days. <sup>29</sup> Yet a man is risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul: but the soul of my lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the LORD thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he <sup>k</sup>sling out, as out of the middle of a sling. <sup>30</sup> And it shall come to pass, when the LORD shall have done to my lord according to all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have appointed thee ruler over Israel; <sup>31</sup> that this shall be no grief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou hast shed blood causeless, or that my lord hath avenged himself: but when the LORD shall have dealt well with my lord, then remember thine handmaid.

peace to thine house; see, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have <sup>v</sup>accepted thy person.

<sup>36</sup> And Abigail came to Nabal; and, behold, <sup>r</sup>he held a feast in his house, like the feast of a king; and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he was very drunken: wherefore she told him nothing, less or more, until the morning light. <sup>37</sup> But it came to pass in the morning, when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife had told him these things, that his heart died within him, and he became as a stone. <sup>38</sup> And it came to pass about ten days after, that the LORD smote Nabal, that he died.

And David sent and communed with Abigail, to take her to him to wife. <sup>40</sup> And when the servants of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake unto her, saying, David sent us unto thee, to take thee to him to wife. <sup>41</sup> And she arose, and bowed herself on her face to the earth, and said, Behold, let <sup>y</sup>thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of the servants of my lord. <sup>42</sup> And Abigail hasted, and arose, and rode upon an ass, with five damsels of her's that went after her; and she went after the messengers of David, and became his wife.

<sup>7</sup> So David and Abishai came to the people by night: and, behold, Saul lay sleeping within the trench, and his spear stuck in the ground at his bolster: but Abner and the people lay round about him. <sup>8</sup> Then said Abishai to David, God hath delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me smite him, I pray thee, with the spear even to the earth at once, and I will not smite him the second time. <sup>9</sup> And David said to Abishai, Destroy him not: <sup>e</sup> for who can stretch forth his hand against the LORD's anointed, and be guiltless? <sup>10</sup> David said furthermore, As the LORD liveth, f the LORD shall smite him; or g his day shall come to die; or he shall h descend into battle, and perish. <sup>11</sup> <sup>i</sup> The LORD forbid that I should stretch forth mine hand against the LORD's anointed: but, I pray thee, take thou now the spear that is at his bolster, and the cruse of water, and let us go. <sup>12</sup> So David took the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's bolster; and they gat them away, and no man saw it, nor knew it, neither awaked: for they were all asleep; because <sup>k</sup> a deep sleep from the LORD was fallen upon them.

And I lie even among them that are set on fire,
 Even the sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.
 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens;
 Let thy glory be above all the earth.
 They have prepared a net for my steps;
 My soul is bowed down:
 They have digged a pit before me,
 Into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.
 My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed:
 I will sing and give praise.
 Awake up, my glory; awake, psaltery and harp:
 I myself will awake early.
 I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people:
 I will sing unto thee among the nations.
 For thy mercy is great unto the heavens,
 And thy truth unto the clouds.
 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens:
 Let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSALM CXLII.

Maschil of David; A Prayer when he was in the cave.

1 I CRIED unto the LORD with my voice;
 With my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.
 2 I poured out my complaint before him;
 I shewed before him my trouble.
 3 When my spirit was overwhelmed within me,
 Then thou knewest my path.
 In the way wherein I walked
 Have they privily laid a snare for me.
 4 I looked on my right hand, and beheld,
 But there was no man that would know me:
 Refuge failed me;
 No man cared for my soul.
 5 I cried unto thee, O LORD:
 I said, Thou art my refuge
 And my portion in the land of the living.
 6 Attend unto my cry;
 For I am brought very low:
 Deliver me from my persecutors;
 For they are stronger than I.
 7 Bring my soul out of prison,
 That I may praise thy name:
 The righteous shall compass me about;
 For thou shalt deal bountifully with me.

<sup>13</sup> Then David went over to the other side, and stood on the top of an hill afar off; a great space being between them: <sup>14</sup> and David cried to the people, and to Abner the son of Ner, saying, Answerest thou not, Abner? Then Abner answered and said, Who art thou that criest to the king? <sup>15</sup> And David said to Abner, Art not thou a valiant man? and who is like to thee in Israel? wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? for there came one of the people in to destroy the king thy lord. <sup>16</sup> This thing is not good that thou hast done. As the LORD liveth, ye are worthy to die, because ye have not kept your master, the LORD's anointed. And now see where the king's spear is, and the cruse of water that was at his bolster.

Abner was Saul's commander-in-chief, and ranked next the king (chs. 14. 50 & 17. 55 & 20. 25). It was probably his influence that prevented David's election as king after Saul's death (2 Sam. 3. 17). 16. Kept.] i.e. guarded, watched over (cf. ch. 28. 2, keeper of mine head, Acts 28. 16; 1's. 127. 1). Death is 63 [Ps. lvii. 5-11; Ps. cxlii.; 1 S. xxvi. 13-17.]

And David said, It is my voice, my lord, O king. <sup>18</sup> And he said, <sup>m</sup>Wherefore doth my lord thus pursue after his servant? for what have I done? or what evil is in mine hand? <sup>19</sup> Now therefore, I pray thee, let my lord the king hear the words of his servant. If the LORD have <sup>n</sup>stirred thee up against me, let him accept an offering: but if they be the children of men, cursed be they before the LORD; <sup>o</sup>for they have driven me out this day from abiding in the <sup>p</sup>inheritance of the LORD, saying, Go, serve other gods. <sup>20</sup> Now therefore, let not my blood fall to the earth before the face of the LORD: for the king of Israel is come out to seek <sup>q</sup>a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains.

So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

This is the burden of Ps. 84. David regarded the worship of Jehovah (ch. 20. 41, note) as restricted to Israel's land; the presence of the Covenant-God with faithful Israelites elsewhere was preached as a new doctrine to the Captivity of Judah (Ezek. 11. 16). <sup>20</sup> i.e. abandon your murderous quest, lest Jehovah avenge my death (ch. 24. 12, 14). Yet the Latin words anima and animus both bear that meaning (cf. anima immortalis, Sall. J. 2; pias animas, Hor. Od. i. 10, 17; animos immortales, Cic. Leg. ii. 11, 27), and the Greek word which most nearly corresponds to it (ψυχή) is (exceptionally) so used in N.T. The word chay (צוה, vita) is rendered in A.V. by life only (Gen. 1. 20); and ruach (πνεῦμα, spiritus) generally by spirit (Gen. 1. 2), but also by mind (Ezek. 11. 5), and wind (Gen. 8. 1). <sup>23</sup> Cf. 2 Sam. 22. 21. The righteousness of faith is not strictly righteousness at all (though the faith does, and must, lead to right-doing); it is something which is counted for right-doing (Rom. 4. 5, 6). Similarly, faithfulness means always standing firm, as its root implies—in duty, in belief, or in truth; in word, in heart, or in deed. <sup>24</sup> Tribulation.] Rather, straits, such as Saul's persecution brought about; contrast 'a large place' 2 Sam. 22. 20. <sup>25</sup> Blessed, &c.] A grudging admission if compared with ch. 24. 20; Saul has deteriorated (cp. rs. 21, 25 with ch. 24. 16-19).—To his place.] Rather, home, as in ch. 2. 20. David and Saul met no more.

28.—David in Philistia—at Gath and Ziklag.

1 SAMUEL XXVII. &amp; 1 CHRONICLES XII. 1-7.

<sup>1</sup>AND David said in his heart, I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul: there is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the Philistines; and Saul shall despair of me, to seek me any more in any coast of Israel: so shall I escape out of his hand.

<sup>5</sup>And David said unto Achish, If I have now found grace in thine eyes, let them give me a place in some town in the country, that I may dwell there: for why should thy servant dwell in the royal city with thee? <sup>6</sup>Then Achish gave him Ziklag that day: wherefore <sup>d</sup>Ziklag pertaineth unto the kings of Judah unto this day.

1 S. xxvii.—After the second betrayal by Ziphites, David's patience, and even his trust in God's protection (ch. 24. 15), fails; outlaws depend for their safety upon the goodwill of the inhabitants around their haunts. God had bidden David live in Judah (ch. 22. 5), yet when some of the Ziphites rendered his refuge there unsafe, he despairs altogether of safety within Saul's dominions (coast=border), and reverts to his original plan of taking refuge in Philistia, knowing that he now had a following that would ensure him an honourable reception. <sup>1</sup> In his heart, i.e. to himself; evidently he did not enquire of the Lord.—

Perish by. Var. be swept away into.—Nothing better. This course was the worst; see Introd., pp. 7, 8. It was unworthy of David, for it showed distrust of God; it was impolitic, for he could only be received as if the enemy of his country. Personally, it put him in a false and debasing position. It shook the confidence of his nation in him, and probably caused the delay between Saul's death and David's election by all Israel, and the disastrous consequences, present and future, of a division of the kingdom. <sup>2</sup> Achish. Apparently this name and Maach (or Maachah) alternated at Gath—if this king's grandson be the Achish of 1 Kin. 2. 39. But possibly the same Achish is meant in both places. <sup>3</sup> At Gath David gained the affection of many (2 Sam. 15. 19 & 18. 2), and the more adventurous would be attracted by his expeditions from Ziklag. Compare the Free Companies of the 14th century A.D. <sup>5</sup> At Gath, publicly increased the difficulties of a false position. Moreover, David's band was an expense to Achish, but elsewhere, if allowed, might support itself by raids, and even pay something to Achish (v. 9). <sup>6</sup> Ziklag. In the Negeb (Josh. 15. 31) near Beersheba (Neh. 11. 28), in the lot of Simeon (cf. Josh. 19. 5), but unidentified. It was evidently a border city on the edge of the unsettled wilderness. The ancient pastoral tribes (v. 8) yet harassed the Israelite and Philistine frontiers (ch. 25. 16). Ziklag was given to David as being a fortified post whence he could maintain his band by forays, and serve Achish as a sort of Warden of the Marches.—Pertaineth . . . unto this day. In the writer's day, evidently between the Secession and the Captivity, Ziklag was the private property, or Crown-estate, of David's family.

1 C. xii.—1. While . . . close. Marg. being yet shut up (so K.V. marg.).—Helpers of the war. Sept. egregii pugnatores. <sup>2</sup> Hurling. i.e. slinging (marg. ref.).—Benjamin. Educated by the defence of their passes, the Benjamites became excellent light infantry.—This defection of Saul's tribesmen is significant (see 1 Sam. 22. 7, note); it helps to explain his defeat [1 S. xxvii. 1-6. 1 C. xii. 1-3.]

1 S. xxvii.—7.] The time. Marg. the number of the days (so R.V.). This first note of time in David's life is vague. Sept. reads 4 months; Josephus, 4 months and 20 days; the Heb. of 'a full year' &c., is days four months. Ewald compares David's life at Ziklag to a 'rehearsal' of sovereignty.—Country.] Heb. field (so v. 5). <sup>8</sup>. Invaded.] Rather, made a raid upon. Probably, to judge by their possessions, all these tribes were nomad. Like the modern Bedawin, they would live partly by pastoral pursuits, partly by the caravan traffic of which they were the guides and carriers, partly by pillaging wayfarers, and partly by making forays into the settled country.—Geshurites.] Distinguish Geshur, a little kingdom N.E. of Bashan (compiled with Aram-Maacah in Deut. 3. 14), the daughter of whose king, Talmi, was mother of Absalom (2 Sam. 13. 37). These Geshurites are coupled with Philistines in Josh. 13. 2.—Gezrites.] Not of Gezer, which, being at the S.W. corner of Ephraim by the Plain of Sharon (cf. 1 Kin. 9. 16; 2 Sam. 5. 25), would be beyond David's reach (over 50 miles). Gerzites (margin), a name otherwise preserved only in Mount Gerizim, Bib. Dict.—Shur.] From Beersheba, an arid and mountainous route led direct to Egypt by Shur (Gen. 16. 7); the embassy of Isa. 30. 6 used it. <sup>9</sup>. Smote... left ...took.] Rather, would (i.e. used to) smite ... leave (save) ... take; so would say (v. 10), would save (v. 11). Achish took toll (v. 5, note). <sup>10</sup>. Whither.] Sept., against whom.—Road.] Rather, raid, from Saxon rád, a riding; compare inroad, outroad (1 Macc. 15. 41).—The South.] Rather, the South-country. Heb. Negeb. See chs. 25. 1, note, & 30. 1. The Negeb—bounded N. by the highland of Judah, S. by the desert of Paran, N.E. by Jeshimon (ch. 23) S.W. by the Wady el Arish (R. of Egypt)—formed the S. part of the lots of Judah and of Simeon (a re-allotment from the original lot of Judah). The larger portion is called the South of Judah, embracing nearly all Simeon's lot and perhaps the South of Caleb (ch. 30. 14, note; cp. 2 Sam. 24. 7); another, the South of the Cherethites or Philistines (ch. 30. 1, 14, 16), formerly Gerar, S.W. of Beersheba; a third, the South of the Kenites (ch. 15. 6 & 30. 29), a small district round Arad, S.W. of the Dead Sea (Judg. 1. 16).—Jerahmeelites.] One of the great families of Judah (margin. ref.), and apparently the southernmost in situation. David had supporters among them, see ch. 30. 29.—Kenites.] Cf. ch. 15. 6, note. <sup>11</sup>. Tidings.] Rather, them, i.e. as captives. Prisoners to be used or sold as slaves formed an important part of the spoil of war in ancient times; see Amos 1. 6, 9; Joel 3. 6, 8.—And so, &c.] Rather, 'And such was ... while he dwelt, &c. The remark is the writer's. There should be a full stop at David.—David thus contrived to continue his championship of his tribe, while seeming to Achish to be the active enemy of his own country.

1 SAMUEL XXVIII.

<sup>7</sup>Then said Saul unto his servants, Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor. <sup>8</sup>And Saul disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night: and <sup>k</sup>he said, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and bring me him up, whom I shall name unto thee. <sup>9</sup>And the woman said unto him, Behold, thou

Comparing ch. 17. 3, it seems probable that Saul occupied the N.W. horn of Gilboa (ch. 31. 1, note). 5.] Saul views their numbers with dismay, having no longer a united nation at his back, nor hope of special help from God. 6. Urim.] Cf. ch. 14. 37, note. Observe that Saul in v. 15 does not mention the Urim. This verse seems to summarise Saul's experience after chs. 15. 35 & 16. 14, or after Abiathar's flight to David with the Ephod and Urim. It enumerates the recognised means whereby God's will could be learned. Enquiry by Urim is not mentioned after David's reign. Saul is charged in 1 Chr. 10. 14 with disregarding (kept not) the prophetic Word (chs. 13. 13 & 15. 11), and with consulting a necromancer instead of enquiring of Jehovah (cf. Isa. 8. 19, p. 457). If Saul did now enquire, we must assume a want of patience or perseverance, as in chs. 13. 9 & 14. 19—and even that, instead of seeking, as in ch. 14. 38, to discover the sin which sealed the Divine oracle, he is now so hardened that he has inknowest what Saul hath done, how he hath <sup>1</sup>cut off those that have familiar spirits, and the wizards, out of the land: wherefore then layest thou a snare for my life, to cause me to die? <sup>10</sup> And Saul sware to her by the LORD, saying, As the LORD liveth, there shall no punishment happen to thee for this thing.

<sup>11</sup> Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel. <sup>12</sup> And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice: and the woman spake to Saul, saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou art Saul. <sup>13</sup> And the king said unto her, Be not afraid: for what sawest thou? <sup>15</sup> And Samuel said to Saul, Why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up? And Saul answered, <sup>p</sup>I am sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and <sup>q</sup>God is departed from me, and <sup>r</sup>answereth me no more, neither by prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do. <sup>16</sup> Then said Samuel, Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, seeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy? <sup>17</sup> And the LORD hath done to him, <sup>s</sup>as he spake by me: for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given mediate recourse to the divination which he had put down in his former zeal for the Lord (cf. ch. 15. 23). Self-willed even in the depth of his despair, the king, abandoning hope in God, deliberately makes evil his good, and with his eyes open (for if Saul believed in the woman's power at all, he must have believed it evil, r. 3) turns to hell for aid. Cf. 'Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo.' —Virg., Æn. vii. 312.—It is conjectured that Saul had made another Ephod and breastplate with Urim and had appointed Zadok H.P. (the heir of Aaron's elder son Eleazar) for both Zadok and Abiathar are in charge of the ark (2 Sam. 15. 29), and David couples them as 'the priests' (r. 35) and 'the chief' rather, heads, of Levi (1 Chr. 15. 11 & 2 Sam. 8. 17). <sup>7</sup>. Endor. On the N. side of Moreh (r. 4, note), so Saul had to make a detour, probably eastward, of about 8 miles, to avoid the Philistine camp. <sup>10</sup>. His authoritative assurance and his stature must have led her at least to suspect who Saul was. <sup>11</sup>. In his agony of suspense, Saul's one wish is to pry into futurity and learn his fate. Was the sentence of ch. 15. 28 being fulfilled? Were the Philistines coming to put David on his throne? To a long career of ruinous self-will, rebellion, Saul now adds the sin of witchcraft (ch. 15. 23), an act of apostasy.—Up. Shēol, Hades, the place of all (Job 3. 17; 2 Sam. 12. 23; Luke 16. 24-31) departed spirits, is always spoken of as below the earth. Shēol occurs first in Gen. 37. 35, meaning the Underworld. The A.V. translates it by 'the grave,' but the Hebrews had another well-known word for the place of burial. For an interesting discussion on the primitive conception of Shēol, see Lange on Genesis, pp. 581-7. <sup>12</sup>. To pretend to summon Samuel she was prepared, but not actually to see him. God [1 S. xxviii. 10-17.]

would not suffer it even to seem that he came at her bidding. Samuel's apparition terrified her; and persuasion seized her that for no less a personage than the Lord's Anointed would he be suffered to appear. <sup>13</sup>. Sawest, saw. Rather, seest, see.—Gods. Or, a god; so R.V. Saul says he. She would be likely to use the plural of any one of majestic mien or of supernatural appearance. <sup>14</sup>. Mantle. Rather, robe (ch. 15. 27, note); Heb. meil. At first Saul saw nothing. It is not clear whether or not Samuel was ever visible to his eyes. For aught recorded as seen or said by the woman or Saul, the apparition might have been a phantom, or Satan personating Samuel (so Tertullian, Jerome, Luther, Calvin), but plainly that is not what the inspired writer intends to convey (cf. Ezek. 14. 4, 7). Confirmation is added by Ecclus. 46. 20—After his death he prophesied, and shewed the king his end;—by 1 Chr. 10. 13, Sept., 'Samuel the prophet answered him,'—Stooped, bowed himself. Rather, bowed, did obeisance (ch. 24. 8); Saul acted as if in Samuel's presence (ch. 13. 10, note). <sup>15</sup>. Disquieted. A God-permitted exception to the general rule (cf. Job 3. 17).—Nor. Saul omits by Urim, perhaps shrinking from recalling the massacre of Nob which deprived him of God's oracle.—What I shall do. As if claiming Samuel's official advice (ch. 10. 8), or intercession; if so, Samuel replies, as in ch. 15. 26, that his relation of prophet to Saul is abrogated. Samuel adds that Saul, whose mission it had been to deliver Israel from the Philistines, was now—with the army—to be delivered into their hands. <sup>16</sup>. Become thine enemy. Sept., is on the side of thy neighbour; cf. ch. 15. 28, so Vulg. (cf. Job 13. 24). <sup>17</sup>. To him. Or, to thee, as Sept.

it to thy neighbour, even to David: <sup>18</sup> "because thou obeyedst not the voice of the LORD, nor executedst his fierce wrath upon Amalek, therefore hath the LORD done this thing unto thee this day. <sup>19</sup> Moreover the LORD will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines: and to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me: the LORD also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.

<sup>20</sup> Then Saul fell straightway all a long on the earth, and was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel: and there was no strength in him; for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night.

<sup>21</sup> And the woman came unto Saul, and saw that he was sore troubled, and said unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and I have <sup>22</sup> put my life in my hand, and have hearkened unto thy words which thou spakest unto me. <sup>23</sup> Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me set a morsel of bread before thee; and eat, that thou mayest have strength, when thou goest on thy way. <sup>24</sup> But he refused, and said, I will not eat. But his servants, together with the woman, compelled him; and he hearkened unto their voice. So he arose from the earth, and sat upon the bed. <sup>25</sup> And the woman had a fat calf in the house; and she hasted, and killed it, and took flour, and kneaded it, and did bake unleavened bread thereof: <sup>26</sup> and she brought it before Saul, and before his servants; and they did eat. Then they rose up, and went away that night.

31.—Amalekites destroy Ziklag.—David's Successful Pursuit.

I SAMUEL xxx.

<sup>13</sup>And David said unto him, To whom <sup>o</sup>belongest thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite; and my master left me, because three days ago I fell sick. <sup>14</sup>We made an invasion <sup>p</sup>upon the south of <sup>q</sup>the Cherethites, and upon <sup>r</sup>the coast which <sup>s</sup>belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of <sup>t</sup>the Caleb; and we burned Ziklag with fire.

But Vulg. a vespere.—Camels. In Judg. 7. 12 the Amalekite and Midianite invaders have 'camels without number.' Camels are the carriers of the arid desert, being admirably adapted to this their home by their endurance of fatigue and comparative independence of water, while the coarse and prickly shrubs of the desert supply the little food that they need. The pace of an ordinary camel is two-and-a-half miles, of the choicer breed or dromedary eight to ten miles an hour; this pace they maintain during many consecutive hours. Of their coarser wool is woven the stout and harsh cloth of which the dark 'tents of Kedar' are made. <sup>18</sup> Recovered. Rather, rescued; so also in vs. 8, 22. tained itself largely by gifts bestowed in return for such services (cp. chs. 25. 8 & 30. 1, notes).

1 S. xxxi.—1. Mount Gilboa (1,500 ft.) seems high by contrast with the undulating highland to the south, and with the Plain (Heb. bikah, ch. 28. 4) at its foot (a triangle of about 15 miles a side). Rising gradually N. from the S. extension or arm of the Plain, it stretches along the central arm, the Valley of Jezreel, eastward for 10 miles, as a crescent-shaped ridge, gradually increasing in elevation as far as Bethshan. Its N. flanks are precipitous; its E. flanks are steep, with occasional cliffs. Stanley thinks that the battle took place in the Valley (ch. 29. 1), the retreat to Gilboa; but Saul could not engage on the level superior numbers (ch. 28. 5) and horses and chariots (2 Sam. 1. 6)—more probably, the Philistines forced the rear of his position on the N.W. horn of Gilboa by its slopes on the south, where cavalry and chariots could operate (*G. Jabesh be the Ed Deir of Robinson, it lay in full view of Beth-shan, about 10 miles E. of Jordan, on a little hill above the Wady Yabes (in which its name seems to be preserved). Jabesh was the chief town of Manassite Gilead; see ch. 11. 1-5, notes. This deed was one of no ordinary daring and difficulty. <sup>13</sup> A tree. Ruther, the tamarisk (cf. ch. 22. 6, note); Chr. terebinth (cf. ch. 10. 3, note).—Buried their bones, in Chr. is accurate; the bodies had been burnt, probably to conceal their mutilation (v. 9).—Seven days. As for Jacob. Fasting was the strictest mourning (2 Sam. 1. 12 & 3. 35, 36).—With the addition in Chr. (vs. 13, 14) compare ch. 28. 6 (note), 18; and in v. 13 render 'transgression' 'unfaithfulness' (Var.) and 'even against' because of (Var. R.V.).

2 S. i.—This Book relates David's history as king, during 40 years, viz. 7½ years over Judah with Hebron, and 33 over all Israel with Jerusalem, for his capital. Chs. 1-8 record his triumphs; he gradually acquires the Empire promised to Abraham (Gen. 15. 18). Histroubles occupy chs. 9-20; the turning-point being David's sin with Bathsheba, and the climax Absalom's rebellion. In place of an account of David's prosperous but uneventful reign after his restoration, we find an appendix (chs. 21-24). 2, Third day. About the 17th day after David's dismissal (1 Sam. 29. 7)—allowing three days for his return to Ziklag (1 Sam. 30. 1), five days for the pursuit, one day for the battle (ib. v. 17), eight days for the homeward march (Payne Smith).—The Amalekite, if an active runner, could reach Ziklag from Gilboa (90 to 100 miles) in two days; thus the day of Saul's defeat and death would be that of David's triumphant return from the South.—With, &c. See marg. ref. No such catastrophe had happened since the overthrow of Shiloh.—Did obeisance. Prostrated himself: an act of homage (see 1 Sam. 24. 8, note) to David as Saul's successor (cp. 1 Sam. 20. 41 & 25. 30, notes). <sup>6</sup> Happened. Probably the Amalekite, following the battle to rob the fallen, had lighted on Saul's corpse, which in the eagerness of the pursuit the Philistines had left behind them unobserved (1 Sam. 31. 8). Seeing the royal insignia, he hastened to David and, hoping to increase his reward (ch. 4. 10), claimed to have made Saul's death sure and so promoted David's accession.—Chariots. See 1 Sam. 31. 1, note. The archers (ib. 3) may have been in the chariots. <sup>9</sup> Upon. Or, beside, over (so v. 10).—Anguish. Here only. According to the Targums it means perplexity, confusion of mind, or cramp (R.V. marg. giddiness). In Ex. 28. 29 the verb means to interweave, embroider. Hence the marginal rendering, 'my coat of mail, or, my embroidered coat, hindereth me, that my, &c.

1 AND it came to pass after this, that David <sup>a</sup>enquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the LORD said unto him, Go up. And David said, Whither shall I go up? And he said, Unto <sup>b</sup>Hebron.

2 So David went up thither, and his <sup>c</sup>two wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail Nabal's wife the Carmelite. 3 And <sup>d</sup>his men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household: and they dwelt in the cities of Hebron. 4<sup>e</sup> And the men of Judah came, and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

And they told David, saying, That <sup>f</sup>the men of Jabesh-gilead were they that buried Saul. 5 And David sent messengers unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, and said unto them, <sup>g</sup>Blessed be ye of the LORD, that ye have shewed this kindness unto your lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him. 6 And now <sup>h</sup>the LORD shew kindness and truth unto you: and I also will requite you this kindness, because ye have done this thing. 7 Therefore now let your hands be strengthened, and be ye valiant: for your master Saul is dead, and also the house of Judah have anointed me king over them.

2 S. ii.—1. Enquired.] i.e. through the H.P. Abiathar. David desires to repair his error (1 Sam. 27. 1, note), and enquires if he should return into Judah (1 Sam. 22. 5, note). Had David not joined the Philistines, an unanimous call to the throne from all Israel might have followed Saul's death (see Intro., p. 7).—Go up.] From Ziklag. The steppe rises continually from Paran, through the Negeb, to the highland of Judah; see 1 Sam. 25. 1 & 27. 6, notes.—Judah.] The Philistine invaders (cf. 1 Sam. 31. 7, note) controlled the central tribes of W. Canaan. Thus Judah was comparatively isolated. But the defensibility and remoteness of its highland (1 Sam. 14. 23, note), and the strength of the tribe—which remained unbroken, probably because it had held aloof from Saul or sided with David—made Judah, and esp. Hebron, the obvious rallying-point W. of Jordan.—And, &c.] The oracle virtually directed David to assert his claim to sovereignty, but first within his own tribe. Cp. 1 Chr. 28. 4.—Hebron.] See 1 Sam. 30. 31, note. In this neighbourhood, his former haunt, David had many supporters (1 Sam. 30. 26-31). By position and associations, Hebron was an appropriate capital. It stood in a very fertile district of the highland of S. Judah, the former stronghold of the Anakim (whence its names Mamre and Kirjath-arba); removed from Saul's partizans in Gilead and from the Philistines. Perhaps the earliest seat of civilized life in Palestine (Num. 13. 22), it was now the chief city of the strongest of the Hebrew tribes, a priestly city and a city of refuge (Josh. 21. 13), and had no rival among Israelite cities, as regards associations, except perhaps Shechem (Josh.

[2 S. ii. 1-7.]

8. 30-36; 1 Kin. 12. 1). It had been the one regular resting-place of the Patriarchs, esp. of Abraham, and their graves in the Cave of Machpelah (Gen. 23. 19) associated it with the Promises. It had also been the scene of Caleb's signal faith and success. 4. Anointed.] Cf. 1 Sam. 10. 1, notes. David thus acquired from an assembly of his tribe (cp. ch. 3. 17, 19) the needful constitutional authority (cp. ch. 3. 21, note). 5.] With characteristic sympathy and appreciation of their loyalty to Saul and courage, David thanks the elders of Jabesh, and takes the opportunity—perhaps whilst Israel was wavering (ch. 3. 17)—of announcing his election by Judah. It seems that (unlike Saul) David had not been set before the nation as its king by Samuel or any other prophet. 6. Kindness and truth.] i.e. mercy (or loving-kindness) and faithfulness (cp. 1's. 89. 33, &c.). David invokes, for Jabesh-gilead, God's true, faithful, and constant kindness.—I also.] i.e. the Lord's Anointed; an evidence of David's belief in his mission. 7. Valiant.] Taking the Heb. in its ordinary sense, David urges resistance of the Philistines and promises help. But here it seems to imply moral strength (Prov. 31. 10), and to be opposed to 'worthless' (cf. 1 Sam. 10. 27, note), as if David appealed to Manassite-Gilead, through the Elders of Jabesh (1 Sam. 31. 12, note), to confess, as Judah had done, his Divine right to succeed Saul; if so, the appeal failed.

35.—Abner makes Ish-bosheth King of Israel.—Battle of Gibeon.

2 SAMUEL II. 8-32.

<sup>8</sup> But <sup>i</sup> Abner the son of Ner, captain of Saul's host, took Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim; <sup>9</sup> and made him king over Gilead, and over the Ashurites, and over Jezreel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israel.

<sup>10</sup> Ish-bosheth Saul's son was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years.

But the house of Judah followed David. <sup>11</sup> And <sup>k</sup> the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.

Mahanaim. Ignoring the theocratic nature of the monarchy as proclaimed by Moses (Deut. 17. 15) and Samuel, Abner claims the throne for Saul's house, notwithstanding his own deep conviction that God had chosen David to be Saul's successor and the general evidence that God had rejected Saul and his house; Abner even seems to have counteracted a strong desire amongst the elders of Israel to elect David; see ch. 3. 9, 10, 17, 18.—Supported especially by the tribe of Benjamin (ch. 3. 19; 1 Chr. 12. 29), Abner, having gradually expelled the Philistines (1 Sam. 31. 7), seems finally to have procured Ish-bosheth's election by the 11 tribes. Meanwhile, David and his band, reinforced by levies from Judah, held the Philistines in check on the S. (but some think that he was their tributary).—Took.] R.V. had taken, i.e. after Gilboa, before vs. 1-7.—Mahanaim.] An ancient sanctuary, apparently a stronghold in the range of Gilead (see ch. 17. 24, note), about equi-distant with Jabesh-gilead from the Jordan and Bethshan. <sup>9</sup> Gilead.] i.e. Trans-jordanic Israel, as in Josh. 22. 9.—Ashurites.] Vulg. and Syr. Geshurites (ch. 3. 3, note). Abner's re-conquests seem to have extended to Ephraim and Benjamin last.—All Israel.] Cf. 1 Kin. 11. 42, note. <sup>10</sup> Ish-bosheth . . . forty . . . two years.] This sentence (cp. 1 Sam. 13. 1) marks the establishment of a kingdom. Not improbably the figures are incorrect.—Ish-bosheth.] If 40 at Saul's death, he was born some eight years before Saul's accession; but the chronology of Saul's reign is admittedly inexplicable.—Ish-bosheth's original name, Esh-baal, survives in 1 Chr. 8. 33 & 9. 39. Ish or Esh = man; 'Bosheth' = the shame, i.e. the idol Baal. Bosheth was substituted later in other names also because the innocent application of Baal = lord to Jehovah (or as = El, God) in the time of Saul and David was discountenanced (e.g. Hos. 2. 18) after Ahab established Baal-worship.—Two years.] Assuming that Abner's re-conquests (vs. 8, 9, notes) occupied five of the seven years of v. 11, Ish-bosheth's formal election would probably follow their completion. <sup>11</sup>] The brief record of the kingdom of Judah (v. 10<sup>b</sup> to ch. 4. 12) exhibits David awaiting in faith and patience the providential development of God's purpose, and some free movement of the eleven tribes in his favour. He accepts part-fulfilment as a confirmation and an earnest of the promise implied in his anointing (see 1 Sam. 16. 12, note 'anoint'); cp. Ps. 37. But, while thus waiting, and indignantly repudiating the crimes by which others sought to clear his path to the throne (chs. 3. 39 & 4. 9-11), David (cp. Acts 13. 36) uses all peaceful means to promote his election, with the patriotic object of reuniting Israel, and of establishing a wiser and better government than that of Saul or of his house. The record presents the young king of Judah in a very lovable light: his character and policy are contrasted with those of Abner and of the sons of Zeruiah, and were evidently too lofty in tone and aspiration to be generally appreciated by his contemporaries, but, under God, they won for him gradually the confidence and affection of Judah and of all Israel (ch. 3. 36, 37), so that his accession (ch. 5. 1, 3) was unattended by any legacy of bitterness (v. 26). <sup>12</sup> Went out.] To war (1 Sam. 18. 30, &c.); apparently to conquer Judah. Gibeon (in Benjamin, Abner's city, 1 Chr. 9. 35, 36), now El Jib, was half-way between Hebron and Mahanaim. A force there would bar the N. approach to the highland of Judah (1 Sam. 13. 2, plan). In the civil war thus forced upon him, David limits himself to the defence of his kingdom; after this battle, the war seems to consist rather of a state of hostility or perhaps of raids at intervals; cp. chs. 3. 1, 22 & 4. 2, note. <sup>13</sup> Pool of Gibeon.] Cp. Jer. 41. 12, p. 699.

<sup>14</sup> And Abner said to Joab, Let the young men now arise, and play before us. And Joab said, Let them arise. <sup>15</sup> Then there arose and went over by number twelve of Benjamin, which pertained to Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David. <sup>16</sup> And they caught every one his fellow by the head, and thrust his sword in his fellow's side; so they fell down together: wherefore that place was called Helkath-hazzurim, which is in Gibeon. <sup>17</sup> And there was a very sore battle that day; and Abner was beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

No such promise to David is recorded. <sup>19</sup> Spake.] Rather, had spoken. <sup>20</sup> Came.] The coudition of v. 13 gave the opportunity, to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him. And David made Abner and the men that were with him a feast. <sup>21</sup> And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and <sup>22</sup> will gather all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away; and he went in peace.

<sup>22</sup> And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a troop, and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace. <sup>23</sup> When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace. <sup>24</sup> Then Joab came to the king, and said, What hast thou done? behold, Abner came unto thee; why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is quite gone? <sup>25</sup> Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, that he came to deceive thee, and to know <sup>26</sup> thy going out and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

<sup>31</sup> And afterward when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are guiltless before the LORD for ever from the blood of Abner the son of Ner: <sup>32</sup> <sup>33</sup> let it rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and let there not fail from the house of Joab one <sup>34</sup> that hath an issue, or that is a leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread.

<sup>37</sup> And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, <sup>38</sup> Rend your clothes, and <sup>39</sup> gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the bier. <sup>40</sup> And they buried Abner in Hebron: and the king lifted up his voice, and wept at the grave of Abner; and all the people wept. <sup>41</sup> And the king lamented over Abner, and said, Died Abner as a fool dieth?

Even if the army would have supported him, he could not, in view of his present and future liabilities, afford to execute his right-hand men, Joab and Abishai, who evidently had concerted (v. 30) Abner's death. Moreover, public sentiment was probably on Joab's side—for the nearest relative's right to exact vengeance was a recognised one all over the East, which the Law, in providing cities of refuge, regulated, but did not abolish—although some might doubt whether Asahel's death in battle would justify even a blood-feud (ch. 2. 22, note), or whether at the gate of Hebron Abner was not already in sanctuary.

2 S. v.—6. Jerusalem. The name, Jerushalaim, seems to be the Hebrew form of Urusalim, which occurs in the Tel el-Amarna tablets of about a century before the Exodus. The site of 'ravine-embosomed' Jerusalem is a small plateau at the S. and lower end of a spur that projects S. from the watershed of the central table-land (1 Sam. 14. 23, note) between the torrent-beds of Kedron and Ben-Hinnom which, descending about 600 feet in  $\frac{1}{4}$  mile, meet at the end of the spur, leaving it a rocky mass isolated except on the N. A minor watercourse (the Tyropean valley) divides the spur, leaving two unequal hills as it descends to the Valley of the Kedron at Siloam, above the confluence of the torrents. The W. hill is broader and higher by 125 ft. than the E. hill (Moriah, 2,419 ft.) and is usually considered, as by Josephus (Ant. vii. 3. 1, 2; cp. E.J. v. 4. 1), to contain the site of the Jebusite Zion (r. 7)—Moriah (named in 2 Chr. 3. 1 only) being still outside the city of David as late as Solomon's accession (cp. ch. 24. 16; 1 Kin. 8. 1). But Sir C. Wilson, adopting Josephus' statement that Jebus comprised a citadel and a walled lower city (Ant. v. 2. 2), holds that both were almost entirely confined to the S. of the E. hill, from the foot of which rises the only spring (Isa. 8. 6, note, p. 455.)—Identifying the Hill of Zion with Mount Moriah, he further holds that the W. hill was first enclosed with walls and joined to the city of David by Solomon, and gradually built over (Bib. Dict. 1893).—Unto.] R.V. against.—The . . . land.] i.e. the pre-Hebraic population; cp. 1 Sam. 27. 18, &c. 6-8.] The passages omitted by the Chronicler, as to the proverb and Joab's exploits, were probably obscure even in his day; and certainly no altogether satisfactory explanation of them has been proposed as yet. Coverdale renders 'except . . . hither' in v. 6, Thou shalt not come hither, but the blind and the lame shall keep thee off, meaning, A garrison of such would suffice to turn thee away (so R.V. marg.; but R.V. as A.V.). Then v. 8 would mean, He who first, climbing the rock by the watercourse, effects an entrance, and smites this lame and blind in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither. <sup>7</sup> Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: <sup>c</sup> the same is the city of David. <sup>8</sup> And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.

garrison (David retorts their boast), shall be made commander-in-chief (adopting from Chr. with A.V. the words in italics). <sup>7</sup> Stronghold.] So render fort (v. 9), and castle (Chr. vs. 5, 7).—Zion.] Here first mentioned, and identified with the Jebusite citadel or acropolis, (the upper town of Josephus, v. 6, note; cp. ch. 12. 28). <sup>8</sup> Whosoever . . . house.] Obscure and probably corrupt. The A.V. transposes the first two clauses. R.V. Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites, let him get up to the water-course and smite the lame and the blind . . . soul (omitting he . . . captain). Wherefore they say, There are the . . . lame; he cannot . . . house.—See Var. and R.V. marg. for other readings and renderings.—Gutter.] Heb. elsewhere only in David's Ps. 42. 7. A.V. waterspouts (R.V. marg. cataracts). P.B.V. waterpipes. Josephus, himself a general, interprets the word of an underground conduit or drain, and Payne Smith quotes the feat of Sir C. Warren's explorers (1867-70), who by a series of such underground watercourses entered Jerusalem from the Pool of Siloam outside the walls. But a fissure or gully in the precipices is probably meant.—Are hated of.] C'th reads who hate (cp. Josh. 9. 24), i.e. are David's adversaries (soul=self, p. 64, note). David referred probably to the ancient ban of the inhabitants of the land (v. 6; cp. Deut. 7. 2; 1 Sam. 15. 3, note, 'utterly destroy,') and ordered no quarter to be given; he probably describes the Jebusites as the lame and the blind by a retort of their taunt.—He shall, &c.] By leading the assault and being the first to set foot in Jebus, Joab probably won the office of commander-in-chief (Chr.) of the army of all Israel. But Payne Smith holds that he had been deposed from the like office in the kingdom of Judah for Abner's murder and was now reinstated.—They said.] Rather, they say (1 Sam. 19. 24; cp. Num. 21. 27), i.e. the proverb arose. The proverb may mean 'Hold no intercourse with such people,' or it may have perpetuated the Jebusite boast with a general application to any place reputed impregnable. 'The blind vertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David. <sup>6</sup> And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

and the lame are there, let him enter if he can' (Perovne). Sept. and Vulg. take 'house' to mean the Temple; cf. Lev. 21. 18. <sup>9</sup> City of David.] The citadel, and then the enlarged and reconstructed city, bore hereafter David's name. David's sagacity in securing promptly such a defensible centre for his new kingdom is shown by the Philistine invasions which followed.—Millo.] Rather, the Millo (always with the article). Regarded as a Hebrew word, Millo is interpreted rampart, &c. But it is more probably the Canaanite name for the old Jebusite fort—probably situate to the N. of the upper city (v. 6, note). David seems to have made the Millo a corner in walls enclosing a space behind—inwards from which he built his house and new city (Chr.). The king's house, abutting on it, is called the house of Millo, Beth-millo (2 Kin. 12. 20, marg.). Canaanite Shechem had a Beth-millo (Judg. 9. 6, 20, Heb.). Cf. 1 Kin. 9. 15 & 11. 27; 2 Chr. 32. 5.—Inward.] Sept. a house. Cf. v. 11. Apparently, the stronghold had occupied part only of the hill (v. 6). David now probably enlarged and fortified the upper city to house his men (ch. 2. 3), entrusting the work to Joab (Chr. 'repaired,' Heb. revived); after which he took up his residence in Jerusalem. Thus David provided the reunited nation with a capital calculated to reconcile the claims of the royal tribes of Benjamin and Judah (for it belonged to Benjamin, but was close to, or perhaps partly within, the border of Judah), while it was altogether the most suitable capital for the united kingdom. <sup>10</sup> Went on . . . great.] Chr. (same Heb.) is more correct, and marks the gradual nature of David's progress in power and reputation at home and abroad.—God of hosts.] Cf. 1 Sam. 17. 26 & 18. 17, notes & v. 12.—This signal victory was a crisis in David's reign. It was the triumph of all Israel (Chr. v. 4). Of the neighbouring nations, some (e.g. the Philistines) are enraged, some (e.g. Hiram of Tyre) are awestruck by David's rapid success (cp. ch. 22. 30, p. 154). Ancient sieges were usually long blockades.

Identified by M. Clermont Ganneau with Tell Jezer, an isolated and escarped hill about 10 m. W. of Bethoron (1 Sam. 13. 18, note) and 6 m. E. of Akir (Ekron) on the edge of the Philistine plain and commanding the mouth of the V. of Ajalon (1 Sam. 17. 2, note). David pursued the Philistines up to the walls of this strong fortress.—Isaiah (28. 21) refers to these two as great deliverances; they ended the Philistine invasions of Israel, and probably (Chr. v. 17) prompted Hiram's embassy (v. 11) to offer David his alliance and friendly co-operation.

2 S. v.—11. Hiram.] Hiram's reign must have been inordinately long, if he be the Hiram of 1 Kin. 9. 11 (nearly 60 years later). Menander, the historian of Tyre, quoted by Josephus (c. Ap. 1. 18), calls him son of Abibaal, and says that he reigned from the age of 19 to 53. If so, Solomon's friend was the son or grandson of this Hiram. But 1 Kin. 5. 1 and 2 Chr. 2. 3 seem to imply that one king of Tyre is meant. In 2 Chr. 2. 13, Hiram's father is called Hiram (but see note, p. 207). A Hiram of Tyre paid tribute to Tiglath-pileser with Menahem of Samaria. Hiram may be a royal title; cp. Abimelech, &c.—Tyre.] The Phœnicians are the only neighbouring nation with whom Israel never had any war, after Asher failed to expel them (Judg. 1. 31). Their languages were mutually intelligible, and each was too useful to the other—Israel supplying to Phœnicia agricultural produce, and receiving in return the productions of art and commerce (cf. Acts 12. 20), the Phœnicians being at this time the chief traders of the world and famous for their artistic skill. It was of the utmost consequence also to Tyre that the various caravan routes should be kept open across David's kingdom.—Cedar.] Cf. ch. 7. 2, note. <sup>12</sup> David's tender conscience needed frequent assurance that he was in the path of duty. 1 CHRONICLES XIII.

the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are <sup>a</sup> left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us: <sup>3</sup> and let us bring again the ark of our God to us: <sup>b</sup> for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul. <sup>4</sup> And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people. <sup>5</sup> So <sup>c</sup> David gathered all Israel together, from <sup>d</sup> Shihor of Egypt even unto the entering of Hemath, to bring the ark of God <sup>e</sup> from Kirjath-jearim.

Heb. of Chr. abroad) for their tribesmen left at home, and esp. for all the holy tribe from its towns and pastures (A.V., 'suburbs'). rashness.] But the reading of Chr. (v. 10) and the Syriac and Arabic Versions, because . . . ark, is probably correct (Hervey).—Death was the penalty for touching the Ark (Num. 4. 15), i.e. for irreverent treatment of it, as the people of Beth-shemesh had experienced (1 Sam. 6. 19). <sup>8</sup> Displeased.] The displeasure of disappointment (cf. 1 Sam. 15. 11), of 'vexation akin to anger.' Yet David should have known that there was an appointed way of bearing the Ark, viz. by poles through its rings (Ex. 25. 15), and that it was the special duty of the Kohathite Levites to so carry it. David's declaration (1 Chr. 15. 2), in the absence of positive evidence, suggests that Abinadab was not even a Levite.—This judgment turned the joy of the day into mourning: God seemed to repudiate the national undertaking. But doubtless the lesson was needed by king, ecclesiastics, and people—esp. on the eve of the restoration of public worship before the Ark. Long disuse (Chr. v. 3) had produced an imperfect sense of the terrible nearness of God to Israel, of the awful meaning of God's presence among His covenant-nation as symbolised by the Ark (cp. ch. 7. 6). The priests' knowledge of ritual had probably fallen to a very low ebb, through the massacre of the priests of Nob following the catastrophe at Shiloh. But David as Theocratic king was bound to make diligent search and, like Hezekiah later (2 Chr. 29. 4-11), to see that the ecclesiastics knew and did their duty.—Made, &c.] Or, broken forth (so Chr.). Perez = the breach (perazim being the plural, ch. 5. 20, note), i.e. a sudden Divine judgment (Exod. 19. 22, 24).

<sup>9</sup> And <sup>f</sup>David was afraid of the LORD that day, and said, How shall the ark of the LORD come to me? <sup>10</sup> So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. <sup>11</sup> And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD <sup>g</sup>blessed Obed-edom, and all his household.

<sup>12</sup> And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home to me? <sup>13</sup> So David brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. <sup>14</sup> And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And the LORD blessed <sup>m</sup>the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

43.—The Ark brought into the City of David.

2 SAMUEL VI. 12-23.

1 CHRONICLES XV., XVI.

<sup>12</sup> And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God.

<sup>2</sup> Then David said, None ought to carry the <sup>b</sup>ark of God but the Levites: for them hath the LORD chosen to carry the ark of God, and to minister unto him for ever.

<sup>24</sup> And Shebaniah, and Jehoshaphat, and Nethaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer, the priests, <sup>n</sup> did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God: and Obed-edom and Jehiah were doorkeepers for the ark.

So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the city of David with gladness. <sup>13</sup> And it was so, that when <sup>m</sup> they that bare the ark of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed <sup>n</sup> oxen and fatlings. <sup>14</sup> And David <sup>o</sup> danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded <sup>p</sup> with a linen ephod. <sup>15</sup> So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet.

<sup>25</sup> So <sup>o</sup> David, and the elders of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the house of Obed-edom with joy. <sup>26</sup> And it came to pass, when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered seven bullocks and seven rams. <sup>27</sup> And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and Chenaniah the master of the song with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

'Playing' = dancing with singing and instrumental music. Such expressions of national joy were usually limited to women (1 Sam. 18. 6, 7, marg. refs.), the leader improvising and the rest imitating her.—She despised. Yet never was David more truly 'king in Jerusalem' (Eccles. 1. 1). It was the greatest day of David's reign. 'The city of David' was made 'the city of Jehovah' (cp. Ps. 101. 2, 8), became the national sanctuary as well as the national capital, by a very advent of Jehovah, the covenant-God of Israel. <sup>17.</sup> His. i.e. its.—Tabernacle. Ra-

(1 Chron. xvi. 4-43).

<sup>4</sup> And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the LORD, and to <sup>a</sup>record, and to thank and praise the LORD God of Israel: <sup>5</sup> Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Matithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom: and Jeiel with psalteries and with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals; <sup>6</sup> Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

<sup>8</sup> Give thanks unto the LORD,
Call upon his name, [people.
Make known his deeds among the <sup>9</sup> Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, Talk ye of all his wondrous works.

Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

he hath done, [his mouth;
His wonders, and the judgments of <sup>13</sup> O ye seed of Israel his servant,

Ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.

His judgments are in all the earth.

The word which he commanded to a thousand generations:

<sup>16</sup> Even of the <sup>d</sup>covenant which he made with Abraham,
And of his oath unto Isaac;

Jacob for a law,
And to Israel for an everlasting cove-

1 CHRONICLES XVIII.

(David) destroyed the enemies on every side (fulfilling ch. 7. 10, 11).—Observe that all David's wars were defensive; Israel was not called to be a conquering nation, but the control of the belt of habitable land between the Mediterranean Sea and the deserts from the Egyptian frontier as far as the Euphrates was essential to her independence and security, and this was her's by Promise (Gen. 15. 18, &c.). David's successful consolidation of Israel provoked combinations of the neighbouring nations against her (ch. 16; Ps. 60; v. 13, note), and his conquests resulted from the wars thus forced upon him. <sup>1</sup>. After this.] Not a note of time. David's history, like Saul's, is incapable of precise chronological arrangement.—The Philistines.] David brake their horn in sunder unto this [2 S. vii. 24-viii. 1. 1 C. xvii. 22-xviii. 1.]

day (Eccl. 47. 7). He was strong enough even to subdue the country of Israel's most formidable and pertinacious foes (thus fulfilling 1 Sam. 9. 16).—Metheg-ammah.] Rather, the bride of the mother-city, i.e. Gath (Chr. 'towns,' in Heb. daughters); see 1 Sam. 17. 52 & 21. 10; 2 Chr. 11. 8, notes; 2 Kin. 13. 17. Gath, like the other fortified Philistine cities, was surrounded by dependent villages. The authority (bride), which, it seems, Achish had obtained in Philistia, David transferred to himself. He left Achish on the throne as his tributary (cp. v. 6; 1 Kin. 2. 39). <sup>2</sup> Smote.] Benaiah's exploit (1 Chr. 11. 22) may belong to this war.—Moab.] David, who had formerly entrusted his parents to its king (1 Sam. 22. 3, 4), is now obliged to crush Moab—compare Hannu's sudden hostility (ch. 10. 1-3). Thus the Septe risen out of Israel 'smote the corners of Moab' (Num. 24. 17). We might infer from the silence of Scripture that Moab continued tributary until Ahab's death (2 Kin. 3. 4), but on the Moabite Stone Mesha claims that it had been free from the Disruption to Omri.—Casting . . . to.] Var. making them lie down on (so R.V.). A process similar to decimation. Cords divided the captured warriors into three portions: two for death, and a full third to be spared; cp. 1 Kin. 11. 15, 16.—Servants . . . gifts.] Cf. 2 Kin. 17. 3. 'Servants' = subjects, vassals. Ancient empires consisted of subject kingdoms self-governed, but in vassalage to the conqueror and his successors, paying an annual tribute ('gifts') and liable to special contributions, and probably to furnish contingents in time of war. <sup>3</sup> Hadadezer.] i.e. Hadad helps. This form is preferable to Hadar-ezer (Var.). Hadad was an Aramæan (Syrian) god, identical with Dadda (Rimmon), worshipped from the Euphrates to Edom. The name was transferred to the dukes and kings of Edom (Gen. 36. 35; 1 Chr. 1. 46, 51; [2 S. viii. 2-5. 1 C. xviii. 2-5.]

1 Kin. 11. 14), and to the kings of Damascus, e.g. Benhadad, i.e. son (worshipper) of Hadad.—Zobah.] Cf. 1 Sam. 14. 47, note. In Chr. Zobah by (or towards) Hamath. The title of Ps. 60 prob. refers to this campaign; it mentions Aram-zobah, and Aram-naharaim, i.e. Aram of the two rivers, the Greek Syria-Mesopotamia (1 Chr. 19. 6). Aram-zobah, ruled by petty kings in Saul's reign, had been consolidated under Hadadezer, and his authority extended beyond the Euphrates into Mesopotamia. Probably Aram-zobah stretched from Anti-Libanus (between Damascus and Hamath) N.E. and E. across the desert to the Euphrates. Tadmor (1 Kin. 9. 18, note), and probably Tiphshah (1 Kin. 4. 24, note), belonged to Zobah. That Hadadezer also became David's tributary is probable: David's dominion extended to the Euphrates (from Gaza to Tiphshah, 1 Kin. 4. 21, 24).—Recover his border.] Lit. cause his hand to return, 'border' and 'dominion' (Chr.) meaning hand. If he be Hadadezer, the phrase means to renew his attack, or to re-establish his power, as recorded in ch. 10. 16. 'Stabish' (Chr.) is a different word; some editors would substitute it for 'recover' in Sam. R.V. is as A.V. in both texts (but renders 'border' dominion). <sup>4</sup> Hundred.] Probably (as Sept.) thousand (Chr.); but R.V. omits chariots in Sam.—Hough.] Pronounced hock; Sax. hoh, the ham of the leg. To cut the ham-strings completely disables.—Chariot horses, chariots.] Heb. rekheb, which some interpret of 'animals used either for riding or driving,' others of chariots, of war-horses, or of chariot-soldiers. David would not disregard Deut. 17. 16; he rode in state upon a mule to the last (1 Kin. 1. 33; ch. 13. 29, note). He may have reserved 100 horses for courier service in his extended kingdom.—For an.] So render Chr. <sup>5</sup> The Syrians.] Heb. Aram (so v. 6 & Chr.), the name of all the highland, called.

<sup>9</sup> When Toi king of Hamath heard that David had smitten all the host of Hadadezer, <sup>10</sup> then Toi sent Joram his son unto king David, to salute him, and to bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: for Hadadezer had wars with Toi. And Joram brought with him vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass: <sup>11</sup> which also king David <sup>l</sup> did dedicate unto the LORD, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations which he subdued; <sup>12</sup> of Syria, and of Moab, and of Dammeseck) i.e. the part of Aram around Damascus, the centre of the Syrian kingdom founded by Solomon's future adversary Rezon (1 Kin. 11. 23, 24), who apparently, after David's victories, began to form a band with which (probably in Solomon's reign) he recaptured Damascus.—Preserved. Or, gave victory to (and r. 14), so Chr.; see 1 Sam. 14. 47, note 'vexed'; ch. 22. 44. These victories were won by infantry against an enemy strong in chariots and cavalry, in a country favourable to the use of both arms. <sup>7</sup> Shields of gold. Shishak took away these, apparently the gilded shields of Hadadezer's bodyguard. See 1 Kin. 10. 17, note. <sup>8</sup> Bethah (Tibhath), Berothai, Chun (Chr.) are unidentified.—Brass. i.e. bronze (copper and tin) or pure copper. <sup>9</sup> This embassy to tender homage encouraged David greatly (cp. ch. 22. 45, note). The control of the entrance of Hamath (Num. 34. 8), combined with his alliance with Tyre (ch. 5. 11), would secure David's N. frontier.—Hamath. The Ancient wealth was accumulated in the form of vessels, &c., of the precious metals; cf. Josh. 6. 19, &c. The monuments show processions bearing such presents as tribute to conquerors and suzerains. The value of this offering indicates the magnitude of David's success and power. <sup>11</sup> Which also. i.e. as well as Hadadezer's shields.—Had dedicated. Omit had; cp. 1 Chr. 26. 26-28, p. 170; 1 Kin. 7. 51. The names then run in geographical order, in a circle from Edom to Amalek; moreover, the Syrian spoils (unless those from Damascus are distinguished here) have been recorded in rs. 7, 8. Three sources the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines, and of Amalek, and of the spoil of Hadadezer, son of Rehob, king of Zobah.

Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

It seems probable that, while David was engaged with the Syrians in the second Ammonite campaign, Edom attacked Judah in the rear (from S.E., cp. 2 Chr. 20. 2, 19), and that David detached Abishai to defend Judah, and, having crushed the Syrians, sent Joab and the army to follow up Abishai's victory (Chr. v. 12) and invade Edom. Joab in six months exterminated the adult male population; and Edom was, exceptionally, put under a viceroy (1 Kin. 22. 47); Hadad, apparently the last scion of the royal house, fled to Egypt, married a sister of Queen Tahpenes, and became 'an adversary unto Solomon' (1 Kin. 11. 14-22); but Edom remained subject to Judah until 2 Kin. 8. 20; cp. 2 Chr. 21. 8-10.—Being.] Var. even. <sup>14</sup>. Servants.] Cp. vs. 2, 6.—Preserved.] Cp. v. 6, note.

David encourages himself by it (it was confirmed by 2 Sam. 7. 10), and casts his eye exultingly over the realm of Promise and of Possession (divide = absolute ownership). Shechem and Succoth = the West and East of Jordan; so Gilead and Manasseh = the Eastern, Ephraim and Judah = the Western, tribes. Moab and Edom he contemplates as the chattels of a conqueror washing his feet (cp. 2 Sam. 11. 7) after battle, who ironically bids Philistia triumph

Over Edom will I cast out my shoe:
Philistia, triumph thou because of me.

46.—David's kindness to Mephibosheth.

2 SAMUEL IX.

<sup>2</sup> And there was of the house of Saul a servant whose name was <sup>b</sup> Ziba. And when they had called him unto David, the king said unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he said, Thy servant is he. <sup>3</sup> And the king said, Is there not yet any of the house of Saul, that I may shew <sup>c</sup> the kindness of God unto him? And Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath yet a son, which is <sup>d</sup> lame on his feet. <sup>4</sup> And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of <sup>e</sup> Machir, the son of Ammiel, in Lo-debar. <sup>5</sup> Then king David sent, and fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

<sup>9</sup> Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, <sup>h</sup> I have given unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul and to all his house. <sup>10</sup> Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat: but Mephibosheth thy master's son <sup>i</sup> shall eat bread alway at my table. Now Ziba had <sup>k</sup> fifteen sons and twenty servants. <sup>11</sup> Then said Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do.

As for Mephibosheth, said the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's worship (pp. 97, 99). As king, he has united Israel and established her as a nation, giving her the rare blessing of a just administration (v. 15), and extending his sway to the limits set by Promise; and finally, he has received special Promises of perpetuity to his throne and dynasty, whereby the Promises to Abraham are entailed on his seed (cp. 1 Chr. 28. 4-7).

2 S. ix.—This appendix to the preceding narrative records David's fulfilment of the covenant with Jonathan. 1.] David's ignorance is not surprising. Mephibosheth was five years old at Jonathan's death (ch. 4. 4), and then David had been at least six years absent from court. Since then, probably, Mephibosheth's very existence had been concealed; having a young son (v. 12), he would be about twenty. 3.] The kindness of God. Apparently quoting Jonathan (1 Sam. 20. 14). Of God, see 1 Chr. 12. 22, note, p. 70. 4.] Machir. If still a partisan of Saul's house, David's generosity won Machir; see ch. 17. 27-29.—Lo-debar. In Gilead, near Mabanaim, the rallying place of Saul's house (ch. 2. 8). 6.]

Mephibosheth. See ch. 4. 4, note. 7.] Fear not. Contrast Jonathan's apprehensions (1 Sam. 20. 14, note), and Saul's (1 Sam. 24. 21).—Father. i.e. grandfather: so 'son' (v. 9)=grandson. The A.V. often follows the Heb., which does not distinguish these degrees of relationship.—Eat bread. A mark of honour in all ages (cf. Gen. 43. 16; 1 Kin. 2. 7; 2 Kin. 25. 29). 8.] Dead dog. Cf. 1 Sam. 17. 43, note. 'Dog,' i.e. as good as dead. So David described himself as compared with the Lord's Anointed (1 Sam. 24. 14). 9.] The landed property of Saul's family seems to have become forfeit to the king (ch. 12. 8); David restores all to the only survivor. Ziba, hitherto the steward, had become a man of substance (v. 10); he now became Mephibosheth's slave instead of the king's. Cp. ch. 19. 26-29. 10.] Servants. i.e. slaves—such as Ziba himself had been to Saul (v. 2); Josephus (Ant. vii. 5. 5) says he had been freed. Agriculture in Israel was carried on by slaves, home-born or purchased. 11.] As . . . table. Rather (as Sept. and Peshito), So Mephibosheth ate at David's table, &c.

sons. <sup>12</sup> And Mephibosheth had a young son, <sup>1</sup> whose name was Micia. And all that dwelt in the house of Ziba were servants unto Mephibosheth. <sup>13</sup> So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem: <sup>14</sup> for he did eat continually at the king's table; and <sup>15</sup> was lame on both his feet.

And David sent to comfort him by the hand of his servants for his father. And David's servant's came into the land of the children of Ammon. <sup>3</sup> And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it? <sup>4</sup> Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, <sup>5</sup> even to their buttocks, and sent them away. <sup>5</sup> When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed: and the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

2 S. x.—The Ammonite war, the most far-reaching and dangerous of David's wars (ch. 8. 3, 12, &c.), is recounted at length because it leads up to the crimes which were the turning point in David's life and reign. 1. After this.] See ch. 8. 1, note. — Ammon.] Unlike their neighbour Moab, the Bene-Ammon were mainly nomads. As Tob was probably between Ammon and Aram (Judg. 11. 3), Aram-beth-rehob (Heb.) may have been on the Euphrates (cp. Rehoboth, 1 Chr. 1. 48) and part of Mesopotamia. These mercenaries were Hadadezer's vassals (for the Syrians read Aram throughout), but Hadadezer himself seems to have interposed only after their defeat (v. 16). On Aram-maacah (Heb.) see Dent. 3. 14; Josh. 12. 5 & 13. 13; it adjoined Gesur (ch. 13. 37) and Argob. On Aram-zoba, see ch. 8. 6 & 2 Chr. 8. 3, note, p. 240. 'Chariots' (Chr.). The proportion of chariots and cavalry to infantry may be inferred from v. 18 and 1 Chr. 18. 4. The 32,000 chariots of Chr. v. 7 is an unparalleled number. Prob. (v. 18) chariot-soldiers are meant, serving on foot or in chariots. Poms had six to each chariot. On the Heb. rekheb, see ch. 8. 4, note.—The rendezvous with Ammon (Chr.) was before Medeba, in the plain (or treeless prairie, Mishor, Josh. 13. 9, 16, 17, the field of v. 8, where chariots and cavalry could manœuvre), 4 m. S.E. of Heshbon, and 20 m. in advance of Rabbah in the mountains; Medeba was apparently held by Ammon. It is less probable that Rabbah is the city of v. 8 (cp. saw, entered, v. 15). <sup>9</sup>. Against.] i.e. Joab, if he attacked either force, must expose his rear to the other. He first attacked the stronger: Abishai facing the Ammonites. <sup>12</sup>. Be . . . men.] Heb. as Chr. The critical situation shows Joab at his best (cp. ch. 24. 3; 1 Chr. 21. 6). Israel's land being Jehovah's, its peril involved Jehovah's honour; Joab, like David, places his cause in God's hands. Patriotism and piety were inseparable in Israel's case.—Of our God.] Medeba belonged to Reuben (Josh. 13. 16). <sup>14</sup>. Returned.] Rabbah was too strong by nature and art to take except by blockade;

Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

<sup>15</sup> And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they gathered themselves together. <sup>16</sup> And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river: and they came to Helam; and Shobach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them.

<sup>17</sup> And when it was told David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan, and came to Helam. And the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him. <sup>18</sup> And the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen, and smote Shobach the captain of their host, who died there.

brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

<sup>16</sup> And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the river: and Shophach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them.

<sup>17</sup> And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him. <sup>18</sup> But the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

<sup>1</sup> AND it came to pass, after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel; and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried still at Jerusalem.

and even if Ammon had been sufficiently broken, the season was probably too advanced for further operations (ch. 11. 1). <sup>16</sup>] Roused by the defeat of his vassals, Hadarezer, king of Zobah (ch. 8. 3, note), sent his general with a full levy to assist Ammon. Against this formidable army, David leads all Israel, probably leaving Joab to hold Ammon in check. After his complete victory, David probably overran the territories of Hadarezer's vassals (r. 19; ch. 8. 6) to the Euphrates, and made them tributary. <sup>2</sup> And it came to pass in an eveningtide, that David arose from off his bed, <sup>a</sup>and walked upon the roof of the king's house: and from the roof he <sup>b</sup>saw a woman washing herself; and the woman was very beautiful to look upon. <sup>3</sup> And David sent and enquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bath-sheba, the daughter of Eliam, the wife <sup>c</sup>of Uriah the Hittite? <sup>4</sup> And David sent messengers, and took her; and she came in unto him, and <sup>d</sup>he lay with her; for she was <sup>e</sup>purified from her uncleanness: and she returned unto her house. <sup>5</sup> And the woman conceived, and sent and told David, and said, I am with child.

<sup>6</sup> And David sent to Joab, saying, Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David. <sup>7</sup> And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered. <sup>8</sup> And David said to Uriah, Go down to thy house, and wash thy feet. <sup>10</sup> And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house? <sup>11</sup> And Uriah said unto David, The ark, and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and <sup>h</sup>my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? as thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing. <sup>12</sup> And David said to Uriah, Tarry here to day also, and to morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day, and the morrow. <sup>13</sup> And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him;

Probably his thou livest should rather be the ordinary phrase, as Jehovah liveth.—Israel and Judah. Again (cf. 1 Sam. 11, 8 & 15, 4) our attention is called to the want of cohesion in the nation even before the rupture. Cf. 2 Chr. 28, 19, note.—*Tents.] The ark's home was a tent (ch. 6, 17 & 7, 6), but perhaps he means that it was now taken down to battle. The word he uses means booths, i.e. of boughs; Heb. succoth. <sup>13. Called.]</sup> i.e. invited. Lust, lying, drunkenness, murder—this was the catalogue of sins for which David was answerable. Let us never forget that it was the man after God's own heart that fell, that it was one who had so fallen, who, on his sorrowing and* and he made him <sup>d</sup>drunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed <sup>k</sup>with the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

<sup>14</sup> And it came to pass in the morning, that David <sup>l</sup>wrote a letter to Joab, and sent <sup>it</sup> by the hand of Uriah. <sup>15</sup> And he wrote in the letter, saying, Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may <sup>m</sup>be smitten, and die.

<sup>16</sup> And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were. <sup>17</sup> And the men of the city went out, and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite died also.

<sup>22</sup> So the messenger went, and came and shewed David all that Joab had sent him for. <sup>23</sup> And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entering of the gate. <sup>24</sup> And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and some of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

<sup>25</sup> Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing displease thee, for the sword devoureth one as well as another: make thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it: and encourage thou him.

2 S. xii.—1.] Sent.] After vainly waiting many months (r. 14) for the dawning of the day of active penitence; meanwhile, God was not absent, nor his voice unheard; but

There were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor. <sup>2</sup> The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds; <sup>3</sup> but the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. <sup>4</sup> And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

Never depart.] Fulfilled literally during the remaining 20 years of David's life. We may look to find, not conscience only, but Providence also, making scourges for us of our sins. Lust and bloodshed (in the three successive heirs to his throne, Ammon, Absalom, and Adonijah), no less than shame and remorse, so chastened David that he never was again the man he had been. Broken in spirit by the consciousness of how deeply he had sinned against God and against man; if not humbled in the eyes of his subjects, and his influence with them weakened by their suspicions; and even his authority in his own household, and his claim to the reverence of his sons, relaxed by his loss of self-respect—David appears henceforth a much altered man. He is as one who goes down to the grave mourning. His active history is past—henceforth he is passive merely. Pious still, he is no longer buoyant, exulting, triumphant, glad, but repressed, humble, patient, contrite, suffering. The bird which once rose to heights unattained before by mortal wing, filling the air with its joyful songs, now lies with maimed wing upon the ground, pouring forth

And Nathan said unto David, The LORD also hath <sup>o</sup> put away thy sin; thou shalt not die. <sup>14</sup> Howbeit, because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD <sup>p</sup> to blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die. <sup>15</sup> And Nathan departed unto his house.

And the LORD struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick. <sup>16</sup> David therefore besought God for the child; and David fasted, and went in, and <sup>q</sup> lay all night upon the earth.

its doleful cries to God. All poetry can produce no more agonising utterance than Ps. 51. No man can ever have appropriated to himself its strains without thanking God that it was followed by Ps. 32. That is a Maschil, an instructive song, indeed, 'a psalm to make one wise' (Ps. 47. 7, Heb.); but it borrows its chief power to instruct from the sad history which gave rise to the penitential prayer which preceded it. <sup>12</sup> Secretly.] 'It was probably so managed that the public should observe only a somewhat hasty marriage with Uriah's beautiful widow.—I will do.' Cf. Pardon and absolution are ever waiting for the utterance of true repentance (Isa. 65. 24).—Thou shalt not die.] i.e. nothing corresponding to that putting to death you spake of shall happen to you. Actual death at the hand of man was not in his case to be apprehended. Death at the hand of God had not been threatened. Eternal death was not dwelt upon in Scripture, till eternal life was by Christ more clearly 'brought to light.' Ezek. 18. 9, &c., furnishes the key to the true meaning here, showing how life and death may be spoken of as equivalent to communion with or separation from God; to live is to enjoy God's presence and favour; to die is to yearn for them without possessing them. (See this idea of life and death explained in John 8 and Rom. 8). <sup>15</sup> Struck.] The perfect of the verb to strike is variously spelt in the Camb. That of London, 1649, has strake here; all later Camb. editions in that century, and those of Amsterdam, 1679, and Oxford, 1701, have strook. Cf. 'strake sail' (Acts 27. 17), and 'Full on his face the moon-beam strook.'—Scott. <sup>16</sup> Besought, &c.] His sin was forgiven, but that particular proof of forgiveness which he was requesting, was, for Wisdom's reasons, denied.—Lay.] The Heb. implies that this was done repeatedly.—Earth.] Rather, floor.

2 SAMUEL XII. 26-31.

Greek; Heb. She-lomah; Sept. and Vulg. Salomon, i.e. Peaceful (cf. Germ. Friedrich, Winifred); in contrast with the title God had given to David, 'man of war' (1 Chr. 28. 3, p. 186), and a memorial before God of the great and honourable work his son was to be permitted to undertake. —He.] If God be meant, the bestowal of the name Jedidiah, beloved of Jah, was equivalent to 'This is the son to whom My promise (ch. 7. 13) shall be made good,' and to a pledge of forgiveness, i.e. peace with God. There is also in it a play on the name of David, i.e. beloved, which does not appear in English. This son prefigured the greater Son, the Well-beloved, the Prince of Peace. <sup>25</sup>. Prophet.] Parents were the main educators.

except of princes, who had priests and prophets as instructors. The Heb. implies here that Nathan was such to Solomon (Ginsburg). Vulg. misit in manu Nathan; Germ. er that ihn unter die hand Nathans. If so, it is David, or Nathan, who bestows the surnomme Jedidiah.

2 S. xii.—The narrative of ch. 11. 1 is resumed. —<sup>26</sup>. Took.] It is quite possible that the siege lasted 2 years; but it is not stated that the capture of Rabbah occurred after Solomon's birth. <sup>27</sup>. City of waters.] The lower town, through which the head waters of the Jabbok flow: cut off from this, the citadel could not long hold out. The commanding position of the citadel is still easily recognisable. <sup>28</sup>. City.] i.e. the acropolis.—It . . . name.] Rather, my name be called over it. To name cities after their captors and founders is sufficiently common, e.g. Alexandria, Constantinople, [2 S. xii. 17—28.]

<sup>30</sup> And he took their king's crown from off his head, the weight whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones: and it was set on David's head. And he brought forth the spoil of the city in great abundance. <sup>31</sup> And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under saws, and under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the brickkiln: and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon.

So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

1 CHRONICLES XX. 1 (part), 2, 3.

And Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

<sup>2</sup> And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city. <sup>3</sup> And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes. Even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon.

And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

51.—Amnon's Incest.—Absalom murders him.

2 SAMUEL XIII. 1-38.

Hyderabad. 30. Their king's crown.] Sept. Milcom's crown (so R.V. marg.), the idol of the Ammonites (1 Kin. 11. 5, & App.). His name, i.e. king, represents Ammon in Jer. 49. 1, marg., as Chemosh represents Moab in Jer. 48. 7. Hanan, the king, is named in ch. 10. 1-4. David would only wear the crown as a momentary act of triumph (110 lbs. weight). To conquer a nation was to conquer its gods in the opinion of those times (cf. 2 Kin. 18. 34; Judg. 11. 24). 31. Under.] Rather, with, as in Chr.—Saens.] We have an instance of similar torture referred to in the saen asunder of Heb. 11. 37, and, traditionally, in the death of Isaiah by Manasseh's command, but we cannot readily imagine David treating any thus, or as the seven were treated in 2 Mace. 7. 4, where tongues and limbs were severed with slow cruelty. He was no Caligula, who 'medios serra dissecuit' (Suetonius), nor even of the fierce temperament of William I. (see Green's Short Hist., p. 72). But such retributive punishment might be justified in Amnon's case (cf. 1 Sam. 11. 2; Amos 1. 13); and such cruelties would seem more excusable then, when the lex talionis still reigned (see Matt. 5. 38), tempered, but not abrogated, by the Law of Moses (Deut. 20. 13), when Christ's Law of love was still unpreached. The Ammonites made their sons 'pass through the fire to Moloch'; the brick-kiln may correspond to this (? Heb., malcham, place of Moloch); but as to the other tortures we are in the dark. The notion of the times would be to treat all as they had treated others; e.g. Adoni-bezek and Agag; and the Ammonites had especially exasperated Israel by insulting friendly ambassadors, by organising a coalition, by fetching troops from even remote Euphrates, and by holding out longer than other nations. We must realize the public opinion of the day, and know more of the circumstances, before we may venture to condemn David in this matter. The custom of breaking on the wheel lived long, even in Christian times. But possibly the proceeding was merely symbolic, like making an enemy pass under the yoke, indicative here of the nature of the servitude imposed; so R.V. marg.; but see Chr. If so, the excess would be on the side of leniency, which might account for Shold's friendliness (ch. 17. 27).—Harrows.] Rather, threshers, made of thick planks, armed with pointed stones, or iron, and dragged over the corn. The only equivalent for a harrow used in Syria is a log for crushing clods (Job 39. 10).

<sup>2</sup> And Amnon was so vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin; and Amnon thought it hard for him to do any thing to her. <sup>3</sup> But Amnon had a friend, whose name was Jonadab, <sup>c</sup> the son of Shimeah David's brother; and Jonadab was a very subtil man. <sup>4</sup> And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, lean from day to day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said unto him, I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister. <sup>5</sup> And Jonadab said unto him, Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick: and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come, and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand.

<sup>6</sup> So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come, and <sup>d</sup> make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand. <sup>7</sup> Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat. <sup>8</sup> So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house; and he was laid down. And she took flour, and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes. <sup>9</sup> And she took a pan, and poured them out before him; but he refused to eat.

And Amnon said, <sup>e</sup> Have out all men from me. And they went out every man from him. <sup>10</sup> And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother. <sup>11</sup> And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he <sup>f</sup> took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister. <sup>12</sup> And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me: for <sup>g</sup> no such thing ought to be done in Israel: do not thou this <sup>h</sup> folly. <sup>13</sup> And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king; <sup>i</sup> for he will not withhold me from thee. <sup>14</sup> Howbeit he would not hearken unto her voice: but, being stronger than she, <sup>k</sup> forced her, and lay with her.

feelings of relationship; the children of different mothers are apt to regard one another rather as cousins. David might have pleaded that no distinct revelation proclaimed it unlawful; but God teaches also by those lessons of the past, which seem by and bye to have awakened, not in God's people only, but even among pagan nations, that instinctive recognition of the true law of marriage, which was 'preparation for the revelation of the one Lord and Husband of Humanity.'—Tamar.] The mother of Absalom and Tamar was Maacah (ch. 3. 3), daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur. Amnon's mother was Abinoam of Jezreel. He was the heir-apparent. Tamar means palm. From its grace and beauty it was frequently used as a female name, as Olive, Laura, Lily, Rose, Violet, &c., are in English (cf. Gen. 38. 6; 2 Sam. 14. 27). Judea capta was represented on the coins of her Roman conquerors by a weeping female figure seated under a palm-tree, of which (and the balsam) Syria Palestina (Phœnicia = Palm-land) was reckoned the home. 2. Thought . . . him.] Rather, It seemed hard to Amnon, i.e. almost impossible. Tamar, however, appears (v. 13) to have thought there would be no great difficulty, in spite of Lev. 18. 9, in obtaining David's consent to their union. David himself had broken Deut. 17. 17. But perhaps Amnon did not wish to wed her, and the impossibility was only that of access to her alone when in David's harem ('home,' v. 7). 3. Shimeah.] Or Shammah (ref.), for whose other son see ch. 21. 21. 4. Being.] Rather, Oh, Sept. ὦς τοῦ βασιλέως. 5. Make, &c.] Rather, feign thyself to be; v. 6 also; Vulg. linguorem simula . . . quasi egrotare capiti.—See it.] As if only what she cooked and served might tempt him to eat. 6. Cakes.] A Heb. word used here only, which may be derived from another meaning 'heart,' and denote some delicacy. 13. Fools.] i.e. wicked, as in Ps. 14. 1. 'Folly' is specially applied to sins of lust, e.g. Deut. 22. 21, 'wrought folly in Israel.'—In Israel.] The world was to look to the holy nation for its standard of morality. —Not withhold me.] Marriage with a half-sister had Abraham's precedent in its favour, and though forbidden (Lev. 18. 9).

was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her. And Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone. <sup>16</sup> And she said unto him, There is no cause: this evil in sending me away is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her. <sup>17</sup> Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her. <sup>18</sup> And she had <sup>1</sup>a garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.

<sup>23</sup> And it came to pass after two full years, that Absalom <sup>25</sup>had sheepshearers in Baal-hazor, which is beside Ephraim: and Absalom invited all the king's sons. <sup>24</sup> And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servant hath sheepshearers; let the king, I beseech thee, and his servants go with thy servant. <sup>25</sup> And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him: howbeit he would not go, but blessed him. <sup>26</sup> Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let my brother Amnon go with us. And the king said unto him, Why should he go with thee? <sup>27</sup> But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.

<sup>28</sup> Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's <sup>29</sup>heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto you, Smite Amnon; then kill him, fear not: have not I commanded you? be courageous, and be valiant. <sup>29</sup> And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded.

Then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat him up upon his mule, and fled.

continued to be contracted (Ezek. 22. 11). 16. Greater evil. i.e. greater wrong and calamity, not greater sin. 18. Garment of divers colours. Rather, long coat, lit. a tunic of extremities, i.e. reaching to the hands and feet. The same word is used for Joseph's coat. Amnon would not even screen Tamar, disgraced and discarded, from public observation. 19. Hand. Sept., Vulg. hands; perhaps holding the ashes; more probably in token of humiliation and of mourning, as in Jer. 2. 37.—On crying. Rather, away wailing. 20. Thy brother. He may mean therefore cease to cherish hatred against him, or therefore the law will not suffer me to demand that he marry thee, as in another case it would (Deut. 22. 29).—Desolate. Rather, forlorn; Germ. ledig. him impossible—as, indeed, to how many [mothers] in England! Dread of retort leads too often to shameful silence. The noun wroth is now used for wrathful, for which wroth (Danish vrod) was formerly used. 23. Two years. In that time suspicion that he intended vengeance would have died out. A feast like the harvest-home of agricultural districts. 25. Chargeable. Rather, a burden, i.e. a cause of expense (so 1 Thess. 2. 9). 29. Mule. The first mention in Scripture [the word in Gen. 36. 24 means hot springs, and Vulg. so renders]. The Israelites were forbidden to breed them (Lev. 19. 19), yet not, as they chose to think, to import them. Hence mules were in common use for riding (ch. 18. 9; 1 Kin. 1. 33; Isa. 66. 20) and for burdens (1 Chr. 12. 40; 2 Kin. 5. 17). They are longer-lived, hardier, and (in Syria) more costly than horses. They

<sup>34</sup> <sup>a</sup>But Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill side behind him. <sup>35</sup> And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come: as thy servant said, so it is. <sup>36</sup> And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept: and the king also and all his servants wept very sore.

<sup>2</sup> And Joab sent to <sup>c</sup>Tekoah, and fetched thence a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, <sup>d</sup>and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead: <sup>3</sup> and come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab <sup>e</sup>put the words in her mouth.

Probably public opinion would expect Absalom, as her full-brother, to avenge her. By Oriental custom and the precedent of Dinah (Gen. 31. 27), Tamar's brother would be her natural avenger. <sup>33</sup> Take, &c.] The phrase means be affected by, whether in the way of sorrow or (ch. 19. 19) vengeance. <sup>34</sup> And the, &c.] A parenthesis down to v. 37. who took the initiative in bringing the exile home. The word rendered longed, however, has not strictly that meaning, but be consumed, be quite done. Vulg. therefore is perhaps correct, cessavit persequi Absalom. Cf. ch. 14. 28, and 1, note.

And she answered, <sup>g</sup> I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband is dead. <sup>6</sup> And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him. <sup>7</sup> And, behold, <sup>h</sup> the whole family is risen against thine handmaid, and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall quench my coal which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

is sometimes rendered make mention of the name of.

<sup>13</sup> For the king . . . faulty. Rather, For the king in speaking this thing is as one that is guilty, i.e. in giving the decision of v. 11, he condemns himself; he is judging one way whilst acting another. And that, not in a private, but a public instance, for all Israel, the people of God, have an interest in Absalom; to continue the heir's banishment is an injury to them. Absalom's popularity, and perhaps the possibility of an insurrection in his favour, are implied.

isheth away (Job 7. 9), to a flood that decayeth and drieth up (Job 14. 11). Yet we must not assume that they believed their words to be more than partially and figuratively true, that they would thus express doctrinally their future hope. As soon might we conclude from the absence of any mention of the resurrection of the body in his Elegy that Gray did not believe in it. We must not take words to express more than the writer had in his mind at the time. We must not assume that David would have incurred our Lord's censure on the Sadducees (Matt. 22. 31, 32), and had learnt nothing from Exod. 3. 6. What David's doctrine was we are not left to guess. He said (ch. 12. 23), I shall go to him, there, i.e. where—

'Every grain of human dust,
... obedient to the call
Of God's omnipotence, is hurried on
To meet its fellow particles; when shall No atom of his spoils remain to Death.'

that his banished be not expelled from him. <sup>15</sup> Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because the people have made me afraid; and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid. <sup>16</sup> For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the man that would destroy me and my son together out of the inheritance of God. <sup>17</sup> Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable: for <sup>r</sup> as an angel of God, so is my lord the king to discern good and bad: therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee.

<sup>18</sup> Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak.

And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and <sup>s</sup> he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid: <sup>20</sup> to fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, <sup>t</sup> according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.

<sup>23</sup> So Joab arose <sup>u</sup> and went to Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem. <sup>24</sup> And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him <sup>v</sup> not see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.

<sup>25</sup> But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: <sup>w</sup> from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

15. Now, &c.] She seems to think that perhaps she is speaking out too boldly, and to seek to retire once more behind the veil of fiction. Some think her meaning is that threats had been used to make her undertake this appeal for Absalom. 16. Inheritance, &c.] Equivalent to the land of Israel. (Cf. r. 28, and v. 1, note. 26. Polled.] Poll or pow (Dutch, pol) means head; hence polling, counting heads. It is akin to ball; hence to poll is to round the hair (Ezek. 44. 20); and so generally to trim; hence polled lamb, hornless lamb; poll, of Vulcan's maimed foot; pollard, &c.—Two hundred shekels.] If the number be correct, the weight would be near 7 lbs. 27. Tamar.] Cf. ch. 13. 1, note. And thus, from an union of the children of Solomon and Absalom, the sacred royal line was carried on (Bib. Dict.). See 1 Kin. 15. 2; [2 S. xiv. 15—27.]

<sup>29</sup> Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come. <sup>30</sup> Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there; go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

<sup>31</sup> Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Wherefore have thy servants set my field on fire? <sup>32</sup> And Absalom answered Joab, Behold, I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? it had been good for me to have been there still: now therefore let me see the king's face; and if there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me. <sup>33</sup> So Joab came to the king, and told him: and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and bowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king <sup>b</sup> kissed Absalom.

53.—Absalom's Rebellion.

2 SAMUEL XV.

<sup>2</sup> And Absalom rose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy came to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel. <sup>3</sup> And Absalom said unto him, See, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee. <sup>4</sup> Absalom said moreover, <sup>c</sup> Oh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause, might come unto me, and I would do him justice!

2 Chr. 11. 21, where 'daughter' means granddaughter. <sup>32</sup> Iniquity.] According to the popular view of an avenger's duties he had been suffering wrongfully. 'Half-forgiveness,' he says, 'is worse than death.' And possibly Bathsheba was using her influence to the disadvantage of this rival of Solomon.

2 S. xv.—1. Prepared, &c.] Cf. 'Resolved to ruin or to rule the state,'—Dryden. Absalom was next heir to the throne—if David's second son Chileab (unmentioned since ch. 3. 3) was dead. But the conflicting claims of sons of different wives (e.g. 1 Kin. 1. 17), and the father's freedom of choice (who would, with age, become increasingly open to influence), would keep the succession in doubt. To secure the throne, Absalom set himself to dazzle the people by a splendid retinue and the fascination of his person (ch. 14. 25) and of his address, and by other demagogue's acts.—Run before.] i.e. his state chariot, to clear a way in the narrow crowded streets: as is still the custom in Cairo. Samuel quotes this as an appanage of royalty (1 Sam. 8. 11). 2. The way, &c.] i.e. the road leading to the gate. Just inside the gateway of Eastern cities there is a court or open space (cf. <sup>a</sup> a void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria, <sup>1</sup> 1 Kin. 22. 10; 1 Sam. 4. 13, and ch. 19. 8), which is the place of commerce, business, and justice. See Ps. 55. 11, note (below). Compare Jer. 17. 19 & 22. 1-3. Bâb Humayoom (the High Gate, Fr. Sublime Porte), the chief entrance to Broussa, the ancient Turkish capital, has given its name to the Government itself (Brande). Similarly, at the Sacred Gate of the Kremlin, every Russian doffs his hat as it to present Majesty. Chambers are not uncommonly built on either side of the way. For a chamber 'over the gate,' see ch. 18. 33.—Of one.] i.e. of such a tribe (naming it). 4. Suit, cause.] Generally rendered cause (controversy, v. 2) and judgment. Sept. (here) ἀντιλογία, κρίσις. If every angry disputant, if all parties seeking arbitration, felt themselves entitled to an audience, and to receive the direct aid of royal power and wisdom, we may well suppose some dissatisfaction. This Absalom seeks to turn to his account, being himself, perhaps unconsciously, the instrument of a deeper and stronger discontent. David's chief foes were indeed now 'of his own household.' Judah's jealousy had furnished fuel for this rebellion's flame; no organization for the better administration of justice, such as that of Moses (Exod. 18. 25, 26) or of

<sup>5</sup> And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed him. <sup>6</sup> And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: <sup>d</sup> so Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel.

Jeboshaphat (2 Chr. 19. 5-10) would have diminished Absalom's following. We do not know what assessors David had at present. Later we find him appointing 6,000 local magistrates (1 Chr. 23. 4). But he is bold to claim that he had 'considered the poor' (Ps. 41. 1); and for that his character might vouch. Possibly recent sicknesses, alluded to in Ps. 6 & 41, may have hindered the discharge of his regular duties and furnished a pretext to Absalom, and given him opportunity for maturing his plans unobserved. 6. Stole, &c.] Cf.

* 'Whate'er he did was done with so much ease,
In him alone 'twas natural to please.'—Dryden.

Like Bolingbroke (Shaks. Rich. II.), 'with humble and familiar courtesy,' he wooed them 'with the craft of smiles,' and made their hearts his own; Sept. ἰδιωμαίετρο.

7. Forty.] Syr. and Arab. read four, evidently rightly.—Hebron.] Absalom's birth-place, and likely therefore to have an affection for him. Having been David's first capital, a soreness might exist at its supercession by Jerusalem. It was the oldest city of Palestine, and clothed with holy memories. 8. Serve the Lord. in Hebron.] Note that David makes no objection to sacrifices being made elsewhere than at the central sanctuary. Moses' altar was now at Gibeon, the ark in its new tabernacle at Jerusalem. The same thing is observable often in the history of these unsettled times; yet the law (Deut. 12. 4-11) was neither abrogated, nor unimportant in the way of instruction. Rebellious hearts, that for ever ask, Why not? might ask, Why must I offer only in the place of the Lord's choosing? But the answer is, Life belongs to God; in every sacrifice that is acknowledged, especially in the offerings of the three great feasts (Deut. 16. 16) of Passover, Weeks, and Tabernacles (which shadow in many points Easter, Whitsunday, and Christmas, when Atonement's fruits were secured, viz., justification, sanctification, and God's dwelling once more among men; cf. John 1. 14); the brazen altar, type of Christ's cross, is the only fitting meeting-place for sinful man and God. Even the Law itself contemplated exceptional cases (Deut. 27. 5-7). Such offerings as trespass-offerings, the necessity for which was frequent and irregular, were suffered to be made, Maimonides says, by accumulation, i.e. on the next occasion of visiting the central sanctuary. Those occasions served the further purpose of more closely uniting the tribes to each other (cf. 1's. 133. 1, 3), and to that God, in whose promised guardianship (Exod. 34. 24) their very presence was a confession and renewal of confidence. See note on 1 Sam. 20. 6. 10. Spies.] Lit. one who goes about, tale-bearer, agent. 11. Called.] Elsewhere 'bidden,' i.e. invited to the sacrificial feast. A plausible excuse for a great assembly. So Civilis, leader of the Batavian rebellion in the time of Vitellius: Primores gentis et promptissimos vulgi specie epularum sacrum in nemus vocatos, ubi nocte et latitudo incubuisse videt, injurias et raptus et cetera servitii mala enumerat.—Tac. Hist. iv. 14.—In their simplicity.] Rendered at a venture (1 Kin. 22. 34). 12. Gilonite.] Cp. Shilonite (1 Kin. 12. 15). Giloh was in the 'mountain,' i.e. hill country, S.W. of Hebron. Ahithophel is called 'the king's counsellor,' and Hushai 'the king's companion' (rather, friend) in the list of David's officials (1 Chr. 27. 32-34). Ahithophel, as being Bathsheba's grandfather (cf. ch. 11. 3 & 23. 34), had a special grudge against David. It was probably when tidings reached David of Ahithophel's defection that he composed 1's.

PSALM XLI.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

- 1 Blessed is he that considereth the poor :
The LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.
2 The LORD will preserve him, and keep him alive ;
And he shall be blessed upon the earth :
And thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.
3 The LORD will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing :
Thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness.
4 I said, LORD, be merciful unto me :
Heal my soul ; for I have sinned against thee.
5 Mine enemies speak evil of me,
When shall he die, and his name perish ?
6 And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity :
His heart gathereth iniquity to itself ;
When he goeth abroad, he telleth it.
7 All that hate me whisper together against me :
Against me do they devise my hurt.
8 An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him :
And now that he lieth he shall rise up no more.
9 Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted,
Which did eat of my bread,
Hath lifted up his heel against me.
10 But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me,
And raise me up, that I may requite them.
11 By this I know that thou favourest me, Because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.
12 And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity,
And settest me before thy face for ever.

PSALM LV.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil,
A Psalm of David.

- 1 Give ear to my prayer, O God ;
And hide not thyself from my supplication.
2 Attend unto me, and hear me :
I mourn in my complaint, and make a noise ;
3 Because of the voice of the enemy,
Because of the oppression of the wicked :
For they cast iniquity upon me,
And in wrath they hate me.
4 My heart is sore pained within me :
And the terrors of death are fallen upon me.
5 Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me,
And horror hath overwhelmed me.
6 And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove !

7 Lo, then would I wander far off,
And remain in the wilderness. Selah.
8 I would hasten my escape
From the windy storm and tempest.
9 Destroy, O LORD, and divide their tongues :
For I have seen violence and strife in the city.
10 Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof :
Mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.
11 Wickedness is in the midst thereof :
Deceit and guile depart not from her streets.
12 For it was not an enemy that reproached
me ;
Then I could have borne it :

 But war was in his heart:
 His words were softer than oil,
 Yet were they drawn swords.
 22 Cast thy burden upon the LORD, and he shall sustain thee:
 He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.
 23 But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction:
 Bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days;
 But I will trust in thee.

13 And there came a messenger to David, saying, <sup>o</sup> The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom. 14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, Arise, and let us <sup>p</sup> flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom: make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and bring evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword. 15 And the king's servants said unto the king, Behold, thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall appoint.

Where is the David, prompt, resolute, and strong, that met the lion, the bear, the giant; the David that encouraged himself in the Lord his God against the ravaging hordes of Amalek and the rebellious fierceness of his own followers. His sin, though forgiven, has left this mark; it has changed the whole character of the man. So would his words and action at this moment lead us to say, yet not altogether correctly: witness Ps. 5.

[Ps. xxxviii.]—Probably now David composed Ps. 38. On bodily sickness came family trouble. Several words specially point to bodily maladies, troubled (v. 6), lit. bent; loathsome (v. 7), lit. burning; feeble (v. 8), lit. benumbed; sorrow (v. 17), lit. pain; Pr. 18. heaviness. He humbly views both as punishment. 127 [Ps. lv. 13-23. 2 S. xv. 13-15. Ps. xxxviii. 1-3.]

- 4 For mine iniquities are gone over mine head;
As an heavy burden they are too heavy for me.
- 5 My wounds stink and are corrupt
Because of my foolishness.
- 6 I am troubled; I am bowed down greatly;
I go mourning all the day long.
- 7 For my loins are filled with a loathsome disease:
And there is no soundness in my flesh.
- 8 I am feeble and sore broken:
I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.
- 9 Lord, all my desire is before thee;
And my groaning is not hid from thee.
- 10 My heart panteth, my strength faileth me:
As for the light of mine eyes, it also is gone from me.
- 11 My lovers and my friends stand aloof from my sore;
And my kinsmen stand afar off.
- 12 They also that seek after my life lay snares for me:
And they that seek my hurt speak mischievous things,
And imagine deceits all the day long.
- 13 But I, as a deaf man, heard not;
And I was as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth.
- 14 Thus I was as a man that heareth not,
And in whose mouth are no reproofs.
- 15 For in thee, O LORD, do I hope:
Thou wilt hear, O Lord my God.
- 16 For I said, Hear me, lest otherwise they should rejoice over me:
When my foot slippeth, they magnify themselves against me.
- 17 For I am ready to halt,
And my sorrow is continually before me.
- 18 For I will declare mine iniquity;
I will be sorry for my sin.
- 19 But mine enemies are lively, and they are strong:

- And they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied.
- 20 They also that render evil for good are mine adversaries;
Because I follow the thing that good is.
- 21 Forsake me not, O LORD:
O my God, be not far from me.
- 22 Make haste to help me,
O Lord my salvation.

PSALM XXXIX.

To the chief Musician, even to Jeduthun,
A Psalm of David.

- 1 I said, I will take heed to my ways,
That I sin not with my tongue:
I will keep my mouth with a bridle,
While the wicked is before me.
- 2 I was dumb with silence,
I held my peace, even from good;
And my sorrow was stirred.
- 3 My heart was hot within me,
While I was musing the fire burned:
Then spake I with my tongue,
- 4 LORD, make me to know mine end,
And the measure of my days, what it is;
That I may know how frail I am.
- 5 Behold, thou hast made my days as an handbreadth;
And mine age is as nothing before thee:
Verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity. Selah.
- 6 Surely every man walketh in a vain shew:
Surely they are disquieted in vain:
He heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.
- 7 And now, Lord, what wait I for?
My hope is in thee.
- 8 Deliver me from all my transgressions:
Make me not the reproach of the foolish.
- 9 I was dumb, I opened not my mouth;
Because thou didst it.
- 10 Remove thy stroke away from me:

PSALM V.

To the chief Musician upon Nehiloth, A Psalm of David.

- <sup>1</sup> Give ear to my words, O LORD, Consider my meditation.
- <sup>2</sup> Harken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God:
For unto thee will I pray.
- <sup>3</sup> My voice shalt thou hear in the morning,
O LORD;
In the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.
- <sup>4</sup> For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness:
Neither shall evil dwell with thee.
- <sup>5</sup> The foolish shall not stand in thy sight:
Thou hatest all workers of iniquity.
- <sup>6</sup> Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing:
The LORD will abhor the bloody and deceitful man.
- <sup>7</sup> But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy:
And in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple.
- <sup>8</sup> Lead me, O LORD, in thy righteousness
because of mine enemies;
Make thy way straight before my face.
- <sup>9</sup> For there is no faithfulness in their mouth;
Their inward part is very wickedness;
Their throat is an open sepulchre;
They flatter with their tongue.
- <sup>10</sup> Destroy thou them, O God;
Let them fall by their own counsels;
Cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions;
For they have rebelled against thee.
- <sup>11</sup> But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice:
Let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them:
Let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee.
- <sup>12</sup> For thou, LORD, wilt bless the righteous; With favour wilt thou compass him as
with a shield.

Cf. 1 Sam. 30. 14; ch. 8. 18; Exod. 13. 17 and with Judg. 1. 19; 1 Kin. 10. 28, 29. There was no time to summon the native army, even had its loyalty been sure. Although at this crisis every soldier was of importance, David nobly releases Ittai from his allegiance; but the Philistine commander was no mere mercenary ready to serve whatsoever de facto king; the Ruth-like fidelity of Ittai shows the bond which bound him to David. As to people and God, life and death, he would be one with David. Cf. Matt. 26. 35.—Stranger.] What, therefore, are our politics to thee?—Exile.] Lit. one gone into captivity; in what way applicable to Ittai is unknown. He had recently joined David (v. 20), but his reputation as a commander must have been established, for (ch. 18. 2) he is placed on an equality with Joab and Abishai. 23. Country. i.e. the country-folk, as distinguished from 'the people,' i.e. troops and others issuing from Jerusalem.—Kidron.] Gethsemane lay on its farther, i.e. E. bank. The whole scene recalls the 'Son of David' in many particulars. 'Brook,' Sept. χέιμαρρος, is strictly correct, for in summer this ravine is dry. But the Sept. guess at the meaning of the Kidron, τῶν κέδρων, i.e. of the Cedars, is incorrect; it may mean black or turbid. 24. Zadok.] David was specially attached to Abiathar by [2 S. xv. 19–25.]

feeling, as having been the innocent cause of his family's destruction by the hand of Doeg, and been faithfully attended by him in the days of his ill fortune; to Zadok by policy, for Saul's followers would regard him as rightful H.P., as indeed he was. At present Abiathar was chief (1 Kin. 2. 35), and till he forfeited his post entirely by joining in Adonijah's rebellion. Yet here (and 1 Chr. 15. 11) they are treated as equal, in fact pre-eminence is rather given to Zadok, it may be for reasons of policy. Perhaps Abiathar dwelt with the Ark at Jerusalem, Zadok at the old tabernacle at Gibeon; here, however, both alike are attendants on the Ark, and Zadok more specially connected with it. Perhaps the germ of Abiathar's defection were planted now. The lines of Aaron's third and fourth sons (the two elder ones, Nadab and Abihu, being slain, Num. 3. 4) ran thus: Eleazar, Phinehas . . . Abitub, Zadok, Ahimaz, Azariah, Johanan, Azariah, Amaziah, Abitub, Zadok, Shallum, Hilkiah, Azariah, Seraiah, Jehozadak:—Rhamar . . . Eli, Phinehas, Abitub, Abiah, Abimelech (his brother), Abiathar. Why Ithamar's line furnished the H.P. for a time is unknown; why it was rejected is told us in 1 Sam. 2 & 3.—Went up, &c.] Apparently the priests and Ark led the way round Olivet far enough for the whole long line to pass out of the gate. Then they halted, and the Levites set down the Ark. Jewish tradition says that Abiathar went apart to the hill-top to consult the oracle of God as to whether the Ark should go on or return. 25.] With self-renouncing reverence, David felt that he could not associate the national shrine and its priests with his own fortunes only. He also distinguished God's Presence from its emblem.—Habitation.] He uses here (ep. Ps. 26. 8) a word denoting more of permanence than tabernacle, as though a hope were find favour in the eyes of the LORD, he <sup>a</sup>will bring me again, and shew me both it, and his habitation: <sup>26</sup> but if he thus say, I have no <sup>b</sup>delight in thee; behold, here am I, <sup>c</sup>let him do to me as seemeth good unto him.

lingering in his mind that he might be suffered to build a House for his God. Exile seemed to him almost as the 'serving other gods' (1 Sam. 26. 19). <sup>26</sup> Let him do . . . as seemeth good. Beautiful are the traces here of the renewal of the right spirit within David. Another reading is, By the fords, i.e. of Jordan, in the plains of Jericho. Jordan was such a barrier that its few fords determined the course of the highways into Palestine. The possession of these two southern fords was all-important (cp. Judg. 12. 5). Cf. 2 Kin. 25. 5.—Certify.] Cf. Certiorum facere, i.e. inform; rather, report to (cf. v. 36). <sup>30</sup> Ascent of Olivet.] Lit. of the Olives. Olivet is due to the olivet in Acts 1. 12, Vulg. This chief route to the new capital, across the wilderness of Judah, henceforward comes into prominence. It is a 'pass above the Wady Kelt,' and almost certainly the boundary between Judah and Benjamin (Josh. 15. 5-7). It ascends round Olivet, then passing behind Bethany, descends by rough torrent-beds to the Spring Ain Haud (Eushemesh, i.e. Spring of the Sun), and after 20 miles of lonely wilderness reaches the plain of Jordan through the valley of Achor (Josh. 7. 26).—Tristram.

Bahurim must have been between En-rogel and Beth-shemesh, on or beside this route. See ch. 3. 16.—Barefoot.] For this and the other signs of deepest mourning, see Ezek. 24. 17. The ordinary head-covering was removed, and the mouth and beard, and sometimes the head also, were wrapped in the mantle. <sup>31</sup>] When David's trial was at its sorest, the news of the defection of his unrivalled adviser—the familiar friend in whom he trusted? (Ps. 41. 9) reaches him. —Turn, &c.] Cf. Ps. 41 & 55 & 69 & 109.—Foolishness.] A play on the name Ahithophel, brother of a fool. <sup>32</sup> He.] Rather, men. Some translate 'where God is (or was) wont to be worshipped.' No doubt there was a high place on this E. part of Olivet, viz. where the road to Jordan by Jericho winds round its southern base. Its highest point is nearly 200 feet higher than Jerusalem (Tristram). In fact, the northern summit of the ridge (Mt. Scopus), two miles N. of Jerusalem, was probably (Porter and Tristram) Nob, where the tabernacle once stood, between Jerusalem and Anathoth (Isa. 10. 30-32). In Solomon's day the eastern summit was called the Mount of Corruption (1 Kin. 11. 7; 2 Kin. 23. 13). On it the Red heifer, which must be offered without the camp, was sacrificed. The Talmud says that the Shechinah on quitting Jerusalem (see Ezek. 11. 23) dwelt 3½ years on the Mount of Olives, to see whether Israel would or would not repent, calling, 'Return to me, O my sons, and I will return to you; seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call upon him while he is near.' Heights, not valleys, were generally chosen in Palestine for cities and for altars.—Archite.] Archite here means, pro-thou shalt be <sup>p</sup>a burden unto me: <sup>34</sup> but if thou return to the city, and say unto Absalom, <sup>q</sup>'I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel. <sup>35</sup> And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, <sup>r</sup>thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests. <sup>36</sup> Behold, they have there <sup>s</sup>with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear. <sup>37</sup> So Hushai <sup>t</sup>David's friend came into the city,

A mode of carrying out God's purpose no more to be commended than Rebecca's deceit, though the popular notion that 'All is fair in love and war' may seek to fortify itself by this example. A notable instance (Sir Samuel Morland, also a king's 'friend') is quoted by Stanley (Jewish Church, ii. 99). Every wrong deed needs not to be so labeled, seeing that God has given to all men conscience. <sup>37</sup> David's friend. The official title; see v. 12, note. <sup>9</sup> Then said Abishai the son of Zeruiah unto the king, Why should this <sup>4</sup> dead dog <sup>2</sup> curse my lord the king? let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head. <sup>10</sup> And the king said, <sup>10</sup> What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? so let him curse, because <sup>11</sup> the LORD hath said unto him, Curse David. <sup>9</sup> Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so?

<sup>14</sup> And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary, and refreshed themselves there.

Note the precautions against pursuit and the orderliness of the retreat. <sup>7</sup> Come out. Rather, Begone.—Bloody. i.e. blood-guilty. 'Man of blood' was Cromwell's usual designation of Charles I. Cf. 1 Chr. 22. 8. Of the blood-guiltiness with which Shimei charges him David was innocent; he was not in league with the Philistines when Saul and his sons fell on Gilboa. He had no hand in the death of Ish-bosheth or Abner; if the sons of Rizpah and Merab (ch. 21. 8. note) were yet hanged, it was in lawful and righteous expiation of a violated oath; but Uriah's murder (ch. 12. 9) closed David's mouth effectually. Consciousness of sin silences the voice alike of self-defence and of reproof.—Belial. Cf. 1 Sam. 10. 27, note.

<sup>8</sup> Mischief. Rather, misfortune or evil-doing. <sup>9</sup> Dog. Cf. 1 Sam. 17. 43, note. <sup>10</sup> Sons of Zeruiah. Cf. ch. 3. 39. They were always ready to presume on their relationship and services, and were of a fiery temperament. Cf. John. 2. 4; Luke 9. 54; also 1 Sam. 26. 8.

say God bade Judas betray Christ, and the Jews crucify Him (Ae. 4. 28). <sup>12</sup> Cf. Ps. 109. 26-28. 'No man,' says Chrysostom wisely, 'is ever really hurt by any one but by himself.' To want an enemy may possibly be even worse than to want a friend. Affliction. So Sept. Vulg.; A.V. m. tears, R.V. wrong. <sup>13</sup> Side. Lit. rib. Many similar expressions are used to denote portions of mountains.—Stones. The stones might represent the adulterer's due. Cf.—

'How oft it happens that, when within

Men shrink at sense of secret sin,

A feather daunts the brave;

A fool's wise speech confounds the wise,

And proudest princes veil their eyes

Before their meanest slave.'—Scott.

<sup>14</sup> Weary. Rather to Ayephim (so R.V. marg.); see Variorum; some small place, or a caravansary styled The Ayephim, i.e. the weary. Cf. the Highland spot called 'Rest and be thankful,' and the common sign, 'The traveller's rest.' Here, David awaited news (v. 28 & ch. 17. 22) until night.

[2 S. xvi. 7—14. Ps. lxxiii. 1, 2.]

- <sup>3</sup> Because thy lovingkindness is better than life,
 My lips shall praise thee.
<sup>4</sup> Thus will I bless thee while I live :
 I will lift up my hands in thy name.
<sup>5</sup> My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness ;
 And my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips :
<sup>6</sup> When I remember thee upon my bed,
 And meditate on thee in the night watches.
<sup>7</sup> Because thou hast been my help,
- Therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
<sup>8</sup> My soul followeth hard after thee :
 Thy right hand upholdeth me.
<sup>9</sup> But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, Shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
<sup>10</sup> They shall fall by the sword :
 They shall be a portion for foxes.
<sup>11</sup> But the king shall rejoice in God ;
 Every one that sweareth by him shall glory :
 But the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

Absalom in Jerusalem.

<sup>15</sup> And <sup>8</sup> Absalom, and all the people the men of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and Ahithophel with him.

<sup>16</sup> And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, <sup>2</sup> David's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, God save the king, God save the king.
<sup>17</sup> And Absalom said to Hushai, Is this thy kindness to thy friend ? " why wentest thou not with thy friend ? " <sup>18</sup> And Hushai said unto Absalom, Nay ; but whom the LORD, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide. <sup>19</sup> And again, <sup>2</sup> whom should I serve ? should I not serve in the presence of his son ? as I have served in thy father's presence, so will I be in thy presence.

<sup>23</sup> And the counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was as if a man had enquired at the oracle of God : so was all the counsel of Ahithophel <sup>c</sup> both with David and with Absalom.

55.—The Rival Counsellors.

2 SAMUEL XVII. 1-23.

<sup>1</sup> MOREOVER Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Let me now choose out twelve thousand men, and I will arise and pursue after David this night: <sup>2</sup> and I will come upon him while he is <sup>a</sup> weary and weak handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him shall flee; and I will <sup>b</sup> smite the king only: <sup>3</sup> and I will bring back all the people unto thee: the man whom thou seekest is as if all returned: so all the people shall be in peace. <sup>4</sup> And the saying pleased Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel.

<sup>5</sup> Then said Absalom, Call now Hushai the Archite also, and let us hear likewise what he saith. <sup>6</sup> And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do after his saying? if not; speak thou.

2 S. xvii.—Moreover.] Resuming after the parenthesis of ch. 16. 22, 23. 2. Make him afraid.] Perhaps rather scare, or dumfound. It is the panic-fear which agitates and dazes. Germ. erschrecke; Vulg. percutionem; Sept. ἐκστήσω. 3. Man . . . seekest.] So Jacl describes Sisera (Judg. 4. 22). David's death would secure everything at no cost to the people; no other claimant would have any chance against Absalom. Sept. ὃν πρόπον ἐπιστρέφει ἡ νύμφη πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα. 4. Pleased.] The utter want of affection or even ordinary feeling in Absalom, shows what a degree of hardness, indulgence and selfishness may produce. David's tender solicitude (ch. 18. 5, 29) stands out in marked contrast. 5. Call, &c.] Plainly there could be no better counsel than Ahithophel's, but quem Deus vult perdere prius dementat. Hushai sees at once that this counsel if promptly followed would be fatal to David, and that time was the one thing he needed. Cf. Daret malorum penitentiae, daret bonorum consensui spatium, Secera impetu, bona consilio mord ralescere.—Tac. Hist. i. 32. 7. At.] Omit. He means, However good that of ch. 16. 21 may have been. This wisdom of the serpent was supplied in answer to ch. 15. 31. 8. Bear.]

Sept. adds, καὶ ὡς ὁ στραχία ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ. —Man of war.] And therefore wary, and conscious of a general's value. —Lodge.] Means in Old English 'pass the night'; French loger. Cf. 'I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say, he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.'—Shaks. He recalls the success with which David had baffled Saul's pursuit. Cf. 1 Sam. 23. 22, 23. 9. Place.] The Hebrew word is as various in its meanings as the English. Here, probably the walled city of c. 13 is intended. —Some of them.] i.e. of Absalom's people. He points out how damaging even a slight reverse at the outset might prove. 10. He also.] i.e. even he; in a complimentary way he makes excuse for the fear which, he shrewdly suspects, lurks in Absalom's heart. 11. Generally.] i.e. en masse.—That thou, &c.] So a speedier end might come to the rebellion by some accident to Absalom, and time would be gained for David. Yet the suggestion could only be taken as a compliment and expression of the wish that Ahithophel might not rob Absalom of honour and that the work though more slow might be more sure. Germ. und deine Person ziele unter ihnen; so Sept. and Vulg., and so would a courtier be likely to address [2 S. xvii. 1—11.]

battle in thine own person. <sup>12</sup> So shall we come upon him in some place where he shall be found, and we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him and of all the men that are with him there shall not be left so much as one. <sup>13</sup> Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not one small stone found there.

<sup>14</sup> And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel. For <sup>o</sup> the LORD had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom.

<sup>15</sup> <sup>a</sup> Then said Hushai unto Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I counselled. <sup>16</sup> Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge not this night <sup>i</sup> in the plains of the wilderness, but speedily pass over; lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

<sup>18</sup> Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house <sup>n</sup> in Bahurim, which had a well in his court; whither they went down. <sup>19</sup> And <sup>o</sup> the woman took and spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known. <sup>20</sup> And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And <sup>p</sup> the woman said unto them, They be gone over the brook of water. And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem. <sup>21</sup> And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, <sup>q</sup> Arise, and pass quickly over the water: for thus hath Ahithophel counselled against you.

<sup>22</sup> Then David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.

PSALM XLII.

To the chief Musician, Maschil, for the sons of Korah.

- <sup>1</sup> As the hart panteth after the water brooks,
So panteth my soul after thee, O God.
<sup>2</sup> My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God:
When shall I come and appear before God?
<sup>3</sup> My tears have been my meat day and night,
While they continually say unto me,
Where is thy God?
<sup>4</sup> When I remember these things,
I pour out my soul in me:
For I had gone with the multitude,
I went with them to the house of God,
With the voice of joy and praise,
With a multitude that kept holyday.
<sup>5</sup> Why art thou cast down, O my soul?
And why art thou disquieted in me?
Hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him
For the help of his countenance.
<sup>6</sup> O my God, my soul is cast down within me:
Therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan,
And of the Hermonites, from the hill Mizar.
<sup>7</sup> Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterspouts;
All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.
<sup>8</sup> Yet the LORD will command his loving-kindness in the daytime,
And in the night his song shall be with me,
And my prayer unto the God of my life.

- <sup>9</sup> I will say unto God my rock, Why hast thou forgotten me?
Why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?
<sup>10</sup> As with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me;
While they say daily unto me, Where is thy God?
<sup>11</sup> Why art thou cast down, O my soul?
And why art thou disquieted within me?
Hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him,
Who is the health of my countenance,
and my God.

PSALM XLIII.

- <sup>1</sup> Judge me, O God,
And plead my cause against an ungodly nation:
O deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man.
<sup>2</sup> For thou art the God of my strength:
Why dost thou cast me off?
Why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?
<sup>3</sup> O send out thy light and thy truth:
Let them lead me;
Let them bring me unto thy holy hill,
And to thy tabernacles.
<sup>4</sup> Then will I go unto the altar of God, Unto God my exceeding joy:
Yea, upon the harp will I praise thee,
O God my God.
<sup>5</sup> Why art thou cast down, O my soul?
And why art thou disquieted within me?
Hope in God: for I shall yet praise him,
Who is the health of my countenance,
and my God.

56.—Absalom's Defeat and Death.

2 SAMUEL XVII. 24—XVIII. 33.

And Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him. <sup>25</sup> And Absalom made Amasa captain of the host instead of Joab: which Amasa was a man's son, whose name was Ithra an Israelite, that went in to <sup>b</sup>Abigail the daughter of Nahash, sister to Zeruiah Joab's mother. <sup>26</sup> So Israel and Absalom pitched in the land of Gilead.

2 S. xvii.—23. Ass. Cf. 1 Sam. 9. 3, note.—Gat him home, &c. As knowing that David's success was assured, and therefore his own ruin equally so; and the question, Where is the wise? might fitly be asked in Jerusalem and Giloh, as in Corinth in later days (cf. Isa. 29. 14; 1 Cor. 1. 20).

2 S. xvii.—24. Mahanaim. [Late, the rallying-point of the nation after the battle of Gilboa, and Ish-bosheth's capital (ch. 2. 8). A city of Gad on the frontier of Manasseh against Bashan, a day's journey N. of the R. Jabbok (Josh. 13. 26, 30), and in that difficult section of Mount Gilead whence neither Sihon, nor Israel at first could expel Ammon (see Num. 21. 24). It probably lay in a productive district (1 Kin. 4. 14).—Passed. Meanwhile Absalom had been anointed, and carried out Hushai's advice. 25. Israelite. R.V. marg. Ishmaelite from 1 Chr. 2. 17.—Abigail, Nahash. Abigail and Zeruiah were David's sisters (1 Chr. 2. 16); if whole sisters, Nahash must, of course, have been Jesse's wife; if half-sisters, Nahash may have been Jesse's former wife or his wife's former husband. It is not known whether (like Noah; cp. Gen. 5. 29; Num. 26. 33) Nahash was both a male and a female name. The point here is the cousinship of Amasa and Joab. 27. Shobi. Possibly the brother of Hanun (ch. 10. 1), king of Ammon.—Machir. Mephibosheth's protector (ch. 9. 4).—Barzillai. Cf. 1 Kin. 2. 7; Ezra 2. 61–63; Neh. 7. 63. The site of Rogelim (The fullers) is unknown.

28. Basons. [Rather, dishes or bowls.—Wheat, &c.] So was a table prepared before him in the presence of his enemies (cf. 1 S. 23. 5). David has good cause to remember God 'from the land of Jordan' (cf. Ps. 42. 6).—Beans. [Chiefly eaten stewed in oil, but also used with flour for bread (cf. Ezek. 4. 9); so likewise (cf. Gen. 25. 34) are lentils (a kind of vetch).—Pulse.] Pulse, i.e. peas and other such vegetables, lit. seeds. Parched peas are a favourite food in the East. 29. Butter, &c. [If Lo-debar, i.e. without pasture, was deservedly so called, these gifts would be costly ones on Machir's part. Possibly curdled milk, Arab. leben, is meant.—Cheese of kine. i.e. of cows, kine being the right plural of cow, as swine of sow. But the Vulg. pingues vitulos, i.e. fat calves, is more probably correct. Ewe-milk cheese is preferred in the East.—In the wilderness. i.e. probably after their passage through the wilderness (cf. ch. 16. 2).

2 S. xviii.—1. Numbered. [David organises his personal adherents and foreign mercenaries, comparatively few, but great in military experience, into a little army and reviews it. 'All Israel,' W. of Jordan at any rate, including even Judah, had forsaken him for Absalom. Indeed, Absalom had specially built his hopes on Judah, as if it viewed resentfully David's endeavour to be impartially king of the 12 tribes. See Ewald's History of Israel, iii. 176. Ahithophel and Amasa, Absalom's chief supporters, were both of of thousands and captains of hundreds over them. <sup>2</sup> And David sent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, <sup>3</sup> and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite.

And the king said unto the people, I will surely go forth with you myself also. <sup>3</sup> <sup>h</sup> But the people answered, Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not care for us; neither if half of us die, will they care for us: but now thou art worth ten thousand of us: therefore now it is better that thou succour us out of the city. <sup>4</sup> And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do.

And the king stood by the gate side, and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands. <sup>5</sup> And the king commanded Joab and Abishai and Ittai, saying, Deal gently for my sake with the young man, even with Absalom. <sup>6</sup> And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

<sup>9</sup> And Absalom met the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away.

<sup>10</sup> And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak. <sup>11</sup> And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest him, and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee ten shekels of silver, and a girdle. <sup>12</sup> And the man said unto Joab, Though I should receive a thousand shekels of silver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: <sup>1</sup> for in our hearing the king charged thee and Abishai and Ittai, saying, Beware that none touch the young man Absalom.

For all green things, no less than the hailstones of Azekah, can magnify the Lord. This wood (as the word used implies) is a mass of These were, and are still, frequently given as presents, and also used (App.) as purses (cp. zonam perdere, to lose one's purse). Ezor, used specially of girdles for men, prophets (2 Kin. 1. 8), or soldiers (Isa. 5. 27). Mezack, used of men's girdles only (Job 12. 21, margin). Arnet, used only of those of priests [2 S. xviii. 2—12.]

13 Otherwise I should have wrought falsehood against mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king, and thou thyself wouldest have set thyself against me.

14 Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee. And he took three darts in his hand, and thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he was yet alive in the midst of the oak. 15 And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.

16 And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people. 17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and <sup>m</sup>laid a very great heap of stones upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.

18 Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, which is in <sup>n</sup>the king's dale: for he said, <sup>o</sup>I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's place.

19 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run, and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath avenged him of his enemies. 20 And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 Then said Joab to Cushi, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed himself unto Joab, and ran.

22 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready? 23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and overran Cushi.

<sup>5</sup> And Joab came into the house to the king, and said, Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines; <sup>6</sup> in that thou lovest thine enemies, and hatest thy friends. For thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants: for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then it had pleased thee well. <sup>7</sup> Now therefore arise, go forth, and speak comfortably unto thy servants: for I swear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there will not tarry one with thee this night: and that will be worse unto thee than all the evil that befell thee from thy youth until now.

fled. So Sept. <sup>5</sup>] Joab assumes that Absalom would have pitilessly slain all possible competitors, and such a son in such times was likely enough to adopt this barbarous custom, as did Abimelech (Judg. 9. 5), Baasha, Zimri, and Jehu, kings of Israel (1 Kin. 15. 29 & 16. 11; 2 Kin. 10. 7), and Athaliah, Ahab's daughter, in Judah (2 Kin. 11. 1). Joab's bearing, though Absalom's murderer in open defiance of the royal proclamation, shows how his knowledge of David's plot against Uriah had put the king in his power, and how unscrupulously he would use such power. <sup>6</sup> Declared.] i.e. made clear, published; the Old English meaning.—Princes nor servants.] i.e. neither officers nor men. <sup>7</sup> Go forth.] i.e. into public ('in the gate,' v. 8, cp. ch. 15. 2). It was conspicuously absent in the period of the Judges, though probably one cause of the desire for a king. This sense of national unity was developed by the monarchy of Saul and David, and especially by the empire of Solomon. But the burden of Solomon's magnificence and Rehoboam's infatuation were fatal to a growing unity of feeling, which might, humanly speaking, have changed the course of Hebrew history. The tribal feeling had not become weaker. Its dammed-up stream was ready to flow at Jeroboam's bidding; and here it was probably David's premature appeal to Judah which caused what would have been but irritability to break out into open antagonism. The staying of the stream was 'of the Lord.' Cf. 1 Kin. 12. 24.—Israel.] i.e. the 10 tribes (cf. v. 43 and 1 Kin. 11. 42, note); though sometimes in these chapters Israel seems to include the 12 tribes, or at least such part of them as followed Absalom. The kingdom of Ish-bosheth is called Israel in ch. 3. 10.—The king saved us.] David is spoken of as a deliverer, like one of the Judges. David's hold on the throne was as yet slight and mainly due to his personal services, nor was the primacy of his tribe Judah yet admitted (see 1 Chr. 29. 24) by the nation at large. Hence in part David's gratitude at Solomon's accession (1 Kin. 1. 48). <sup>10</sup> Back.]

Sept. adds here the phrase which seems out of place in v. 11, 'And the speech of all Israel came to the king.' <sup>11</sup> Sent.] While the nation's heart was turning back to him, David's somewhat impatient appeal to Judah was a step of questionable discretion, which probably helped to prepare the way for the disruption, as well as leading to further quarrel and to Sheba's rebellion now. — Judah.] Whose 'tent' or home would naturally be Jerusalem itself, if Israel in v. 8 included Judah. Perhaps Judah took no active part in Absalom's rebellion; but that he began in Hebron and easily occupied Jerusalem shows a very ready acquiescence.—

seeing the speech of all Israel is come to the king, even to his house. <sup>12</sup> Ye are my brethren, ye are <sup>e</sup> my bones and my flesh : wherefore then are ye the last to bring back the king ? <sup>13</sup> And say ye to Amasa, Art thou not of my bone, and of my flesh ? <sup>9</sup> God do so to me, and more also, if thou be not captain of the host before me continually in the room of Joab.

Shimei's eminence appears from v. 17. 17. Before.] Rather, to meet. 18. Went over.] Rather, crossed to and fro.—Come.] Rather, about to cross. 20. House of Joseph.] Used apparently for all Israel, excepting Judah. Shimei would keep out of sight the fact that he belonged to the tribe most hostile to David. Generally Joseph (like Ephraim) means the ten tribes only (Zech. 10. 6; Amos 5. 6, 15 & 6. 6; Obad. 18). Cf. v. 43. In Ps. 80. 1 & 81. 5, Joseph is put for the twelve tribes, and it may be so here. 21.] Abishai was ever hotly zealous (cf. 1 Sam. 26. 8; ch. 16. 9). 22. Adversaries.] The Heb. is Satan. It is so rendered in 1 Chr. 21. 1; Zech. 3. 1, and used also of Solomon's 'adversaries' (1 Kin. 11. 14. &c.); Vulg. Cur effeminati [Ps. iv. 7, 8. 2 S. xix. 16—25.]

mihi hodie in Satan. Cf. Matt. 16. 23.—For, &c.] This may be the genuine reason of his clemency that day; yet Abishai might be pardoned for thinking Shimei scarcely less guilty than the ignorant Amalekite (ch. i. 16). He had broken a known law, Exod. 22. 28 (cf. ch. 21. 17). 'But a fellow-feeling makes one wondrous kind.' The reason may have lain in the constant and bitter consciousness of his own sin against the King of kings. Also pardon asked at the head of 1000 men is not readily denied. 24. Neither dressed, &c.] Thus an Oriental expresses the greatest grief. Such public mourning, visible to Absalom's partisans, sufficiently answered Ziba's slander that Mephibosheth hoped to succeed David as the survivor and representative of Saul's family. The one word translated dressed and trimmed is as wide in its meaning as the Fr. faire, the Greek ποιεῖν, the Eng. do. It means to attend to in any sense.—Beard.] The word is sometimes rendered upper lip (Lev. 13. 45). 25. To, &c.] Arab. from. 'Came down' may imply 'to Jordan'; Vulg. Cumque Jerusalem

when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, <sup>26</sup> Wherefore wastest not thou with me, Mephibosheth? <sup>26</sup> And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because thy servant is lame. <sup>27</sup> And <sup>27</sup> he hath slandered thy servant unto my lord the king; <sup>28</sup> but my lord the king is as an angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes. <sup>29</sup> For all of my father's house were but dead men before my lord the king: <sup>30</sup> yet didst thou set thy servant among them that did eat at thine own table. What right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king?

<sup>29</sup> And the king said unto him, Why speakest thou any more of thy matters? I have said, Thou and Ziba divide the land. <sup>30</sup> And Mephibosheth said unto the king, Yea, let him take all, forasmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house.

<sup>31</sup> And <sup>31</sup> Barzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan. <sup>32</sup> Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourscore years old: and <sup>33</sup> he had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim; for he was a very great man. <sup>33</sup> And the king said unto Barzillai, Come thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem. <sup>34</sup> And Barzillai said unto the king, How long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem? <sup>35</sup> I am this day <sup>35</sup> fourscore years old: and can I discern between good and evil? can thy servant taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing men and singing women? wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king? <sup>36</sup> Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and why should the king recompense it me with such a reward? <sup>37</sup> Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and of my mother. But behold thy servant <sup>38</sup> Chimham; let him go over with my lord the king; and do to him what shall seem good unto thee. <sup>39</sup> And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee: and whatsoever thou shalt require of me, that will I do for thee.

makes Israel claim the birthright, as though Ephraim, their head, had right to it (as Rachel's eldest son) next after Reuben the disinherited eldest son of Leah. The Sept. reading is very like what we should expect Ephraim to say: Δέκα χεῖρές μου ἐν τῷ βασιλεῖ, καὶ πρωτότοκος ἐγὼ ἢ σὺ, καὶ γὰρ ἐν τῷ Δαυὶ εἶμι ὑπὲρ σέ. Why they said 10, not 11, parts is not altogether clear; v. 42 shows that Judah here does not include Benjamin, whereas Joseph in v. 20 does; ch. 20. 2 shows that it was not only Benjamin that followed Sheba. It may be that Sheba's influence was already sufficient to make his own tribe hold themselves aloof, or that the tribe was so small as to be entirely ignored, or that Ephraim and Manasseh are counted as one (cf. v. 20).—Did ye despise.] Rather, *Have ye despised us? <sup>2</sup> So every man of Israel went up from after David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jerusalem.

<sup>3</sup> And David came to his house at Jerusalem; and the king took the ten women his concubines, whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in ward, and fed them, but went not in unto them. So they were shut up unto the day of their death, living in widowhood.

<sup>4</sup> Then said the king to Amasa, <sup>d</sup> Assemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here present. <sup>5</sup> So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he tarried longer than the set time which he had appointed him.

<sup>6</sup> And David said to Abishai, Now shall Sheba the son of Bichri do us more harm than did Absalom: take thou <sup>e</sup> thy lord's servants, and pursue after him, lest he get him fenced cities, and escape us. <sup>7</sup> And there went out after him Joab's men, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and all the mighty men: and they went out of Jerusalem, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

<sup>8</sup> When they were at the great stone which is in Gibeon, Amasa went before them. And Joab's garment that he had put on was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a sword fastened upon his loins in the sheath thereof; and as he went forth it fell out. <sup>9</sup> And Joab said to Amasa, Art thou in health, my brother? <sup>10</sup> And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. <sup>10</sup> But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand: so <sup>h</sup> he smote him therewith <sup>i</sup> in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and struck him not again; and he died.

Thence they returned, and 'went up' to the hill-country of Ephraim. <sup>5.]</sup> David, though it might be impolitic and ungrateful, was quite ready to fulfil his promise to Amasa (ch. 19. 13), for Joab was overbearing and ruthless, and Joab knew David's meanness in the matter of Uriah; but Amasa mistrusted the continuance of David's favour, dreaded Joab's enmity, and probably did not enjoy the people's confidence. How are the holy fallen! Once David would have undertaken no such step as this without asking counsel of God. And when the man saw that all the people stood still, he removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, and cast a cloth upon him, when he saw that every one that came by him stood still. <sup>13</sup> When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

<sup>14</sup> And he went through all the tribes of Israel unto <sup>k</sup> Abel, and to Beth-maachah, and all the Berites: and they were gathered together, and went also after him. <sup>15</sup> And they came and besieged him in Abel of Beth-maachah, and they <sup>l</sup> cast up a bank against the city, and it stood in the trench: and all the people that were with Joab battered the wall, to throw it down.

<sup>16</sup> Then cried a wise woman out of the city, Hear, hear; say, I pray you, unto Joab, Come near hither, that I may speak with thee. <sup>17</sup> And when he was come near unto her, the woman said, Art thou Joab? And he answered, I am he. Then she said unto him, Hear the words of thine handmaid. And he answered, I do hear. <sup>18</sup> Then she spake, saying, They were wont to speak in old time, saying, They shall surely ask counsel at Abel: and so they ended the matter. <sup>19</sup> I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel: thou seekest to destroy a city and a mother in Israel: why wilt thou swallow up <sup>m</sup> the inheritance of the LORD?

And the woman said unto Joab, Behold, his head shall be thrown to thee over the wall. <sup>22</sup> Then the woman went unto all the people <sup>n</sup> in her wisdom. And they cut off the head of Sheba the son of Bichri, and cast it out to Joab.

The word rendered atonement, in Num. 35. 31 satisfaction, and ransom in Exod. 30. 12, means literally covering, i.e. for the eyes. ## 62.—Exploits against Philistine Giants.

2 SAMUEL XXI. 15-22; 1 CHRONICLES XX. 4-8.

<sup>15</sup> Moreover the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines: and David waxed faint.

<sup>16</sup> And Ishbi-benob, which was of the sons of the giant, the weight of whose spear weighed three hundred shekels of brass in weight, he being girded with a new sword, thought to have slain David. <sup>17</sup> But Abishai the son of Zeruiah succoured him, and smote the Philistine, and killed him. Then the men of David sware unto him, saying, <sup>18</sup> Thou shalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou quench not the light of Israel.

<sup>19</sup> And there was again a battle in Gob with the Philistines, where Elhanan the son of Jaare-oregim, a Beth-lehemite, slew the brother of Goliath the Gittite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

<sup>20</sup> And there was yet a battle in Gath, where was a man of great stature, that had on every hand six fingers, and on every foot six toes, four and twenty in number; and he also was born to the giant. <sup>21</sup> And when he defied Israel, Jonathan the son of <sup>22</sup> Shimea the brother of David slew him.

<sup>4</sup> And it came to pass after this, that there arose war at Gezer with the Philistines; at which time <sup>5</sup> Sibbechai the Hushathite slew Sippai, that was of the children of the giant: and they were subdued.

<sup>5</sup> And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan the son of Jair slew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear staff was like a weaver's beam.

<sup>6</sup> And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot: and he also was the son of the giant. <sup>7</sup> But when he defied Israel, Jonathan the son of Shimea David's brother slew him.

<sup>8</sup> These were born unto the giant in Gath; and they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

2 S. xxi.—15.] The date is uncertain, but evidently David was king of all Israel (v. 17). The place may have been Gath (Sept. Syr.) or Gezer (see 1 Sam. 17. 32; ch. 5. 25, notes), for v. 18 has again, and went down suggests the Shephelah (1 Sam. 17. 2, note)—or Gob, which is unknown, being named here only. 16. The giant.] Or, the Rephaite. Heb. Raphah (so vs. 18, 20, 22 & Chr., vs. 4, 6, 8, but with the reading Rephaim in v. 4). The four notable champions (v. 22) were either sons of a giant named Raphah, or (if 'sons'=progeny) were survivors of the Rephaim, a pre-historic (but not giant) race, predecessors of the immigrant Canaanite, to which the Anakim, etc., belonged (Deut. 2. 11, &c.; see 1 Sam. 17. 4, notes).—Weight.] The half of Goliath's spear-head, i.e. about 8 lbs. David was entitled 'the lamp of Israel' because indispensable. The burning lamp represents a person's continued prosperity. See ch. 22. 29. 18. A battle.] Rather, war (as Chr.); so vs. 19, 20. 19. In.] Rather, at (as Chr.); so v. 20.—Jaare-oregim.] Probably Jair (Chr.) is correct, oregim, i.e. weavers, having crept in from the end of the sentence. —The brother of.] From Chr. ## 63.—David's Thanksgiving for 'Rest.'

2 SAMUEL XXII.

<sup>c</sup>The LORD is my rock, and my fortress,
and my deliverer;

I trust:

He is my <sup>e</sup>shield, and the <sup>f</sup>horn of my salvation, my high <sup>g</sup>tower, and my

My saviour; thou savest me from violence.

<sup>4</sup>I will call on the LORD, who is worthy to be praised:

So shall I be saved from mine enemies.

<sup>5</sup>When the waves of death compassed me,

The floods of ungodly men made me afraid;

about;

The snares of death prevented me;

<sup>7</sup>In my distress <sup>k</sup>I called upon the LORD,
And cried to my God:

And he did <sup>l</sup>hear my voice out of his temple,

And my cry did enter into his ears.

And shook, because he was wroth.

2 S. xxii.—In this Psalm (the 18th almost verbatim), David reviews the first half of his public life, and celebrates the permanent establishment of the Theocratic Monarchy with an exultant gratitude that reflects the undimmed prosperity of ch. 8, and with an assurance of God's favour (v. 20) that bespeaks a conscience clear of the gross sins of ch. 11. After many years of protection (esp. from Saul), of guidance and help, God had finally assured permanence to David's work by promising continuance to his dynasty for a great while to come (v. 51; cp. ch. 7. 12–16, 19).—But the Psalm is chiefly interesting as a confession of David's faith and a disclosure of the principles by which his public conduct had been governed throughout. It is a condensed religious autobiography. Regarding himself as having been specially called to be king under God and God's 'servant' (Ps. 11, title; cp. ch. 7. 8, note), David declares with the simplicity of truth that his heart and will had ever been on God's side (cp. 1 Sam. 13. 14), and that therefore (vs. 20–25) God had enabled him to achieve such a wonderful result. David calls upon all within his sphere of influence to recognise in his life-history (vs. 47–50) the greatness of Israel's God, Jehovah, and His readiness to hear and help all who put their trust in Him (vs. 2–4, 31). 2–4.] His God is David's refuge and strength. 1 C. xxvii.—The Chronicler's digression (chs. 23. 3-27. 34) to explain the representative bodies of ch. 23. 2 supplies most of the material for describing the institutions of the Davidic monarchy—especially David's organisation of the army and of the tribe of Levi for religious and judicial purposes—and for describing the civil administration of the Monarchy.

1 C. xxvii.—1.] The military organisation inherited from Saul (and by him from Moses, Num. 1. 3) was greatly developed by David (but it does not seem to have been kept up by the kings of Judah after the Disruption). 'The Host,' which comprised all males of 20 years old and upwards, was called out in time of war only. From this, David organised twelve divisions of 24,000 men, liable for duty by monthly course, and commanded by twelve of the Thirty. David's mighty men, Heb. Gibbōrim, a body of picked warriors, called also 'The Six Hundred,' consisted partly of the original members of David's famous band (1 Sam. 23. 13, &c.), partly of their successors, and was divided into three divisions of 200, each subdivided into subdivisions of 20. The commanders of the twenties formed 'the Thirty,' and the commanders of the two-hundreds 'the Three.' The 'captain of the mighty men,' or Gibbōrim, now Abishai, commanded 'the Thirty,' but he was not one of 'the Three,' but next below them in rank. Joab was commander-in-chief over all. This army was as yet without cavalry, and practically without chariots or horses; the king, princes, and officers rode mules. David had also a body-guard of foreigners, called the Cherethites and Pelethites (2 Sam. 8. 18, note), commanded by a Levite of the highest distinction, Benaiah (v. 5, note). After the Disruption, a body-guard, but not a standing army, was maintained by David's successors in Judah (1 Kin. 14. 28; 2 Kin. 11. 4, 11).—To wit . . . year.] Apparently a fuller summary of the organisation from which the Chronicler extracts only the rota of service. to a like conclusion as to the civil organisation. 8. Izrahite.] Probably Zerahite or Zarhite (vs. 11. 13), i.e. of Zerah's branch of the family of Judah. 9, 10. *Ira . . . reign it is fitting to revert to the names of those Worthies, by whose might the throne was originally won, who (1 Chron. 11. 10) strenuously assisted with all Israel in making David king. This chapter, like the last, is supplementary. 8-12.] The Three. — Tachmonite.] No doubt Chron. reads rightly Hachmonite. Hachmoni means wise; Vulg. sapientissimus princeps inter tres. The father was Zabdiel, Hachmoni and Korah were probably earlier ancestors. Jashobeam was with David at Ziklag; he was afterwards captain of the first month. Cf. 1 Chr. 12. 6 & 27. 2. 32.—That sat in the seat] Has dropped in from the line above in place of Jashobeam. By a similar accident the same was, &c., has taken the place of he lifted up, &c.—The captains.] Perhaps, rather, the thirty (shaloshim) or the three. Sept. ἄρχων τοῦ πρώτου. Throughout this section, the very similar Heb. words rendered captain (? knights or personal attendants on the king), three, and thirty, are constantly confused (Kirkpatrick). Sept. renders shalishim in Ex. 14. 7 by τριπύρραι, chariot-warriors, so called, Origen says, because every chariot contained three, one to fight, one to defend, one to drive. The etymology of the Hebrew word seems analogous to that of the Greek one. 9.] He was should be inserted before with David, and a full stop at men.—Away.] Rather, up to battle. Pas-dammim (the end or boundary of bloodshed) or Ephes-dammim lay due E. of Gath, and was the site of the Philistine camp when David slew Goliath (1 Sam. 17. 1). 11. Hararite.] In Syriac mountaineer, i.e. of the hill country of Judah or Ephraim. See v. 33, note. — Troop.] The word is so rendered in this chapter only. Its general meaning is living. It is rendered congregation once and company once. If, as is probable, Josephus is right in reading to Lehi (Judg. 15. 9, 14, 19), probably we should read from Lehi in v. 13.—Lentiles.] In Chron. barley, the Heb. word consisting of almost the same letters transposed (cf. ch. 17. 28). 13. In the harvest time.] The reading in Chron. is probably correct; the rock meaning a rock fortress near Adullam.—Re-

There is none now within half a mile. <sup>16</sup> The three.] These three heroes of v. 13 are not 'the Three,' i.e. not the before-named Jashobeam, Eleazar, and Shammah (for three is without the article in v. 13), but probably Abishai, Benaiah, and a third unnamed, promoted to form a second triad for this exploit. Perhaps the third was Asahel (cf. v. 24, note). <sup>17</sup> Therefore, &c.] It was a self-forgetting hero showing the value he set on self-forgetting heroes' love and daring and lives. Kabzeel was in the S. of Judah. The A.V. rendering, a chief priest in 1 Chr. 27. 5 would probably mean that Jehoiada was the H.P.'s deputy or Vicar, called the second priest (2 Kin. 25. 18; cf. 1 Chr. 12. 27). But the better translation is the priest, as chief. — Lion-like.] Literally, lions of God; a common Arab expression. Cp. Cœur de Lion. Vulg. duo leones Moab. — In time of snow.] Rather (and in Chron.), In the day of the snow. The general change of climate in Palestine makes snow much more rare than formerly. A concealed pit, with pointed stakes at the bottom, is still the common way of destroying lions. This one may have time of snow: <sup>21</sup> and he slew an Egyptian, a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand; but he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear. <sup>22</sup> These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men. <sup>23</sup> He was more honourable than the thirty, but he attained not to the first three. <sup>22</sup> Among three.] Among the three. <sup>23</sup> Guard.] The word (lit. obedience) may mean body-guard, but more probably privy council, and 1 Chr. 27. 34 seems to point to this. <sup>24</sup> The thirty.]

There are thirty-one names. Probably Asahel dying young, or being admitted into the second triad, his place was supplied by Elikah, whose name is not found in Chron.—Elhanan.] Cf. ch. 21. 19. <sup>25</sup> Harod means trembling (Judg. 7. 1-3). <sup>26</sup> Palnite.] Pelonite (Chron.), which is probably the right reading (*Bib. E. of Damascus (cf. ch. 8. 3; 1 Sam. 14. 47); thus Igal, as well as Zelek, Uriah and Nahari (? cf. ch. 4. 2), would be foreigners. <sup>38</sup> Ithrite.] The family were children of Kirjath-jearim, Caleb's grandson (1 Chr. 2. 53). <sup>39</sup> Thirty and seven, i.e. 31 and two triads would make 37, but only two names are actually given of the second triad (cf. v. 16, note). The 16 names added after Uriah in 1 Chr. 11 might be of those who took the place of such of the others as died; or the names of those who died before it was made out (if the list in Samuel, which has no date, is later than that in 1 Chr. 11, which, as some think, gives the names as they stood at first at Hebron). In that case it would be difficult to explain why Chron. says the thirty. It is not possible, or necessary, absolutely to reconcile the lists. That in 1 Chr. 27 seems to belong to the date of the census.

1 C. xi.—44. Ashterath.] In trans-Jordanie Manasseh (Josh. 13. 31). The places indicated by Mithnite, Mesobaite, Tizite, Mahavite are unknown.

1 C. xxvii.—16. Ruler.] The Hebrew, nāgīd, lit. foremost, describes the hereditary position of these officials as heirs of the 12 patri-archs, or heads of the clans (cf. Num. 1. 4). The word sārīm (v. 22), rendered 'princes,' is lit. rulers, men of power, and rather denotes their duties.—[Reubenites.] Leah's six sons stand first; Zilpah's two sons, Gad and Asher, are omitted (probably from the imperfection of the MSS.). Levi has double honour; Joseph, threefold. Bilhah's sons, Dan and Naphtali, are in inverted order, so that the last place is allotted to him of whom it was said, 'Dan (the judge) shall judge his people as one of the tribes of Israel,' which, connecting it with the fact that Dan introduced idolatry into Israel, and that Dan is not named in Rev. 7, we can scarcely take to be accidental. <sup>17</sup> Hashabiah.] Of the family of Gershon, Levi's eldest son, to be distinguished from the Kohathite Hashabiah (ch. 26. 30).—[Zadok.] Son of Ahitub, and, as of Eleazar's, the elder line, heir by birthright before Abiathar the H. P. of the line of Ithamar, Aaron's youngest son. <sup>18</sup> Elihu.] Called Eliab (ch. 2. 13; 1 Sam. 16. 6); so Sept. David's eldest brother. <sup>21</sup> Abner.] If Abner was Head of Benjamin, his devotion to Saul's house was the more commendable (cf. 1 Sam. 9. 21). <sup>22</sup> Princes.] Rather, captains.

1 C. xxvii. — 25. Treasures.] The same word as 'storehouses' below (Vulg. thesaurus), meaning any places of safe keeping (those in Jerusalem are meant here), or any valuables, precious metals and other spoil of war, or other accumulated personal property. The whole section illustrates the nature and sources of the wealth of the Hebrew king. It should be compared with a like record of the wealth of Solomon, and of Uzziah, and Hezekiah (1 Kin. 10, 11-29; 2 Chr. 26, 10 & 32, 27-29).—Storehouses in the fields.] Probably large pits or underground granaries lined and covered with straw, with a stone on the top covered with earth. Such are still found in Palestine, and are in use in Morocco. Cp. Jer. 41, 8: 'We have treasures (lit. hidden things) in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey.'—Castles.] Heb. migdal, rendered 'towers' in 2 Chr. 26, 10 & 27, 4, and used of the refuges or watch-towers built by king Uzziah for the protection of the royal flocks and herds on the pasture lands of the Arabian border. 26. Tillage.] So king Uzziah had husbandmen and vine-dressers in the hill country and Carmel of Judah (2 Chr. 26, 10). 27. Ramathite.] To which of the many Ramahs (heights) he belonged cannot be determined.—The increase... cellars.] Rather, the wine cellars which were in the vineyards.—Shiphmite.] Of Shepham in Lebanon (Num. 34, 11), or Siphmoth (1 Sam. 30, 28). Lebanon (Ezek. 27, 18, Helbon) and the neighbourhood of Hebron (eg. Eschol) were wine-districts. 28. Olive.] Remains of oil-presses, with their gutters, troughs, and cisterns hewn out of the solid rock, are met with all over the land. No tree of Palestine is so valuable as the olive, yielding light, soap, pickle, and a substitute for butter. One tree will yield 10 to 15 gallons of oil, but not till it has been [1 C. xxvii. 25-31.] grafted from 10 to 14 years. It is not in its prime for 40 years. The olive still forms the wealth of Bethlehem.—Sycamore.] Not our sycamore. The sycamore is so called because its fruit is a fig (σῦκον) and its leaf like the mulberry (μόρον; cf. Ps. 78, 48, Pr. Bk.). It grows only in the warm maritime plains and the sub-tropical valley of the Jordan. It is valuable rather on account of its shade and its timber (light, porous, durable) than its fruit (cf. 1 Kin. 10, 27; Isa. 9, 10; Amos 7, 14). Egyptian mummy cases were made of it. The Turks still claim a royalty out of the produce, reckoning it a royal tree.—Low plains.] Rather, lowlands, Heb. Shephelah, the standing phrase for the maritime plain S. of Mount Carmel, between the highlands and the coast, but especially for the section S. of Joppa, or Philistia proper.—Gederite.] Apparently of Gederah in the Shephelah (Josh. 15, 36). 29. Sharon.] The section of the maritime plain N. of Joppa is so called. It is the narrower (averaging ten miles in width) and the more undulating, and formerly, according to Josephus and the Sept., shared the wooded character of Mt. Carmel and of the valleys between it and the vale of Shechem. It is well watered, and famous for its narcissus (perhaps the 'rose of Sharon,' Tristram). 30. Camels.] An Ishmaelite would have special experience. Hagerite (cf. 31) apparently means Hagarene or Hagarene, a pastoral tribe on the wild borderlands adjoining the Arabian desert (ch. 5, 10), whither apparently some of the royal flocks and herds were sent to be under charge of some local sheyk. The camel is associated in the O. T. with the wandering tribes of the desert, by whom the trade through Arabia was conducted.—Asses.] See 1 Sam. 9, 3, note. 31. Rulers.] Rather, stewards (sārīm ch. 28. 1 & v. 16, note).—Substance.] David's wealth marks the development of the nation and monarchy. Its chief external sources would be spoils, tributes (Ps. 72. 10), and commerce.

1 Chr. xxiii.—xxvi.—During Samuel's judgeship and Saul's reign, the priesthood is mentioned rarely, and the Levites, i.e. the rest of the tribe (ch. 23. 13), not at all. Under Samuel, the non-Levitical schools of the prophets (to which, however, many Levites may have belonged) are found pursuing the ideal of the Levitical life, viz., praise, devotion, and teaching. The neglect of the Ark (1 Chr. 13. 3) and the consequently mutilated Service of the Tabernacle, implies extensive degeneracy among the priesthood during Saul's reign. But David's revival and development of the national worship (of which he is ever after regarded as the second founder) in the double Service of the Ark on Zion and of the Tabernacle at Gibeon, had restored both priests and Levites to their true position (ch. 6. 31, 32, 48). And now—apparently quite at the close of his reign (v. 27 with ch. 26. 30)—David thoroughly re-organises the ministry of both as part of his preparations for the future Temple (in which the divided worship would come to an end, both Tent and Tabernacle being superseded by the permanent building), and for its more splendid and more frequented services. He divides the priesthood into 24 courses, and (as it seems) the Levitical deacons, musicians, and warders likewise. All the courses are determined by genealogy, and seem to coincide with the fathers' houses of David's time; the posts of honour (except the porters') are assigned by primogeniture—modified by the privilege of the Kohathite Levites over the elder Gershonites. But the rotation of the several courses is, in all cases, determined by lot; the period of service being uncertain, perhaps monthly

(v. 32, note; cp. ch. 27. 1), but some change taking place weekly (ch. 9. 25; 2 Chr. 23. 4, 8, 'on the Sabboth'). This organisation lasted until the final destruction of Jerusalem.

1 C. xxiii.—3, Numbered.] Not in the general census of ch. 21, Levi being exempt from military service, but by a special census taken (apparently for the last time on the 30-50 years limit, rs. 24, 25) to ascertain the number qualified for service with a view to their reorganisation. See rs. 24-27.—Thirty.] i.e. from 30 years of age to 50 (Num. 4. 3, or from 25 years, Num. 8. 24), as if the striking, pitching, and carrying of the Tabernacle, &c., could be discharged only by men in the prime of life, or because these limits had provided a sufficiency. At a date left undefined (v. 27), David makes the period of service begin with the 20th year, because all carrying of religious edifices and objects was at an end (v. 24), and probably because the public worship of a great nation in the Temple would demand more ministers.—Polls.] Cf. 2 Sam. 14. 26, note.—Thirty and eight thousand.] As compared with 8,500 in Num. 4. 36, 40, 44. 4-5.] Quoted from David's decree (I made). 4. Set forward.] Marg. oversee (so R.V.); cp. ch. 15. 21, note. <sup>25</sup> For David said, The LORD God of Israel <sup>w</sup> hath given rest unto his people, that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever: <sup>x</sup> and also unto the Levites; they shall no more <sup>y</sup> carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

<sup>3</sup>And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service. <sup>4</sup>And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar according to the house of their fathers. <sup>5</sup>Thus were they divided by lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

'Charge' is from the Fr. charger = to load, and so to impose as a duty. These Levites were assigned as assistants to the priests in all services; cp. ch. 6. 48; Num. 18. 2-6. We infer (c. 21, ch. 24. 31, notes) that David formed them into 24 courses corresponding to those of the priests (ch. 24. 7-18), and (unless the provision was prospective and intended for the Temple service only) the double service at this period in Gibeon and in Jerusalem suggests a monthly service, a course for each place of public worship.—Tabernacle, &c.] Rather, tent of meeting.—In.] Rather, for.

The first mention of a scribe (sopher). Individual scribes appear to have been throughout the monarchy of exalted status, the associates of the H.P., the commander-in-chief, and the king; they acted as amanuenses, compilers, registrars, accountants (2 Kin. 12. 10), adjutants (2 Kin. 23. 19), secretaries of state (2 Sam. 8. 17; Isa. 33. 18). Scribes, as a literary class, are first mentioned in the time of Hezekiah (Prov. 25. 1); they are spoken of as a hereditary caste in ch. 2. 55, before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites; one principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

as a branch of the Levites in 2 Chr. 34. 13. Gradually these scribes came to be reckoned higher than even the priestly class—whose duty it was to preserve, transcribe, and interpret the Law (Deut. 17. 9-12 & 31. 26), and to read it publicly every 7th year (Deut. 31. 9-13)—till in Ezra, who beyond all others exhibits ‘the high ideal of the office’ (Ezra 7. 6), we lose sight even of the H. 1 C. xxv.—The Singers.—Levites first appear as musicians in the Procession of the Ark to Zion (p. 94), and then in the double Service of Song at Jerusalem and at Gibeon (pp. 97-99). They form three guilds or choirs, one of each branch of Levi, and David with the two heads of Levi assigns (ch. 6. 31-47) to each guild (by primogeniture qualified by the Kohathite privilege) its duty and station. In ch. 23. 5, the singers amount to 4,000, and here David subdivides the guilds into 24 courses (v. 7, note). These singers are minstrels, i.e. they sing and accompany their chanting with the musical instruments of David (Neh. 12. 36), viz. psalteries (harps) and harps (guitars) improved or invented by him (Amos 6. 5), being led by their preceptors with cymbals—according to rules ascribed to David, Gad the Seer, and Nathan the Prophet (2 Chr. 29. 25). The three guilds (sons, cp. sons of the prophets and the title of seer, Heb. hozeh, given to the fathers or Masters of the Guilds, Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, 2 Chr. 29. 30 & 35. 15; v. 5) would occupy part of the ground of the guilds of the prophets (cp. v. 8, teacher, scholar), and doubtless the Temple became the great school of Hebrew music. The singers, like the porters, lived near Jeru-—Psaltery.] Heb. nebel, the 'lute' and 'psalm' of the 1'salms, and the 'viol' of Isa. 5. 12 & 14. 11; Amos 5. 23 & 6. 5, i.e. when used for secular purposes. First mentioned in 1 Sam. 10. 5, it was the chief religious instrument of the Hebrews, large, yet portable; probably the most important if not also the largest of the harp family used by them. Its shape and number of strings cannot be determined; but in ancient harps the strings almost always form the third side. The psaltery on Atamoth (ch. 15. 20, cp. 1's. 46. 1), Heb. on virgin voices, may mean a high-pitched instrument (soprano), alamoth being the plural of almah, a virgin or young woman.—Cymbals.] Heb. tseltselim. Ancient cymbals were frequently small basins, i.e. practically bells (Stainer); their use in the Bible is limited to religious ceremonies and to the 3 Precentors who probably accentuated the music and marked the time with them.—The workmen.] i.e. those that did the work (ch. 23. 24).—According to.] Var. for. 2-7. Sons.] Apparently pupils, trained members of a guild (father in vs. 3, 16 = head). 2. Asaph.] Of the eldest branch of Levi, and precentor of the choir in Jerusalem. 'The words of God' would refer to Heman's prophetic gift.—To lift up the horn.] i.e. 'to give him power' (like 'exalt the horn of his Anointed,' 1 Sam. 2. 10), or 'to increase his dignity,' connecting the words with 'God gave,' &c. (cf. ch. 26. 5).—Horn.] Keren, which, if a musical instrument, is certainly associated with such in Dan. 3 only (A.V. cornets), either was the shophar (A.V. trumpet), i.e. a ram's or cow's horn, or resembled it; the two words are used interchangeably in Josh. 6; the shophar sounded at Sinai, and was used by Ehud, Gideon, and Saul as a call to arms. Such an instrument, like the silver clarion (chatzozerah), might be used as a summons to worship, or to accompany a shout of praise, but scarcely as accompaniment to singing. Wind-instruments are not distinctly mentioned as played by the singers. 'Trumpets' (chatzozerah, sometimes rendered cornets) seem to have been used for religious purposes by the priests alone (Num. 10. 8; ch. 15. 24 & 16. 6; 2 Chr. 7. 6 & 13. 12, 14 & 29. 26), and (so Bingham, Ant. viii. 7, 15) rather as calls to worship than as accompaniments of it; see however 2 Chr. 5. 12, 13.—Daughters.] Some infer (and from the singing women of David and Solomon, 2 Sam. 19. 35; Eccl. 2. 8) that women took part in David's Service of Song.

The simple instruments with which the three white-robed choirs (ch. 15. 27 & 2 Chr. 15. 12) accompanied their chanting of the Psalms, were probably used in masses, simultaneously or alternately—Hebrew music being presumably characterised by rhythm, time, and unison rather than by melody, tune, and harmony; if so used they would produce grand musical results (Stainer).—

According . . . to,] Variorum under (R.V. Asaph, &c., being under the king's order) the king's direction (and) of Asaph. Cp. ch. 24. 3, i.e. the three chief musicians assisted David, as the high-priests did in the matter of the priesthood. Omit to.

The rest of the 4,000 (ch. 23. 5), i.e. the less skilled singers (the scholars of v. 8), were probably divided also into 24 courses, i.e. of 155 each, associated with the several courses of skilled musicians.—Brethren,] i.e. comrades, guildsmen or clansmen, see ch. 15. 5, margin, or perhaps elder and younger families. The Heb. is not precise, but to be explained by the context.—Cunning,] See 1 Sam. 16. 18, note. 8. Lots, ward against ward,] Sept. καὶ πόρως ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν, i.e. lots of courses. 'Ward,' Heb. mishmereth (which some MSS. repeat here and some versions omit altogether) is not the word used in ch. 26. 16; it usually has one of the meanings of the word guard, viz. a guard (of men), to keep guard, a guardhouse or prison. Understanding it of watch or charge, some render lots of charge, i.e. for their duties (R.V. charges). R.V. margin. as A.V.—The rotation of these courses also was determined by lot, and vs. 9-31 show the following rotation of the three lines: A.J.A. J.A.H. A.J.H. J.H.J. H.J. and then H. to the 24th, no others remaining.—Teacher . . . scholar,] Lit. cunning with learner, i.e. skilled with unskilled.

Like the singers, the warders or porters (rather, doorkeepers; so throughout; from Lat. portarius, porta = a gate; Vulg. janitores) were 4,000 (ch. 23. 5). They formed three guilds (the sons of Meshelemiah, Obed-edom, and Hosah), but included two only of the branches of Levi, for the Gershonite guilds of Treasurers (vs. 21, 22) are not—as apparently they were after the Captivity (ch. 9. 25-29)—reckoned among the porters. Their stations—which corresponded with those in the camp (A.V. host) in the Wilderness (ch. 9. 18)—were exceptionally determined by lot (v. 13). They seem to have had a weekly rotation of service (ch. 9. 25 with 2 Chr. 23. 4, 8), coming up from their own villages (cp. the singers, Neh. 12. 28, 29). Their organisation is ascribed to David and Samuel (ch. 9. 22 only, see 1 Sam. 16. 18, note). Their duty was the guardianship of the four entrances (cp. 2 Chr. 23. 19) of God's house, which is spoken of as if the Temple already existed, partly because of the completeness and minuteness of David's 'pattern,' partly because of the historian's use of names of positions as familiarly known in his own day.—Korhites,] i.e. Korahites (ch. 9. 19, 31) of Kohath, who was privileged to carry the most holy things, the ark and other furniture and the vessels of the Tabernacle (Num. 3. 27-31 & 4. 15).—Meshelemiah,] i.e. Jah recompenseth, called in v. 14 Shelemiah, and Shallum, i.e. recompence, in ch. 9. 17.—Asaph,] Rather, as margin, Ebiasaph (see chs. 6. 37 & 9. 19). Asaph, i.e. God gathereth, is an abbreviation of Abi- or Ebi-asaph = the Father (God) gathereth, i.e. protecteth (cf. 1. C. xxvi.—29.] The officers and judges were 6,000 (ch. 23. 4).—Outward business. In Neh. 11. 16, 'outward business of the house of God' (cp. Neh. 10. 32-39), i.e. collection of tithe, tax, redemption-money, and first-fruits, provision of sacrifices, &c., is distinguished from (v. 22) 'the business of the house of God,' i.e. the singers' share in the public worship. Probably the 'outward business' here includes the former, as 'business of the Lord' (v. 30), the matters 'pertaining to God' (v. 32). Note that only Kohathite Levites are named for these duties.—Officers and judges. Heb. as in Deut. 16. 18, where provision is made for the extension of the civil and judicial administration (of Ex. 18. 13-26), when the nation should be settled in Canaan. David probably extended the system of Deut. 1. 15-17 & 16. 18 & 17. 8-13, to meet the needs of the consolidated nation (comp. 2 Sam. 8. 15).—Officers. Heb. shoterim, meaning apparently writers (scribes, or men of letters = Heb. sopherim, see ch. 24. 6, note), were apparently at first Pharaoh's Hebrew agents (Ex. 5. 6), and suggest the familiar notary or secretary of the Egyptian monuments. Afterwards, they are mentioned in connection with judges or leaders—perhaps as assistant-judges (2 Chr. 19. 11), perhaps as experts and assessors.—Judges would be local magistrates like the Oriental cadis. Both would be 'in the service of the king' (v. 30), superintendents of 'the affairs of the king' (v. 32). Perhaps both, or the remaining 1,600, were instructors in the Law of Moses. <sup>30</sup> Valour. So Heb. Ex. 18. 21, probably meaning also men morally brave, loyal, and honest (so vs. 31, 32).—Officers, &c. Rather, for the supervision. 2 S. xxiii.—1. Last words. A prophetic legacy like the blessings of Jacob and Moses: the companion and complement of the revelation in ch. 7. 12-16. David, with death in view, portrays a perfect Theocratic king, and solemnly records his conviction that, although his successors prove not such, and the blessings of such a rule be therefore withheld (v. 5), his dynasty will be established and prosper. Henceforward (notes, p. 192), psalmists and prophets, as if brooding over this portrait and the terms of the Davidic Covenant (ch. 7. 14, notes), associate the fulfilment of the Promises, Israel's hope, with the advent of a perfect Davidic king (sometimes called David, e.g. Jer. 30. 9); comp. Ps. 72; Mic. 5. 2; Isa. 9. 6, 7 & 11; Jer. 23. 5 & 33. 15-17; Ezek. 37. 25, 26 (pp. 196, 449 note, 458, 628, 669, 714, 715). And, as Solomon and the best of David's successors disappointed hope, the expectation of the pious in Israel was carried forward and elevated, while, in the retrospect, David's reign seemed the earnest of a golden age to come, for David, notwithstanding lapses and failures, upon the whole realized the ideal.—Said. The Heb. implies direct inspiration; (it is that of saith the Lord.) God Himself being represented as the speaker except here and Num. 24. 3, 4, 15, 16; Prov. 30. 1. David was a prophet (v. 2; Matt. 22. 43; Acts 2. 30).—Raised. Cp. ch. 7. 8, 9 & Ps. 89. 27, where David's elevation is described in connection with the Davidic Covenant, in the strongest terms.—The sweet psalmist. Heb.

of rest; and I will give him †rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be Solomon, and I will give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days. <sup>10</sup> <sup>k</sup>He shall build an house for my name; and <sup>l</sup>he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

<sup>17</sup> David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying, <sup>18</sup> Is not the LORD your God with you? <sup>s</sup>and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land is subdued

the Arabic Suleimán, the Assyrian Shalman, the Moabite Salamanu; Vulg. Pacificus; or Ireneus.—Peace in his days.] This climax of Hebrew prosperity is described in 1 Kin. 4. 20, 25, 'Judah and Israel were many as the sand . . . eating and drinking and making merry . . . dwell safely every man under his vine and fig tree from Dan to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon,' and in 1 Kin. 5. 4, 'God hath given me rest on every side.' † 13 implies the ordinary condition—when a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him (Prov. 16. 7).—[Quietness.] The corresponding verb occurs in Judg. 5. 31. <sup>10</sup> My . . . his.] Rather, to me . . . to him. Cf. 2 Cor. 6. 18; Rev. 21. 7. <sup>11</sup> The Lord be with thee.] Cp. the suffrage Dominus robiscum. <sup>12</sup> The prayer was answered (1 Kin. 3. 12; 2 Chr. 1. 9, 10).—And give . . . concerning.] Perhaps, when he shall set thee over Israel. Give charge means, 'lay a burden on, direct, instruct.' The Syriac and Arabic is similar. <sup>13</sup> If, &c.] Similarly, in Joshua's case, all promise of God's presence, all encouragement, were linked with performance of duty and heed to God's word (Josh. 1. 5-9; 23. 6). Here, and in 1 Kin. 2. 3, the very words of those charges are recorded. The mind of the pious Hebrew at all times reverted naturally to the early days of the Divine selection; and, at the date of the Book of Chronicles, when David's throne and Solomon's temple had passed away, Moses and the Law became more than ever the national rallying-point. <sup>14</sup> Trouble.] Of soul rather than of circumstances. Not the pau-pertas, πτωχεία of Vulg. and Sept. The same word is used in Ps. 31. 7. It is David's wont to speak in a tone of humble self-disparagement (cf. 1 Sam. 18. 23); or, he may mean, 'Troublous though my reign has been, yet, &c.;' or, possibly, the expression may be equivalent to with all my might in ch. 29. 2.—[Talents.] The value of a talent before the Captivity is uncertain, and (independent of Oriental hyperbole, cf. v. 16) Hebrew numerals are never reliable. Like lac in India, sestertium at Rome, a talent is a sum, not a coin. 100,000 times £6,000 (4,000 tons) would be an incredible amount; equally so 1,000,000 times £400 for the silver. Josephus gives 10,000 for the gold, 100,000 for the silver. If we might read shekel for talent, the amount with the present numerals would be large, but not impossible, i.e. about £260,000 and £150,000.—[Add.] Solomon did so (2 Chr. 2. 8). <sup>15</sup> Cunning.] Learned, skilled; see 1 Sam. 16. 18, note. Though Bacon does define cunning as 'a sinister or crooked wisdom,' and Locke as 'the ape of wisdom,' yet of old its commonest meaning was not knowingness, but simply knowledge. Cf. 'That errs in ignorance and not in cunning.'—Shaks. The words craft and art have similar variation of meaning. <sup>16</sup> With thee.] Pledge of success to the pious mind at all times, in all works (cf. Hag. 1. 13). <sup>18</sup> For . . . people.] A practical summary of David's reign, which sets forth its place in the history of the Monarchy (cf. chs. 18-20). The concluding words are a thank-before the LORD, and before his people. <sup>19</sup> Now <sup>t</sup>set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to "bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built" <sup>2</sup> to the name of the LORD.

ful enlargement of Josh. 18. 1. <sup>19</sup> Seek.] Heb. has seek unto (so 2 Chr. 17. 4); but seek occurs in ch. 16. 11. The true seeking of the Lord is devotion of ourselves, our powers, our 'talents,' to His service, 'Arise therefore,'—Arise . . . build.] This language of stirring encouragement suggests the post-Captivity efforts of Haggai and Zechariah to rouse the returned Jews to rebuild the Temple (cf. Ezra 10. 4).—Bring the Ark.] This he hoped would be its final removal. It had known many migrations. Its first home was Shiloh, till (with probably a temporary sojourn at Bethel during the Benjamite war, Judg. 20. 26, 27) the first battle of Ebenezer, when God in anger 'forsook' Shiloh (Ps. 78. 60), and it became 'a curse' (Jer. 26. 6). On its restoration by the Philistines, it remained a century at Kirjath-jearim (or Baale of Judah), in a house on a hill that bore the name of Abinadab (with, as some think, a temporary sojourn at Nob, 1 Sam. 21. 1). Thence David brought it, not to Gibeon, but to his new tabernacle on Zion. Manasseh degraded it from its high position, but Josiah restored it (2 Chr. 33. 7 & 35. 3). It disappears at the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar.—Is to be built.] Sept. and Vulg. have is being (cf. v. 9, note).

1 KINGS.—The two Books of Kings, like the two Books of Samuel, formed originally a single book. The Sept. in both cases made the division; which the Vulg. follows. It is purely arbitrary, Samuel includes a period of about 120, Kings of about 427, years. In both cases the author is unknown. Possibly David himself wrote the earlier book, Ezra revising it; Jeremiah (so tradition) compiled the later. Ezra would naturally avail himself of the records alluded to in 2 Sam. 1. 18; 1 Chr. 27. 24 & 29. 29; Jeremiah of those named in 1 Kin. 11. 41 & 14. 19, 29. Thus their authorship justifies their position in that portion of the Scriptures called by the Jews 'the Prophets.' The Kings contain the history of the Monarchy from David's closing years until its end, and trace the temporary eclipse of the Hebrew nation. These books supply the only materials for the history of the N. Kingdom, which the compiler of Chronicles passes over in silence, the N.

Kingdom being no more. The chronicler's work is insufficiently described by the Sept. title of it, Παραλειπούμενα (Supplement or Things left out). Like St. John's gospel, it is that, and more. It is worthy of its Hebrew title, 'History of the Times;' but it is a history written with a special object, namely, to recapitulate, supplement, and carry on the nation's story for the encouragement and edification of the little and dispirited band of exiles who had returned from Babylon; therefore it records with particularity the genealogical redistribution of the land, and the restoration of the Temple and of the public worship of Jehovah. The Davidic Monarchy having passed away, the chronicler had to present the Law and the Temple as the central bond of the nation; hence the generally Levitical tone of his narrative. 'It (writes Stanley, Jewish Church, ii., pp. 354, 360) is one of the chief Levitical books of the Hebrew Scriptures, one in which the priestly character is the most apparent. . . . The priesthood is a dynasty which began before the monarchy, almost before the prophets. It outlived the monarchy altogether. It lived on through periods when prophecy had totally ceased. It witnessed the fall of the Egyptian, Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian, and Grecian empires. It formed the rallying point of the Jewish nation in the immense void of the return from the Captivity, in the death-struggle with Antiochus; and in the last agony of the nation the High Priesthood is the last institution visible before the final crash of the system.' That Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah formed originally one book is unquestionable. The chronicler was no doubt acquainted with Kings, but he drew from various other sources of information. He (see Appendix) refers to the tale (words) of the kings of Israel and Judah as told by various writers, twice to a midrash or commentary thereupon (2 Chr. 13. 22 & 24. 27), and once to a vision (2 Chr. 32. 32).—Only such parts of the chronicler's writings are here introduced as fall distinctly within the scope of this work—a Harmony, a continuous parallel narrative, of the Hebrew Monarchies.

<sup>5</sup> Then <sup>a</sup> Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted himself, saying, I will be king : and <sup>b</sup> he prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him. <sup>6</sup> And his father had not displeased him at any time in saying, Why hast thou done so? and he also was a very goodly man ; <sup>c</sup> and his mother bare him after Absalom. <sup>7</sup> And he conferred with Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with <sup>d</sup> Abiathar the priest : and <sup>e</sup> they following Adonijah helped him.

were shortening. 'Threescore and ten' was in the days of the patriarchs by no means 'the last scene of all.' The same phrase is used of Joshua at 110. <sup>1</sup> V. 47 shows that David was also bed-ridden. If the (usual) opening word v' must be rendered and, it must not be taken to imply continuity of narrative. It links the parts of the one sacred Historian's work from Adam's day to Nehemiah's. Much had occurred since the last event recorded in 2 Sam. See 1 Chr. 22. <sup>2</sup> Cherish. Rather (and so in v. 4), become a companion unto; lit. a dweller with; without l' the word sakan has nothing of the meaning serve, or of the Sept. and Vulg. cherish. <sup>3</sup> Shunem lay a little N. of Jezreel (cf. 2 Kin. 4. 8). Abishag's story is introduced into the narrative as explaining Adonijah's death (ch. 2. 22-24), and illustrating the difficulties attendant upon Solomon's succession. The supposition that she is the Shulamite referred to in Cant. 6. 13 as beloved by Solomon is favoured by the form of Shunem's modern name, Sulcin.

1 K. i.—5. Then. For—

'Authority forgets a dying king.
Laid widow'd of the power in his eye
That bow'd the will.'—Tennyson.

Again the evils of polygamy appear. No certain rule of succession prevents factions in the army, the household, and even in the priesthood. David's promptitude (v. 32) on this occasion contrasts favourably with his timidity when conscience made him coward (2 Sam. 15. 14). His forthright enjoining all the tokens of military, royal, priestly, prophetic, and popular sanction (vs. 33, 34). This last was apparently wanting to Adonijah (cp. v. 40).—Adonijah. Probably he was the eldest living son (cf. ch. 2. 22). Amnon and Absalom, the first and third, were dead, and Chileab the second is not named after 2 Sam. 3. 3. Born at Hebron, Adonijah must now have been verging on 40. He repeats Absalom's action, but had no excuse from his father's conduct (v. 6). He regarded Solomon as his rival (v. 26), and knew Absalom's supporters. His story, no less than Absalom's, confirms Ovid's Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur, cum mala per longas convaluere moras; and refutes Rousseau's 'No kind of habits ought to be impressed on children; leave them to the natural consequences of their own actions; when reason comes to exert itself in a maturer state, all will be right.' Cf. Prov. 29. 15. <sup>6</sup> He also. Rather, also he.—And bare. Probably rather, he (David) begat. The Heb. and Sept. has either meaning; and Absalom's mother was Maacah. <sup>7</sup> Joab, knowing Bathsheba's history, may have regarded Adonijah as the rightful heir, or feared that under Solomon the Peaceful his military talents would be without scope; or still was brooding over David's late preference for Amasa, and fearing punishment one day for Amasa's murder. To Abiathar's motive we have no clue. Possibly there was jealousy between him, as rightful H.P. of the Ark and its sanctuary (cf. 2 Sam. 6. 17) at Zion, and Zadok as H.P. at the ancient Tabernacle on the High Place at Gibeon. Adonijah, later, owned that he knew himself to be in the wrong and fighting against God (ch. 2. 15; cf. 1 Chr. 22. 9, 10).

<sup>8</sup> Priest. Cf. 2 Sam. 15. 24 & 6. 18, notes.—Benaiah. Cf. 2 Sam. 8. 18 & 23. 20. From the omission here of all mention of Abishai we may infer that he was dead.—Nathan. No one was more intimately acquainted [1 K. i. 3-8.]

<sup>9</sup> And Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle by the stone of Zohelath, which is by En-rogel, and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants: <sup>10</sup> but Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon his brother, he called not.

quainted with David (2 Sam. 7. 2 & 12. 1-14, 25), or knew better which son was the Jeddiah, the Beloved of Jehovah.—Rei.] Josephus has 'David's friend,' meaning perhaps Hushai.—Mighty men.] The remains of the original band of 600, and the Heroes, formed still the nucleus of the standing army, under this name, Gibborim. These still owned David as mightiest of all, not with the might of former years, but of moral ascendancy. It is personal influence that makes any individual in any age 'the light of Israel,' and such David would be to them till his dying day. Still he was their hearts' leader, still his will was their law. <sup>9</sup> Slew.] As in early training and personal appearance (v. 6), so in his assumption of royal state (v. 5), and other preparations for usurpation, and in his using a sacrificial feast as a pretext, Adonijah resembles Absalom (2 Sam. 14. 25 & 15. 12), though a less skilled and resolute conspirator.—Zohelath.] i.e. of the serpent. The incidental mention here of this stone fixes the position of Eurogel (Spring of the fuller). He was at this time chief counsellor and chronicler. His bolder bearing, when speaking as prophet, should be noted. <sup>12</sup> Thine own life.] He must have judged Adonijah to be very unscrupulous, for Bathsheba's life could hardly be in danger while David lived. The widows of Philip and Alexander died at the hands of their sons' rivals, but that was unusual cruelty. <sup>13</sup>] David acknowledges the oath (v. 30). <sup>38</sup> So Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, <sup>a</sup> and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, went down, and caused Solomon to ride upon king David's mule, and brought him to Gihon. <sup>39</sup> And Zadok the priest took an horn of <sup>b</sup> oil out of the tabernacle, and <sup>c</sup> anointed Solomon.

And they blew the trumpet; <sup>d</sup> and all the people said, God save king Solomon. <sup>40</sup> And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent with the sound of them.

<sup>41</sup> And Adonijah and all the guests that were with him heard it as they had made an end of eating. And when Joab heard the sound of the trumpet, he said, Wherefore is this noise of the city being in an uproar?

The oil was compounded of the best spices—myrrh (the gum of Arabian thorny shrubs); cinnamon (from India); fragrant cane (? the lemon grass of India); cassia (the bark of a coarse kind of Indian cinnamon); and olive oil (Exod. 30. 23-33).—Anointed.] His second anointing is recorded in 1 Chr. 29. 22. Note how the narrative which describes the first makes no mention of the second; while that which names the second has never named the first. Henceforward, Solomon is de facto king. <sup>1</sup> So when David was old and full of days, he made <sup>a</sup> Solomon his son king over Israel.

1 CHRON. XXVIII. 1-19 & XXIX. 1-22.

1 CHRONICLES XXIII. 2.

27. 1, 2). To these the victims were bound, and the blood of the sin-offering was smeared over them, as it was also over the horns of the golden altar of incense in the Holy Place. They symbolized the power and strength that lay in this mode of approaching God, through a Saviour's blood and intercession. Exod. 21. 14 implies that any one but a murderer might find sanctuary there. There was an altar in David's tabernacle on Zion (2 Sam. 6. 17), and probably it had horns; but perhaps the holiest association would as yet be with that at Gibeon, 6 miles distant. It cannot be determined to which Adonijah (and Joab, ch. 2. 28) fled; probably to that at Gibeon. Similar 'asylum' attached to several spots in England till the Reformation, e.g. Beverley and the precincts of Westminster, which retain the name Sanctuary. <sup>51</sup> To day.] Rather, first (cf. Gen. 25. 31, 33). <sup>52</sup> If, &c.] A pardon worthy of the Peaceful king, of God's Beloved (Jedidiah). Such clemency is most unusual in the East, yet we are not to suppose it due to policy, to a lurking belief that ere long an opportunity for revoking it would occur.

1 C. xxiii.—1.] The chronicler begins his fuller account twice over. At ch. 23. 3 he interrupts himself to mention the organisation of the tribe of Levi, and the change as to the age at which they were to enter on their duties, viz. 20, instead of 30; and the names of those who had been stewards of David's property; and then resumes at ch. 28. 1. David's strength appears to have been marvellously renewed specially for this great occasion (cf. Ps. 71. 18).—Full.] Lit. satiated. Cp. 'Cur non, ut plenus vite conviva, recedis' (Lucr. 3. 951);

Dicit, et exacto contentus tempore vite
Cedat, uti conviva satur, reperire queamus.'

Hor. Sat. i. 1. 117.

Not by Solomon's path, however (Eccles. 2), had David arrived at this point.

1 C. xxviii.—1. Princes.] Rather, captains. The English language scarcely admits of uniformity of translation. The same Hebrew word (sar, lit. one whose office is arranging) is here rendered 'princes,' 'captains,' 'stewards,' 'officers'; and, elsewhere, chief, governor, keeper, lord, master, ruler, eunuch.—Companies.] More frequently rendered courses, and used of the priests and Levites, here the corps d'armée described in ch. 27.—Possession.] i.e. flocks and herds; κτῆνος is used similarly.—Officers.] Rather, courtiers.

185 [1 K. i. 51—ii. 1; 1 C. xxiii. 1, 2 & xxviii. 1.]

<sup>2</sup> Then David the king stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, my brethren, and my people: As for me, I had in mine heart to build an house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for the footstool of our God, and had made ready for the building: <sup>3</sup> but God said unto me, Thou shalt not build an house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed blood.

<sup>4</sup> Howbeit the LORD God of Israel chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath chosen <sup>k</sup> Judah to be the ruler; and of the house of Judah, <sup>l</sup> the house of my father; and <sup>m</sup> among the sons of my father he liked me to make me king over all Israel: <sup>n</sup> and of all my sons, (for the LORD hath given me many sons,) <sup>o</sup> he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel. <sup>6</sup> And he said unto me, <sup>p</sup> Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father. <sup>7</sup> Moreover I will establish his kingdom for ever, <sup>q</sup> if he be constant to do my commandments and my judgments, as at this day.

<sup>8</sup> Now therefore in the sight of all Israel the congregation of the LORD, and in the audience of our God, keep and seek for all the commandments of the LORD your God: that ye may possess this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

The Heb. sârîm, which Sept. and Vulg. render here by eunuchs, is used of officials of the court and household (e.g. in Gen. 39. 1; 2 Kin. 24. 12); of military leaders (Job 39. 25); and of Michael (Dan. 10. 21).—Mighty men. Heb. gibbôrîm; the military chiefs of ch. 11. 10-17; Sept. however (τοὺς δυνάστας καὶ τοὺς μαχητὰς τῆς στρατίας) and Vulg. (potentes, et robustissimos quosque in exercitu) seem rather to take these to be civilian magnates, and the 'valiant men' (gibbôr-chayil) to be the military Worthies. <sup>2</sup> Brethren. At the word memory would fly back to very distant days, to Ziklag (1 Sam. 30. 23). The feeling which prompted the use of it had doubtless won many hearts to David. Cf. ch. 11. 1.—Footstool. The Ark was the footstool. The Shechinah rested on it; cf. Ps. 132. 8, 14 & 99. 5. 3.] Cf. ch. 22. 8, note. <sup>4</sup> Liked. Lit. delighted in; cf. Omit for. <sup>9</sup> Know. The primary meaning of the word is to see, to be aware of. Generally in Hebrew, words of knowledge imply the exercise of the affections (cf. Ps. 1. 6 & 31. 7 & 36. 10; 1 Cor. 8. 3; and note that καρδίας, not διανοίας, is the true reading in Eph. 1. 18).—Imaginations. i.e. every form of thought; from yâtsar, to mould.—If, &c. Then surely; it may be at other times also (Isa. 63. 1), but perhaps only when the forsaking has not been deliberate; the lost sheep was sought; the lost son was moved and allowed to find; Israel, determinately joined to idols, was 'let alone.'—Cast off. Lit. loathe as an abomination. <sup>11</sup> Pat-tern. Apparently this plan was revealed by inspiration to David, and by him written houses thereof, and of the treasures thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, <sup>12</sup> and the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, <sup>2</sup> of the treasures of the house of God, and of the treasures of the dedicated things: <sup>13</sup> also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

<sup>14</sup> He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service: <sup>15</sup> even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick. <sup>16</sup> And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shewbread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver: <sup>17</sup> also pure gold for the fleshhooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason; and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver: <sup>18</sup> and for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the <sup>a</sup>cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD. <sup>19</sup> All this, said David, <sup>b</sup> the LORD made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

Solomon my son, whom alone God hath chosen, is yet young and tender, and the work is great; for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God. <sup>2</sup> Now I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of

It faced the brazen altar of burnt-offering, called in Mal. 1, 7 'the table of the Lord,' which needed no pattern, as the original one still existed at Gibeon, and probably that made by David for his tabernacle on Zion was a copy of it.—Houses.] Rather, places thereof, i.e. of the Temple (throughout), i.e. the Holy and Most Holy Places; the house and the inner house (1 Kin. 6, 27); the greater house and the most holy house (2 Chr. 3, 5, 10). See 1 Kin. 6.—Parlours.] i.e. the porch and the Holy place (Cheyne), but it may mean the side chambers, or store-houses and dwelling-places around the courts; commonly 'bed-chamber.' <sup>12</sup> By the spirit.] Rather, in his spirit (so R.V. marg., Sept., Vulg., Coc., Gen.), i.e. mind, by inspiration (v. 19).—Of the treasures.] Rather, for.

So in Latin, flumen Rhent, and in English, this our sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving (Tr. Bk.). Cf. Ellcott's note on Eph. 6, 14, 16. On the form and meaning of the cherubim see 1 Kin. 6, 23 and 2 Sam. 22, 11, notes. <sup>19</sup> Of this.] Rather, in the pattern.

1 C. xxix.—1. Palace.] Or, fortress. The word birah is only found in the post-Captivity books. It is used of the Persian king's palace at Shushan (Neh. 1, 1; Esth. 1, 2, &c.; Dan. 8, 2); but of the Temple here and in v. 19 only. <sup>2</sup> Brass.] (Cf. 2 Sam. 1 C. xxviii, 12—19 & xxix, 1, 2.)

Probably it was some bluish green stone, such as the Amazon felspar, which was much used in early times in Egypt and Assyria (Maskelyne).—To be set.] Omit the preceding 'stones'; Sept. καὶ πληρώσας λίθους πολυτελείς καὶ ποικίλους. Josephus says that in the later Temple the courts 'exposed to the air were laid with stones of all sorts' (B. J. v. 5. 2). This floor may have been mosaic; but he says it was 'laid with plates of gold' (Ant. viii. 3. 3). Vulg. renders 'garnished the house with precious stones,' in 2 Chr. 3. 6, by Stravit parimentum templi pretiosissimo marmore. Probably the glistening, veined, precious stones of all sorts and all shades (cf. gemmas pretiosas, 1 Kin. 10. 11, Vulg.) were set in the walls. The walls of many Russian churches are thick with them.—Glistening.] Cheyne would render stones of (i.e. edged with) antimony; Vulg., omitting 'to be set,' has et quasi stibinos; Heb. pâk, rendered fair colours in Isa. 54. 11, lit. black eye-paint, but used in the only other places (2 Kin. 9. 30; Jer. 4. 30) of the antimony-dye (the modern kohl), used by Orientals to dye the hands and hair, but especially to colour the eyes, and to outline them (as shewn on mummy cases); Germ. bunte steine. Glisten is from Dutch glisten, to shine (cf. Arabia), and Sheba (Arabia Felix); but the position of Ophir remains undecided. The probability is that the gold came from India, whether Ophir be there, or be some part of Arabia or of Africa, which served as the emporium; see, however, 1 Kin. 9. 28, note. Gold mines in Malacca (Aurea Chersonesus) are still called ophirs. And it is worth notice that there was an early trade even with China, for Chinese inscriptions have been found on articles in ancient Egyptian tombs (see Wilkinson, iii. p. 108, quoted in Speaker's Com. on Isa. 49. 12).—Houses.] Rather, places (ch. 28. 11). <sup>5</sup> Consecrate.] Lit. So in Ex. 32. 29. <sup>6</sup> Fathers.] Rather, fathers' houses.—Rulers, &c.] Probably the royal household and the officials of ch. 28. 1. The same Hebrew word, sar, stands for all the four titles here. <sup>7</sup> Drams.] Var. darics (11. 28.); so R.V.; meaning sums corresponding to that amount; for darics were not introduced till after the Captivity. The chronicler uses language of later date, which his readers would understand. The word adarcoim, from the Persian dara, a king (cp. sovereign), occurs only here and in Ezra 8. 27. It had a king's head, and on the obverse a kneeling archer. <sup>8</sup> By the hand.] Rather, into the hand. <sup>10</sup> Wherefore David blessed the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, Blessed be thou, LORD God of Israel our father, for ever and ever. <sup>11</sup> <sup>k</sup> Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all. <sup>12</sup> <sup>i</sup> Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. <sup>13</sup> Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

<sup>14</sup> But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee. <sup>15</sup> For <sup>m</sup> we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: <sup>n</sup> our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding. <sup>16</sup> O LORD our God, all this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own. <sup>17</sup> I know also, my God, that thou <sup>o</sup> triest the heart, and <sup>p</sup> hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, in the uprightness of mine heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with joy thy people, which are present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

wine: with a bullock, half-a-gallon; with a ram, one-third; with a lamb, one-fourth; i.e. 1083 gallons here altogether. Cf. Num. 15; Gen. 35. 14. It was probably poured on the sacrifice (περὶ τὸν θωμὸν.—Josephus). There is no distinct mention of any part of it being drunk. — Sacrifices. i.e. thank-offerings. That these consecration offerings were eaten is implied by v. 22. The verb rendered sacrificed means to slaughter for food, and it is specially used of the offerings of private persons (cf. 1 Kin. 3. 15), of which only a small part was the priest's (Lev. 7. 15, 29-34), and the rest formed a sacrificial feast for the offerer and his friends. <sup>22</sup> Second time. The first being at 1 Kin. 1. 39, and somewhat hurried and less public. — The chief governor. Iathar, ruler, as in ch. 28. 4. See 1 Kin. 1. 35.—Zadok. Thus Eleazar's line was restored, and Ithamar's set aside, and 1 Sam. 2. 35, 36 began to be fulfilled. Cf. Num. 25. 13. Abiathar retained the name of priest (1 Kin. 4. 4).

1 K. xxviii.—<sup>20</sup>. And do. i.e. set to work (at once, now, cf. ch. 22. 13) with energy and perseverance, begotten of confidence in a God never known to fail workers for Him. Cf. Gen. 28. 15; Josh. 1. 5; Heb. 13. 5.—My. Thus the shepherd, exile, soldier, king, sets up as it were a last Ebenezer, stone of help, on the very brink of the river of death.

thy sin'—contentedly, for, like Joshua, he knew his work was done—hopefully, for, like Joseph's, his trust in God's promise of the Better Land was a sure one.—Strong. 'Be resolute and calm' well expresses the force of the word; or virtuous, in the fullness of its meaning. Intrepidity and steadfastness were, it may be, features too indistinctly marked in the character of Solomon, the Peaceable. Note how the word in Joshua's case, as here, is coupled with close adherence to God's written Word (Josh. 1. 6-9). — Man. Bishop Hervey quotes 1 Sam. 4. 9 to show that this is a phrase of encouragement without reference to Solomon's youth. Solomon's age is not mentioned; but he was probably between 18 and 21 (cf. 1 Tim. 4. 12). <sup>3</sup>. Charge. Cf. Deut. 17. 18-20; 2 Sam. 23. 3-5. Possibly statutes may mean legal ordinances (Levitical or sanitary); commandments, the moral law; judgments, the civil and criminal code; testimonies (or precepts), rules regarding commemorations. But this would not correspond very well with the sixfold description of God's Word in Ps. 19. 7-9; and testimony is specially applied in Ex. 25. 16 to the Decalogue. The whole seems rather a general and comprehensive description of God's known mind and will, as in Gen. 26. 5. <sup>4</sup>. If, &c. Cf. ch. 3. 14. Just as in every command is implied the promise of heavenly aid (cf. Ex. 14. 15; Matt. 12. 13), so some condition, similar to the one here, is implied in

That charity which hopeth all things (and indeed common fairness), will lead us to hope here that it was anxiety for the stability of Solomon's throne (in one plot against which Joab had already joined), and a sense of duty cowardly neglected for expediency's sake, which prompted this charge, rather than a vindictiveness, such as few men, even the most blood-thirsty, have cherished in a dying day. Narvaez even, when dying, was ready to forgive his enemies, though the thing was impossible, because not one had escaped his living vengeance. Rawlinson's remark, therefore, 'we must not expect Gospel morality from the saints of the Old Testament,' is perhaps inapplicable to this case, though pointing to a fact which ought to be noted. <sup>1</sup> Morality in the abstract is unchangeable, yet it looks as if in the concrete there was a progressive morality—an accommodation to the ruder and earlier periods of humanity (Matt. 19. 8).—Chalmers.—Blood, &c.] The meaning is, that a deed which would have been justifiable in war, brought an indelible stain of blood in time of peace. Figuratively, Joab's murderous jealousy had left him ankle-deep in blood, and tied and bound with its guilt as with a girdle (Ps. 109. 19). Cf. 'What, will these hands ne'er be clean?'—*Shaks. Its position, somewhere within the walls, between Siloah and the lower pool of Gihon, was known in apostolic times (Acts 2. 29). Tradition (probably correctly, Tristram)

These might remain widows, but could not marry anyone except

knowest that the kingdom was <sup>b</sup>mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for <sup>c</sup>it was his from the LORD. <sup>19</sup> And now I ask one petition of thee, deny me not. <sup>19</sup> Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah.

And the king rose up to meet her, and <sup>e</sup>bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; <sup>f</sup>and she sat on his right hand. <sup>20</sup> Then she said, I desire one small petition of thee; I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother: for I will not say thee nay. <sup>21</sup> And she said, Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife.

<sup>23</sup> Then king Solomon swore by the LORD, saying, <sup>h</sup>God do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life. <sup>24</sup> Now therefore, as the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath made me an house, as he <sup>i</sup>promised, Adonijah shall be put to death this day. <sup>25</sup> And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; and he fell upon him that he died.

altar. <sup>29</sup> And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar.

Then Solomon sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him. <sup>30</sup> And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here.

And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me. <sup>31</sup> And the king said unto him, <sup>a</sup>Do as he hath said, and fall upon him, and bury him; <sup>r</sup>that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father. <sup>32</sup> And the LORD <sup>s</sup>shall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men more righteous <sup>t</sup>and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, <sup>u</sup>Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and <sup>x</sup>Amasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah. <sup>33</sup> Their blood shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and <sup>y</sup>upon the head of his seed for ever: <sup>z</sup>but upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD.

<sup>34</sup> So Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him: and he was buried in his own house in the wilderness.

<sup>39</sup> And it came to pass at the end of three years, that two of the servants of Shimei ran away unto <sup>f</sup>Achish son of Maachah king of Gath. And they told Shimei, saying, Behold, thy servants be in Gath. <sup>40</sup> And Shimei arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants: and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath.

<sup>41</sup> And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again. <sup>42</sup> And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and protested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain,

<sup>31</sup> Innocent blood.] i.e. murder undeserved. To put away blood-guiltiness by retributive punishment was a duty prescribed by the Law, and it had recently proved effectual in the case of the Gibeonites. It may be that Solomon names Joab's former crimes only, and not his abetting this rebellion, because murder was the only crime which could claim no right of sanctuary (Ex. 21. 14). The present crime gave Solomon power to do what David had not dared to attempt (2 Sam. 3. 39).

<sup>32</sup> His blood.] i.e. the blood which he shed, his blood-guiltiness, called their blood in v. 33.

1 K. iii.—1. Affinity. i.e. a relationship by marriage (Lat. affinis). The grandeur and security of Solomon's position enabled him thus to ally himself with the oldest and greatest Oriental monarchy. And a strong king of Canaan, as holding the balance between E. and W., between the powers of the valleys of the Nile and of the Euphrates, would be courted even by a great king of Egypt. But, 'after the close of the 19th dynasty, Egypt once more fell into decay, and the high priests of Amun (Ammon) at Thebes usurped the regal power. The Egyptian princess married by Solomon was apparently the daughter of a subordinate king, who reigned at Tanis (Zoan) towards the end of this period,' i.e. of the 21st dynasty (Sayce). —Pharaoh. Probably Psinaces, the king of Egypt, the next but one preceding the Shishak of ch. 14. 25. As we read of no temples to Egyptian idols, and this marriage is not censured, we may assume that his daughter became a proselyte and 'forgot her own people and her father's house;' but (cp. 2 Chr. 8. 11) he would not let her dwell where the Ark had rested. To marry a foreigner was not (with the exception of the seven peoples of Canaan, Dent. 7. 3) unlawful, Joseph, Moses, Salmon, and Boaz had done it. But it was a dangerous step, and the beginning of Solomon's ruin (ch. 11. 4). It is this wedding very probably which is celebrated in that Song of songs which further, spiritually, metaphorically, prefigures the spiritual union which is betwixt Christ and his Church. Ps. 45 also, if it have any historical origin, celebrates either this event (cp. Ps. 72 with Ps. 45. 12) or the marriage of Joram with Athaliah. —City. i.e. the stronghold of Zion. —Wall . . . round about. Solomon 'repaired the breaches' in the ancient Jebusite citadel (ch. 11. 27), and repaired or strengthened the Millo and the walls of Jerusalem generally (ch. 9. 24). <sup>2</sup> Only. This word seems to imply that there was something wrong in this. Nothing could be plainer than God's command, that all sacrifices should be offered at one chosen place (Deut. 12. 11, 14, 26, 27), to be designated, as was Shiloh formerly, and the Temple hereafter; and the reason was as plain; nothing could so effectually promote national unity or do away with any sacred associations attaching to idol high-places. Nevertheless, we may say that this law had never been strictly observed; and God had favourably accepted sacrifices offered in a variety of places. We may assume that the command was in abeyance from God's abandonment of Shiloh till the temple was built, and specially at a time when ark and tabernacle were at different places, and there were two who bore the title of H.P.; that, in fact, God's chosen place had not yet been prepared. Comp. Jer. 7. 12, 14; Ps. 78. 60, 67-69, where Shiloh and Jerusalem appear to be the only two central or sole sanctuaries in which God placed His name according to the promise of

A Psalm for Solomon.

And thy righteousness unto the king's son.

<sup>2</sup> He shall judge thy people with righteousness,

And thy poor with judgment.

<sup>3</sup> The mountains shall bring peace to the people,

And the little hills, by righteousness.

<sup>4</sup> He shall judge the poor of the people,
He shall save the children of the needy,
And shall break in pieces the oppressor.

<sup>5</sup> They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure,
Throughout all generations.

<sup>6</sup> He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass :

As showers that water the earth.

<sup>7</sup> In his days shall the righteous flourish;
And abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

Deut. 12. 11. Only, therefore, may be taken as uttered in a tone of regret, but not of censure (as later, e.g. ch. 15. 14, &c.), Jehovah had not designated a new seat of worship to succeed the ruined sanctuary of Shiloh.—[High places.] The ancient 'high places' dedicated to Jehovah must be distinguished from the idolatrous 'high places.' The popular regard for the former was too powerful even for reforming kings like Asa and Hezekiah. It was reserved to Josiah to desecrate them for ever. Neither must we confound these with the τόποι προσευχῆς named in 1 Macc. 3. 46; 3 Macc. 7. 20, the 'synagogues of God' named in Ps. 74. 8, which had no existence until after the destruction of the Temple.—[Name.] i.e. numen (Lumby). See 2 Chron. 2. 6, note. 3. Statutes of David.] Contrast the statutes of Omri (Mic. 6. 16), of the heathen (2 Kin. 17. 8).

[Ps. LXXII.—This Psalm is suited for use at this time, whether composed by David before his death, or by Ethan (Jennings), or, as is more probable, by Solomon, as the title (for should be of) says, and the allusions to a great and peaceful empire suggest, and incorporated in the volume of David's psalms, as v. 30 (the compiler's addition) must in that case be understood to say. Its reference to Christ is plain to us; how far it was so to Solomon, whether he knew that 'he spake of Him,' we cannot tell. Certainly he speaks of a glorious present as furnishing hope of a still more glorious future; certainly his righteous reign of peace formed a more fitting type than any other of the kingdom of the Prince of Peace, the Ideal, we may suppose, of every Hebrew monarch. Edward Irving said well of the Hebrew Psalms, and the remark applies as forcibly to the Prophecies, 'You will always find the language too large for the special event, the terms too magnificent, the consequences too vast and enduring; in short, you will find it to include and enclose the particulars of that special event as the hea-

'This Psalm is the culminating point of that portion of Messianic prophecy which sets forth the kingly office of the Saviour' (Speaker's Com.).—[1.] The petitions of v. 1, like those of all real prayer (cf. John 11. 42; Jas. 1. 6), are based on confidence; they assume that the answer will be favourable, and 'shall' follows in every verse, no mild optative, but confident prediction. So Hengstenberg very forcibly; the precatory rendering, as preferred by Jennings and most Editors, is given below.—[Judgments.] Heb. mishpāṭim points to justice in execution, ts'dikkāh pointing to the spirit of equity whence this springs.—[King's son.] i.e. the king, as one born to a throne; a common Orientalism. Targ. 'the course of thy judgments to King Messiah, and thy righteousness to the son of king David.' Cf. Isa. 11. 4. 2. He shall.] Rather, Let him, and so vs. 4, 8. 3. The mountains shall.] Perhaps, rather, Let the mountains; and similarly throughout to v. 8, and again vs. 16, 17. Peace and the fear of God (v. 5) will result from righteous government. Cf. Isa. 32. 17. The mountains, great and small, are named as being the noblest portion of the land, i.e. the land, ay, the best of it, the whole of it. Moutgomery's beautiful paraphrase here fails to give the exact meaning:

'Before Him, on the mountains, Shall Peace, the herald, go.'

— Bring . . . by.] Rather, bear . . . in righteousness. 5. As long, &c.]. Compare Ps. 145. 13. 6. Rain.] An echo of the 'Last words' (2 Sam. 23. 4).—[Mown grass.] Pr. Bk. reads fleece of wool; Luther, fell; Vulg. vellus; Sept. πόκος; but Amos 7. 1 is decisive as to the meaning of the word. Cf. 'Sound of vernal showers on the twinkling grass' (Shellep); so soft, so gentle, so imperceptible, so gladdening in its operations, shall be the sway of the Christ. 7. The righteous.] Or, perhaps, righteous-

75.—The Convocation at Gibeon.—Solomon's Dream and Request.

1 KINGS III. 4-15; 2 CHRONICLES I. 2-13.

<sup>a</sup> Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers.

(1 K. iii. 4-15.)

<sup>4</sup> And the king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there; <sup>a</sup> for that was the great high place: a thousand burnt offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

<sup>4</sup> But the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

<sup>7</sup> In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, Ask what I shall give thee.

<sup>8</sup> And Solomon said unto God, Thou hast shewed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me <sup>g</sup> to reign in his stead.

<sup>9</sup> Now, O LORD God, let thy promise unto David my father be established: for thou hast made me king over a people like the dust of the earth in multitude.

1 K. iii.—5. Dream.] In Eccl. 5. 7 Solomon classes dreams with vanities and vain professions. In general, their only reality is, as Aristotle says, a past impression on the mind which imagination, the only mental power not suspended during sleep, renews and dwells upon, or which some present circumstance recalls. But God-sent dreams may have no such foundation, but have to do with the future, and that of which the dreamer has had no experience, e.g. Matt. 2. 13; there can scarcely, however, have been the same reality of appearance to Solomon as to Joseph; and the wish of his dream was a reproduction of his heart's frequent desire. 7. Child.] An expression of humble diffidence; he realized the greatness of his task. Compare Jer. 1. 6-8.

<sup>10</sup> And the speech pleased the Lord, that Solomon had asked this thing.

<sup>11</sup> And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast <sup>n</sup>not asked for thyself long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies; but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment; <sup>12</sup> <sup>o</sup> behold, I have done according to thy words: <sup>p</sup>lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.

<sup>13</sup> And I have also <sup>q</sup>given thee that which thou hast not asked, both <sup>r</sup>riches, and honour: so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days. <sup>14</sup> And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, <sup>s</sup>as thy father David did walk, then I will <sup>t</sup>lengthen thy days.

<sup>10</sup> Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may <sup>h</sup>go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

<sup>11</sup> And God said to Solomon, Because this was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king: <sup>12</sup> wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee:

And I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as <sup>i</sup>none of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

Solomon's age at his accession cannot be exactly determined; the usual formula is absent. In 1 Chr. 3. 5 he is placed last of four sons of Bathsheba, perhaps because his genealogy is to be given, for from 2 Sam. 12. 24 he seems to have been born before the other three. He had married Rehoboam's mother before his accession (cp. ch. 11. 42 with ch. 14. 21), and was probably about 20 years of age. — Go out or come in. A proverbial expression, meaning to transact public business, more particularly military affairs (cp. Deut. 31. 2; 1 Sam. 18. 16; Num. 27. 17). Or he may mean simply, I know not how to comport myself. Cf. 'It is not in man . . . to direct his steps' (Jer. 10. 23). Heart i.e. mind.—Judge. Cf. 2 Sam. 8. 15, note. Happy the land whose ruler deems it his highest function to administer justice. Cyrus relates how he was specially trained to form righteous judgments.—Ven. Cyr. L. iii. 16. Cf. Ps. 72. 1-4, and Collect for Whitsunday. Solomon in his dream doubtless expressed his waking and deliberate wish. God giveth to him that hath. Solomon had wisdom enough to make him wish for more. His main desire was for practical wisdom, sagacity, clearness of judgment and intellect, 'wisdom to govern.' God added aptitude for the acquisition and use of the higher branches of philosophical knowledge, natural and moral. His circumstances were special. Under them no request could be more suitable. In general, and since John 14. 23 has been spoken, we might more fitly pray, 'Give me Thyself; for all things are contained in Thee; Thou art wisdom; Thou art wealth; Thou art power; Thou art length of days; Thou art fulness.'

Give what Thou wilt, without Thee I am poor, And with Thee rich, take what Thou wilt away.

—Great. Lit. heavy, multitudinous. 11. Understanding. Rather, discretion to understand (lit. hear). 12. Wise. Both σοφός and φρόνιμος. The word includes every phase of wisdom, from mere shrewdness up to the prophet's knowledge of God's mind. Cf. Dan. 5. 11.—Understanding. Lit. hearing; a heart that hears and drinks in Divine teaching.—Like. With one exception (Col. 2. 3). 13. Also. Cf. Matt. 6. 33; and the things 'added' are blessings just so long as they are kept in their subordinate position. 14. Lengthen. Certainly he never reached threescore and ten. Probably he was not more than 60 when he died. The promise was conditional, and forfeited by unfaithfulness. The condition is omitted

And he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and offered up burnt offerings, and offered peace offerings, and <sup>d</sup>made a feast to all his servants.

I KINGS III. 16-28.

<sup>16</sup> Then came there two women, that were harlots, unto the king, and <sup>a</sup>stood before him.

<sup>17</sup> And the one woman said, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered of a child with her in the house. <sup>18</sup> And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house. <sup>19</sup> And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it. <sup>20</sup> And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom. <sup>21</sup> And when I rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son, which I did bear. <sup>22</sup> And the other woman said, Nay; but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son.

Thus they spake before the king. <sup>23</sup> Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living. <sup>24</sup> And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king. <sup>25</sup> And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other.

in Chronicles; while, on the other hand, the appeal to God's promise made to David found in Chr., v. 9, is omitted here (cf. Ps. 72. 2, 4, 12-14). This does not show that in either case the words given were not the words actually spoken, but merely that the Spirit which directed the writers, for reasons unknown to us, and by an influence not understood by us, caused one to record one part, one another. <sup>15.</sup> Dream.] Of God's varied modes of communicating with men, previous to that most direct one, the incarnate Word (Heb. 1. 1 & 2. 3), the dream was the one which was less specially the privilege of the people of His choice (Gen. 20. 3 & 40. 5 & 41. 1; Judg. 7. 13; Dan. 2. 1). It was as though, now that angels were rare visitants, and priest and prophet were alike losing something of their prominence, God was reverting to His method of earlier days (Gen. 15. 12 & 28. 12 & 37. 5). — Ark.] Which stood now in David's new tabernacle on Zion. — Peace offerings.] Or, thank-offerings. As these must be eaten the same day (Lev. 7. 15), a feast 'before the Lord' was a concomitant of holy thanksgiving. This holy convocation was an act of consecration of the new kingdom, and a thanksgiving for its establishment as well as a service of prayer for the continuance of God's protection and blessing upon it. This act of worship was repeated at the sanctuary of the Ark in Jerusalem and followed by a coronation feast.

1 K. iii.—16-28.] An illustration of the sagacity given in answer to Solomon's prayer. <sup>21.</sup> Considered.] The word means to distinguish; it is generally rendered understand. <sup>26.</sup> Bowels yearned.] Vulg. riscera. The Hebraism is adopted into the Greek of the N.T., e.g. 'bowels of compassion' (1 John 3. 17); Sept. ἡ μήτρα, and in Gen. 43. 30, τὰ ἔγκατα; Germ. ihr mütterlich herz. The word in N.T. is always σπλάγχνα (Luke 1. 78). In French entrailles is frequent, where we

1 KINGS IV.

<sup>1</sup> So king Solomon was king over all Israel. <sup>2</sup> And these were the princes which he had ;

Azariah the son of Zadok the priest,

should use heart or feelings ; and the Italian risercere (darling) is used not dissimilarly. Yearned is the Sax. ginnan, to long for ; but the Heb. word has a wider meaning, to be warm, and expresses any intense feeling. <sup>27</sup> The mother.] Maternal affection might be trusted to lead to the truth, as did the instinct of bees (as to which of two wreaths was artificial) in the Talmud story ; to know the wisdom of trusting to such a test, and to dare to trust, this was the wisdom and the greatness of Solomon. <sup>28</sup> [Of God.] May mean exceeding great (cf. 1 Chr. 12, 22, note) ; but more probably God-given (cf. v. 9, note).

1 K. iv.—1. Israel.] Cf. 1 Kin. 11, 42, note. 'This chapter describes the state of the kingdom not at any particular time, but during the whole period of Solomon's greatest prosperity.' The expression 'all Israel' is not peculiar to any writer or any period. It is used in the Pentateuch of the nation before Judah was in any way separated from the other tribes, of Israel and Judah when united, of Israel alone after the disruption, and of the tribes that returned after the Captivity. <sup>2</sup> These.] At what date these were the sārīm, or court officials, is a little uncertain. Solomon's sons-in-law are named, but also Abiathar is called priest. Cf. ch. 2, 27.

—Son.] Really Azariah, afterwards H. P., was grandson of Zadok. 'Son' in Hebrew often means 'grandson,' and even 'their' only. —Priest.] i.e. the High Priest. Probably this Azariah officiated at the dedication of the Temple (the text at 1 Chr. 6, 10 being dislocated), and was H. P. when this list received its present form. On kohen, cf. 2 Sam. 8, 15, note ; it is rendered principal officer in

'We may think of them as writing the king's letters, drawing up his decrees, managing his finances' (Bib. Dict.). Called 'the king's scribe' (2 Kin. 12, 10, &c.). The order of scribes, i.e. transcribers of Holy Writ and the governing class after the Captivity, had not yet arisen. The transition is traceable in the record-writers of Hezekiah (Prov. 25, 1) and perhaps in Jer. 8, 8.—Recorder.] Or, remembrancer, i.e. annalist, historiographer. Cf. 1 Chr. 16, 4, note. He held the same office under David. <sup>4</sup> Benaiah.] Formerly captain of the Cherethites and Pelethites ; now Joab's successor. The only military official named here ; but see Sept. addition to v. 6. Civilians occupy the prominent place among the officials of the peaceful king, soldiers among those of the 'man of war' (2 Sam. 8, 16 & 20, 23).—Zadok . . . Abiathar . . . priests.] Probably inserted as having been H. P. at the outset of Solomon's reign. <sup>5</sup> Nathan.] If David's son, ancestor of Jesus (cf. Luke 3, 31), and probably he was so, for the title 'the prophet' is not used, and David's sons are called kohen in 2 Sam. 8, 18.—The officers.] i.e. those of rs. 7–19 (same Hebrew word).—Principal officer. Lit. priest (see v. 2, note 'priest').—Friend.] As Hushai had been David's (see 2 Sam. 15, 37 & 16, 17). Privy councillor is one of a council. Only one friend or companion is named. Equerry would be nearer, but not sufficiently dignified, aide-de-camp too military, attendant too mean. <sup>6</sup> Over the household.] i.e. Lord high chamberlain, as Joseph to Pharaoh. This officer.

7 And Solomon had twelve officers over all Israel, which provided victuals for the king and his household: each man his month in a year made provision. <sup>8</sup> And these are their names:

<sup>12</sup> Baana the son of Ahilud; to him pertained Taanach and Megiddo, and all Beth-shean, which is by Zartanah beneath Jezreel, from Beth-shean to Abel-meholah, even unto the place that is beyond Jokneam:

<sup>13</sup> The son of Geber, in Ramoth-gilead; to him pertained <sup>h</sup>the towns of Jair the son of Manasseh, which are in Gilead; to him also pertained <sup>i</sup>the region of Argob, which is in Bashan, threescore great cities with walls and brasen bars:

No such service was known in the earlier days of David; but this office had existed ten years or more (2 Sam. 20. 24). It may be that David's census had in view a better organization of this service (1 Chr. 21. 6); but it was under Solomon that it became oppressive (ch. 12. 4). Cp. 1 Chr. 22. 2; ch. 5. 13, note. Solomon's public works were many. Cf. 2 Sam. 20. 24, note; ch. 5. 14. It stood on the narrow strip of coast between the Plain of Sharon and Carmel (1-1½ miles wide), bounded, indeed shut off, by Carmel on the east. The ruins of the port are traceable, and ruins of the ancient town cover the heights to the N. These chariot-horses and dromedaries for couriers were distributed throughout the cities of the land (ch. 9. 19 & 10. 26), probably in the level country, in commanding situations, e.g. Lachish (2 Kin. 14. 19), Beth-shean and Megiddo in the vale of Jezreel (Josh. 17. 16; 2 Kin. 9. 37).—Charge. i.e. his appointed month (v. 27). <sup>29. Their wisdom is illustrated by the Book of Job, 'the greatest' of the Beni-kedem (Job 1. 3). The learning of Egypt (Acts 7. 22) included geometry, medicine, astronomy, architecture, and metaphysics (Herod. ii. 84, 109). <sup>31. The name of Ethan occurs in 1 Chr. 6. 44; Ps. 89, title; of Heman in 1 Chr. 15. 17 & 25. 5; Ps. 88, title. Possibly Mahol should rather be rendered song. These 'wise men' cannot be identified. It is generally agreed that they were probably contemporary with Solomon; two may have been (so Hengstenberg) David's musicians; all may be included (so Jennings) in the 'old men' of ch. 12. 8. <sup>32.</sup> A very small portion of Solomon's writings remains. Besides parts of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Canticles, see heading of Ps. 72 & 127. Solomon's secular writings would find no place in Holy Scripture. Cf. 2 Sam. 1. 18, note. The Jews assert that a copy of Solomon's writings came into Aristotle's hands, and that he incorporated much into his works. The Psalter of Solomon is apocryphal.—Proverbs. It is to be noticed (in viewing Solomon as a type of Christ) that the two words παροιμία and παραβολή are used interchangeably in N.T., both representing one Hebrew word. Some would render fables. <sup>33. Cedar.</sup> Cf. 2 Sam. 7. 2, note. i.e. from the prince of trees to the humble wall plant. Cp. Jer. 22. 6, &c. The word, however, may mean simply Phœnician, as with the Latin poets. Homer and Herodotus testify to the metal-work, embroidery, and to the general pre-eminence in art and science of the Sidonians. Their work in timber is celebrated by Ezekiel (27. 5, 6). <sup>7</sup> The Lord.] In owning Jehovah as not merely God of Israel, but as Creator (Chr. v. 12), probably Hiram meant to identify Him with his own chief god Melkarth; or it may be merely that the translator into Hebrew rendered Melkarth by Jehovah. Similarly, Cyrus' proclamation (in Ezra 1. 2) probably ran in Persian 'Ormazd, God of heaven.' All nations recognise a Supreme Being, but give Him a name and attributes according to their knowledge (cp. Acts 17. 24-30). So far Hiram with his imperfect knowledge could meet Solomon with his greater degree of religious knowledge on common ground. <sup>8</sup> The things, &c.] They included Hiram, his master-workman (see Chr. r. 13), a man (born of a Jewish mother, ch. 7. 14; 2 Chr. 2. 14), like Bezaleel

(Ex. 31. 2), Michael Angelo, Albrecht Dürer, and others, master of many arts; and, besides, cedar, fir (i.e. berosh, which includes Aleppo pine and cypress), and algum (Sanskrit valguka) wood (i.e. the red sandal of ch. 10. 11, not the fragrant white sandal), which does not grow on Lebanon, but was imported by the Tyrians from India. There is no mention of iron in the work for the tabernacle. The temple absorbed much in nails and cramps (1 Chr. 22. 3).

Food.] Compare Acts 12. 20, 'because their (the Phœnician) country was nourished by the king's (Herod's) country.' Phœnicia, a narrow strip of coast between the mountains and the sea, the centre of ancient commerce, could not supply itself with food, though Mt. Lebanon was probably, as now, marvellously developed by terrace-cultivation. <sup>10</sup> Gave.] Thus, 'the daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gift' began to be verified; while in the admission of Tyrians to be fellow-labourers we may see a foreshadowing of the Epiphany. <sup>11</sup> Wheat . . . oil.] On 'measures' see App. Solomon's own household consumed far more. Cf. ch. 4. 22. Twenty cors of oil = 1,280 gallons. A different quantity is named in Chr. A bath is 6 gallons, the same as the ephah in dry measure.—Pure.] The word is so rendered nowhere else. It means bruised. Olives pounded in a mortar would yield purer oil than those crushed in the press. <sup>12</sup> Wisdom.] As in other matters, so in methodical arrangement.—League.] For breach of this Tyre was punished later (Amos 1. 9). <sup>13</sup> Levy . . . of Israel.] Heb. tribute of men. Cf. ch. 4. 6; 2 Sam. 20. 24. One forty-fourth of the adult men. Although this partial employment was not equivalent to bond-service (ch. 9. 22), yet no doubt this exaction, now extended to Hebrews, was the beginning of the 'grievous yoke,' the planting of the tree whose fruit was rebellion (cf. ch. 12. 4), preceded by the [1 K. v. 10-17; 2 C. ii. 17, 18.]

murder of Adoram the chief officer of the levy. It had been foretold (1 Sam. 8. 16). David had employed resident aliens only (1 Chr. 22. 2). In 1837 the Pasha of Egypt procured timber from Lebanon in a similar way. 250 men felled the trees; 500 trimmed them; 1,200 transported them. Thus 60,000 trees of various sorts reached the coast in one year. Their pay was three piastres (<sup>7</sup>/<sub>10</sub> d.) per day, but one-third was paid in corn. The Suez Canal was largely made by levies of Egyptian fellahen. <sup>15</sup>] These 'strangers' were the remnant of the 7 nations of Canaan, condemned to be slaves to the Hebrews. They worked continuously; the 'levy' was a tax in labour on the Hebrews. <sup>16</sup> Three thousand three hundred.] With 550 chief officers (ch. 9. 23), making the same total as Chron., 3,600 and 250 chiefs (2 Chr. 8. 10).

1 K. vi.—1. In the 480th . . . Egypt.] These words are found in Fulg. and Sept. (440th), but not in Origen's quotation of this passage, nor in Josephus, nor in Clem. Alex. From 1491, the 'received' date of the Exodus, to 1012, that of Solomon's 4th year, would be 479 years. These dates have been 'received' probably on the strength of this verse, confirmed roughly by a backward calculation from the received date of Cyrus' accession (viz. 536 + 70 (the Captivity) + 387 (to the Disruption) + the 36 remaining years of Solomon's reign = 1029), confirmed further by Egyptian and Assyrian chronology. Four considerations have led some to suppose that the words here are an incorrect interpolation: (1) Their omission by Origen, &c., which is unaccountable; (2) the fact that the years supplied in Scripture for this interval amount to near 600, even though the duration of several periods is not stated; (3) the fact that Jos. Ant. viii. 3. 1 gives 592; and (4) St. Paul's seeming, in A.V. of Acts 13. 20, to agree with Josephus [viz. 'judges about the space of 450 years' + 3 forties for the wilderness-life, Samuel's judgeship (?), and David's reign + 18 for Joshua's judgeship + 4 = 592]. This last consideration, however, is not weighty, for the true reading of Acts 13. 20 is, there can be little doubt, 'chose our fathers . . . gave them their land for an inheritance,' ὡς ἔπει τετρακοσίοις καὶ πενήκοντα, meaning (Dengel) that 450 years was the period from the birth of Isaac to the division of the land (received dates 1897—1444); and the other three, though weighty, are not conclusive.—Zif] The second month of the sacred year, which began with the Passover in Abib, answering partly to April partly to May; the principal harvest month, especially of barley-harvest; the eighth of the civil year, which began with Tisri, seed-time.—House.—

THE SITE.—This was Moriah (appearance of Jehorah—the paronomasia in Chron. 2. 1 is not to be overlooked); the scene of God's appearance to David, and, according to Josephus (whose statement is rejected by Stanley, accepted by Tristram), the scene of Abraham's sacrifice. Time and war, reducing elevations, filling hollows, have done much to change the aspect of the site. The crest of the hill (2,650 ft. above the sea) is about 300 ft. above the Kedron; but the Tyropeon Valley (i.e. valley of the Tyrians, or possibly of the cheesemakers), between Sion the western summit and Moriah the eastern, which rendered Moriah an inaccessible rock, has been filled up to the depth of 120 ft. in the southern part, and completely in the northern. So also has the valley on the N. or Bezetha side. Moriah is no longer a separate hill, but merely the centre and highest portion of the eastern ridge. Originally there was a mound of rock, rising 5 or 10 ft., in the centre of this ridge, having only a narrow platform (50 or 60 ft.) on the crest, the reputed site of Abraham's altar for Isaac and of Aarahab's threshingfloor. This is now called the Sakhra. Round it Solomon raised a vast platform, supported partly by massive piers and arches, tier above tier, and partly by walls of stupendous masonry mortised into the rock with great ingenuity, and filled in with stones and earth. The wall of this platform (now called the Haram Area) still exists, and also the ascending subterranean passage under the temple platform, which led perhaps from the palace to the temple, and may be the 'ascent' named in ch. 10. 5. Two bridges spanned the ravine at the S. end; one, known as Robinson's, near the S.W. corner (which is an exact right angle), just below the Jews' Place of Wailing; the other, known as Wilson's, 600 ft.

further N., near the causeway leading from the Bab-es-Sileilah (Gate of the chain). The Haram measures 1,550 ft. N. to S. by 950; 33 acres, i.e. about twice the area of Lincoln's Inn Fields, or six times that of Nottingham Market: and is now almost level. At about the middle of it, on the W., a paved platform, 540 by 450 ft., rises 15 ft., called now Kubbet-es-Sakhrāh (Dome of the Rock). 'The stones, some 15 ft. by 4 ft., some marked with Phœnician characters, were placed ready dressed' (Besant, pp. 55-57). 'We must attribute the whole of the known walls of the Haram to Herod and later builders' (Petrie, 1890).

THE FABRIC.—Its size and form are in some particulars not distinctly stated. It was designed to be of the same form as the tabernacle (Wisd. 9, 8), and was of double the size. At the W. stood the Most Holy Place, or Oracle, answering to the Second Tabernacle, called the Holy of Holies (Heb. 9, 3-7), a chamber 20 cubits square and 20 cubits high to the ceiling; 30 cubits presumably to the ridge, for there is no reason to suppose that one portion of the tabernacle was higher than the other. Before it the Holy Place or Temple, exactly twice its size; to the ceiling a double cube of 20 cubits. On the N., W., and S. sides of these (which together formed the House) were built three stories of chambers, with beams not thrust into the holy walls, but resting on ledges projecting from them. Each chamber was five cubits high, a winding stair leading to the two upper ones. It is not stated whether they had an uninterrupted length of 60 cubits, or were divided into rooms or cells, nor yet whether they had windows. 2 Chr. 3, 9 may mean that the highest of these was overlaid with gold, though it would be difficult to assign any reason for it. The Holy Place, or 'temple of the House,' i.e. of the whole building, answering to the First Tabernacle, called the Holy Place (Heb. 9, 2), was lighted by narrow windows, like clerestory windows, placed in the upper part of the five cubits of wall above these chambers. The wall of the House was probably four cubits thick on the ground, diminishing every five cubits of its height by one cubit, taken off as rest for chamber-joists. The Most Holy Place had no windows (ch. 8, 12). On the E. of the House, and of the same width with it, was the Porch, 10 cubits deep, probably 20 cubits high (Robins suggests 30, in Builder, Jan. 9th and 16th, 1886), and open at the sides (compare the front of the Madeleine, &c.). It was supported by two pillars (ch. 7, 21). If the height given in Chr. (120 cubits) be correct, it would resemble rather a lofty tower (the height of the spire of St. Martin-in-the-Fields' Church) than a porch (alam = prónaos, porticus; cf. v. 33, note), and be altogether unoriental in character. Nothing is said as to its roof, whether flat or sloping, or indeed as to the roof of any part of the building. The roof of the Tabernacle must have been sloping, otherwise only a small part of some of the gorgeous curtains would have been visible, the whole would have sagged in an unsightly manner, and rain would certainly have come through. We may conclude therefore that the roofs of Temple-porch, Holy and Most Holy Place, and Chambers, all sloped. Some have indeed supposed that the upper-chambers (ὑπερῶνα) named in 1 Chr. 28, 11 and 2 Chr. 3, 9 were over the Most Holy Place (Wordsworth), or over the whole House and Porch. If so (and Josephus says, There was another building erected over it, equal to it in its measures), they must have been in the roof, betwixt ceiling and ridge. The skill of those times would hardly compass the supporting of a ceiling measuring 90 ft. by 30 without pillars. [The temple of Jupiter at Thebes measures 1,400 ft. by 300; but, as is the case generally in Egyptian temples, the roof is supported by a profusion of pillars.] If there were pillars within the House, they would probably stand six cubits from either wall, leaving a centre aisle of eight cubits, and the probable number would be four in the Most Holy Place, 10 in the Holy Place. Proportion, workmanship, costliness were the beauty of this House of God, not size, or light, or colour.

THE FITTINGS AND CONTENTS.—In the Most Holy Place stood the Ark (containing the Commandments, but no longer Aaron's rod and the Manna-pot) with its overshadowing cherubim of gold, and at the entrance of it (comp. v. 22 with Ex. 30, 6) the golden altar of incense; for the emblem of the prayers of His people must ever be 'before the throne' (Rev. 8, 3), 'before God' (Rev. 9, 13), very near to God's presence. This, perhaps, is why St. Paul (Heb. 9, 4) seems to speak of it as actually in the Holiest Place. It was entered by the H.P. alone, and by him only on the great day of atonement, and 'not without blood.' In the Holy Place were 10 golden candlesticks and the tables (2 Chr. 4, 19) of Shew-bread. Before it stood the Sea of brass (supported on 12 oxen), 10 lavabes, and the brazen altar of burnt sacrifice. Before the porch stood the two brass pillars named in ch. 7, 15. The 'pattern,' even to very minute particulars, was, as in the case of the Tabernacle (Ex. 25, 9), of God's own providing (1 Chr. 28, 19). Whence did Solomon take his idea of the building is a question we are forbidden to ask. Nevertheless, those styles with which he was acquainted may have had their influence to some extent; 'whatever fair and splendid' Phœnicia, Egypt, Assyria, even Persia (1 Chr. 29, 1) could produce would be known to Solomon. Possibly the idea of the pillars before it, such as mark Phœnician sanctuaries at Tyre and elsewhere (cf. στήλαι δύο, ἡ μὲν χρυσοῦ ἀπέφθου, ἡ δὲ σμαράγδου λίθου, Herod. 2, 44), was due to Huram, as well as the workmanship (ch. 7, 41). The Egyptian Thebes contained buildings strikingly like the Temple, as to courts, cloister, porch, succession of

TEMPLE.

The Fabric.

<sup>2</sup> And <sup>b</sup> the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits. <sup>3</sup> And the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house;

And ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

<sup>3</sup> Now these are the things wherein Solomon was instructed for the building of the house of God. The length by cubits after the first measure was threescore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

<sup>4</sup> And the porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, chambers and dark Sanctissimum (Stanley adds 'pyramidal form,' quoting Ezek. 42. 6, but in this Temple the wider chambers were above). Sculpture in mixed wood and metal was specially prevalent in Assyria (Ferguson).

THE COURTS.—There were two courts around it (v. 36; 2 Chr. 4. 9). The 'inner' was also the 'upper' (Jer. 36. 10), being raised on a platform three cubits high (Jos. Ant. viii. 3. 9), constructed of three layers of bevn stone (v. 36) and planked with cedar. It was known also as the 'court of the Lord's house' (Jer. 26. 2), and 'the court of the priests' (2 Chr. 4. 9), into which the laity might not enter. No doubt it measured twice the size of the Tabernacle court, viz. 200 cubits from E. to W., and 100 from N. to S., i.e. about an acre. It was surrounded by a wall 10 cubits high. The 'outer' was larger, perhaps 33 acres. It was called 'the great court.' There the people could assemble in large numbers and be addressed from the elevated doorway of the inner court (Jer. 19. 14). 2. Threescore, &c.] i.e. 30 yds.  $\times$  10  $\times$  15, with a porch of 5 yds.  $\times$  10, roughly. The height is not given in Chron., but the porch is called 120 cubits (probably the reading should be 20; Josephus, however, says that the porch was higher than the rest). The arrangements are identical, but the measurements are exactly double those of the Tabernacle; but, after all, the building is a very small one, not being intended for congregations; these assembled in the courts. Westminster Hall measures 96 yards  $\times$  22  $\times$  36. The walls of the Roman Basilica at Treves are 30 yds. high. 'The Temple's magnificence did not consist in size, but in the preciousness of the materials, the richness of the ornament, the excellency of the workmanship, and in the number, extent, grandeur, and substantial masonry of its surrounding courts, chambers, and walls,' and in its commanding site, and harmony of proportions.—Cubits.] Chron. v. 3 (according to the ancient standard) shows that the old (Mosaic) cubit is intended, not the Babylonian. Ammah means the forearm (Lat. cubitus, elbow), i.e. from the elbow to either the knuckles or the finger-tips, reckoned as two spans, or 19 or 21 in. [Nearly all the Hebrew measures are borrowed from the human body. The cubit probably varied as the ell, which has the same origin and meaning (cf. Germ. elbogen), but the smallest, i.e. the Flemish, ell measures 27 in.] For rough measurements  $\frac{1}{2}$  yd. would be sufficiently accurate; in other cases 20 in. would be a fair approximation.

2 C. iii.—3. Now these . . . instructed.] Rather, Now this is the foundation which Solomon laid (so Vulg.), or, perhaps, the dimensions or ground-plan.—First measure.] Rather, ancient measure, i.e. probably the Mosaic or legal cubit. This passage implies the recognition of two cubits of different length. (Perhaps a third is meant by the cubit of a man, Deut. 3. 11; but that probably means the current, customary cubit.) 'We should be disposed to identify the new measure implied here with the full Egyptian cubit of 28 digits (of which existing specimens vary from 20 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 21 inches)—the old measure and Ezekiel's (41. 8 & 40. 5) cubit with the Mosaic or lesser cubit of 24 digits, and the 'cubit of a man' with the third cubit of 23 digits of which Thénis speaks.—Bib. Dict. 4. An hundred and twenty.] It may be that the text is corrupt. The omission of the word 'cubits' here, and of this number in Kings, is suspicious. Sept. (Cod. Alex.), Arab., and Peshito read 'twenty'; Thénis and Keil suggest 'thirty' (the height of the rest of the house); but Wordsworth, Ferguson, Ewald, and Stanley accept 120; Josephus (Ant. vii. 3. 2) says 120, and further (Ant. xv. 11. 1) distinctly states that the 2nd Temple was 60 cubits lower than the 1st; and it was 60 cubits high (Ezra 6. 3).

1 K. vi.—3. Temple.] (cf. v. 17, note). The Porch in front of the nave was as wide as the nave, and half that width in depth ('breadth'). The porch is described and measured as an independent unit placed across the end of the nave. 4. Narrow.] Lit. narrowed; Var. with closed crossbeams; R.V. fixed

<sup>7</sup> And <sup>f</sup> the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.

<sup>8</sup> The door for the middle chamber was in the right side of the house: and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

<sup>9</sup> So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house with beams and boards of cedar.

The side buildings (on three sides, that of the entrance being excepted) consisted of three stories or tiers of chambers (comprising probably the priests' bed-chambers or storehouses for temple-properties, 1 Chr. 28. 12), resting on ridges on the wall to avoid the walls being pierced by beams; hence the top story was wider by two cubits than the bottom one.—Oracle. Not exactly the word used in 2 Sam. 16. 23, but debir (from dabar, to speak), as the place of utterance whence the Divine Word had been heard (Ex. 25. 22; Num. 7. 89) by Moses, and still the dwelling-place of the Testimony, the ten Words, whereby comes the knowledge of sin. It occurs only in chs. 6 & 7 & 8; 2 Chr. 3 & 4 & 5; Ps. 28. 2; and means the Most Holy Place. See p. 215, note. Cf.—

The expression is repeated at v. 14, after a parenthesis concerning the conditions of God’s promise.—Covered. Rather, covered in. It is said in Wisdom (9. 8), ‘Thou hast commanded me to build a temple upon thy holy mount, and an altar in the city wherein thou dwellest, a resemblance of the holy tabernacle, which thou hast prepared from the beginning.’ Most Jewish writers take this to mean ‘a pattern of the heavenly temple,’ what St. Paul calls (Heb. 8. 5) ὑποδείγμα καὶ σκία τῶν ἐπουρανίων, and again (Heb. 9. 24), ἀντίτυπα τῶν ἀληθινῶν. Others take it to mean that, as the tabernacle was made after the pattern shown to Moses in the mount, so the temple was (material and size excepted) to be exactly after the model of the tabernacle. If so, the covering would unquestionably be a sloping roof. ‘A pitched

This was the basis of the Hebrew Monarchy. The old meaning of to ceil was to wainscot or panel. 'House' is here limited to the Holy Place. 'Temple,' literally Hall, corresponds to our Nave; Oracle to our Chancel (in the strict use of that word, i.e. not what is more properly called the Quire, but the Sacramentary or Bema within the rails, cancelled). In vs. 3, 5, & 33 House includes both.

Cf. 'A country-seat upon a knap of ground' (Bacon). Chancer uses it for bud and for button (Germ. knoff); Wieland for taches (catches, fastenings) in Exod. 26. 11. Vegetable forms of ornament were common in Egypt (lotus and flowers) and Persia; not in Assyrian architecture. — Open] Rather, budding. So also vs. 29, 32, 35. To imitate nature is at once the earliest and the latest effort of the sculptor's, the carver's, or the painter's art. <sup>20</sup> In the forepart] Apparently equivalent to 'within' in vs. 18, 19, 21, 29, 30, where the word is the same, meaning strictly face. The enbe was the Greek emblem of perfection. Simonides describes the ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς as τετραγώνος. The same word is used in the mysterious description of the Holy City in Rev. 21. 16, where, if we may so say, the notion of its perfection is exaggerated by the additional and impossible statement, that the length and breadth and height of it are equal. — Overlaid] The gold would be fastened in laminated plates to the cedar linings, or hammered upon the carved wood (v. 35); these being probably the only modes of gilding then practised. — Pure gold] It took 600 talents = £3,600,000. Solomon's yearly revenue was 666 (ch. 10. 14). Gold is fine, pure (in 2 Chr. 9. 20, lit. shut up, i.e. choice), of U-phaz (Ophir) and Parrnaim (a word possibly connected with the Sanskrit pūrva, eastern). The overlaying with gold and silver, and garnishing with precious stones prevails still to a marvellous extent in Russian churches. — Which was of] Rather, with. It was, no doubt, stone beneath. Another reading of the text gives, 'And he caused the veil by means of chains of gold to pass before the oracle.' Cp. Chron. (v. 14), where only the veil is mentioned.

See Farrar's Early Days, Exeours. xi. <sup>23</sup> Cherubims] As by the title 'Lord of hosts' (1 Sam. 17. 26, note), so by these mysterious forms, our minds are turned to 'the powers of the Lord.' Angels may be included in the 'hosts,' may be represented by 'cherubim,' but not angels alone. The cherubim at the gate of Eden (Gen. 3. 24), the seraphim of Isaiah's (6. 1-7) vision, and these two cherubim in the Most Holy Place (1 Pet. 1. 12), might very well be angels. So too, possibly, the ῥῶα of St. John's vision (Rev. 4. 6-8 & 5. 8, 9), but hardly the chayyoth of Ezekiel's (1. 5-25 & 10. 20) vision, or the cherubim in the Holy Place (v. 29), where, united with palms and open flowers, after the Phœnic-

Assyrian manner, they seem rather to represent the generative powers of Nature; or, we might say, Life, κατ' ἐξοχήν—life in its essence, every form of which exists only for God's glory; the ζῶα of St. John (Rev. 5. 14) say 'Amen' to the song of praise raised by πάν κτίσμα. Milton (Par. L. vi. 734) speaks of 'cherubic shapes;' but of that shape Josephus (Ant. viii. 3. 3) says, 'No man can tell, or even conjecture, what it was.' Moses received no instructions as to shape, yet they appeared in the Tabernacle much as in the Temple, viz. one (Ex. 25. 18-20; Heb. 9. 5; 2 Chr. 3. 13) on either side the Mercy-seat (which there they faced, bent over with reverent curiosity, while here they face the vail, as though the thine were drawing nearer when they might tell out to men what their gaze, of already near 500 years, had taught them of redemption's scheme), and others (Ex. 26. 1, 31) on the vail and on the curtains, 'the work of the pattern-weaver.' Why they had no place in the second Temple we cannot tell; their form must still have been in many a memory besides Ezekiel's (10. 20); probably it was due to superstitious misunderstanding of the second commandment. We should not, it is likely, be wrong in assigning to them, sometimes (as Art for the most part has done) a form resembling the human form, with eyes and wings designed to indicate a higher intelligence and a greater activity of service; and sometimes a form merely symbolic, resembling only in part any things that we know, and resembling those things only for the sake of symbolizing the highest faculties of created beings, human intellect, the vis of the lion, the robur of the ox, aspiration as of the soaring eagle, that makes for the sun on which it gazes. Devotion to God of all that is beautiful or serviceable—this seems to be their lesson. The pictorial method of communicating truth suited the earlier ages of the world's history. While the general emblematic character of these 'cherubim of glory,' 'symbols of worship' (Fairbairn), is unquestionable, only rashness will venture to 'speak particularly' (Heb. 9. 5) or positively. Derivation (?) Egyptian karabu (= to shape), or Heb. qārōb (= near, sc. to God). Josephus uses both the masc. and fem. article with it, Philo always the neuter. Probably the popular misconception of a 'cherub' as the personification of childlike gentleness is due (Jennings) primarily to the absurd notion of some Rabbins that ē'roab = ē'rabi (like a child). The Hebrew plural ends in im; the ending in (in the Te Deum) is Aramaic.—Olive tree.] Rendered pine in Neb. 8. 15; but rightly in Isa. 41. 19 oil tree or oleaster (Elaeagnus angustifolius). Totally different from the olive, except in appearance; leaves, long, narrow, bluish, silvery white below; oil, inferior. Heb. ētz shamen, not zait; Gk. κυπάρισσος, not ἐλάδα. The wood is fine and hard, and the tree is common throughout Palestine. <sup>25</sup> Size.] Rather, shape; ch. 7. 37 also.

<sup>31</sup> And for the entering of the oracle he made doors of olive tree: the lintel and side posts were a fifth part of the wall. <sup>32</sup> The two doors also were of olive tree; and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims and palm trees and open flowers, and overlaid them with gold, and spread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm trees.

<sup>33</sup> So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive tree, a fourth part of the wall. <sup>34</sup> And the two doors were of fir tree: the <sup>7</sup> two leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding. <sup>35</sup> And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers: and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work.

The Courts.

<sup>36</sup> And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams. <sup>9</sup> Furthermore he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

<sup>37</sup> In the fourth year was the foundation of the house of the LORD laid, in the month Zif: <sup>38</sup> and in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, which is the eighth month, was the house finished throughout all the parts thereof, and according to all the fashion of it. So was he <sup>7</sup> seven years in building it.

Within and without. i.e. both in the Most Holy and in the Holy Place. <sup>31.</sup> Perhaps the meaning is that at the back of the veil was the wooden partition wall of the Holy of Holies, with an entrance door occupying a fifth part of it. But if the meaning is that the lintel was one-fifth of the width of the wall, and the door posts one-fifth of its height, the doors would be six feet square and of very mean appearance. It may mean that they were one-fifth of its thickness. Vulg. postesque angularum quinque, and in v. 33, quadrangulatos; Sept. στοαὶ τετραπλῶς. The majesty of folding-doors lies in solidity and height. Egyptian temple doors, however, are very small; and Orientals generally exclude sun and light. There are several allusions in the Psalms to the trees planted in the larger court. Dent. 16. 21 does not prohibit trees, but Asherahs (cf. ch. 11. 5, note); and the use of the plural, courts, in Ps. 92. 13 points rather to the Temple than to the Tabernacle. The green olive, the flourishing and fruitful palm, the spreading cedar would fitly symbolize frequenters of God's house (Ps. 52. 8 & 92. 12, 14); and the twitter of the sheltered bird might awaken feelings well suited to the spot (Ps. 84. 3). <sup>38.</sup> Bul (rain) was the eighth month of the sacred year. is no doubt an error. The Heb. words are not unlike. <sup>25</sup>] Similarly the great stone fountain in the Alhambra rests upon the back of lions. <sup>26</sup> Handbreadth.] Or, palm, about 3½ in. — With . . . lilies.] Rather, like a lily flower (as Chr. marg.; Vulg. labium illius erat quasi labium calicis vel repandi lili). — Two thousand baths.] About 17,250 gallons; 7,000 gallons would be a more likely content, judging by the dimensions. <sup>27</sup> Bases.] Laver (v. 38) and pedestal, and wheel (v. 32) united would amount to 7½ cubits (11 or 12 ft.) in height, nearly the level (15 ft.) of the brazen altar. Either, therefore, the water was drawn off by taps, or there must have been steps or other means of reaching it. The former seems the more probable, but then, why the wheels? <sup>28</sup> Borders . . . ledges.] Rather, panels (throughout, as R. marg. & Amer.) between the mouldings (which concealed the joinings) or clamps. Abaz removed these (2 Kin. 16. 17) and the brzen sea. Probably Hezekiah restored them (2 Chr. 29. 19). They existed at the taking of Jerusalem (Jer. 52. 17, 20). <sup>29</sup> Base.] This word is only so rendered in this verse and v. 31. Generally it is rendered foot. Apparently it was a round plate or stand, resting on the horizontal mouldings. — Certain additions . . . thin work.] Rather, wreaths in festoons, or festoons made of hanging work. The lower part was thus engraved or embossed, the upper part of the panels with lions and oxen. <sup>30</sup> Plates.] Rather, axle-trees. — Corners.] Rather, feet. — Undersetters.] Lit. shoulder-pieces (meaning obscure); Vulg. humerali, the natural burden-bearers; props or brackets, cast as part of the pedestal itself (v. 34), supporting the lavers when moved. — At . . . addition.] Rather, each opposite wreaths, i.e. so touching the lavers as just to meet the wreaths. <sup>31</sup> Mouth of it.] Whether this refers to laver or pedestal cannot be determined, nor what would be called the capital of either. Keil paraphrases thus:—'The cover of these chests (the lavers) was arched towards the middle, and upon the arching there arose in the middle a crown, a cubit high, with an opening about a cubit and a half in diameter, as a base in which the laver might be placed. The laver was scooped out above in form of a basin, and was four cubits in diameter at the top and contained 40 baths of water.' <sup>32</sup> Under . . . wheels.] Rather, Under the panels were the four wheels (so that every part of the panels was visible). Whether it means that the axles passed here, through the middle of the pedestals, or that the top of the wheels reached as high as this, the axles being below the pedestals, is not clear. <sup>33</sup> Naves.] Var. felloes; so R.V. The German (nabe and schiff) keeps the distinction in their axletrees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their spokes, were all molten. <sup>34</sup> And there were four undersettlers to the four corners of one base: and the undersettlers were of the very base itself. <sup>35</sup> And in the top of the base was there a round compass of half a cubit high: and on the top of the base the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same. <sup>36</sup> For on the plates of the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved cherubims, lions, and palm trees, according to the proportion of every one, and additions round about. <sup>37</sup> After this manner he made the ten bases: all of them had one casting, one measure, and one size.

So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD: <sup>41</sup> the two pillars, and the two bowls of the chapiters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two <sup>o</sup> networks, to cover the two bowls of the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars; <sup>42</sup> and four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, even two rows of pomegranates for one network, to cover the two bowls of the chapiters that were upon the pillars; <sup>43</sup> and the ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases; <sup>44</sup> and one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea; <sup>45</sup> p and the pots, and the shovels, and the basons: and all these

But the sea was for the priests to wash in. <sup>10</sup> And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

The size is nowhere mentioned (probably three feet high, two wide). The word, like our chandelier, is used for lamp-stand, or branch-lamp. There was a centre lamp on the shaft and six lamps on the branches; which were arranged as three half-boops, placed one over the other, ends upwards. Certainly it seems more probable that Josephus is right in saying that the Dedication took place directly the Temple was finished. These words, however, may have slipped in from ch. 9. 10; 2 Chr. 8. 1; and ch. 9. 2; 2 Chr. 7. 12, as certainly seem to imply (unless, indeed, both those passages are parenthetical) that the answer in vision as well as the answer by fire followed immediately on the Dedication-prayer, and not 12 years after it. If so, for some unknown reason, the dedication was delayed till the palace was finished.—Fathers.] Rather, fathers' houses, i.e. families (Chr. also). Either the expression 'elders of Israel' includes both the princely heads of the tribes and the heads of the families, in which case 'and' = viz., and a second and must be supplied after tribes; or else 'heads of the tribes' means the head men in the tribes, viz. all the heads of all the families. The Vulg. points to three classes—elders, princes of tribes, leaders (duces, Chr. capita) of families. The Sept. names one only—elders. Probably these summoned the people; 'unto king Solomon' (vs. 2. 5) seems to imply that it was not merely the Feast of Tabernacles which brought them together (cp. Chr. v. 3, 'wherefore'). 2.] Ethanim (flowing, i.e. of the brooks) or Tisri, was the seventh month of the sacred year, our October, the time of the beginning of sowing and the early rain. And there it is unto this day.

vest. 3. Priests.] Levites, of course, as Chr. (v. 4), but more; for this was no ordinary occasion. Cf. Josh. 3. 6 & 6. 6. Ordinarily, the priests merely prepared the Ark for removal (by covering it with the veil, badgers' skins and blue cloth, and pushing the staves fully into their places); the Kohathites bore it, superintended by the priests (Num. 4. 5, 15, 19).

4. Of the congregation.] Rather (for the name was given to it, not as being the place of assembly, but the place of meeting with God, Ex. 29. 42, 43), of meeting. Hitherto at Gibeon; it is brought now, no doubt, to be preserved in the treasury (ch. 7. 51), as of sacred historic interest. Two Hebrew words are sometimes rendered 'tabernacle,' ohel and mishkân. When used together the latter means the woven fabric adorned with cherubim (including the wooden structure), the former the goat-hair tent-cloth. Otherwise either word may be used of the edifice generally, as mishkân is in Ex. 35. 18, &c., and ohel is here.

5. Sacrificing.] Compare the ceremonial at 2 Sam. 6. 13; and note that this act is here ascribed to the congregation equally with the king. The inference is that neither Solomon nor David offered in person as priests, but mediately. It may have been (C. Taylor) that a sense of his own disabilities in this particular led

David to describe in Ps. 110 the transcendent dignity of One to come, a Ruler whose glorious prerogative it should be to be Priest as well as King, Priest after that most ancient and honourable order, the order of Melchizedek. As the Levites were the ministers of praise (2 Chr. 7. 6), so the priests were the duly authorized ministers of sacrifice. 6. Oracle.] Cf. ch. 6. 5, note. 8.] The Ark was borne up by acacia-staves covered with gold, passing through golden rings. Now that there was more space, and no risk from moves, another place might do equally well for them, as also for the Book of the Law, which, being limited to the Hebrews and transitory, stood beside the ark, while for the Eternal Law, the heritage of God's covenant people in all ages, no place but that of the highest possible security might suffice.—Maue.] Lit. cut (& r. 19); Gen. 15. 9-18; Jer. 34. 18. dwelling-place (Heb. ham-mishkân) of His people's providing. The cloud appeared without the Tabernacle (dark by day, fiery by night) as well as within; but only within the Temple, and, permanently, only within the Most Holy Place, above the Mercy-seat, whence proceeded the voice of God (Num. 7. 89; Matt. 17. 5; 2 Kin. 19. 15). Apparently the bright glory was ordinarily (v. 12) veiled in cloud, only to burst forth in brightness on special occasions (cf. Ex. 14. 24, &c.). We may suppose that it had been absent from Eli's day till now. In Ezekiel's vision (ch. 10) its departure betokens abandonment by God, a house left desolate. Haggai (2. 7) describes the return of the Divine Presence in these words, 'I will fill this house with glory.' <sup>12</sup> Then, &c.] The chronicler, as we might expect, adds fuller details as to the service, several of which deserve notice. Fulg. makes the parenthesis end with v. 11, Barry and Hervey with the Lord in v. 13. Both Fulg. and Sept. read found (v. 11) for present. Were sanctified should be had sanctified themselves (cf. 1 Chr. 15. 12); and lifted up their voice (v. 13) should be raised a sound. The whole body of the priests (perhaps 24,000; cf. 1 Chr. 12. 27; Ezra 2. 36; Josephus says 20,000; Genar, Hieros. Taanith, 36,000) took part in the sacrifices (as indeed their number required, v. 65); 120 of them blew the trumpets that summoned to praise; the whole body of the singers, 4,288 in number (1 Chr. 25. 7 & 23. 5), clad in ephods, played and sang 'as one man'; their instruments being cymbals, harps, and guitars. Their position should specially be noted, 'at the east end of the altar' (v. 12), as connected with an interesting question. It seems highly probable that there stood, in the later Temple at any rate, some graduated platform corresponding to the modern orchestra. Now there are 15 psalms (120-134) entitled 'A song of degrees' (Heb. shir ham-ma'aloth, lit. goings up). This is supposed by some to refer to the 'going up' from Babylon (so Ewald), by others to any deliverance (so the Midrash Tillim), by Hebrew tradition to the 15 Temple steps that go down from the Court of Israel to the Court of the Women, on each of which (so Kinchi) one of these psalms was sung at the Feast of Tabernacles. Others understand the phrase to mean climactic; others again (so Heugstenberg and Cox) psalms for the pilgrims to the festivals, to use at the various stages of their journey. More probably these 'goings up' (so Arnfield) are the steps of the orchestra, 'not straight, but curved like the half of a circular floor... east of the altar' (Talmud).

Why those 15 psalms have specially this title cannot be determined; their authorship also is uncertain; four are assigned by title to David, one to Solomon, probably wrongly, for Ps. 126 certainly dates 'when the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion,' and the whole are manifestly 'in tone, thought, diction, rhythm, and climactic structure' (Jennings), of one date.—In the thick darkness. One Chaldee MS. reads Jerusalem; but it is unsupported. The Most Holy Place was unlighted (cf. Lev. 16. 2; Ex. 20. 21; Deut. 5. 22; Gen. 15. 17). Now God's promise was fulfilled more completely than ever hitherto (cf. Ex. 15. 17 & v. 16). <sup>13</sup> Settled place. Now was come the Sabbath to that week of which the Exodus had been as the first day (1s. 132. 13, 14). The zebul of Chron. is a poetic word of similar meaning; cf. Hab. 3. 11. <sup>14</sup> Blessed. Apparently the word means here no more than saluted (possibly with some action indicative of blessing; cf. v. 22), for he pronounced no blessing on the people either here or at v. 55, nor they on him at v. 66. His salutation was the signal to them to rise. He had previously been facing the Ark. <sup>16</sup> Chose. Sept. following the Hebrew idiom, vacharti b', reads οὐκ ἐξελεξάμην 'εν πόλει. — But. The more complete antithesis of the sentence of Chr. is in part supplied by Sept. here, which reads, but I chose Jerusalem that my name should be there, but omits any allusion to Saul's being in truth never God's chosen. former resting-place of his Ark, to the family of no former ruler was the 'forever' of God's promise attached (ch. 9. 3). <sup>18</sup> Said.] It is implied in 2 Sam. 7, but not actually expressed. <sup>21</sup> With our fathers.] Every inheritor of the faith of Abraham is son of Abraham, and is, in Christ his representative, a party to that agreement betwixt God and Christ which is par excellence 'the covenant' in the primary meaning of the word (which is here, as in Deut. 1. 13, used for the ten commandments as containing the articles of the covenant). <sup>22</sup> Stood.] Kather, took his stand (so v. 14 and Chr. v. 13). It indicates position, not posture. He knelt before he raised his hands in prayer. Cf. v. 54; Chr. v. 13. Stanley states that we have here 'the first public recognition of prayer as distinct from sacrifice,' but rather was the priestly blessing (Num. 6. 24) such prayer than this, which was preceded by sacrifice, and offered before the altar (v. 54). In fact, however, there can be no acceptable prayer apart from the idea of Attonement conveyed by sacrifice. Cf. ch. 9. 3, note. <sup>23-53.</sup>] Solomon's prayer asks, that as God had fulfilled one half of his promise to David, by allowing his son as king to 'build a house for his name,' so He would henceforth fulfil the other half, 'stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever' and 'be his father' indeed, chastening if needful, but ready to note even 'a great way off' the first movements of returning penitence. Cf. 2 Sam. 7. 12-16. The thing asked for was entirely in accordance with God's will, as sure to be granted as night to follow day (Jer. 31. 36 & 33. 20-26; Ps. 89. 20-38). The prayer is based on the prayers, the promises, the history of the past. Confidence rests on God's being the True (and therefore the Merciful, 1 John 1. 9), the Infinite, the One, the Own. The conclusion of the prayer is a twofold appeal, (1) to the power of the God of Israel, by the memory of his mighty deeds on his people's behalf; (2) to the love of the God of the king, by the memory of the loving-kindnesses (2 Chr. 6. 42; cf. Ps. 89. 49 & ch. 11. 12) shown to David. The post-exile psalms, 118 & 132, contain the same two appeals, and the latter quotes this prayer (which itself is in part a quotation of Num. 10. 36), substituting 'righteousness' for 'salvation' in its petition, not however in its answer thereto (v. 16); the one is the outward manifestation of the other; God's grace and blessing are proved by holiness. [Attent in Chron. v. 40 is from the Lat. attentus; cf. 'To hear attent' 1 K. viii. 19-22; 2 C. vi. 9-13.]

There is a superstition in denouncing religious art as well as in eling to it. There is no inherent connection between ugliness and godliness. There was a danger of superstition in the rough planks and black hair-cloth of the Tabernacle closer at hand than in the gilded walls and marble towers of the Temple. #### Acceptance of the Prayer.

<sup>54</sup> And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

[2 C. vii.] <sup>1</sup> Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the <sup>x</sup>fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and <sup>y</sup>the glory of the LORD filled the house. <sup>2</sup> And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD'S house.

<sup>3</sup> And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, <sup>a</sup>saying, For he is good; <sup>b</sup>for his mercy endureth for ever.

<sup>4</sup> Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD. <sup>5</sup> And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

The 'rest' won by David culminated in the reign of Solomon, the Peaceful. Now 'we must wander witheringly' truly describes their state, and must do till they become followers of the true Ἰησοῦς. <sup>57</sup> With us.] He does not say 'The Lord bless you and keep you,' as the priest might have done (Num. 6. 23). Xerxes, on (by comparison) an infinitely small occasion, offered 1,000 oxen to Minerva (Her. vii. 43). Josephus mentions 250,500 lambs being slain at one Passover. Hezekiah, however, offered only 600 oxen and 3,000 sheep at the cleansing of the Temple (2 Chr. 29. 33). This feast lasted a fortnight, during which time a million hungry visitors may very well have been present (2 Sam. 24. 9). What was unclean might be burnt (Lev. 19. 6). It is expressly mentioned that the brazen altar (30 ft. square) was insufficient on this day of

<sup>7</sup> Moreover Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the brasen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt offerings, and the meat offerings, and the fat.

<sup>8</sup> Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto <sup>e</sup>the river of Egypt. <sup>9</sup> And in the eighth day they made a solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days. <sup>10</sup> And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

82.—Solomon's Second Vision.

1 KINGS IX. 1-9.

2 CHRONICLES VII. 11-22.

<sup>11</sup> Thus Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

<sup>12</sup> And the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him,

The second (tabernacles) from the 15th to the 22nd; unless, on this occasion, the day of Atonement, due on the 10th, was held on the 15th between the two feasts. The expression 'seven days and seven days' seems to imply an interval. This would explain the 23rd of Chr. v. 10. Cf. 1 Mace. 4. 52-59. member that, 'Through all this tract of years He wore the white flower of a blameless life In that fierce light which beats upon a throne' as one who 'Reverenced his conscience as his man, Whose glory was redressing human wrongs.' Cf. ch. 3. 9, 10. In this vision the note of warning is sounded most loudly, for it was a moment of natural elation; in the former (ch. 3. 14; cf. ch. 6. 12) all was encouragement. Chron. however (quoting a portion of the original record omitted in Kings) supplies that call to national self-humiliation and repentant prayer, which the prophets (Jer. 25. 5; Hos. 6. 1, &c.) were continually breathing, and which God's judgments sometimes, in their later history, extorted. The reformations in Asa's and Hezekiah's day testified to the 'hear' and 'forgive.' Josiah's came too late; Judah's doom was then sealed. [It should be noted how suitable is this addition to the Chronicler's purpose, which was not merely to supply historical omissions, but further to give the view of past events, which men of his day had learnt to take of them, to dwell at greater length on the history's moral and religious lessons, on whatsoever might stimulate the religious sentiment. 'Ezra's motive in writing (says Rawlinson) is to be found in the circumstances of the Jewish nation at the time when Chronicles was written. The people in their long and toilsome captivity, scattered among their conquerors and ground down by task-work (so Polyhistor), had forgotten their past. They were a multitude rather than a people; in their long-continued oppression and isolation they had lost the sentiment of nationality, the very idea of patriotism. To restore the national life, to re-unite the present with the past, to re-awaken the slumbering spirit of patriotism, to recall the glories of old times, and set them before the nation as the standard which they should aim at reaching in the future, was the hard but grand task which the leaders of the Jewish people set themselves at this time, and which none did more to accomplish than the writer of Chronicles.' — *Bib. Henceforward the lax practices hitherto prevailing were to be done away. Here only should symbolic worship find place and Atonement be figured. House of prayer it might be as well (Isa. 56. 7; Matt. 21. 13), but prayer should not be restricted to that House. It may be asked, Why might sacrifice be offered only in the prescribed way (Lev. 17. 9, 11), and at the appointed place? The answer is, 'The life belongs to God; the fact must be acknowledged as He wills, and where He wills. Of Christians the same acknowledgment is required, but for them 'every spot is hallowed ground,' for wherever there is owing of the need and of the efficacy of the Cross of Christ, there is what once the brazen altar alone could supply.—For ever.' A conditional promise, as God's promises mostly are. Matt. 5. 14. Chald. & Targ. read, this house which was high shall become heaps (cp. Mic. 3. 12). See Jeremiah's like threat, conveyed in almost identical language (Jer. 19. 8), 'I will make this city desolate (i.e. a dismay) and a hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished because of all the plagues (i.e. wounds) thereof; and his comparison of the fate of Shiloh (Jer. 7. 12, 14 & 26. 4-6), when Judah had acquired a superstitious belief in the Temple as in a talisman securing Judah and Jerusalem from the punishment of sin. Cf. Matt. 11. 23.—Hiss.] More commonly used of one who summons by a whistle or call (Isa. 5. 26); here of one who derides. Cf. Lam. 2. 15, 16; 2 Chr. 29. 8; Mic. 6. 16. The exact description of the consequences to be looked for seems to imply the foreknowledge that the condition (v. 4) would not be fulfilled. 9. Brought forth.] The Exodus was a memory of double force—a plea with God still to put forth his mighty power on his people's behalf (ch. 8. 53), a claim on God's part to a devoted allegiance.

83.—Epitome of Solomon's Works and Trade.

The Cities called Cabul.

1 KINGS ix. 10-28.

2 CHRONICLES viii.

<sup>10</sup> And <sup>a</sup>it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house,

<sup>12</sup> And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they pleased him not. <sup>13</sup> And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, my brother? <sup>b</sup> And he called them the land of Cabul unto this day. <sup>14</sup> And Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold.

<sup>11</sup> Fir trees.] The Hebrew word berosh appears to be generic, expressing soft wood trees generally, except the cedar. The most important ship-building timber of Lebanon, besides the pine (Pinus halepensis), is the great juniper (Juniperus excelsa) and the cypress (Cupressus sempervirens), both of them still abundant. The Phœnicians also procured ship-building timber largely from Cyprus, where the species of trees are the same as on Lebanon.—According to, &c.] Sept. καὶ ἐν παντὶ θελήματι αὐτοῦ, an expression which throws light on Col. 4. 12.—

Galilee.] Heb. Galiloth; see Isa. 9. 1, note, p. 457. Associated with Kadesh-Naphtali in Josh. 20. 7 & 21. 32, in 2 Kih. 15. 29 it is mentioned as part of Naphtali, with places on the Phœnician and Syrian borders. The word Galil means a circle; and it is said that the name Galilee was at first applied only to the ring of territory round Kadesh-Naphtali embracing these twenty cities. We do not know on what grounds Solomon thought himself exempt from the law of Lev. 25. 23; perhaps because they were in the borderland (as indeed the whole of Galilee of the Gentiles was sometimes reckoned); perhaps because Israel had not yet gained full possession of them. This however is not stated in Josh. 19. 31, 29; cp. Josh. 16. 10 & 17. 12. Probably the 'perfect heart' of David would have made him shrink from this act. [12.] Probably a maritime district, like that of Dor, or a port such as Accho (called later Ptolemais, now Acre), which would have pleased the merchant-king, Hiram, better. Chron.

(v. 2) seems to say that he returned them. He scarcely could have done so without a breach. The word there used means simply given, and is so rendered in rs. 11, 16. Probably an exchange was made. The use of disparaging language would be quite consistent with his retaining them. Even the royal merchant is no stranger to the sentiment, 'Vili vultis emere, et caro vendere.'

<sup>13</sup> He called them. Or, they were called. —[Cabul.] The place of this name, on the S. border of Asher (Josh. 19. 27), 10 miles S.E. of Accho, the Chabolo of Josephus (Life, 43), may have been one of the 20 cities. The point of the sarcasm is not apparent, owing to our ignorance of the meaning of the word. The Sept., ἔπιον, seems to take his meaning to be 'mere frontier-land, no actual footing as of a friend in the heart of the country' (cp. ch. 20. 34). If Hebrew, the word may mean 'like a nothing,' i.e. worthless. Josephus says it is Phœnician, and means οὐκ ἀρέσκον = not to my taste. Galilee was doomed ever to be despised; mixed populations generally acquire the vices without the virtues of the original stocks. This section was the most northerly of the N.T. province of Galilee, and being on the lines of communication and trade was especially open to foreign influences. <sup>14</sup> Sent.] Either now, in token of unbroken goodwill, or had sent before v. 11; Josephus (Ant. viii. 5. 3) says as penalty for failing to solve Solomon's riddles. The amount is enormous, 6,000l. × 120 = 720,000l. Cf. ch. 10. 14, note.

(1 Chr. 18. 3). Solomon now absorbs Hamath-by-Zobah, probably a small kingdom, apparently completing his dominion to the Euphrates (Gen. 15. 18; Num. 34. 8). On Zobah, see 2 Sam. 8. 5, and on Aram, ib. v. 3, notes. (Of the two great divisions of Aram (the 'highlands'), that E. of the Euphrates remained independent, viz. Aram-Naharaim, i.e. of the two rivers, or Mesopotamia (including Padan-Aram, i.e. the plain of Aram to the N.); gradually it became known as Naharaim simply. Aram W. of Euphrates, or Syria proper, was entirely subjugated. It consists of two mountain ranges, a S. off-shoot of Mt. Taurus, enclosing rich valleys, parallel with the Mediterranean, and of an elevated plateau extending from Mt. Lebanon and Bashan to the Euphrates, termed, owing to the absence of water, the Syrian Desert. Where irrigated, the soil is very fertile, and various Bedawin tribes wander from oasis to oasis. Numerous caravan routes cross the desert, the oasis of Palmyra (Tadmor), though not in the direct route, being a natural halting-place. W. Aram comprised five small principalities, viz. Aram of Damascus (2 Sam. 8. 6), Aram of Maachah and Geshur (1 Chr. 19. 6; 2 Sam. 15. 8), Aram of Beth-Rehob, and Aram of Zobah (2 Sam. 10. 6). The separate kingdom of 'Hamath the Great' in the Upper Orontes Valley (2 Sam. 8. 9, notes), is probably included among the tributaries of ch. 4. 21.

1 K. ix. — <sup>15</sup> Reason.] Perhaps rather account or schedule, lit. word. — Levy.] i.e. a tribute of bond-service (v. 21). Payment of taxes in coin is a late development of modern civilization, whereby services rendered are measured and remunerated in a recognised common medium of exchange. Payment in kind, whether in produce or in labour, still survives in the less civilized parts of the East. We here learn that Solomon exacted a tax of forced labour from the surviving relics of the ancient Canaanite population (see, however, v. 22 & ch. 5. 13, notes), upon the principle first established by Joshua in dealing with the Gibeonites. So the Israelites served the Egyptians with rigour . . . in mortar, in brick, and in all manner of service in the field (i.e. agriculture), Ex. 1. 13, 14, and built for Pharaoh store-cities (A.V. treasure cities), Pithom and Rameses. The power and influence which David the warrior had gained, Solomon, the man of peace, so applied to the accumulation of resources, and the promotion of Hebrew commerce, by sea (Ezion-geber) and land (Tadmor), that Jerusalem became the admitted rival of Tyre. Comp. Ezek. 27. 3 with 26. 2. — Millo.] Rather, the Millo (or rampart, Chayne), here and elsewhere; Sept. the citadel, or basement. The meaning and origin of the word is unknown, but the name and the work were probably survivals from Jebusite times. Canaanite Shechem had also a Millo (Judg. 9. 6). The Jebusite Millo was part of the Mt. Zion or City of David, and apparently the nucleus of fortifications repaired or added by David after its capture. It was repaired or strengthened by Hezekiah (2 Chr. 32. 5). Some think the Millo at Jerusalem was on Mt. Moriah, north of the Temple and overlooking it, until Simon Macabæus cut down the summit to the level of the Temple. The subject is very obscure. The Millo may have been part of the substructions of masonry, still traceable for a height of 180 feet, by which the area of the hill top was enlarged and its sides fortified. Cf. 2 Sam. 5. 9, note. — Hazor, Megiddo, &c.] The strategical importance of these cities is indicated both by their geographical position and by their history. Hazor is best known as the head of the great N. confederacy defeated by Joshua, and as Jabin's capital (Judg. 4. 2). It lay near the Waters of Merom (Lake Huleh), and commanded the N. entrance to Palestine by the Mid-Lebanon Valley, as Gezer did the sea-coast route from Egypt. Megiddo occupied a central position in the great highway and battlefield of Palestine, the transverse valley of Esdraelon, and commanded also the passes of Manasseh between it and the plain of Sharon. Here Josiah withstood Pharaoh Necho's army advancing on the Euphrates and lost his life (2 Kin. 23. 29, note, p. 550). Now El-Lejjân (from the Roman military station Legio). — Gezer.] Now Tell-el-Jezer, on the W. foot-hills of Ephraim (Josh. 16. 3) and close to Beth-horon the Nether, at the mouth of the V. of Ajalon; the key of Judah from the N.W. (cp. 1 Chr. 26. 4; 2 Sam. 5. 25). A fortress, commanding the routes of the plain of the sea coast as well as the opening of the chief passes from the interior, and a stronghold never yet reduced by the Hebrews. (Judg. 1. 29) was a fit conquest and wedding gift for Pharaoh. Under its Greised name Gazara its military importance is constantly visible in the times of the Maccabees. Here M. Gannean has discovered, chiselled deep in the rock, the old Hebrew characters marking its boundaries, 16, Pharaoh . . . Gezer.] Apparently a subordinate king who reigned at Tanis towards the end of the 21st dynasty—Egypt under the 20th and 21st dynasties having fallen into decay, and the royal power being usurped by the priests of Amun (Ammon) at Thebes (Sagee).—Canaanites.] The descendants of Canaan peopled the whole land, from Sidon to the extreme South, from Jordan to the sea (Gen. 10. 15-19). Phenicians, Hittites, Amorites, Jebusites, Hivites, and many other tribes were included in this name, as well as the lowland tribe more definitely known as Canaanites, whose dwelling was 'by the sea and along by the side of Jordan' (Num. 13. 29), to the S. of the Jebusites and Hivites, and to the N. of the Amorites, Hittites, and Philistines. The mother-tongue of all their dialects was Hebrew (Lee). Of their civil institutions we know little beyond the mention of 'lords,' 'elders,' and 'kings,' and of the suzerainty of the Jabin of Hazor (Josh. 11. 10; Judg. 4. 2). Their worship may be characterized as that of the Divine in Nature; ἐσεβάσθησαν καὶ ἐλάτρευσαν τῇ κτίσει παρὰ τὸν κτίσαντα (Rom. 1. 25). <sup>17</sup> Built.] Rather, rebuilt, and fortified; so Chr. v. 2 also. Similarly Nebuchadnezzar is said to have 'built' Babylon; Rehoboam Gath, &c.; Augustus Rome, 'finding it brick and leaving it marble.'—Beth-horon, Baalath.] Baalath, in the Philistine border of Dan and so near the lower Beth-horon, probably was represented by the modern Batîn, in the plain of Sharon, under a spur of the Judean hills. The two Beth-horons were situate upon the upper and lower parts respectively of the chief pass down the W. slope of the hill country of Benjamin. Thus they commanded (as now) the main line of heavy transport between Jerusalem and the sea-coast, and thence into the interior, to the Jordan Valley and to Moab and Ammon. See 1 Sam. 13. 2, 17, notes. Here Judas Maccabæus won two victories in the War of Independence (1 Macc. 3. 13-24, and finally lost his life in battle.—Nether.] Sax. nether; Germ. nieder—both low and lower; superl., nethermost. <sup>18</sup> Tadmor.] C'thib Tamar (Ezek. 47. 19). Palmyra, named (as Tadmor) from its palms, is probably intended (see Jos. Ant. viii. 6. 1). Later famous as Zenobia's capital, it was rebuilt by Justinian, and finally destroyed by Tamerlane.—In the land.] Comp. 'governors of the country' (ch. 10. 15), i.e. in the interior, or within the limits of the Hebrew Empire, as now extended to the full extent of the promise to Abraham, i.e. from the frontier of Egypt to the River Euphrates (Tiphisah). <sup>19</sup> Cities of store.] The same word is used of the frontier cities of Pithom and Rameses built by Israel for Pharaoh (A.V. treasure cities). These cities were stored with supplies and munitions of war. See 2 Chr. 32. 28—corn, wine, oil, and stalls for all manner of beasts. The recent discoveries of M. Naville at Pithom confirm this.—Cities of chariots . . . horsemen.] Garrison cities. Chariots, in moral and physical effects, combined the uses of cavalry and artillery nowadays.—That . . . Solomon desired, &c.] Heb. the desire of Solomon which he desired (A.V. margin), as though referring to the pleasures and country palaces with their terraced gardens, such as are described in Eccl. 2. 4-6 as made in Jerusalem, and in the Song of Solomon, the scene of which is apparently laid in Lebanon.—Lebanon.] Cf. ch. 7. 2, note, Josephus (Ant. vi. 3) says Solomon subdued the remnant of the Canaanites in Mount Lebanon, and as far as the city after them in the land, <sup>o</sup> whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, <sup>p</sup> upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of <sup>q</sup> bondservice unto this day.

their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day.

Solomon's Religious Practices and Institutions.

<sup>25</sup> And three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt offerings and peace offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and he burnt incense upon the altar that was before the LORD. So he finished the house.

It has indeed been stated (Stanley, Lect. 27), on the authority of this verse alone, that Solomon 'solemnly penetrated into the Holy Place itself, where in later years none but the priests were allowed to enter;' stated also that there was 'union of king and priest in the person of Solomon;' that as a Pontiff he 'presided supremely' on occasion of the dedication; that then he 'alone prayed, offered, blessed, consecrated;' that then he 'once for all adopted all the duties of the priestly order.' But in blessing and in sacri-

Did he build the altar, or the temple, with his own hand? No, per alium; he bade those do it whose proper function it was.—Upon the altar that, &c. The meaning of the Hebrew is here quite uncertain. Germ. is literal, und räucherte über ihm vor dem Herrn. Vulg. has simply et adolebat thymiana coram Domino.—Finished. In Chr. (v. 16) the same word is rendered perfected; that rendered finished there is of identical meaning; that rendered prepared means set upright, established, set in order. The Chronicler points to methodical and unwearying activity.

<sup>1</sup> K. ix.—26. Ezion-geber, Eloth. Sister ports on the east or Arabian gulf of the Red Sea, in Edom, through which caravans came from the East, especially by way of Petra. Jewish Eastern trade with Arabia, Persia, and the E. coast of Africa, but especially by sea with Ophir, depended on the subjection of Edom. The trade was founded by Solomon after David conquered Edom, and was lost when Edom successfully revolted in Jehoram's reign (2 Kin. 8. 20); it was restored by Uzziah (2 Kin. 14. 22), and again lost finally by Ahaz (2 Kin. 16. 6). In the time of Solomon no timber could be procured near Ezion-geber. There had been forests of shittim wood (Acacia seyal) throughout the Sinaitic Peninsula; but these had been cleared by the Egyptians, who for some generations worked the copper mines of the district, which they abandoned soon after the epoch of the Exodus. Nor could any supply be obtained on the Red Sea coasts. Probably timber rafts were brought down by sea from Lobanon and Cyprus (ch. 9. 11, note 'ir') to the nearest port on the Mediterranean coast, whence the barks could be carried on camels to the head of the Gulf of Akaba. 27. Shipmen. Cp. Ezek. 27. 29, 'that handle the oar, the mariners, all the pilots of the sea.'

28. Ophir. The word first occurs as name of one of Joktan's sons (Gen. 10. 29), most of whose settlements are known to have been in Arabia. The next to him is Havilah, of whose land (N.E. Arabia) Gen. 2. 12 says that its gold was good. Also, the gold of Arabia (Sheba) is frequently mentioned (Ps. 72. 15; Isa. 60. 6). This may mean merely that Arabia was the great emporium for Indian gold, which was said to come from it, as algum trees were spoken of by Solomon as coming out of Lebanon, i.e. through Tyre (2 Chr. 2. 8). Solomon's chief articles of merchandise were gold, silver, gems, algum, ivory, apes, and peacocks. All these would be procurable in India or Ceylon. [The word rendered peacocks is Tamil, pointing to Ceylon; Sept. has Sophr, which is Coptic for India; Arab. has India; Josephus the Golden Chersonesus, i.e. Malacca.] Neither Spain nor the coast of N. Africa produce algum, ivory, or peacocks. Hence some have concluded that navy of Tarshish (ch. 10. 22) merely means ships of that sort, and that Solomon's only trade by sea was with Ophir. This is possible, and might perhaps be taken as certain but for 2 Chr. 9. 21, which says the king's ships went to Tarshish. [So also Vulg., Sept., Arab., Syr.] It says also that ships of Tarshish brought these things back in a three years' trip, which may possibly mean (for there is no the in the Heb.) that this is a generic name for merchant-ships, used loosely, as 'Indiaman' occasionally is. It is to be noted that in 2 Chron. 20. 36 ships to go to Tarshish must, almost of necessity, mean merely ships of Tarshish, i.e. ships of that class, for they could not go thither from Ezion-geber; or at least, if transporting small vessels overland was a possibility (as Greek historians state), ships for Mediterranean commerce would not be likely to be built at Ezion-geber. It is fair to suppose a similar error in 2 Chr. 9. 21 (cp. Ps. 48. 7 with ch. 22. 48). The time proves nothing either way. Three years probably means one whole year and portions of two others (cf. John 2. 19), spent in coasting, trading by the way, and stopping to winter. 'Arab. historians call Tunis Tarshish' (Sharp). —420 talents. 2,520,000l.; a not improbable value. See v. 10, note.

1 K. x.—1.] Gen. 10. 7, 28 speak of one Sheba, grandson of Cush, settling in Ethiopia, i.e. Nubia and N. Abyssinia (where female sovereigns were not unusual; cf. Acts 8. 27); and another, son of Joktan, settling in Arabia-Felix (of which the modern name is Yemen, the South, Cf. Matt. 12. 42). The spices, and the great civilization of the Joktanite trading Arabs (ch. 4. 30) are almost decisive as to the latter kingdom being intended here. If so, this visit illustrates the commercial intercourse of Ps. 72. 10. Cf. note on Ophir, ch. 9. 28, and on spices, r. 2, and Ps. 72. 10, 15. In Gen. 25. 3, Sheba and Dedan appear as tribes of N. Arabia; probably they had settled the oases of N. Arabia to control the caravan routes across the desert; but generally the Joktanite nations are carefully distinguished from the N. nomads, who were not merchants, but shepherds, carriers, and marauders. The Sabæans of Job 1. 15 were descendants of Keturah, nomads near the Persian Gulf. Considerable difficulty arises from there being three Shebas and one Seba, whose descendants mingled together; also from the wide extent of country which their kindred peopled (Meroë to Nineveh); from the fact that the names attached to both persons and places; and from the Heb. sheba being sebâ in Arabic. Ethiopia is Keesh in Egyptian inscriptions, pointing to Ham's son, Cush, as its founder; his capital, Meroë, was called by the name of his eldest son, Seba (cf. Isa. 43. 3 & 45. 14). The family of his grandson, Sheba, migrated to the shores of the Persian Gulf, where (Ezek. 27. 22) they shared with the family of Abraham's grandson, Sheba, the vast Indian traffic with Palestine. The aborigines of Yemen were a giant race; some Cushite Sabæans occupied their land, followed by other Sabæans, children of Sheba, 10th son of Joktan, the 4th descendant of Shem. These gave the name Sheba to the land (Jer. 6. 20), Seba to the capital. Later it was called Himyer = red man (the meaning also of sebâ), whence Erythræum mare.—Fame, &c.] Sept. τὸ ὄνομα Σαβαῶν καὶ τὸ ὄνομα κυρίου; but probably Vulg. is more correct, in nomine Domini; i.e. that fame which was due to the gift of God. In (like the Greek ἐν) is frequently almost equivalent to by, and Name of the Lord to the Lord himself. Cf. Dan. 5. 14.—Questions.] Vulg. in enigmatibus. The word is used of Samson's riddle; but the meaning is very wide, including parable, figurative speech, metaphysical subtlety. Josephus says that Solomon and Hiram propounded riddles to one another on the penalty of a fine. Probably discussions might be included such as that found in 1 Esdras 3, where the young men of Darius' court utter 'sentences,' and then are called on to prove their truth. Cf. Jos. Ant. viii. 5. 2. Spices.] Heb. b'sāmim, whence balsam. These would be various, native and imported: frankincense, the gum of a tree growing abundantly in the hill-country of India; myrrh, the gum of several trees of the balsam tribe; ladanum, the gum of the cistus; tragacanth, the gum of the astragalus, a dwarf, thorny, flowering shrub; cinnamon, from Ceylon; cassia, an inferior cinnamon; opobalsamum (balm), from Africa. The choicest spice, frankincense, has recently been proved to be indigenous in Arabia (Yemen), and on the opposite coast of Africa; it is always spoken of as imported from Sheba ('thus Sabæum,' Virgil; Jer. 6. 20, &c.), though this may denial or delay of justice is the constant complaint of the prophets later (e.g. Isa. 1. 17, &c.). Where the king acts as supreme judge, his personal character influences the whole administration of justice. Ps. 72 says that the ideal Davidic king 'shall judge thy people with righteousness and thy poor with judgment.' <sup>10</sup> Hundred and twenty talents. Worth 720,000*l.* The word talent is the Latinised-Greek rendering of the Heb. kikkar = circle, or globe. It is used of all metals (Ex. 25. 39 & 38. 29; 2 Kin. 5. 22; 1 Chr. 29. 7; Zech. 5. 7), and of a weight, and a sum of money (not a coin). The silver talent = 117 lbs. troy = 400*l.* The gold talent = 131½ lbs. troy = 6,000*l.* The talent 'of the king' = 158 lbs. troy = 540*l.* Each was divided into 60 manehs (Gk. mine) of varying weight. In N.T. it is used of silver only, and then = 200*l.* Cf. v. 14. <sup>11</sup> Of. Perhaps manned by him; Chr. v. 21.—Almug. Vulg. liqna thyina (from thyon, a scented African tree. Cf. Θύον τ' ἀνὰ νῆσον ὀδῶδει, Hom. Od. v. 60); Sept. timber; Chron. pine-wood; Mishna, coral. Probably red sandal-wood (Pterocarpus santalinus) from India; not the familiar scented wood (Santalum album). Its use for inlaying stairs and for making musical instruments, indicates a hard and close-grained wood. Theophrastus suggests teak (Cytherecyton tectona), known as Indian oak, and still found in perfection on the Malabar coast. Cf. ch. 5. 8, note.—Precious stones. Heb. eben yekarah, stones of grandeur (from yakar = to be heavy, highly esteemed for rarity, cost, or splendour); Vulg. gemmas pretiosas; would include gems used for ornamenting the person (2 Sam. 12. 30), the dress, or the walls (1 Chr. 29. 2; 2 Chr. 3. 6), and also other costly stones for mosaic work. In Ezek. 27. 22 Tyre is described as procuring gems from or through Sheba and Raamah (on the Persian gulf).

As little reliance can be placed on the names found in Sept. and Josephus, the nature of these 'precious stones' can be guessed only. Existing Assyrian cylindrical signets are made of chalcedony, a horn-like mineral composed of silica (varieties of which are the red translucent sard, the red opaque carnelian, the green plasma, the pale blue translucent saphirine, the onyx with horn-coloured bands, the sardonyx with red bands, and the many-coloured opaque jasper); also of quartz, or rock crystal; of amethyst, a violet-tinted quartz; of the deep blue lapis-lazuli of Persia (Arab. azul = heaven; cf. Ezek. 1. 26 & 10. 1; Isa. 54. 11; Ex. 24. 10); of Amazon-stone, a bluish-green felspar; of hematite, or ferric oxide; of calaite, or turquoise; and one (of the date of Solomon) of jade. Probably most of these would be 'precious' in Solomon's day; and the 12 stones set in the holy breast-plate include some of these, and supply us with the names of other gems as well; but it is impossible to identify them with any certainty with gems now known, whether ancient or modern. Their names in Hebrew, Sept. (cf. Jos. Ant. iii. 7. 5), Vulg., and A.V., with what Professor H. N. Mackeyne, F.R.S., considers their probable modern representatives, are as follows:—

Odem; σάρδιον; lapis sardius; sardius—red carnelian or jasper.

Pitedah; τοπάζιον; topazius; topaz—garnet. Barcketh; σμαράγδος; smaragdus; carbuncle—almandine garnet or amethyst.

Nophek; ἰσθαράξ; carbunculus; emerald—turquoise.

In Heb., as in Gk., Lat., and Fr., its name stood for 'money.' Pictet derives the English name from gila, rock, and bhara, to bear; cf. Germ. silber. The mines were worked as now by levels (cf. Job 28. 1. 'Surely there is a vein, or gallery, for the silver'). The introduction of coins is assigned to Phidon, Croesus, Darius, and others (cf. 1 Mace. 15. 6); but the mention of silver paid by weight up to a very late period (Jer. 32. 9; Ezra 8. 26) is not conclusive proof that coins were not in earlier use. The elephant (habim, Tamil) is not named in our version anywhere. Tooth is used sometimes for ivory (Ezek. 27. 6, 15). Perhaps the occurrence of the word here points to the source whence the ivory came. The Phœnicians excelled in the art of veneering (or inlaying) in ivory clothes' chests (called palaces, Ps. 45. 8), thrones (v. 18), couches (Amos 6. 4), chambers (ch. 22. 39; Amos 3. 15), perhaps the benches of ships (Ezek. 27. 6).—Apes.] The word is Tamil. Solomon's neighbours, his tributaries (v. 25). Ps. 72 founds on Solomon's good government its picture of an ideal reign. There is nothing Christ-like in regal state, pomp, or luxury; but judgment, righteousness, peace, regard for the poor, these are a monarch's real glory. A people's 'blessing' (v. 15) counts for more than the homage of tributary kings, or the subjugation of enemies (vs. 8-11). There is an interesting sketch of 'The time of Solomon,' as to its foreign relations, by Dr. Lee, in Bib. Educ. iii. 233. 'Almost the whole commerce of the world passed into his territories.'—Milman. He made Israel a great commercial nation. As to the extent of his suzerainty

Tarshish with the servants of Hiram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

<sup>22</sup> And king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom. <sup>23</sup> And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart. <sup>24</sup> And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

(Chr. v. 26), see ch. 4. 21, note. <sup>24</sup> Heart.] Sept. kapdia; Vulg. cor. Bible language does not countenance the metaphysicians' rigid demarcation of the powers and faculties of the immaterial part of man. It uses heart in the sense of will, judgment, understanding, imagination, no less than of feeling (1 Sam. 14. 7; Job 12. 3; Mark 2. 6; Luke 3. 15; Rom. 2. 15; 1 Cor. 7. 37). The whole man moves together, whatever be the subject to which his attention is directed. Yet it does frequently remind us that the affections are the inlet, the medium, the instrument, the very element and atmosphere, of Divine Knowledge (Rom. 10. 10; Ephes. 1. 18). <sup>25</sup> Present.] Rather, tribute, as a rate year by year seems to imply. The word includes offerings of every kind, complimentary, sacrificial, and compulsory. Ch. 4. 21 adds, 'and served Solomon.' Cf. 2 Sam. 8. 2; 2 Kin. 17. 3, 4. Vessels of gold appear on the monuments as the customary tributes and equipage of Oriental kings. Tribute was frequently paid in kind, i.e. in the choicest products and manufactures of the tributary.—Garments.] The same word which Chr. renders raiment; the broad mantle in which an Oriental (male or female) will pass the night (Gen. 9. 23; rendered cloth 1 Sam. 21. 9; not the word in 2 Kin. 5. 5, 22).—Harness.] (Chr.) at ch. 4. 26. The Persians drove four abreast; the Egyptians always two. Apparently the command not to multiply horses (Deut. 17. 16) was forgotten; perhaps David's holy confidence (Ps. 20. 7) had passed away; and Isaiah's (30. 16) rebuke was already needed. 27. In Jerusalem.] Apparently the wealth was too much concentrated, the land in general impoverished, the people burdened (cf. ch. 12. 4). Commerce must be national, not regal, to be a true source of wealth to a nation. To seek his own harvest of profit and renown through his people's prosperity would occur to no Oriental prince.—Sycomore. The fig-mulberry—not the sycamore (black mulberry), Luke 17. 6; nor the sycamore (a sort of maple); but a tree with fruit like a fig (σῦκον), and leaf like the mulberry (μύρον). It is evergreen, and akin to the banyan. The wood is light, porous, and exceedingly durable. 'In the vale' is a touch of accuracy; the tree will not bear frost, and therefore flourishes only in the Shephelah or lowlands of the sea coast, and in the Jordan valley, where the temperature is almost tropical. It is still a royal tree (cf. 1 Chr. 27. 28), and taxed (cf. Luke 19. 4; Ps. 78. 47). 28. Linen yarn.] So rendered here only the meaning (probably caravan or troop) is doubtful; so also is the reading; R.V. in droves. Sept. reads, the king's merchants used to fetch them both from Egypt and from Tekoa by barter; but in Chr. it has nothing of the kind. Vulg. reads, and from Coa, in both places. Tekoa (which means the pitching of tents) lay some 10 miles south of Jerusalem off the road to Egypt (see 2 C. 11. 6, note). Possibly a horse-fair was held there, mainly supplied from Egypt, which, though the horse was not a native of the country, had an abundant supply (cf. 2 Kin. 7. 6 & 18. 24; Isa. 36. 9; Ezek. 17. 15). Probably Bethmarcabothe (house of chariots) and Hazor-suin (village of horses) were transit stations (1 Chron. 4. 31). A probable rendering of the Hebrew is, As for the export of the horses which Solomon got from Egypt, even from Tekoa the king's merchants used to fetch a troop. 29. Chariot.] Including horses and trappings, 80*l.* (at 2*s.* 8*d.* the shekel). —Horse. For riding (cf. ch. 4. 26, note). The horses from Egypt, being somewhat heavier than those of Arabia and Armenia, were greatly in request for kings with large armaments. To thus monopolize the trade in them would be a source of great wealth to Solomon; but it was arming enemies. No doubt Egypt would be paid, not in gold only, but also in oil, wine, and honey. —The Kings of the Hittites. Cf. 1 Sam. 26. 6, note. In greatness, no nation of remote antiquity (before 1500 B.C.) surpassed the Hittites. But so little was till lately known of them that Prof. F. Newman urged the two O. T. references (here and in 2 Kin. 7. 6) as evidence of the unhistorical character of both passages; yet these allusions prompted researches, in 1874, which led to the discovery of a series of peculiar sculptures and hieroglyphics at Helbon (Aleppo), in Cappadocia, Lyconia, and throughout Asia Minor as far as Lydia and the Ægean Sea, which being found to correspond in character with six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: <sup>k</sup>and so for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out by their means.

those found by Burekhardt at Hamath (Hamath) in 1812, and those recently disinterred from the site of Carchemish (p. 62, note), have been since 1879 attributed to this long-lost people and termed Hittite. The O.T. Hittites or 'children of Heth' (Heb. Khitti or Bene-heth) are identified with the Khatta of the Akkadian and the Kheta of the Egyptian records, the Kheta resembling in features and general appearance the figures upon the monuments of Hamath and Carchemish above-mentioned, and the type of face being distinct from that presented there by any other race of Western Asia. The Kheta for centuries contended on equal terms with either Assyria or Egypt, being at the head of a confederacy of peoples of N. Syria and of Asia Minor as far as the Egean Sea, and they resisted the advance of each empire in turn into N. Syria until they were crushed finally by Sargon II. in 717 B.C. Their chief centres, Carchemish on the Euphrates (pp. 494, 550, notes), and Kadesh on the Upper Orontes, were commanding military posts and emporia of trade; Hamath, if not originally Hittite, was allied with this people (p. 436, note). Their memorials indicate that they were no less great in literature and art than in arms. Their sculptures are in character primitive-Babylonian, but modified, and include a sitting figure of the great goddess of Carchemish—the Babylonian Ishtar, the Syrian Ashtoreth—carved out of the rocks of Mt. Sipylus in Lydia (the Greek Niobe); but their hieroglyphics await decipherment, and their language is unknown. They were strong in chariots and horses—indeed, some suppose that they introduced both into Egypt during the Hyksos rule (between the 12th and 18th dynasties); they were also skilled miners, for many of the silver mines in the Taurus Mts. and in Asia Minor bear their inscriptions.—Relics of the southern branch of the Hittites round Hebron (Gen. 23. 7) were among the 'bond servants' of Solomon (ch. 9. 20), and some Hittite princesses became his wives (ch. 11. 1).—See also Appendix.—

1 K. xi.—1. Loved] That Solomon discovered what an evil thing it is to forsake the Lord, the language of many parts of Ecclesiastes, and perhaps, in the spiritual interpretation of it, of Canticles ('spira di tal amor,' Dante), seems to show; and the fact is noticeable, that, whereas in Proverbs Elohim occurs five times, Jehovah 90, in Eccles. we find Elohim 39 times, Jehovah never, as if the writer shrank from using that sacred covenant name; of his repentance and its fruits we have no proof; but cf. 2 Chr. 11. 17, note, p. 266. This was the third step downward; he multiplied wealth, chariots, and wives (Deut. 17. 14-29). —Strange women] i.e. foreigners—not of the holy race; cf. ch. 3. 1, note. Ezra (9. 1) and Nehemiah (13. 23) both give a wide interpretation of the command forbidding Canaanite marriages (Deut. 7. 1-4). Contrast the anxiety of Abraham and Isaac to keep the Holy Seed pure. —Zidonians, &c.] The name in Homer and Virgil (Jen. i. 678, &c.) for the Phœnicians. Cf. Josh. 13. 6; ch. 5. 6, note. Tradition says, possibly rightly, that Solomon married Hiram's daughter. 2. In love] Magnificence and policy no doubt played their part. An Eastern prince's grandeur is measured by the number of his wives, and matrimonial unions cement alliances; but sensual gratification rules that heart which a variety of loved objects can 'turn away.' David escaped this snare, though one at least of his six (or seven) wives was a foreigner, and, it may be, some of his concubines. Cf. 2 Sam. 3. 2-5 & 15. 16. 3. Seven hundred] The numbers, and the proportion, suggest a corrupt text. Darius Codomannus had one wife and 329 concubines. The Gt. Mogul's harem, however, numbered 1,000 (Philippson, Die Israelitische Bibel); and the letters for 700 (nun final) and 70 (ain) or 7 (air) have no similarity. Rehoboam had 18 queens and 60 concubines (2 Chr. 11. 21; cf. Cant. 6. 8; Esth. 2. 14). —Wives, princesses.] [1 K. xi. 1-3.]

i.e. queens. Luxury and self-indulgence ever tend to laxity in religious feeling. That the wisest of men could thus fall is as humiliating a lesson for man as can be found. Sept. adds, ὁπλῶ Θεῶν αὐτῶν, and the expression 'went after' always implies actual worship (cf. Deut. 11. 28, πορεύθεντες λατρεύειν). We only hear of one son (miscalled Rehoboam, enlarger of the people), the child of a heathen mother (ch. 14. 31), at 21 (cf. ch. 12. 10, note) devoid of wisdom, and unworthy to occupy his father's throne (cf. Eccles. 2. 18; 2 Chr. 13. 7). Jeroboam means whose people are many. <sup>4</sup> Old. Probably 50 to 55. He died at about 60.—Turned away.] And who shall say how many would follow his leading, to whom 'all the earth sought to hear his wisdom' (cf. Neh. 13. 23-27).—Other gods.] Each nation of Israel's neighbours had its local tutelary god, representative of some one or other of Nature's powers, to whose direct instrumentality, in the ideas of those days, all national prosperity and adversity were attributed (cf. Judg. 11. 24; ch. 20. 23; 2 Kin. 17. 26, 27 & 18. 33, 34). These local idolatries had, from Balaam's temptation (Num. 25. 2) onward, an almost irresistible attraction for Israel. Later, out of mere policy, Amaziah adopted the gods of newly-conquered Edom (2 Chr. 25. 14), and Ahaz the gods of Syria ('that they may help me,' 2 Chr. 28. 23), yet even curiosity respecting these gods and their worship had been expressly forbidden (Deut. 12. 30). Solomon could not very well deny to his wives the exercise of their own religion, and he seems to have been led to first tolerate, then establish, honour, and finally to practise the religions of his favourites. The cause may have been in part affectionate weakness, in part philosophic pride. That all religions are equally false, equally true, may have been one form of the sentiment 'all is vanity.' Idolatry, thus planted, led to a general apostasy under Rehoboam (2 Chr. 12. 1). It was many times cut down, but yet it grew, reaching its height under Zedekiah, when 'all the chief of the priests and the people transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen' (2 Chr. 36. 14). It was eradicated only by the Captivity. On secret idolatry, after Josiah's reformation, within the Temple itself, see Ezek. 8. 3, 11, 14, 16. Whether the picture there be figurative or historic, it is a very grievous one, and instructive as a warning. Every attempt to 'serve two masters' is a setting up in the Holy Place of the heart an 'image of jealousy.' Halting between two opinions is not a thing of the past alone, nor yet the judgment it provokes.—Heart of David.] Edward Irving uses strong language of panegyric, but who shall say that it goes beyond truth or Scripture—'There never was a specimen of manhood so rich and ennobled as David. Other saints haply may have equalled him in single features of his character; but such a combination of manly, heroic qualities—such a flush of generous, God-like excellencies hath never yet been embodied in a single man. He was a hero without a peer; bold in battle and generous in victory; by distress or by triumph never overcome. He was a man extreme in all his excellencies, a man of the highest strain, whether for counsel, for expression, or for action, in peace and in war, in exile and on the throne. The force of his character was vast, and the scope of his life was immense. His harp was full-stringed, and every angel of joy and of sorrow swept over the chords as he passed; but the melody always breathed of heaven.' Would we judge David, we must read his heart; its breathings are to be heard in his psalms. 'If you would judge of David,' says Maurice, 'of what he was, and what he looked for, let this psalm (Ps. 72) be your guide.' <sup>5</sup> Ashtoreth.] 'Whom the Phœnicians called Astarte' (Milton), corresponding to the Roman Venus, and Diana as well, in some particulars, though she is not absolutely identical with them or with Astarte. She was worshipped under as many forms as there were Baalim. In Phœnician inscriptions we find Tanith, the face or reflection of Baal (Baal-Kammân). It was natural therefore, though her name means a star, that she should be confounded with the moon, 'the queen of heaven' (Jer. 7. 18). Cf.

'And mooned Ashtaroth Heaven's queen and mother both.'

Milton.

Very possibly the place called 'Ashtoreth-Karnaim' (of the two horns) in Gen. 14. 5, took that name as being the seat of her worship. There was among the Romans a similar variety of ideal connected with the moon. Cf. 'Terret, lustrat, agit, Proserpina, Luna, Diana, Ima, suprema, feras, sceptris, fulgore, sagittâ.' If not the name of a distinct deity, which may be the case (so Movers), it is probable that the word Asherah, constantly rendered grove, means rather some emblem of Ashtoreth, as the goddess of productiveness, the Molarta (= mother, Myllitta in Herodotus) of the Assyrians, the Athor of the Egyptians, who figured her with the horns of a cow. Perhaps it was a wooden tree-like stump, Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites. <sup>6</sup> And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

It is thought that the matzēvāh (pillar; frequently rendered image) of Baal was a corresponding column of stone. Rehoboam set up, besides shrines, stone pillars and wooden pillars on every high hill and under every green tree (ch. 14. 23). Both are named together in Judg. 3. 7; Deut. 16. 21, 22. Asa burned an Asherah idol (ch. 15. 13, note); Manasseh set up an Asherah in the Temple, which Josiah burned (2 Kin. 21. 7 & 23. 6). Since Ashtoreth represented the receptive, as Baal the quickening, powers of generation, whether animal or vegetable, we do not wonder to find her worship suggestive to its votaries of the grossest impurities. Juvenal (Sat. iii. 62) points to this as well as to its Eastern origin; cf. 'Syrus in Tiberim deluxit Orontes . . . mores secum Fexit, et ad Circum jussus prostare puellas.'—Abomination. Shagatz, p. 545 = idol. 6. Fully.] Cp. Num. 14. 24. Yet there was not an utter forsaking of God. Solomon's way did not utterly cease to be as the way of David (2 Chr. 11. 17). 'Did evil' always points to idolatry (Judg. 2. 11, &c.). 7. The hill. Mt. Olivet, which for nearly 1000 years was, in consequence, called the Mount of Corruption (2 Kin. 23. 13), or the Hill of Offence, a name now applied to the extreme south end only, where it meets the valley of Hinnom. There was (Hervey) once an altar to Jehovah on the north summit (2 Sam. 15. 32). Cf.—

— Before.] i.e. on the east (Isa. 9. 12).

— Molech.] Generally has the article, meaning the king (as Baal means the lord). Both it and Milcom, or Malcham (the diminutive) are corruptions of the Hebrew melch, found in Abimelech, Assyrian Adrammelech (i.e. Adar-melech), Arabic Abdulmalik, Phœnician Melkarth. Molech was the personification of the Sun under the emblem of Fire. His victims were the offerer's sons or daughters, i.e. his best (Ole. 6. 7). So also, apparently, were the victims of Chemosh (the Vanquisher), god of the Moabites (2 Kin. 3. 26, 27) and Hittites (whose capital Car-chemish = Castle of Chemosh). It is more than probable that Baal, Chemosh, and Molech were originally one deity; the Ra of Egypt, the Phœbus Apollo of Greece, of whom (as the occurrence of Astar kamos on the Moabite Stone seems to suggest) another name was Astar, the masculine correlative of Ashtoreth (used as a generic name for the corresponding female deities). Tammuz (sau of life, Ezek. 8. 14), the waning summer sun, corresponding to the Greek Adonis, would be included in the generic plural baalim.

'Syria of Damascus' (2 Sam. 8. 6), henceforward rises on the decline of David's empire until it becomes the dominant Syrian state (2 Kin. 7. 6), and, though hostile, is practically interposed between the Hebrew kingdoms and the growing power and pressure of Assyria. <sup>25</sup> Reigned.] Apparently four Syrian Haddads (cf. r. 14), known also by other names, reigned in succession in the times of David, Rehoboam, Abijah, and Asa, viz. Hadadezer, Hezion, Tabrimon, and Ben-hadad (cf. ch. 15. 18); Solomon's contemporary being an usurper, Rezon. <sup>26</sup> Ephrathite.] i.e. an Ephraimite, as in 1 Sam. 1. 1; not a Beth-lehemite as the name is used in 1 Sam. 17. 12. — Zereda.] In the plain of Jordan, some 20 miles N. of Jericho, in the hill-country bordering on Benjamin and Ephraim; called Zarthan, Zaretan, Zeredathah, now Sardeh. — Against the king.] From this we may infer that Jeroboam prematurely proceeded to some overt act of rebellion before his flight to Egypt, encouraged by Ahijah's symbolic act and his tribe's self-importance. The Sept. inserts a circumstantial account of an assumption of semi-royalty on his part, before his meeting with Ahijah; but it is probably (? Stanley) not authentic. Israel's first leader, Joshua, had belonged to Ephraim. Samuel was a Levite of Mount Ephraim; but now that God had 'refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chosen not the tribe of Ephraim, but chosen the tribe of Judah,' the tribe felt slighted, set aside, as also their own Shiloh was. They resented the loss of their birthright, which, Reuben Leah's firstborn forfeiting it by sin, had naturally devolved on Rachel's (1 Chr. 5. 1, 2).

God's 'purpose according to election' was galling to Joseph's sons. They had no mind to submit to Judah's 'sceptre' (Gen. 49. 10; cf. Judg. 20. 18), or accept Judah as 'law-giver' (1's. 60). If 'God's purposes will ripen fast' be true at all, it is true only at the crisis, the bursting of the bud. More true is Dr. Green's remark (Kingdoms of Israel and Judah, p. 1), 'Great national revolutions are sudden only in appearance. The thunderbolt may seem to have fallen from a clear sky, but unobserved elements of disturbance have long existed in the atmosphere, and have silently gathered strength for the decisive moment.' <sup>27</sup> Millo.]

The 'grace to use God's gifts' is as needful as the gifts themselves. Thus far Jeroboam is rather God's protestant against Solomon's idolatry. Every promise is only conditionally 'sure'; it depends for its fulfilment in part upon man. In Jeroboam's case there was not, as in David's, a part of the promise which rested in immutable counsel and only awaited 'the fulness of the time.' Cf. Luke 1. 68, 69. 40.] Shishak or Sheshonk I. began to reign 980 B.C. His record of his expedition against Rehoboam (ch. 14. 25) has recently been discovered on the walls of the great temple of Karnak. He is said to have beaten an Ethiopian who overthrew that Pharaoh whose daughter Solomon married (according to the monuments a subordinate king of Tanis), who restored Egypt's power, and founded the 22nd dynasty of Manetho.

1 K. xi.—41. The rest, &c.] The moral of the life of Solomon, as king and as man, is best pointed by quotation of his own words. Not 'vanity of vanities'; not 'rejoice and be merry'; not even 'wisdom, and knowledge, and many proverbs, and the words of the wise, even words of truth'; but this is the conclusion of the whole matter, 'Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man: for God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." The dignity and justice of his rule his own maxims illustrate (Prov. 14. 28, 35 & 16. 14 & 19. 12 & 20. 8, 26 & 30, 31; Eccles. 8. 4); and they are testified by the fact, that, after the death of Nathan, no great prophet's presence was needful to instruct or to restrain him. It was true of him, 'A divine sentence is in the lips of the king; his mouth transgresseth not in judgment' (Prov. 16. 10). His splendour and his wisdom have become alike proverbial: 'Solomon in all his glory,' and, 'The wisdom of Solomon,' will be every-day phrases to the end of time. That the germs of decline lay wrapped in the very buds of that prosperity, is a fact that sometimes escapes notice. The giant stride which civilization made in his reign brought the fall of the Jewish nation. 'The commercial intercourse with foreign nations, the assimilation of the Israelite monarchy to the corresponding institutions of the surrounding kingdoms, was fraught with danger to a people, whose chief safeguard had hitherto been their exclusiveness, and whose highest mission was to keep their faith and manners distinct from the contagion of the world around them' (Stanley). The result of his polygamy was a general loosening of morals, a general spread of idolatry. The result of his despotism was, as it always is, a smouldering discontent, a spirit of rebellious independence. The result of his writings is the world's permanent gain. The result of his reign was the ruin of Israel, the disruption of the Hebrew Monarchy. — Book, &c. Cf. 2 Sam. 1. 18, note. This book probably consisted of annals compiled by Nathan, by Ahijah of Shiloh (two of whose prophecies are recorded in 2 Chr. 13 & 14. 6), and by Iddo (described in 2 Chr. 13. 22 & 12. 15 as the author of a midrash, or commentary, which contained also records of Rehoboam and Ahijah, and of a book 'concerning genealogies'). What his 'visions against Jeroboam' were, we do not know, but chronology forbids us, with Stanley and others, to confound them with the utterances against Jeroboam's altar of the 'man of God out of Judah,' whom Josephus calls Jaddon. <sup>42</sup> All Israel.] From this time, the distinct use of Israel and Judah to denote the ten tribes and the two, becomes more usual; but there is always much laxity in the use of the word Israel, as might perhaps be expected, for it was a God-given name of very high honour, which none would care to throw off. The title Jacob is given to his descendants almost solely in poetry. Jews in the East now consider Israeli a more honourable name than Fahudi. As Joshua and Caleb were the first two leaders, so did their tribes Ephraim and Judah very early begin to take a lead in the nation. Joshua (18. 5) speaks as if naturally their lots should be selected first. In pride and self-importance they were perhaps equals. Judah might possess with complacency Abraham's city and burying-place, the sacred Hebron and Machpelah, and Zion, God's new choice; but Ephraim could point to the ownership of Jacob's home and freehold at Shechem, of the dread Ebal and Gerizim, and of the sanctuaries of Bethel and Shiloh. That Jeroboam belonged to Ephraim materially affected the success of his rebellion against a sovereign of the house of Judah. Israel is used for the whole nation repeatedly; for 11 tribes, excluding Benjamin (Judg. 20. 35); for 11, excluding Judah (1 Sam. 11. 8; 2 Sam. 2. 10); for 10, excluding Judah and Benjamin, repeatedly; for two, Judah and Benjamin (2 Chr. 28. 19, and frequently in Chr.). Judah is used for the 12 tribes in 2 Kin. 14. 28. House of Israel generally means the 10 tribes; children of Israel and my people Israel generally mean the 12. All Israel and men of Israel are used indiscriminately. — Forty years.] As Saul had done before him and David, though not in such magnificence and such peace, nor all in Jerusalem. There is no reason to doubt the correctness of the number, although Josephus has 80.

Here Abraham first halted after passing over Jordan, and raised the first altar to God which the land ever knew; here was Jacob's first settled home; here the tribes met in Joshua's day, and here Joseph was buried. On every ground it was well suited to be the Rheims, the coronation city, for kings of all Israel. Ephraim's influence, and the extinction of that affection for David's tribe and family, which once existed, would make both Hebron and Jerusalem unpopular at the present time. <sup>2. Of it.</sup>] Omit. Jeroboam heard of Solomon's death (Vulg. audita morte ejus), not of the assembly of all Israel. The reading of Chr. (c. 2) is probably the more correct. His return might have as honest a purpose as Joseph's on the death of Herod for aught they knew; but Ahijah's announcement must have been burning in his memory; he had committed some overt act of rebellion (ch. 11. 27), and the sort of leadership he readily assumes seems at least to imply that he had party ready to support his demands. The envious discontent of Ephraim was ever a smouldering, not an extinguished, fire; and Jeroboam's post as superintendent of its quota of forced labour would have brought him into close connection with those who felt most aggrieved. Old professions of sympathy with them may have stolen their hearts (cf. 2 Sam. 15. 1-6) and paved his way now. In many lands—Rome, France, Russia, Egypt—forced labour has been chief among grievances tending to insurrection. We cannot tell what real grounds of complaint they had, or how far Ahijah's charge against his followers, that they were 'vain men (i.e. empty-handed adventurers), children of Belial' (2 Chr. 13. 7), was a true one. It seems plain, however, that what was designed to be a constitutional monarchy had become a despotism. <sup>3. So Sanniel had forewarned (1 Sam. 8. 16). This 'levy of bond-service,' i.e. conscription for forced labour, had previously been exacted only of the accursed Canaanites, as of the Gibeonites by Joshua. <sup>18</sup> Then king Rehoboam <sup>d</sup> sent Adoram, who was over the tribute; and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died.

<sup>12</sup> So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.

<sup>13</sup> And the king answered them roughly; and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men, <sup>14</sup> and answered them after the advice of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. <sup>15</sup> So the king hearkened not unto the people: <sup>b</sup> for the cause was of God, that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake by the <sup>c</sup> hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

So all Israel went to their tents.

Probably some scourge armed with blood-knots or iron points was called a 'Scorpion,' as we call one that tears, like cat's claws, 'The Cat;' possibly the reference here may be to a thorn with venomous prickles, called by the Arabs scorpion-thorn. 13. Roughly. Solomon says, 'The poor useth entreaties; but the rich answereth roughly' (Prov. 18. 23); Heb. hard things. 15. Cause. Lit. it was a turning (turn of events) from the Lord. Which steps taken met with God's approval, we cannot tell. The wrath of man is powerless to do otherwise than praise God (Ps. 76. 10) by accomplishing His designs. That God approved the result we know; and we may find here perhaps the key to many another instance of blind infatuation on the page of history, where we are in the dark as to God's purposes. The deed was sinful rebellion none the less. They could quote no divine command. 16. What portion . . . David. While much of [1 K. xii. 12—18; 2 C. x. 12—18.] 260 history was still oral, and the art of writing confined to few, there was greater tendency to its exact repetition of itself. The words here are almost the very words of Sheba. Similarly Jeroboam uses the very words of Aaron later (v. 28).—Son of Jesse. Here is something of contempt. His family was obscure, like Gideon's. Saul frequently used the expression. Cf. 1 Sam. 22. 7, &c., & 18. 23. Sept. here multiplies the irony by an allusion to the shepherd-life of the founder of the dynasty, ὡς βοσκὴ τὸν οἶκόν σου Δαυὶδ. 17. Israel . . . in . . . Judah. See 2 Chr. 11. 3, &c.; cf. ch. 11. 42. note. There was no general emigration, like that of the Levites and of the faithful out of Jeroboam's new kingdom (2 Chr. 11. 13—17). 18. Tribute. Adoram was a suitable messenger, as Jeroboam's former superior officer (cf. ch. 11. 28), and familiar with the service (tribute, rather, levy) of which complaint was made. But the sight of him exasperated them. The stoning shows that the deed was tumultuary, and that there was no armed insurrection. 19. Unto this day.] Possibly merely an expression equivalent to permanently; or (cf. ch. 8. 8) a quotation from a record penned before this book was compiled, or finally revised. Though, however, Israel may have been united with Judah in the return from the Captivity, there was no formal act of reunion or submission to the house of David.

2 C. x.—14. Advice.] R.V. counsel; same word as 'counsel' in K. v. 14. K. v. 13 is literally 'counsel' that they counselled him.' In this and suchlike cases it should be remembered that, while the translators of the Authorised Version (see their Preface) were careful not to vary from the sense of what they had already translated, they deliberately avoided, as savouring more of curiosity than wisdom, a strict uniformity of rendering. Kirkpatrick draws attention to 'the fact that the Books of Samuel and the Kings fell to the share of the first company, which met at Westminster, while the Books of the Chronicles were undertaken by the second company, which met at Cambridge,' as affording a further explanation of the diversities of rendering in many passages of these books which are word for word the same in the original. He remarks also that the Seventy 'must have had before them a text differing considerably from the Massoretic.' [The Massora was the canon which regulated the division of the Hebrew text of the sacred books, originally written without any separation between the words. The rabbis who framed it are styled Massoretes. See 2 Chr. 25. 28, note on the Massora, p. 427, and App.]

[JUDAH.] 1 K. xii.—20.] The kingdom of Judah lasted 135 years longer than that of Israel (B.C. 975-586). This was due to several causes—a more secure geographical position, a more united population, and an unchanging capital, a single dynasty of kings, of whom many acted under the remembrance that they were God's representatives, a united and loyal army, an esteemed hierarchy—above all, to the comparative purity of their worship, their comparative faithfulness to the One God, and to God's Covenant with David.—Heard.] i.e. from their delegates, who had been to Shechem. The Sept. narrative differs considerably. Jeroboam, son of Sarira, a harlot, fortifies for Solomon Sarira, a city in mount Ephraim; it is his then gathering around him 300 chariots, and exhibiting usurping tendencies, which rouses Solomon's jealous fears and leads to his flight; Ahijah is born in Egypt; the visit of Jeroboam's wife in disguise to Ahijah and the child's death take place before the assembling at Shechem, where (and by Shemaiah) the garment-parable is enacted. The Hebrew narrative is preferable, and more distinctly shows the revolution to have been 'of the Lord.'—Judah only.] Cf. v. 23; 2 Chr. 11. 10, 12; ch. 11. 13, note. 21. Assembled.

Note the promptitude with which the organized forces of the two tribes are applied; and compare Joab's promptitude, when the same revolutionary refrain had been heard before (v. 16; 2 Sam. 20. 1).—Benjamin.] Cf. ch. 11. 13, note. Several causes had before now (cf. 2 Sam. 19. 43) been tending to unite Benjamin with Judah—contiguity, sympathy between the only two royal tribes, David's connection with Saul's house (the importance attached to which is shown by 2 Sam. 3. 13), the fact that (geographically) they could almost equally claim Jerusalem the new political and religious capital, and had equal right to cry, 'The Temple of the Lord are we.'—The Benjaminite towns, Bethel and Jericho, attached themselves to the N. kingdom.—180,000 warriors.] Not Judah's entire army, which even in David's time numbered 500,000, and steadily increased up to Jehoshaphat's day, when it numbered 1,160,000. It dwindled to 300,000 in Amaziah's time. It is generally assumed that the population at each date = four times the army. 22. Shemaiah.] The appearance of, not Ahijah, but one who was specially the prophet and chronicler of Judah (2 Chr. 12. 5, 15) on behalf of their 'brethren the children of Israel' could not fail to carry weight. Ahijah they might have been disposed to disregard.

But if and = even, Judah and Benjamin are the 'remnant' left to David's house. 24. Done.] Omit and render Chr. and Kin. God's dispensation would seem to contradict the very purpose for which the chosen people existed. The political union of the 12 Tribes, the object of the Monarchy, which David had achieved and Solomon had confirmed, was at an end. Divided and therefore weakened, how could the Chosen Nation maintain itself in Canaan to fulfil its mission to be the living witness to the greatness of the True God. But the message is a special revelation of His Will, the authorised announcement that God had in fact divided the Monarchy according to his forewarnings to Solomon and Jeroboam. Some such visible judgment was necessary. By Solomon's breach of the Covenant the condition upon which the continuance of his kingship over Israel depended, namely, his obedience to Israel's invisible King, had been violated; nay, by his tolerance and even practice of the worship of 'other gods,' the bond which united the Chosen Nation, namely, its acknowledgment of one God only, its Covenant-God Jehovah, had been broken. If, nevertheless, the semblance of national unity were suffered to remain when the reality was gone, a ceaseless growth of internal corruption and division in Israel would ensue. The penalty inflicted, the shattering permanently of Israel's political unity, should be a constant reminder to the kings of each section of the nation that they occupied their thrones

Animosity against their 'brethren the children of Israel' was not laid aside, though for the present war was averted. Hostilities broke out during the reigns of the next two kings. But situated as they were betwixt Egypt, Syria, and Assyria, the safest policy of the twin kingdoms was mutual support. Of Ephraim Jacob said, 'His seed shall become a multitude of nations.' On entering Canaan Ephraim had been the smallest tribe of all, save one; but its central position, its possession for over 300 years of the religious capital, Shiloh, its connection with several of the judges, had led to an influx of strangers, and the prophecy was now verified; the branches of 'the fruitful bough by the well' were running 'over the wall.'—Went out. i.e. headed a military expedition (cf. 1 Sam. 8. 20) to possess himself of Pennel. The secessionists, therefore, had no thought that the choice of a different ruler for the ten tribes would break their connexion with the national worship at the Temple. It was reserved for Jeroboam to shatter the new religious unity of the nation which David and Solomon had achieved. The division of the kingdom left unaltered the character and the conditions of the kingship. Jeroboam's kingship rested, like that of Saul, upon the promise and covenant of God, and its continuance likewise was conditional upon obedience. (It was a special covenant that protected David's dynasty from rejection by God.) Jeroboam, therefore, had a right to believe and to act upon the conviction that God would establish his dynasty as well as his kingdom; his sin was that he did not so believe and act, but preferred to secure his throne by human expedients. Jeroboam's sin is described (ch. 14. 9, notes) as utter contempt for God :—(1) He ignored the Theocratic character of the Monarchy and his consequent obligation as king to submit his will to God's Will, as declared in the Law or to be communicated through His prophets. (2) He set up a corrupted form of worship, at sanctuaries now superseded by the Temple at Jerusalem, in rivalry to the pure worship established, amid signal tokens of God's approval, in that appointed sanctuary. (3) He committed a threefold breach of the Mosaic Law (a) by making an emblem of Jehovah, (b) by establishing an unauthorised priesthood, (c) by devising a festival 'of his own heart.' (4) He persisted in these evil ways, turning a deaf ear to God's warnings by His prophets (ch. 13. 33, 34). Jeroboam made Israel to sin by tempting his subjects to indulge their idolatrous proclivities and their superstitious regard for the high-places. His was 'a most insidious fashion of idolatry, for it did not disown Jehovah, only acted against His Law in making a representation for purposes of worship' (Lundy).—Kill me. To make peace with Rehoboam (cf. 2 Sam. 4. 7).

[ISRAEL.] 1 K. xii.—23. Whereupon, &c. Astute, bold, active, unscrupulous as Jeroboam was, the very type of a revolutionary leader, he was unable to foresee the results of his method of carrying out a movement, which was, in fact, of God, and which, otherwise conducted, might have enjoyed God's lasting favour. The immediate result of his godless policy was to strengthen Rehoboam by throwing all the weight of religion's support, i.e. of the truly godly, on to his side (2 Chr. 11. 16); to weaken himself by incurring the dishonour of rebuke from God's prophet at the very outset of his reign. The ultimate result was, politically, to make his throne, its Divine sanction being forfeited, the sport of military adventurers; religiously, to develop the association of idolatry with Jehovah's worship, which had caused the dismemberment of Solomon's empire. Jeroboam's form of Jehovah-worship, continuing for three centuries, outlived the kingdom, which lasted only 23. Josiah wiped out for ever a worship designed to rival that which God had established at Jerusalem; the Captivity wiped out (comp. God's language concerning Jerusalem, 'as one wipeth a dish, turning it upside down') Jeroboam's kingdom and people.—Calves. To be worshipped as symbols of Jehovah, 'the young bull being the symbol of creative power.' Egyptian experience (esp. if, as LXX. says, Pharaoh had given Jeroboam a wife), and perhaps Aaron's example (cp. Exod. 32. 4, 8), suggested the form of the graven images; a poor substitute indeed for the Shekinah, the Ark, and the Cherubim of which possibly they were intended to be a representation (though the worship of the bull Mnevis may have been imitated; the festival of Muevis resembling that to Jehovah in Exod. 32. 5, 6, 18, 19.—Wilkinson). 'Likening their Maker to the graven ox' (Milton). The scornful language of Hos. 10 should be contrasted with this account of idolatry's day of seeming triumph:—they shall tremble, in the day when Israel's throne is tottering, for Bethaven's She-calf (similarly the Rabbins use Elopoth, She-gods, in derision); the king shall pass as 'the bubble on the fountain'; the idol, instead of receiving offerings, shall become a minchah, a peace-offering, to 'an intervening king' (? Pul, or Shalmaneser, 2 Kin. 17. 3). In truth, now was the day for the cry 'Ichabod' (cf. Ps. 106. 20); then they should be ready to utter it (Hos. 10. 5). Probably the Dan-calf was carried away by Tiglath-pileser a few years earlier than the desecration of Bethel by Josiah (2 Kin. 15. 29). —Go up.] R.V. marg. Ye have gone up long enough, i.e. to the Feasts of Passover, Weeks, Tabernacles; meaning, Let it suffice you, Have done with (cp. Ezek. 44. 6); with a new king choose new sanctuaries. The country was so small that a visit to Jerusalem was no hardship.—Bethel was a holy place, a House of God (Gen. 28. 11 & 35. 9; Judg. 20. 26; 1 Sam. 7. 16); it should be a gate of heaven still. But Dan would be more convenient for the north part of the kingdom; and, before now, Micah of the house of Joseph had conducted worship in Dan (probably the word 'Manasseh' in Judg. 18. 30 should be 'Moses'—this would enhance the sacredness of Dan). The end of v. 32 (p. 268) seems to imply that Jeroboam established the non-Levitical priests at Bethel only. There was perhaps no occasion to establish a priesthood at Dan, if, as seems probable, 'Jonathan, the son of Gershom, the son of Manasseh (? Moses) and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan until the day of the captivity of the land' is to be understood (so Hervey and Barry) of the deportation of the ten tribes, and not (so Wordsworth and Stanley) of the Philistine invasion of 1 Sam. 4. 22. Levite (not Aaronite) who consented to minister (Judg. 17. 10-13) before Micah's graven and molten similitudes of Jehovah (ib. v. 3, Lias), would not be likely to share their brethren's scruples. 'Precisely similar was the policy of Abderrahman, caliph of Spain, when he arrested the movement of his subjects to Mecca by the erection of the holy place of the Zecca at Cordova; and of Abd-el-malik, when he built the Dome of the Rock at Jerusalem, because of his quarrel with the authorities of Mecca.'—Stanley. —Gods.] Rather, God (comp. 'The glory of the incorruptible God' was not altogether abjured, but 'changed into an image like unto fourfooted beasts'; their worship was rather a gross corruption than an utter abandonment of the true, the breach of the second rather than of the first commandment.

the high places; but hill-top is not the only meaning of bānāh, nor yet altar, nor grove; it may sometimes include these, but it is distinguished from them in 2 Kin. 23. 15, where it is further said to be 'burned and stamped small to powder,' and must mean chapel. As Ezekiel (20. 29) uses bānāh in scorn for any hill-top not of God's choosing, so here probably some contemptuous expression is intended equivalent to a high-place sort of a building, i.e. an edifice not worthy to be named beside the Temple, for which it was proposed as a substitute. The 'high-place' might be in a valley or a town (Jer. 7. 31; 2 Kin. 17. 9). The use of hill-tops was a remnant as much of patriarchal as of heathen religion. We read however of no buildings thereon to Jehovah. The love of old ways, the natural connection in the human mind between height and heaven, convenience, and the hankering after heathen festivities united to render the total abolition of high-place worship too hard a task for even Asa, Jehoshaphat, and Hezekiah. Josiah's complete success came too late. Their place was more safely supplied later by the 'synagogues of God' (synagōgē tōi, Ps. 74. 8; τόπος προσευχῆς, 1 Mace. 3. 46). Sept. οἶκους ἐφ' ὀφελῶν, Vulg. stana in excelis.—Of...] Rather, of any, i.e. all comers. purchase the office (2 Chr. 13. 9). The Levites, on this occasion, showed themselves to be 'on the Lord's side,' by refusing to serve at Jeroboam's temple, and, at the cost of their all (2 Chr. 11. 14), flocking to Judah.—Not of the sons of Levi.] There may be some truth in Wilberforce's remark, 'Jeroboam's new temple and new priesthood was the heaviest blow ever aimed at the exclusive privileges of the Aaronic family; the mass of the people should share the privileges of the priesthood;' but the word 'aimed' is scarcely accurate. The new priesthood was a pis aller with Jeroboam; he had no wish to oust the tribe of Levi; Levi rejected him.

91.—Jeroboam's National Festival.

1 KINGS XII. 32—XIII. 10.

<sup>32</sup> AND Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto "the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar. So did he in Beth-el, sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: <sup>b</sup> and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

<sup>33</sup> So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had <sup>c</sup> devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and <sup>d</sup> burnt incense.

[1 K. xiii.] <sup>1</sup> And, behold, there <sup>e</sup> came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the LORD unto Beth-el: <sup>f</sup> and Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense.

<sup>2</sup> And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith the LORD; Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, [ISRAEL.] 1 K. xii. — 32. Eighth.] The Feast of Tabernacles should be held on the 15th day in the seventh month; but the whole scheme of his worship was 'devised of his own heart' (v. 33). Perhaps he ordained the change to make the feast fall at the same time as his temple-dedication feast.—Offered.] It has been argued that the word ālāh, used here and in v. 33, because it means literally ascend, implies that he himself mounted the altar-steps (or slope) to offer sacrifice and incense—an aggravation of his guilt. It is doubtless true that Jeroboam did so; his residence in Egypt might have made the union of the kingly and priestly functions familiar to him; but the fact rests on probabilities and the expressions used in ch. 13. 1, 4 (see notes), not on the use of ālāh here. It is simply the technical word for 'offer,' meaning indeed ascend, or in Hiphil cause to ascend, but used sometimes interchangeably with āsāh = prepare, kāzav = bring near, and zāvach = slay (all which are rendered 'offer'), used sometimes also as passive or quasi-passive (Judg. 6. 28; Lev. 2. 12, A.V. be burnt). It is used of one who commands the lawful ministers to offer (Solomon, ch. 3. 4, 15 & 9. 25; 2 Chr. 1. 6 & 8. 12, 13); of one who provides an offering (whether Israelite or resident alien, Lev. 17. 8); or of one who personally offers, as did Noah, Abraham, and many others in patriarchal times; and Moses temporarily (Lev. 8); and Saul 'foolishly' (1 Sam. 13. 9, 13); and David exceptionally (2 Sam. 6. 17 & 24. 25); and Ahaz the frivolous virtuoso (2 Kin. 16. 12); but as Hezekiah abstained from doing (2 Chr. 29. 21). house of vanity or of nothingness, i.e. an idol, which is 'nothing in the world' (1 Cor. 8. 4). Before 20 years were passed, Abijah, temporarily, rent it out of Israel's hands (2 Chr. 13. 19). 33. So, &c.] Here probably begins quotation from Iddo's record (2 Chr. 9. 29) = and while he was offering. There is a marked change in the style of the narrative.

loyalty of Israel to his throne. He was to make the day of Jeroboam's success the day of his public humiliation.—Wilberforce.—By name. The name of Cyrus is the only other name foretold in prophecy (Isa. 44. 28); 2 Kin. 23. 15-18 does not mention the fact that Josiah's name was recorded; we can see no special object in such a manifestation of divine foreknowledge; therefore some have argued, probably the text is faulty, the name has been inserted afterwards. But, surely, the effect likely to be produced on those two kings by seeing their very name, coupled with their mission, recorded 350 and 250 years before, would not be trifling. <sup>3</sup> Which. Rather, that. We have similar signs (2 Kin. 19. 29 & 20. 8; Isa. 7. 14 & 8. 18 & 44. 26; Ex. 3. 12). Sept. τέρας, and the word is commonly rendered 'wonder' or 'miracle.'—Poured out. Rather, spilt. Cf. And in his heart Jeroboam knows it. The miracle resembles those of Moses in kind and purpose. <sup>6</sup> Intreat, &c.] So strong is the belief, latent even in the ungodly, that the righteous man's prayer is that which prevails. 'God heareth not sinners' might well become proverbial. Cf. Acts 8. 24; 1 Sam. 15. 30. The word means literally make his face friendly. If Jeroboam was at all touched by God's merciful answer, the effect was transient, possibly annulled by the fate of the prophet.—Thy. 'My' he dares not say. The broken altar, the would-be arrestor's withered hand, testified sufficiently—even without that which followed, the refusal of his hospitality and gold—to God's rejection of Jeroboam's altar, temple, and priesthood. <sup>7</sup> Reward. Rather, present. Comp. Balak's offers to Balaam, Naaman's to Elisha, Belshazzar's to Daniel. <sup>9</sup> By the word. Equivalent to when I received my commission. Cf. r. 1. This refusing to hold any friendly intercourse (cf. 1 Cor. 5. 11) with the ungodly would be a rebuke all the more keenly felt in that it outraged all Eastern notions of hospitality. Keble's— or that any such fetish worship as 'the smooth stones of the flood' implies, was there taking place. His return was not 'to the forbidden feast'; nor are there any tokens that in him was the 'forward step and lingering will.' For forbidding him to retrace a single step (cp. Matt. 2. 12) there is no apparent reason, unless it might be to prevent Jeroboam sending after him to tempt him back. It may be that it was designed simply as a test of obedience. His disobedience brought on him a doom, which might well have taught Jeroboam that the prophet's God was not one to be trifled with. Probably he closed his eyes

92.—The Disobedient Prophet.

1 KINGS XIII. 11-34.

<sup>11</sup> Now there dwelt an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father. <sup>12</sup> And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah. <sup>13</sup> And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon, <sup>14</sup> and went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am. <sup>15</sup> Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread. <sup>16</sup> And he said, <sup>a</sup> I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place: <sup>17</sup> for it was said to me <sup>b</sup> by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

to that lesson, and chose only to see in the prophet's death a proof that he was no true prophet; cf. v. 33. Prophetic denunciation of Hebrew kings was frequently a service of great danger; witness Micah, Elijah, and the 'son of the prophets,' messengers to Ahab (ch. 22, 27 & 19, 2 & 20, 38); Hanani sent to Asa (2 Chr. 16, 10); Zechariah, to Joash (2 Chr. 24, 21); Urijah, to Jehoiakim (Jer. 26, 21). Hezekiah's reception of Micah was a note-worthy exception (Jer. 26, 19). Thomas Aquinas quotes, as expressive of the confidence which sustained the prophets in such moments of danger, Jeremiah's words (26, 14, 15).

1 K. xiii.—[11. Dwelt.] As he would not have done had he been a conscientious man (cf. 2 Chr. 11, 16, 17), not, at any rate, in guilty silence. Ahijah must have been more honestly out-spoken (ch. 14, 1-16). This man was God's prophet, educated doubtless in the Prophet-school (2 Kin. 2, 3), but as unworthy of the name as Balaam, that 'strange mixture of a man,' as Bp. Newton calls him, whom he in many points resembled (2 Pet. 2, 15; Rev. 2, 14). He may have worn the prophets' garb, but he could claim no share in the prophets' honourable epitaph, 'Of whom the world was not worthy' (Heb. 11, 37, 38). More truly is his portrait painted by Isaiah (30, 10) and Micah (3, 5, 11). 'His soul had once been visited by the visions of the Most High; but a life of worldly complaisance had dulled the receptive ear, and made dumb the prophetic voice.'—Wilberforce.

There was in him still a latent reverence for good (v. 31; cp. Num. 23, 10), but it slumbered till v. 20. His purpose in lying was wholly evil, whether he had any idea of the likely consequence or not. 'Perhaps he wished to reduce the Judah-prophet to his own level.'—Wilberforce. Josephus says that jealousy prompted him; more probably the desire to obtain by this visit an indirect approval of his own conduct. True, no lion slew him, but video meliora, proboque, when coupled with deteriora sequor, cannot bring a man peace at the last. 'The apprehension of the good gives but the greater feeling to the worse,'—Shaks. What shall it profit to hold the truth in unrighteousness? The generation of 'old triflers with the voice of God,' is it yet extinct? 12. Had . . . R.V. m. shewed him; see Driver, Tenses, § 76, obs. 14. An oak. Rather, the terebinth. that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him. <sup>19</sup> So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

<sup>20</sup> And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back: <sup>21</sup> and he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, <sup>22</sup> but earnest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the <sup>c</sup> place, of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

<sup>23</sup> And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

<sup>24</sup> And when he was gone, <sup>d</sup> a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase.

<sup>25</sup> And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

<sup>26</sup> And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD: therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him. <sup>27</sup> And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him.

<sup>28</sup> And he went and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: the lion had not eaten the carcase, nor torn the ass.

<sup>29</sup> And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him. <sup>30</sup> And he laid his carcase in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, <sup>e</sup> Alas, my brother!

other equally striking?).—Lied.] Compare the 'it is written' of Satan (Matt. 4. 6). 19. So he went.] 'Probably in the unguardedness of spirit which is too often bred of recent success, and with something of the dangerous triumph of a great temptation mastered and therefore of the right to some little self-allowance earned—the prophet faltered and fell.'—Wilberforce. 22. Carcase.] Formerly spelt carcass, from the Fr. carcasse. The periphrasis he could not fail to understand. The uncertainty as to the manner of the death must have left a feeling of strange awe upon his mind. Byron's—
'And where our fathers' ashes are
Our own may never lie,' recognizes a feeling of very ancient date (Gen. 47. 30 & 49. 29 & 50. 25), and one that was very strong among Hebrews (2 Sam. 19. 37, &c.). 23. For . . . back.] Rather, that of the prophet who had brought him back. 24. Slew.] The punishment denotes the fact that a prophet will not be more, but rather less, excused for his transgressions than another man. Of the severity of the punishment we are no judges. A man who had been witness of a great national sin, and had foretold a great national calamity, who had found out the falsehood of a friend and a prophet, and who is conscious of having done wrong himself, might not think the sentence hard which called him out of a world of which all the foundations seemed 'out of course,' might pass away with 'Though he slay me, yet will I trust him' on his lips. 'The other prophet is the true object of pity.'—Stood.] The lingering of the lion beside the public road, although he touched neither the body of the prophet nor the ass, showed the supernatural character of the event. The absence of fear in the ass would confirm the impression. This marvel was evidently reported at Bethel, on their arrival, by the first wayfarers who saw it; but its continuance until the consequent visit of the old prophet from Bethel was yet more marvellous. 29. To bury him.] His story 'weaves lessons of self-distrust, of the need of continual watchfulness, of the need of perseverance, in colours of blood into the bright web of noble daring and high-souled triumph.'—Wilberforce. 30. Grave.] The word is from the verb to cut or hew, showing that it was a cavern in the rock. <sup>31</sup> And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God <sup>is</sup> buried; <sup>32</sup> I lay my bones beside his bones: <sup>32</sup> <sup>9</sup> for the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of <sup>8</sup> Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

(2 Kin. 23. 17); such dauntless courage, such awful penalty of disobedience, might well be kept in memory. Cf. Wisdom 10. 7. <sup>31</sup> When, &c. Again recalling that 'strange mixture of a man,' Balaam. His desire was made up of mingled self-reproach, vague envy, and passive aspiration (cf. Num. 23. 10). So far as that his bones hereby escaped desecration at Josiah's hands, he had his wish. That false prophets would be of two classes was foretold (Deut. 18. 20); 'the prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods.' Death was the penalty of the Law in either case. This Israel-prophet was of the former class, a class which in later days became numerous in both kingdoms (the latter in Israel only). Jeremiah states (in a section of his prophecy beginning at ch. 23. 9, which should be headed Concerning the prophets) that he was heart-broken on this account. He charges those of Israel with idolatry (v. 13), those of Judah with immorality, gross as that of Eli's sons (v. 14), and both with speaking 'a vision out of their own heart and not out of the mouth of the Lord.' They might be reared in the Schools, they might even be priests, called to be God's servants, and God's spokesmen at times, or they might be neither ('the people,' v. 34), mere pretenders altogether; the threat was upon all—I will forsake you' (v. 39). On Hamaiah Jeremiah was bidden (ch. 28. 16) pronounce the sentence, 'This year thou shalt die;' on Ahab and Zedekiah (ch. 29. 22), 'They shall be roasted in the fire' by Nebuchadnezzar; on Shemaiah the Nehelamite (ch. 29. 32), 'he shall not have a man to dwell among this people.' We are left to infer that this Israel-prophet in some way felt the weight of God's anger, unless penitence averted it. Such men discredited their order, which produced on the whole a remarkable body of men, fervently pious, pure and holy livers, self-denying lovers of their country, laborious writers, sound teachers, in every way worthy successors of Samuel their founder (Acts 3. 24), and mouth-pieces of God

(2 Pet. 1. 21). During the 400 years immediately following the settlement in Canaan no prophets are named as settled among the Hebrews, though they were rebuked by two (Judg. 6. 8; 1 Sam. 2. 27). 'Prophecy revived in its full purity after the return from exile, but only for a time; and then, having done its work, there was silence for 400 years. Then appeared the Baptist, wearing the prophets' garb, preaching in the power of Elias, as the forerunner of Him (Heb. 1. 1, 2), of whom Moses had said, "A Prophet shall the Lord thy God raise up unto thee, from among thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken."—Payne Smith. During the interval—the great period of the Prophets—many false prophets arose; but God's people were not left without the means of discerning betwixt true 'witnesses' (Acts 5. 32, 36) and false. Deut. 18. 22 and other passages supplied criteria which honest-hearted men, like Gamaliel, knew how to use.

<sup>32</sup> And against . . . Samaria. Perhaps the whole of this clause may be an insertion of later times. Samaria was as yet a name unknown (ch. 16. 24); no saying against any altar but that of Bethel is recorded; and the 'house of high-places' at Bethel is the only one mentioned as yet (ch. 12. 31. note). The name Samaria seems to be elsewhere also used for the kingdom, not the city only (Jer. 31. 5; Hos. 7. 1; 2 Kin. 1. 3; Ezra 4. 10). <sup>33</sup> The lowest. Rather, all classes. Cf. ch. 12. 31. note, and Jer. 50. 26 & 51. 31, where the word means from all quarters.—Whosoever. Rather, whosoever he.—Consecrated. Lit. filled, i.e. filled his hand with a portion of the sacrifice, which he was to wave before the altar (Lev. 8. 27; cf. 2 Chr. 13. 9). <sup>34</sup> Became, &c. This verse would lead to our interpreting the same expression in ch. 12. 30 to mean, not became an occasion of sin to Israel, but was reckoned as sin to Jeroboam. What might have been we learn from God's conditional promise, spoken by Ahijah, 'I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee' (ch. 11. 38); what was, from the record in ch. 15. 29, 'Baasha left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him.<sup>7</sup> Jeroboam adds another to the catalogue of instances (at the head of which, perhaps, stands Pharaoh) of men who have been ruined in vain.

[JUDAH.] 1 K. xiv. —22. Judah.] Cf. 2 Chr. 11. 10. note.—Did evil.] In Rehoboam's 4th year (2 Chr. 11. 17). The expression always implies adoption of other gods. Punishment followed speedily (e. 25; cf. 2 Chr. 32. 25).—Jealousy.] God's people should be his only, 'forsaking all other'; this tie and obligation is frequently represented, both in the Old and New Testaments, under the figure of the marriage union (cf. Jer. 31. 32; Deut. 31. 16; 2 Cor. 11. 2).—Above . . . done.] The expression is used of Jeroboam (e. 9). But king Manasseh justified the expression more than Jeroboam, Ahab, and all his predecessors in the corruption of religion—for he 'seduced' Judah 'to do more evil than did the nations whom the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel' (2 Kin. 21. 9).—The Secession kindled, no doubt for a time (2 Chron. 11. 17), a religious fervour among those who were proudly conscious that they still were in an important sense 'all Israel' (Chr.), to whom pertained 'the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ was to come' (Rom. 9. 4). But when the throne was secured, the country fortified, the 'kingdom established,' the fervour died down. 'They provoked . . . above, &c., may imply a widespread apostacy; not the king only, but the people also, are said to be guilty. 23. Built.] The rendering set up (as at Ezek. 39. 15) would suit better the objects named, viz., chapels (cf. ch. 12. 31; 1 Mac. 1. 37), or, it may be, tapestried (Ezek. 16. 16) shrines or temples: pillars (of stone, to Baal); and asherahs (pillars of wood, to Ashtoreth). Cf. ch. 11. 5. note. Schlottman calls attention to the parallelism of 'Baal and Ashtoreth' in Judg. 2. 13, with 'Baal and Asherim' (plur. of Asherah, A.V. groves) in Judg. 3. 7. Similarly we have 'Baal' and 'grove' coupled in Judg. 6. 28; ch. 18. 19; 2 Kin. 23. 4.—As the Canaanite had been driven out of Canaan for these very practices, so for persistently adopting these 'statutes of the heathen' Israel was carried into captivity and destroyed as a nation (marg. refs.). 24. Sodomites.] Lit. consecrated ones; male prostitutes (Rom. 1. 24, 27); or self-mutilated attendants attached to the shrines of Astarte (cf. ch. 11. 5. note, ad fin.), living with the priestesses, dressing as women. They corresponded to the Galli at Rome, priests of Cybele. The Heb. word is kadesh; a feminine equivalent, kadeshah = devotee - harlots, is found in Hos. 4. 14. Mesha says (so Gaumeau, Huxtable, Sayce) that he devoted the Hebrew women and maidens to Astar-Kamos; but see App. 'Moabite Stone.' An age may be golden, intellectually, commercially, but there is in that no security against the alloy of grossest immorality; civilization is not virtue, nor refinement purity.

Maschil of Asaph.

1 O GOD, why hast thou cast us off for ever?

Why doth thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture?

1 K. xiv.—25. Came to pass.] For 'the Lord could no longer bear.' The Chronicler (rs. 2, 7, 8; cf. Jer. 44, 23) gives God's reason for suffering, or ordaining, this invasion, and the limits which Judah's meek acquiescence induced Him to set.—Shishak.] Cf. sh. 11. 40. The Sheshonk I. of the monuments; the Sesonchis of Manetho; reigned B.C. 980 to 959. He was founder of the 22nd dynasty, and restored Egypt to power after a period of internal dissension, and consequent national weakness. He came undoubtedly (see Rawlinson, Bib. Ed. i. 106) as Jeroboam's friend, probably to enable him to become master of certain Canaanite and Levitical cities in his realm, which still held out for Rehoboam. In the inscription about Shishak's victories on the wall of the smaller temple at Karnak, near Thebes (see v. 26, note, p. 278), occur the names of these cities and also of several fortified (2 Chr. 11, 5-12) and other cities in Judah (indicating that cities purely Israelite and well-affected toward Jeroboam were untouched), including a name Yud-Hamalek = the King's Hand, i.e. monument (cf. 1 Sam. 15, 12; 2 Sam. 18, 18)—at first read Judah-malek = Judah King, a reading and explanation found since to be philologically impossible—now regarded as that of a town in Judah otherwise unknown (for the only mention of the Hebrew nation on the Egyptian monuments, see Appendix); the expression in the fifth year also occurs. It is not stated, in the history (Chr. v. 4, 'came to Jerusalem,' see v. 7) or on the monuments, that Shishak actually took Jerusalem; cp. 2 Kin. 18, 13. His retirement was apparently purchased at a great sacrifice ('he took away all'). The Temple and Palace treasures frequently served a similar purpose afterwards. It was a special object with Antiochus Epiphanes, and other later conquerors, to sack temples as well-known depositories of accumulated offerings. The great accumulations of David and Solomon formed an important part of the resources of Judah.

2 C. xii.—2. Had transgressed.] Rather, had been unfaithful to. 3. Lubims, Sukkiims, Ethiopians.] Vassals of the Egyptian king. The Lubims are, no doubt, the Lybians; the Ethiopians (a Greek word meaning the sun-burned or dark-faced) are the peoples from the regions S. of Egypt, the modern Soudân, which means land of the blacks. The Sukkiims may be an Arab tribe; Sept. and Vulg. Τρωγλοδύται (whom Herod. iv. 183 calls an Ethiopian tribe); the word may mean tent-dwellers, or perhaps care-dwellers (sukkô = lair, Ps. 10, 9). We find 'Ethiopians and Lubims' together in 2 Chr. 16, 8, as forming part of Zerah's huge army, defeated by Asa. The Egyptian monuments mention Lebu (Lehabin in Gen. 10, 13), Mashawasha-u, and Tahen-nu (all known later as Lybians) as dwelling W. of Egypt, and thence colonizing all the N. coast of Africa. The Lybians were driven inland by Phœnician and Greek colonists; they were subdued by Egypt about 1250 B.C. The monuments also speak of Ethiopia by the name of Keesh (? Cush); the founder of this race, with both Asiatic and African branches, was Ham's son Cush, father of Nimrod. 4. Took the fenced cities.] By fortifying these cities Rehoboam had made his kingdom 'exceeding strong' on the side of Egypt (rs. 5-12); and doubtless he trusted rather to such precautions than in Jehovah.

referred this Psalm; therefore it is inserted here, since it is a point on which no one may venture to speak positively. Those who assign it to Nebuchadnezzar's invasion, B.C. 588, call attention to the apparent quotation of vs. 6 and 7 in Jer. 10. 25, and vs. 4 and 9 in Lam. 2. 7, 9. Those who assign it to B.C. 167, the persecution by Antiochus, have yet stronger arguments on their side—certainly the antipathy to the religion of the conquered people, displayed in several verses, agrees well with what is said of Antiochus in 1 Macc. 1. 41-50; and 'there is no more any prophet' seems to speak of a day later than Malachi's. They point also to the significant fact that, whereas the Jews surnamed Antiochus 'Epimanes,' the Chaldee rendering of 'foolish people' (v. 18) is matei tipshá = the foolish king.

—1.] A feeble faith supposes in the severe visitations of God that all is over for ever. The psalmist's object is by better instruction (Maschil) to put to flight such thoughts. Ps. 79. 13 shows that his object was attained. 2. Purchased.] This is explained by reference to Ex. 15. 16; Gen. 49. 8-10.—Rod.] Means any staff of office, here Judah's sceptre, or it may be the rod by which the inheritance is measured; perhaps, however, the true rendering is, which thou didst redeem to be the tribe of thy inheritance.—This.] Rather, mount Zion that which thou hast dwelt in; Sept. Σιών τούτο ὃ κατεσκήνωσας ἐν αὐτῷ; Vulg. mons Sion, in quo habitasti in eo; the demonstrative pronoun zeh, after Zion, is similarly used, for the relative a'sher, in Isa. 25. 9. 3. Feet.] Take Thy stand as Avenger on the ruins within the Temple; or, perhaps, rather, Raise thy steps (to come) to the places completely desolate. The second clause is well rendered by Sept. ἵστα ἐπὶ νεύσας (hath wrought all manner of evil) ὁ ἐχθρός. 4. Roar.] They raise their shout in God's place of meeting (cf. Lam. 2. 7), and parade their warlike banners as banners in a religious procession; i.e. if the same meaning is to be assigned to oth here as in Num. 2. 2; but oth commonly means sign (used of the rainbow, the Sabbath, circumcision); perhaps therefore we should render, they have established for (religious) tokens their own (religious) tokens (cf. 1 Macc. 1. 54). 5. Axes.] Means that each foe was seen wielding an axe, as though (so Targum) hewing trees in a wood. 6. But.] Rather, yea; here is comparison, not antithesis. 8. Synagogues.] This word is put by an anachronism (if the present be the true date of this Psalm) for high places, such as Gibeon, whose name appears at Karnak among the 133 towns captured by Shishak: lit. meeting-places. 9. Signs.] Our banners may not wave, i.e. our religious symbols are degraded, and no prophet can tell us 'how long this shall last.' Or the reference may be to such othoth, symbols, as circumcision and the Sabbath, prohibited by Antiochus (1 Macc. 1. 45, 48); or possibly to the cessation of inspiration. Cf.—

The flesh of thy saints unto the beasts

A scorn and derision to them that are round about us.
- 5 How long, LORD? wilt thou be angry for ever?
Shall thy jealousy burn like fire?
- 6 Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee,
And upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.
- 7 For they have devoured Jacob,
And laid waste his dwelling place.
- 8 O remember not against us former iniquities:

Where the sword fails, the fire will find us there;
All, all is death—the Gentile or the flame.

PSALM LXXXIX.

With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations.

<sup>2</sup> For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever:

Thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.

<sup>3</sup> I have made a covenant with my chosen,

I have sworn unto David my servant,

2 Sam. 8. 7). The Karnak sculptures represent Sheshonk as leading to Amun, the god of the temple, a train of captives with shields on their breasts on which names are engraved, e.g. what are read as Mahanaim, Bethhoron, Megiddo, Ajalon, Gibeon. Cf. v. 25, note.

<sup>27</sup>. Brassen shields.] And truly as brass to gold were the character, and religion, and wisdom, and reign of Rehoboam when compared with Solomon's earlier years, the true epoch of 'all his glory.' Yet Chr. (v. 6) is a noble record, if only the acknowledgement it contains was sincere (cf. Ex. 9. 27; Ezra 9. 15). The Chronicler (v. 12) seems to imply that the penitence was sincere and national. The yoke of foreign suzerainty (Chr. v. 8), the recollection of three years of favour and blessing, would impress the lesson 'it is an evil and bitter thing' to forsake the Lord. Shishak's 'violence' was not overlooked by God (Joel 3. 19-21). <sup>28</sup>. House of the Lord.] To see Divine worship maintained at the same time that idol-worship is, at any rate, countenanced, is more amazing than utter abandonment of God; but cf. ch. 11. 4 & 18. 21. Chr. (v. 14) shows wherein lay Rehoboam's weakness—he did not set his heart on seeking Jehovah.

<sup>2</sup> C. xii.—<sup>12</sup>. Altogether.] Lit. to an end; rendered to consume it in Ezek. 13. 13.—And also . . . went well.] Rather, and in Judah were good things. Vulg. opera bona: cf. ch. 19. 3. This verse seems to imply that the nation shared in the penitential feeling.

[Ps. LXXXIX.—Almost all reliable critics (except Ewald, who would date it after the Captivity; and Tholuck, who connects it with Jehoiachin's deposition) are agreed in assigning this Psalm of Ethan (1 Kin. 4. 31, [1 K. xiv. 27, 28; 2 C. xii. 12; Ps. lxxxix. 1-4.] 278 note) to this epoch. Directly alluding to 2 Sam. 7. 12-16, the writer dolefully contrasts his own experience with Hope's expectation of God's own promise. As a patriot, he mourns that the most powerful dynasty of Asia (1 Kin. 4. 21) has been reduced to a small provincial kingship, weak, and at the mercy of the surrounding powers;—as a believer, he knows that yet more is at stake, that the hopes, not only of every child of Abraham, but of the whole human race, are involved in the degradation of Rehoboam, in the seeming ruin of the house of David; and his faith is shaken. 'Mercies' are his theme (v. 1), but they seem clean gone for ever; the very attributes of God seem in peril, viz. His 'strength,' His 'holiness,' and His 'truth' (vs. 8, 35, 49);—are 'the mercies of David' (Isa. 55. 3) no longer 'sure'? A ray of Gospel light might have dispelled this darkness of doubt. We know now that the Promises were Messianic (Acts 13. 33, 34), and, in so far as they applied to man, were, like all other promises, conditional. For God's promises (even of the most sure, most eternal things, of things more sure, more permanent than prosperity or thrones—the knowledge of God, forgiveness of sins, renewal of the heart in Christ) are ever conditional, are not absolute, but dependent on man's faithfulness.—<sup>1</sup>. I will sing . . . for ever.] Pr. Bk. 'always,' i.e. by the mouth of succeeding generations, who shall learn this psalm (Ps. 45. 17).—Faithfulness.] i.e. truth (so Pr. Bk. and in vs. 5. 9, 24, 33 also), as in Rom. 3. 3 (not providential care, as in Ps. 119. 90). <sup>2</sup>. I have said.] Perhaps Sept. is right in making God's speech begin here, ὁτι εἶπας.—In the very heavens.] Lasting as they, says Comparison (Ps. 119. 89; vs. 29, 36, 37); aye, and more so, says Contrast (Ps. 102. 25-27; Matt. 24. 35). <sup>4</sup>. Selah.]

JEROBOAM—(Abijah).Summary of the Reign of Rehoboam.

<sup>21</sup> And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city <sup>o</sup> which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. <sup>27</sup> And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

<sup>29</sup> Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

boam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, <sup>26</sup> the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

<sup>14</sup> And he did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the LORD.

And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

The 'visions of Iddo the seer' were specially 'against Jeroboam,' but they included also some records of Solomon (2 Chr. 9. 29); his midrash recorded the 'ways and sayings' of Abijah (2 Chr. 13. 22); of his book 'concerning genealogies,' of which the Chronicler here availed himself (Chr. v. 15), nothing further is known (the word hithyahsh seems to mean family-rolls). <sup>30</sup> War.] Probably only predatory border warfare, and secret hostility. Cf. 2 Chr. 11. 4. <sup>31</sup> Naamah an Ammonitess.] The repetition (r, 21) is significant. The son of a Hebrew mother [1 K. xiv. 21, 29-xv. 1; 2 C. xii. 13-xiii. 2.] 281

Apparently a spirit of Dieu et mon droit guided both Rehoboam and Jeroboam in their choice of names. Abijah is of doubtful meaning; perhaps the variation was accidental, perhaps it was given to him after he had shown himself unworthy to bear his real name, Abijah.

Perhaps his own mother was dead. <sup>3</sup> Walked, &c.] Apparently he did not share in the reformation of Rehoboam and the people (2 Chr. 12. 6, 12), or his own penitence was evanescent. Later (2 Chr. 13. 4-13), while keen to discern the (comparatively speaking) 'mote' in Israel's eye—the worship of representatives of Jehovah—he was so blind to the 'beam' in his own—the worship of substitutes for Jehovah (ch. 14. 23, 24)—as to adopt very boastful language.—Not perfect.] Yet not utterly ungodly (cf. r. 15; 2 Chr. 13. 10-12). <sup>4</sup> Lamp.] Cf. ch. Israel in 250 years saw nine changes of dynasty; the longest, i.e. the dynasties of Omri and of Jehu, comprising four and five kings only.—To set, &c.] The meaning is, For David's sake God gave the succession to Jeroboam's son in order to (i.e. that so he might) set up David's son (descendant) after him. Sept. ἵνα στήσῃ τὰ τέκνα αὐτοῦ μετ' αὐτὸν καὶ στήσῃ τὴν Ἱερουσαλὴμ; Vulg.

2 C. xiii.—2.] The (?) parallel verse in Kin. (wanting in Vat. MS. of Sept.) requires the insertion of the words the houses of to complete the sense (Amos 7. 11; 2 Sam. 3. 1); some Heb. MSS. read Abijah for Rehoboam, probably correctly.—Was war.] Rather, war prevailed; a smouldering border warfare of 60 years' duration, of which this battle was the climax and close. <sup>3</sup>] The campaign might very well have opened with such numbers. 1,200,000 would be about three-quarters of the adult male population (1,570,000), as given by David's census. But numbers in Hebrew are very liable to errors in transcription. If this single battle is spoken of (as apparently it is) the numbers must be incorrect. Several old Latin versions give them as ten times less. When Lothaire was defeated at Fontenoy 100,000 were slain. No greater carnage is known. Note the steady augmentation of the armies of Judah, and the corresponding decrease of the armies of Israel, to be accounted for (Blunt) by the immigration of the godly into Judah. Rehoboam could summon 180,000; Abijah, 18 years later, 400,000; Asa, about 6 years later, 580,000; Jehoshaphat, about 32 years later, 1,160,000. Whereas, while Jeroboam's army numbered

<sup>8</sup> And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam <sup>g</sup> made you for gods. <sup>9</sup> <sup>h</sup> Have ye not cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? <sup>i</sup> so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods.

800,000, Ahab's might be compared to 'two little flocks of kids' (1 Kin. 20, 27), and Joram's and Jehu's could make no stand against Syria. 4.] The only Zemaraim known is on the border of Benjamin, between Bethel and Betharabah, now Sumrah, and not in 'the hill-country of Ephraim,' but in the lower plain of Jordan. It took its name probably from the Zemarites, a Hamite tribe (Gen. 10, 18).—Said.] Compare Jotham's address on Gerizim (Judg. 9, 7). Abijah's appeal rests on three grounds, of which the first (rs. 5-8) ignores the fact that the disruption was 'from the Lord,' and the last (rs. 10-12) the fact of the idolatry prevailing in Judah. 5. Gate.] Conditionally. Cf. 1's, 132, 12 & 89, 30-32.—Covenant of salt.] i.e. as though they had sealed the covenant by partaking of a meal together. Salt is the emblem of perpetuity. Bread and salt was, and is still, the food usually eaten under such circumstances; and, whatever the food actually be, a Bedouin calls it the bread and salt. The Persian term for traitor is nemekharan, 'faithless to salt.' To 'eat any one's salt' is everywhere to owe him fidelity (Ezra 4, 14). The expression was of ancient use among the Hebrews (see Num. 18, 19, where, as here, it is equivalent to 'for ever'). Salt accompanied every sacrifice (Mark 9, 49), whether minchah (Lev. 2, 13) or burnt-offering (Ezek. 43, 24), pointing to that purity which God expected in the offerer, and the lasting nature of the friendship betwixt God and his people. Each sacrifice was a renewal of the Covenant betwixt a holy God and a holy people. 6. Is risen, &c.] A.V. has the wrong tense throughout. Risen, rose, rebelled, were gathered, strengthened. 7. Belial.] Cf. 1 Sam. 10, 27, note.—Young.] Cf. 1 Kin. 12, 10, note.—Tenderhearted.] Rather, timid (cf. Cf. 1 Chr. 29, 23.—There are, &c.] Compare Rabshakeh's argument (2 Kin. 18, 32-35). 9. Other lands.] Seeming to imply that a priestly caste was unknown to other religions. Probably, however, the likeness was rather in their being self-appointed, not chosen by God.—Consecrated.] Cf. 1 Kin. 13, 33, note.—Seren.] God's law required but one (Ex. 29, 15). Cp. 10. As for us, &c.] Cp. Jer. 7, 4-8. 'A lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies.' Their orthodoxy was seeming rather than real, their worship's purity that of the whitened sepulchre. Abijah retained his throne only 'for David's sake.' Cf. 1 Kin. 15, 3, 4; Matt. 3, 8, 9. In truth, his trust in God was so imperfect that, shortly after, he made a league with Syria (1 Kin. 15, 19). 11. Keep the charge.] i.e. have the care (or management) of (the ordinances of)

<sup>13</sup> But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them. <sup>14</sup> And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets. <sup>15</sup> Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God <sup>p</sup> smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

[Ps. LXXXVIII.—Maschil.] Well so called, a didactic poem, a psalm 'to make one wise' (Ps. 47. 7), is this song of warning, grounded on the past national history (vs. 7, 8). Apparently the writer belongs to the N. kingdom, and desires specially to impress on the people that a shameful defeat (v. 9) recently sustained was a token of God's displeasure at the disruption, which in itself was viewed as rebellion against God (v. 10), and which led to idol-worship and seeming utter forgetfulness of God's gracious dealings of old. - I will utter dark sayings of old :
 3 Which we have heard and known,
 And our fathers have told us.
 4 We will not hide them from their children, Shewing to the generation to come the praises of the LORD,
 And his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.
 5 For he established a testimony in Jacob,
 And appointed a law in Israel,
 Which he commanded our fathers,
 That they should make them known to
 their children :
 6 That the generation to come might know
them,
Even the children which should be born ;
Who should arise and declare them to
their children :
 7 That they might set their hope in God,
 And not forget the works of God,
 But keep his commandments :
 8 And might not be as their fathers,
 A stubborn and rebellious generation ;
 A generation that set not their heart
aright,
 And whose spirit was not steadfast with God.
 9 The children of Ephraim, being armed,
and carrying bows,
 Turned back in the day of battle.
 10 They kept not the covenant of God,
 And refused to walk in his law ;
 11 And forgot his works,
 And his wonders that he had shewed
 them.
 12 Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers,
 In the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.
 13 He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through ;

JEROBOAM—(Ahijah).

- And he made the waters to stand as an heap.
 14 In the daytime also he led them with a cloud,
 And all the night with a light of fire.
 15 He clave the rocks in the wilderness,
 And gave them drink as out of the great depths.
 16 He brought streams also out of the rock,
 And caused waters to run down like rivers.
 17 And they sinned yet more against him
 By provoking the most High in the wilderness.
 18 And they tempted God in their heart
 By asking meat for their lust.
 19 Yea, they spake against God ; they said,
 Can God furnish a table in the wilderness ?
 20 Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out,
 And the streams overflowed ;
 Can he give bread also ?
 Can he provide flesh for his people ?
 21 Therefore the LORD heard this, and was wroth :
 So a fire was kindled against Jacob,
 And anger also came up against Israel ;
 22 Because they believed not in God,
 And trusted not in his salvation :
 23 Though he had commanded the clouds from above,
 And opened the doors of heaven, 24 And had rained down manna upon them to eat,
 And had given them of the corn of heaven.

 He sent them meat to the full.

JEROBOAM—(Ahijah).Summary of Abijah's History.

<sup>21</sup> But Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

97.—Jeroboam consults the Prophet.

<sup>2</sup> And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam; and get thee to Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that "I should be king over this people." <sup>3</sup> And take with thee ten loaves, and cracknels, and a cruise of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

<sup>4</sup> And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah.

But Ahijah could not see; for his eyes were set by reason of his age. <sup>5</sup> And the LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

Solomon had (?) 700 wives and 300 concubines; Rehoboam 18 wives and 60 concubines. Also the proportion of sons and daughters is remarkable. Rehoboam had 28 sons and 60 daughters. In Asa's case we have mention of only one wife and one son. The kings of Israel, who depended more on popular support, less on Divine right, seem to have confined themselves more frequently to one wife; see, however, 1 Kin. 20. 5 and 2 Kin. 10. 7.

[ISRAEL.] 1 K. xiv.—<sup>1</sup>. At that time.] The expression (unlike that in 2 Kin. 4. 8, 18, or even that in 2 Kin. 10. 32) always elsewhere points to some definite time. Here it seems to mean during the period described in ch. 13. 33, during which Jeroboam continued, in spite of the Judah-prophet's warning, his wicked and faithless policy. Josephus says, 'In no long time' after (?) Shishak's invasion.—Abijah.] The meaning (Jehorah is a father; cp. Ahijah, Jehovah is a brother) accords with Jeroboam's view, that the Calves were emblems of God, not new gods. <sup>2</sup>. Wife.] An Egyptian princess (Sept.), sister of Tahpenes wife of the Pharaoh of David's day. It was in part to set flowing again the stream of revelation, dammed up by the degeneracy of the priesthood (1 Sam. 3. 1), that Samuel had organised the prophetic order.—From Tirzah to Shiloh was 25 miles. Disguise might be adopted to deceive the people, lest they should charge Jeroboam with discrediting his own priesthood, or to deceive Ahijah and so escape merited rebuke. <sup>3</sup>. Cracknels, &c.]

JEROBOAM—(Ahijah).

The Sentence on Jeroboam, his House, and People.

<sup>6</sup> And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam: why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with heavy tidings. <sup>7</sup> Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel,

<sup>4</sup> Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel, <sup>8</sup> and <sup>6</sup> rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee: and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, <sup>7</sup> who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes: <sup>9</sup> but hast done evil above all that were before thee: <sup>10</sup> for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and <sup>11</sup> hast cast me behind thy back:

Menander, "Ον οί Θεοί φιλοῦσιν ἀποθνήσκει νέος (cf. 'Quem di diligunt, adolescens moritur.'—Plautus). Marred by sin it may be, burdened with toil and care, still that is not the view the Bible takes of human life. Life, with its duties and its joys, is viewed as a thing to be craved (Isa. 38. 18, 19; Ps. 88. 10-12), save when the spirit is embittered (Job 3. 11-22; Eccles. 4. 1-3); and even the clear revelation of the truth, that 'to depart and be with Christ is far better' was not meant to change this estimate. The saints' life on earth is not to be reckoned joyless or inglorious even now.—Some good thing.] Not so much could be said of any other member of Israel's royal houses. Cp. 'The flattering promises of hope, joined to many real virtues, made him an object of tender affection to the public.'—Hume, on Edward VI. 14. A king.] i.e. Baasha (ch. 15. 27).—But what?] Probably rather, nay; in God's purpose, in the prophet's vision, that day had already come. The rendering of the French Vers. is probably correct, though somewhat tame, et ce sera même dans peu. The prophet's message is ever in one key; in the reign of Solomon when all seems prosperity and continuance, in the days of Jeroboam when all is new and revolutionary, his utterance is the same. There is an eternal order which cannot be violated; whoso defies it, brings ruin on himself and his house. 'Who wars with God shall strive a losing strife.'—E. Arnold. But there is always a special reference to the Theocratic nature of the kingdom of the Ten Tribes (vs. 8, 9) also. <sup>15</sup> Shall smite Israel.] Because the heart of the people has gone along with the ruler; because a ruler embodies in himself and presents in open act the temper and spirit of those whom he rules. A universal principle frequently illustrated in Jewish history. A noble-minded David may be ready to assume all guilt, and ask, 'These sheep, what have they done?' but apportionment of responsibility lies with God (2 Sam. 24. 17), whether man acquiesces, or (like Adam and Eve, or Cain, or Aaron, Gen. 3. 12, 13 & 4. 9; Ex. 32. 22) would fain shake it off.—Reed.] Heb. kāneh (κάλαμος, arundo), the generic name for reeds of every kind. The constant motion and frequent deflection well figure the absence of tranquillity and succession of revolutions which mark Israel's history; at length, one day the swollen stream uproots it, and it is swept away.—The river.] As in ch. 4. 21, the Euphrates. This is the earliest prophecy naming this penalty; and during all the 235 years till its accomplishment Jer. 18. 7, 8 was true, however inexplicable the fact. As is the promised blessing, so is the threatened doom, ever conditional; sin may forfeit; penitence may avert.—Groves.] Rather, asherahs; cf. ch. 11. 5, note. <sup>16</sup> And he shall.] Rather, So; continuing v. 15.—Who... who.] Rather, wherewith he... wherewith he. <sup>17</sup> Tirzah.] Now Telassar. The name means grace or beauty; as the words fair and comely are used of Jerusalem, implying a combination of soft and grand beauty. In Cant. 6. 4 it takes precedence of Jerusalem for beauty. It lay a little N. of Shechem, in the mountain district. 'Twelve miles E. of Jeb'a camp. There are numerous rock-cut sepulchres; probably some are those of Israel's early kings, before they began to be buried in Samaria.'—Besant. Omri rebuilt Samaria to take the place of Tirzah, perhaps because its position was more defensible. Samaria was a place of great strength.—Door.] Rather, house.—Child.] Cf. v. 12, note.

Prov. 3. 2). Pious and prudent, this young king took advantage of the first occasion of suspended warfare between the rival kingdoms, the ten years peace (2 Chr. 14. 1), not (contrast ch. 4. 24) to aggrandise himself, but to restore the purity of the national religion. He also strengthened the national defences (2 Chr. 14. 6).—Maachah.] His grandmother (cf. 2 Chr. 11. 20, note) is specially named, either because of her influential position as queen-mother (r. 13), or perhaps because she had brought him up. defeated by Abijah (2 Chr. 13. 3-19). <sup>20</sup> His son reigned.] It became rather the exception than the rule, at times, that a son should succeed to his father's throne in Israel. Cf. Ps. 102. 28.

1 K. xv.—<sup>25</sup>. Two years.] So one year and any part of a second would be called. The quiet and orderly hereditary succession in Judah is henceforward strongly contrasted with the rapid change of kings and dynasties in Israel. Popularity with the army became the pathway to the throne. The border warfare, the association with Shishak, the prolonged siege of Gibbethon, gave the captains of the army opportunities of distinguishing themselves. 'The camp before Gibbethon, as afterwards that at Ramoth-Gilead, became as it were a separate power in the state.'—Stanley. Omri sought stability for his house by foreign alliances, political and domestic. His policy—complete disregard of God as an object of obedience, of trust, or of worship—gained for his name at any rate an undying notoriety (Mic. 6. 16). <sup>26</sup>. Did evil.] i.e. (the special meaning of the word in Judges and elsewhere) was given up to idolatry.

1 K. xv.—<sup>27</sup>.] Baasha seems to have been a mere military adventurer; neither he (ch. 16. 2) nor his tribe had any claims to sovereignty, or even to distinction. Since Deborah's day (Judg. 5. 15, 18) Issachar had achieved no fame; for Tola's judgeship (Judg. 10. 1) was (so far as the record runs) in no wise glorious. Jacob had foretold that 'Rest' would be Issachar's loftiest aspiration. Stolid submissiveness (in the fertile 'trough' of the plain of the Kishon), not independence, easy contentment, not ambition, marked his character (cf. Gen. 49. 14, 15; Deut. 33. 18, 19); a character, however, not incompatible with shrewd wisdom (1 Chr. 12. 32); and it appears as if the chiefs of Issachar were men of special prominence (1 Chr. 12. 32; Judg. 5. 15); as indeed was likely, seeing that their inheritance included all the central and northern passes of Canaan, the plain of Esdraelon (the battlefield, the Belgium, of the land), and Ar-Megiddo (the city of Megiddo), than which no more suitable name could be found for the scene of the war of the universe (Rev. 16. 16). —Smote.] i.e. assassinated. —Gibbethon.] A Levitical city in Dan (the N. or Israelite part, cf. 2 Chr. 11. 10, note) (cf. ch. 16. 15), the Levites having evacuated it when their tribe migrated into the S. kingdom; perhaps Gebbuta, N. of Jaffa. Why Israel specially desired to recover it at the cost of a 25 years' siege, does not appear. It may be that Gibbethon was only one of several cities passed, in a similar way, into Philistine hands, to the great detriment of the kingdom. Omri probably raised the siege when he hastened away to besiege Zimri at Tirzah.

1 K. xv.—29. Smote, &c.] Policy, not any desire to fulfil Ahijah's words (ch. 14, 10), possibly unknown to him, would suggest the extermination of the family of his predecessor. Baasha could in no way lay claim to a Divine call (ch. 16, 7), though he might be the sword of the Lord's vengeance on Jeroboam's house. <sup>32</sup> War.] Intermittent border warfare merely; not inconsistent with the statements 'In Asa's days the land was quiet ten years,' and 'The land had rest and he had no war in those years' (i.e. during the period of reformation and strengthening of the kingdom, while free from the insurrectionary spirit of Israel and free from Egyptian or other foreign war). Asa's reign was indeed long enough to admit of ten years peace after Baasha's death, but we cannot suppose that Asa delayed beginning his beneficial changes for 26 years. The exact agreement of this verse with v. 16 seems to show that the words are in both cases a quotation from the Annals of the Kingdoms.

[JUDAH.] 1 K. xv.—11. Right.] Therefore his days were long in the land. He was contemporary with seven Israelite kings. In youth, virtue, integrity of purpose, and constancy in faith, he may be compared to Edward vi. Self-sufficiency was Asa's failing. Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. Humble teachableness might have averted that 'collapse of faith' in later years (v. 18), of which the loss of peace was the penalty (2 Chr. 16, 9); might have prevented the association of folly, oppression, distrust of God, with his name. Azariah and Hanani were at hand to guide, whether by encouragement or reproof (2 Chr. 15, 1 & 16, 7). Doing the good and right, the converse of doing evil, always means the discontinuance of idolatry (cf. 2 Chr. 31, 20). The 'perfect heart' is that which is steadfast in the true faith, and desires to cleave to the 'law and the commandment' of God (cp. Chr. v. 4; Ex. 24, 12; Dent. 6, 24, 25), seeking no other 'statutes.' <sup>12</sup> Took away.] A remnant escaped his vigilance (ch. 22, 46).—Idols.] Cf. v. 3 & ch. 14, 23. Here the writer seems to include (Chr. v. 3) altaria peregrini cultus (Vulg.) and the chapels 'high places' in 'cities,' (Chr. v. 5) connected with idol-worship. The word used in Chr. v. 5, chammanim, is derived from a Phœnician name for the sun, but probably it includes likewise moon-monuments. Gesenius, idol-blocks; Ewald, dolt-images.

2 C. xiv.—4. The law and the commandment. This may mean the Decalogue and the Ceremonial Law, the 'law of commandments contained in ordinances' (Eph. 2. 15), the observance of which, in an honest and true heart, was Israel's 'righteousness' (Deut. 6. 25); but the same expression in Ex. 24. 12 appears to mean the Ten Commandments only, 'the words of the covenant' (Ex. 34. 28). The phrase (Isa. 8. 20), for the law and for the testimony, 'the watchword of the faithful' (Kay), appears to include the word of Prophecy as well.

1 K. xv.—13. And also, &c. The Genevan Bible has on Chr. v. 16 this curious annotation, savouring of Calvin—'Herein he shewed that he lacked zeal, for she ought to have died, both by the covenant, as v. 13, and by the law of God; but he gave place to foolish pity, and also seem after a sort to satisfy the law.'—Mother. i.e. grandmother (2 Chr. 11. 20, note).—Queen. Sept. ἡγουμένην (cf. τῆς δυναστεύουσας, 2 Kin. 10. 13; Jer. 13. 18), i.e. queen-mother, a position of highest dignity and paramount influence in an Oriental monarchy. It was not always enjoyed by the favourite wife, but high birth was taken into account, or priority of marriage, or the giving birth to the heir to the throne, especially this last, on which ground Bathsheba took precedence of Haggith, though Adonijah was older than Solomon.

Still, in the East (in Africa also), a king's mother would rank above his wife. In Turkey no woman can be said to be of any note or influence, except the Sultana-valide, or Empress-dowager. Asa's own mother either died early, or was too feeble in character to assert her rights against his grandmother Maachah.—Idol. Not as v. 12; used here and Chr. only; it means frightful object, that which inspires terror, or, it may be, disgust; Heb. miphletseth; Jerome, simulacrum obsecrum; Ewald and Wright, a phallus; and the Vulg. points to this symbol of the productive power of nature (to which, in Pompeian frescoes, women are represented as making offerings), simulacrum turpissimum (Priap, Chr.). 'Everywhere (in Benares) the emblem of the Creator is phallic. Round the frieze of one temple are scenes of vice, natural and unnatural, worse than anything in the Lupanar at Pompeii.'—See Blake, 1888. Cf. 'Furum aviumque maxima formido,' Hor. Sat. i. 8. 4; 'As a scarecrow in a garden of cucumbers,' Baruch 6. 70. It was of wood, for it was 'cut down, stamped (= crushed, cf. Ex. 32. 20; 2 Kin. 23. 15) and burnt' (Chr. v. 16).—In a grove. Rather, for an asherah. 14. The high places. To read their (i.e. the idols') in Chr. v. 3 would remove a seeming contradiction in the likeliest way. God's high places, at the use of which God had 'winked' in earlier and more lax days, before the building of the Temple (and the removal of which in Israel was even lamented by Elijah, ch. 19. 10), were not removed by Asa. Probably he did not understand the necessity for removing what even Sammel and David had countenanced, otherwise Asa of the perfect heart would not have allowed them to remain. If only idolatrous high places are meant here, we must suppose either that he did remove them, and the use of them gradually crept in again; or that he failed to remove some (perhaps those in villages, Chr. r. 5), because they escaped his notice, or because the popular attachment to them was too strong for him. Cf. 1 Sam. 9. 12, note. Asa's shortcomings are noted in 2 Chr. 16. 7–10, 12. <sup>15</sup> Father... and... himself]. Possibly Asa's spoils are mentioned by anticipation here. It was in his fifteenth year that he defeated Zerah (2 Chr. 14. 13–15 & 15. 19). Abijah's spoils were no doubt taken from Israel (2 Chr. 13. 16–19). Shishak had stripped Judah's treasures; the 'blessing of the Lord' (Prov. 10. 22) replaced them.

2 C. xiv.—6. Fenced cities. Probably Shishak had demolished Rehoboam's works of defence (ch. 11. 5–11). It is no proof that Asa's reliance was not on God that he acted prudently (cf. ch. 32. 3–8; Phil. 2. 12, 13). <sup>7</sup> Yet before us]. i.e. while there is no enemy present. Apparently Asa had rebelled against Egypt, and expected an invasion. The defeat of Zerah was Judah's greatest achievement. <sup>8</sup> Army]. The increase in numbers from 400,000 (ch. 13. 3) to 580,000, is no more than might be expected from the enlargement of territory (ch. 13. 19) and the continuance of peace (ch. 14. 1). That 'little Benjamin' so nearly equals Judah must be due to Jerusalem's being within its border, and to the marvellous recuperative energy of the tribe.—Targets]. Heb. tzinûth, a shield covering the whole body, altogether different from the kidon, rendered target in 1 Sam. 17. 6, and larger than the mâgên, or light shield. Benjamin—the frontier tribe, the tribe of the Passes (Wady Harith, of which Jericho was the key, and which led to Ai and Michmash, to Bethel and Gibeah; and Beth-horon, which opened a passage through the mountains of Ephraim to Ajalon and Philistia); the tribe of the Heights (Gibeah, Geba, Gibbon, Ramah, Mizpeh); the tribe whose emblem was the ravening wolf—ever excelled (Judg. 20. 16; 2 Sam. 1. 18, note) as light-armed troops (Hall compares them to peltasts; Judah to hoplites, heavy infantry).

2 C. xiv.—9. Them]. i.e. Asa's well-equipped army (r. 8).—The Ethiopian]. Rather, the Cushite. The descendants of Ham's eldest son, Cush, peopled not only the country from the Asiatic shore of the Red Sea to Nineveh, but also all the tropical region of the Nile. This latter region, 'the Morians' land' (i.e. land of the blackamoors, Belad es Soudan, Ps. 68. 31, Pr. Bk.), after being several times overrun by the Egyptian princes, was finally made an Egyptian province in the time of the 18th dynasty of Manetho. Seba or Meroe was its chief town. The 25th hundred chariots; and came unto <sup>b</sup>Mareshah. <sup>10</sup> Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah.

O LORD, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee.

<sup>13</sup> And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them unto <sup>g</sup>Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were destroyed before the LORD, and before his host; and they carried away very much spoil. <sup>14</sup> And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for <sup>h</sup>the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for dynasty consisted of Ethiopians who had conquered Egypt. Of these was So (2 Kin. 17. 4) and Tirihakah (2 Kin. 19. 9); and they were the first to come into conflict with Assyria. The result of the present victory was that for 300 years Egypt no more appears as a dreaded foe. The conclusion is, that Egypt was the invader, aided by Ethiopians, or ruled at that time by a sovereign of Ethiopian origin. Probably Zerah was an Ethiopian, who married the daughter of the king who occupied the throne of Egypt next, or next but one, after Shishak, and became king under the name of Osorchôn I. or II. Shishak had imposed a tribute (ch. 12. 8), which Asa probably felt strong enough to refuse to pay. Some 50 years later Syria judged Egypt to be a power likely to be friendly to Israel (2 Kin. 7. 6).—Thousand thousand.] If fighting men, a number out of proportion to the chariots (Syr. and Arab. read 20,000 chariots). Probably the usual multitude of camp followers are included, as when we read of Xerxes, Darius, and Artaxerxes leading an army of more than a million. Josephus speaks of 90,000 infantry and 100,000 cavalry. Asa's army numbered 580,000 (v. 8). This is the only recorded Hebrew victory, strictly speaking, over an enemy of magnitude. In ch. 20. 22 and 2 Kin. 19. 35 the Lord's hand alone achieved it, and the issue of Megiddo was defeat (ch. 35. 20). This was the firstfruits of that 'desolation' which Shishak's 'violence' was destined to bring on Egypt (Joel 3. 19-21).—Mareshah.] One of Rehoboam's fortified towns (v. 6 & ch. 11. 8, notes) guarding the hill-country of Judah on the south-west; probably dismantled by Shishak (ch. 12. 4). The modern Merash, a mile south-west of Beit Jibrin plain, in which stood Libnah and Lachish. The broad valley, at the head of which it stands, opening on the Philistine plain, would suit cavalry and chariots. <sup>10</sup>. Zephathah.]

Vulg. non est apud te ulla distantia utrum in paucis auxiliis, an in pluribus. Germ. es ist bei dir kein unterschied. Render, it is the same to thee... whether the many or the powerless. Ball's rendering gives an excellent sense, There is none like [it, along with] thee to help between strong and powerless, i.e. to side with the weaker in an unequal conflict. Cf. Ps. 21. 7, supposed by Ewald to be written at this time. Asa's words show that same confidence, 'the essence of religious courage' (Stanley), which marked Jonathan and David (1 Sam. 14. 6 & 17. 45). True servants of God, though of various metal, are cast in one mould.—Let not man, &c.] Rather, a mortal man cannot keep [the field]. 'Against thee' is spoken in the spirit of Dieu et mon droit, too often wrongfully used. <sup>12</sup> So.] And no more needs to be said; it is the natural outcome of such prayer and trust. <sup>13</sup> Gerar.] Gerar was some 30 miles S.W. of Mareshah. No doubt the Philistines had aided the invaders, and the desert-tribes beyond (v. 15) as well.—Could not recover.] This expression, and the distance to which the pursuit was carried, point to an instantaneous rout early in the day. The eastern sun might dazzle the Cushite archers posted, no doubt, on the flanks.—They... spoil.] i.e. God's host just named (cf. 1 Sam. 30. 26). His people's battles are ever their Lord's (1 Sam. 18. 17 & 25. 28). Gerar would be on Zerah's shortest line of retreat. It had been his base of operations; hence the great spoil. Even to Eli's days the description might not altogether be inapplicable.—Teaching priest.] Heb. kohen moreh. That the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth' (Mal. 2. 7) was an axiom established from the first (Lev. 10. 11, &c.); yet, so brief is the narrative, that we are left to surmise as to the methods by which it was, or was meant to be, carried out. That to some extent they were a failure, we may gather from the constant proofs furnished of a remarkable forgetfulness, or imperfect comprehension of the Law, prior to the Captivity; from, perhaps, the necessity for the establishment of the schools of the prophets, and from the special provision which had from time to time to be made (e.g. ch. 17. 7-9; Neh. 8. 1-9). Their lot was the surplusage of Judah (Josh. 19. 9), and by position they were entirely cut off from contact with other tribes. Some of the cities which Asa had just rescued from Philistine occupation were within Simeon’s boundary. Jacob’s prophecy spoke of Simeon as ‘divided and scattered;’ that of Moses omitted them altogether. Possibly they are the ‘remnant’ spoken of in 1 Kin. 12. 23. In Hezekiah’s day Simeonites not absorbed in Judah wandered southwards, conquering fresh pastures towards Petra (1 Chr. 4. 40-43).—Fell to.] Rather, passed over to (1 Sam. 29. 3).—Saw that, &c. i.e. saw his successes, and his

But, according to 1 Kin. 16. 8, Baasha died in Asa’s 26th year. We must either suppose thirtieth to be an error for twentieth, or (which is unlikely) that ‘reign of Asa’ means kingdom of Judah (an unknown way of speaking, though malcuth is sometimes rendered ‘kingdom,’ ch. 11. 17, &c.), and that the 36th year from the Disruption is intended.

<sup>1</sup> In the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, <sup>a</sup>to the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

<sup>2</sup> Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying, <sup>3</sup> There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

1 K. xv.—16. War... all their days.] Only border warfare for 10 years (2 Chr. 14. 1, 6) or more (2 Chr. 15. 19, note). Asa's 26th year was Baasha's 24th and last, and then alone was there any thing that might be called a campaign. The expression, however, is not incorrect; feuds exist that slumber; smouldering fire is alive. War between neighbours is often, for long together, only the absence of friendly relations ('go out or come in,' v. 17).

2 C. xvi.—1. Six and thirtieth year.] Probably, rather, twenty-sixth. Cf. ch. 15. 19, note. 3. There is.] Cf. Kin. r. 19, note.

1 K. xv.—17. Ramah.] This is not Ramah of Samuel (called Ramathaim from its double heights, and thence Arimathea), by many thought to be Nebi Samuël; but Ramah (Er-Ram) in the border of Benjamin, midway between Jerusalem and Bethel, which, it should be remembered, were only 10 miles apart. It might be viewed as 'the key to either kingdom.' This capture and strengthening of Ramah seems to imply the previous recovery of Bethel and the other frontier cities which Abijam had taken (2 Chr. 13. 19). Professedly intended only to prevent the passing over (2 Chron. 15. 9) to Asa, a hostile garrison only five miles from the capital could only be regarded by Judah as a menace, an ἐπιειχισμα; though it is probable that Baasha's purpose really was to check the emigration into Judah, and not a military one, defensive or offensive. It is noticeable that Asa turned Ramah to no military use, but simply demolished it. Judah had no call to check the tide flowing S., which added to its strength continually (2 Chr. 11. 17). Alcibiades (Schmittz, p. 431) recommended to the Spartans a method of at once restraining and mortifying Athens similar to what Baasha seemed to be aiming at. 18. Then.] Thus faith fails, and a miserable diplomacy takes the place of prayer and trust; but every man must be judged by the whole tenor of his course, not by single actions, by 'the long Yes of life,' not by the one No of some faithless minute. However great the present danger (and 'went up' perhaps implies a large armament, as also his counter-preparations), yet the Lord had already delivered him from a greater. He forfeited 'the blessing of peace' (Chr. r. 9); and distrust, like 'the little rift within the lute,' ever widens. Asa had fallen yet further, when, impatient of reproof, he (like Ahab, unlike David) imprisoned God's messenger, and put down with a high hand his sympathizers (Chr. r. 10); and yet further still, when in his last illness (2 Chr. 16. 12) he sought aid of charlatans rather than of God. The effects of prosperity are not always, or altogether, good. 'Nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord his God all his days' (r. 14). Let no conscience-stricken one be forgetful of this inspired testimony (2 Tim. 3. 16). 'The course of our life must allow or condemn us, not the exceptions' (Bp. Hall). —Left.] Probably, rather, found. Sept. τὸ εὐπεθεῖν. Germ. das übrig, which has often the meaning to spare, surplus. — Ben-hadad.] Cf. ch. 11. 25, note, and 2 Kin. 5. 18.

'Opportunity lost' would be a chapter of life too sad to read, if completely written. The meaning seems to be, that, had Asa simply trusted God, he would have been victorious, not only over Israel, but over Syria as well; but now Syria had escaped defeat, and God had not been glorified among the heathen. The story bids us count it true, 'No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper... this is the heritage of the servants of the Lord.' But Judah failed to learn the lesson. Abaz pursued a course very similar to Asa's, when he invited the aid of Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, against allied Syria and Israel (2 Kin. 16. 7-9; Isa. 7). <sup>8</sup> Lubims.] Cf. ch. 12. 3, note. <sup>10</sup> Prison house.] Rather the stocks. In his policy, however, Baasha both exceeded his mission (v. 7), as perhaps Jehu did after him similarly (Hos. 1. 4), and fell short—for doubtless God's purpose included the undoing of Jeroboam's innovations.—Dust.] His elevation was even more striking than Jeroboam's, who belonged to Ephraim, a more prominent tribe than Issachar, whose ability had previously been recognised, and whose position had given him opportunities of acquiring popularity and influence and gaining tribal feeling. It is just possible, moreover, that he was the representative of Saul's house (1 Chr. 8, 36). Apparently Omri was at present commander-in-chief; perhaps his rank was captain of the other half of the chariots; certainly he was a man of greater energy of character than Zimri, whom Ewald (perhaps, however, on insufficient grounds) compares to Sardapalus. ## 109.—Civil War in Israel.—Zimri, Omri, and Tibni.

<sup>15</sup> IN the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah.

And the people were encamped <sup>a</sup> against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

<sup>16</sup> And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king:

wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp. <sup>17</sup> And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah. <sup>18</sup> And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died, <sup>19</sup> for his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, <sup>f</sup> in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.

<sup>20</sup> Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

<sup>21</sup> Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri.

<sup>22</sup> But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

In like manner the army in the camp at Ramoth-gilead made Jehu king; and several times in later Roman history the same thing occurred. Omri means servant of Jehorah—name ill-bestowed. 18. Palace of.] Either tower of, or castle, viz. (genitive of apposition). Ewald renders harem here and 2 Kin. 15. 25, being bent on proving that Zimri was a mere voluptuary; but the root of the Hebrew word points rather to the highest than to the innermost part of the building. Sept., however, has ἄντρον.—Burnt . . . over him.] As Sardanapalus, last king of Assyria, did also. 19. Doing evil.] An immediate declaration of intended reforms is what God must have looked for. <sup>23</sup> In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel, twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

<sup>24</sup> And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, <sup>a</sup> Samaria.

<sup>25</sup> But <sup>b</sup> Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did worse than all that were before him. <sup>26</sup> For he <sup>c</sup> walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their <sup>d</sup> vanities.

leading us to infer that he and his died by Omri's order, which Josephus confirms.—Omri reigned.] With Omri commenced the third dynasty, of four sovereigns, viz. Omri, Ahab, Abaziah, Jehoram (45 years), which was displaced by Jehu's, of five sovereigns (102 years), the fourth dynasty, and with it commenced also a new epoch in Israel's history. Such prosperity as Israel ever attained to is due, probably, to Omri's drawing closer the union with Phœnicia, then the chief commercial power of the world; this was attended, however, by great increase of corruption, moral and religious, accompanying the increase of wealth and luxury; and it added to him no strength to contend with allied Syria and Judah. To lay the foundation of that righteousness which exalteth a nation (Prov. 14. 34), to secure that strength which is God's gift, that peace which accompanies God's blessing (Ps. 29. 11), formed no part of Omri's policy.

1 K. xvi.—23. Six years.] i.e. two years after Tibni's death. 24. Samaria.] The Hebrew name sounds as if derived from the verb shamar, to guard or watch (with exulting play on the word the new Samaritans called themselves the true Guardians of the Law); and its position would lead to the supposition that that was the derivation of it, but for the explanation here given. For some time Assyrian kings only knew it as Beth-Khumri, City of Omri. Later (surpassing its rivals, Shechem, Tirzah, and Jezreel, though Bethel retained its position as religious capital) it gave its name to the province (ch. 13. 32, noted). Later still, Herod restored it, and renamed it, in honour of Augustus, Σεβαστή = Augusta; Arabic, Sebustiyeh. Its position was one of great beauty, as well as military strength. Isaiah (28. 1) compares it to a majestic crown surmounted by a chaplet of gorgeous flowers; and the valley (two hours in diameter) out of which the hill rises (300 ft.) he calls Valley of oils. It is surrounded by mountains (vine-clad, Jer. 31. 5), forming a distant ring gently sloping into the circular valley on which Amos (3. 9) bids Philistia and Egypt assemble to witness the wicked doings of its inhabitants. This was in old time no diminution of its strength, to which its history testifies. The Syrians failed to take it; the Assyrians succeeded only after a three years' siege. Omri therefore showed his military capacity in giving it preference over Tirzah, and even over sacred Shechem.

—Two talents.] About 800*l*. 25. Omri did worse.] Perhaps the expression ‘statutes (or ordinances) of Omri’ (Mic. 6. 16) may refer as much to the practices of his son Ahab (the ‘works of the house of Ahab’ seems a synonymous phrase, comp. 2 Chr. 21. 13) and of his grand-daughter Athaliah as to his own; but probably Omri reorganised and established on a firmer basis as the national religion the calf-worship, which was becoming gradually more and more disconnected from any symbolism of Jehovah, and assimilated to other idol-worship (cf. ch. 18. 18), and which in Ahab's reign, owing to his marriage with Jezebel, was succeeded by the general introduction, under royal sanction and support, of the worship of Baal and Ashtaroth. 27. His might.] However great, it was unblest. We know of no successes; we read of cities lost (Ramoth-gilead and others) and of Syrian suzerainty asserted in the establishment of a Syrian residence, bazaar, or quarter in <sup>29</sup> AND in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

<sup>30</sup> And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD above all that were before him.

Samaria (ch. 20. 4, 34 & 22. 3). Very probably this might be fortified, like the Tyrian settlement in Memphis, the British factory in Calcutta; and Syrian worship would be established there. On Zimri judgment was swift, on Omri lingering, but none the less sure. Omri, it must be remembered, was guilty of no treason. His dynasty was the first in Israel of which this could be said. It is noticeable, that, whereas a period of anarchy and change was here followed by one of prosperity, later a period of like rapidity of succession (six kings within half a century, viz. Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, Hoshea) succeeded the brief period of prosperity, which occurred in the reign of Jeroboam II. That half century forms the subject of Hosea's prophecy, which contains repeated allusions to idolatry as the origin of all the troubles of Israel; the 'many altars' (8. 11) are the source of her guilt; the 'calf of Samaria' shall be broken in pieces (8. 6), to be worshipped again no more for ever. The words 'she did not know that I gave her corn, and wine, and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, which they prepared for Baal' (2. 8) record that utter forgetfulness of God which runs through Israel's history almost uninterruptedly.

1 K. xvi.—29. Ahab.] The name means either brother-father (a divine title), or God is friend. The inappropriateness is striking. He was a man not destitute of ability, not devoid of patriotism, not wanting in courage, at times not unkingly, but perfectly indifferent to the obligations under which he lay as ruler of a nation which God had taken into covenant with Himself.—Twenty and two years.] Twenty one would be more easily reconcilable with other statements. Asa reigned 41 years (ch. 15. 10). Ahab's son Ahaziah succeeded in the 17th year of Asa's son Jehoshaphat (ch. 22. 51). The reckoning a small part of a year as a whole year leads frequently to seeming inexactness. <sup>30</sup>. Above all.] i.e. specially by the naturalization of the worship of Baal, and the exaltation of that, and of the kindred Ash-toreth-worship, to the position of the 'established' religion of the realm.—'The most refined and philosophic sects are constantly the most intolerant.'—Hume. If this were true, we should expect calf-worshippers and Baal-worshippers to be tolerant of one another, and of all other, for certainly theirs was a very debased form of religion. Jezebel, however, was not tolerant of the worship of God (ch. 18. 4). We may conclude that God's prophets of this day, who met with treatment similar to that met with by John the Baptist, were men of similar bold truthfulness, and reproved even royal ungodliness. 'It was the martyr age of the prophets in Israel.'—Neumann. They were 'the precursors of the history of the catacombs and the covenants' (Stanley).—The various modes of worship which prevailed in the Roman world were all considered by the people as equally true, by the philosopher as equally false, and by the magistrate as equally useful—the Christian religion being the exception.'—Gibbon. It may be, that Ahab entertained to some extent all these three sentiments; but, happily for himself (ch. 21. 29), his better knowledge and his conscience would not suffer him to embrace them fully. There are many evident tokens that in his heart Ahab, weak and wicked as he was, retained a conviction of God's deity and almighty power. He was probably in character rather the weakest than the wickedest of kings in Israel; indolent, a lover of ease, indisposed to any exertion; ready rather to allow any wrong-doing than break in upon the ease of his life. If 'all wickedness is weakness,' so also all weakness leads on to wickedness. Slothful readiness to yield led Ahab on to a godlessness exceeding that of any king before him. To Duty's voice the ear of the man and the king became utterly deaf. 'His spirit, even after his death, was the evil genius of his dynasty.'—Stanley. Yet the very names he gave his sons bore continual witness to his latent belief: Ahaziah, helped by Jehorah; Jehoram, exalted by Jehorah.

<sup>31</sup>. Took to wife.] Took, in truth, to be his despot and his ruin. He had many other wives (ch. 20. 5; 2 Kin. 10. 1), but Jezebel alone is spoken of; her impurities will and determined bigotry mould and turn the soft and pliant Ahab (cp. Macbeth). The day on which she left him to himself (and that she did so is an almost unaccountable fact) was the day of hope for Ahab (ch. 18. 46). Her epitaph, 'whom Jezebel his wife stirred up,' is as little to be coveted as Jeroboam's. To her belongs the distinction of having instigated 'the first organised persecution of the true faith by the civil power on record' (Venables), of having reduced the number of the faithful to a number (7,000) smaller probably than at any other period in Israel's history.—Ethbaal.] The name means with the help of Baal. If he be, as is likely, Ithobalus, he dispossessed his brother Phœles (himself a usurper) of the throne, having been originally priest of Astarte in Tyre, and founded a dynasty which continued near 100 years, down to Pygmalion his great grandson, Dido's brother. Baal as a compound was as common in Carthaginian names (Hannibal, &c.) as in Phœnician, or as Jah and El in Hebrew names. Cf. 2 Kin. 1. 2, note.—King of the Zidonians.] Josephus says, 'of the Tyrians and Sidonians.' It may have been his policy to prefer the more ancient title. <sup>33</sup> A grove.] Rather, the asherah. Cf. ch. 11. 5, note. He erected not only this wooden emblem of Astarte, but also a stone Baal-pillar (2 Kin. 10. 27).—Did more.] Note the descending scale; Jeroboam sinned; Omri 'did worse' than Jeroboam or Baasha; Ahab 'above all,' 'more than all' his predecessors. It is as though the Historian commenced the story of each reign with a sigh over an opportunity lost of reversing past policy and initiating a holier and more blessed course; but still, 'in the lowest deep a lower deep opens wide,' till Ahab and Jezebel are reached. The Hope, that revives with Jehu, meets only with disappointment in him and in his specially-protected dynasty. The descent cannot be checked. The end reached at last is not only the captivity of the ten tribes, but their total disappearance as a distinct nation. <sup>34</sup> In...ing, &c.] Rather, at the cost of Abiram his firstborn, &c. The same concise expression was used by Joshua (6. 26) 500 years before, meaning loss by death; and the word build (banah) was used in the same sense, rebuild, fortify. Jericho existed as the city of palm trees in the days of Othniel (Judg. 3. 13), and David's ambassadors, whom Hanun insulted, tarried there while their beards grew (2 Sam. 10. 5). This unbelieving age undertook to defy God's command, and brave his curse, which was literally fulfilled. At this time, apparently, Jericho belonged to Israel; it was however in the bounds of Benjamin, and later reverted to Judah (2 Chr. 28. 15).

[JUDAH.] 1 K. xv.—23.] Asa's recorded acts were of a very mixed character. Glory and oppression, steadfastness and faithlessness, reformation and relapse, each occupy a page of their history (2 Chr. 15 & 16); but good predominates (v. 11; ch. 22. 43).—All his might.] The expression, now used for the first time of a king of Judah (cf. ch. 16. 5), indicates the growth of the military power of the kingdom.—Built.] Rather, restored. His people's respect was shown (cf. Jer. 34. 5) in even more than the usual twofold way, i.e. burial among the kings and a great burning (contrast 2 Chr. 21. 19 & 24. 25 & 28. 27), and no doubt the customary wailings, which were the third mark of regard for the departed, were not omitted (cf. Jer. 22. 18, 19).

<sup>2</sup> C. xvi. —12. Until.] Omit. Ital. e la sua infermità fu stremata; Vulg. aggravavit dolore pedum vehementissima. — Yet.] Probably Vulg. is correct, et nec, i.e. placed full reliance on God no more than he had done when seeking Syrian aid against Baasha; Germ. auch; Ital. ancora. — Physicians.] Lit. healers. The first mention of them, as a class, among the Hebrews. The feeling seems to have been (except in Egypt and Greece) generally prevalent, as it is still in the East, that medical and human agencies are unavailing. Similarly in N.T., maladies are viewed constantly as Satan's work or a judgment from God, and the finger of God is the remedy. Ewald sees in the course, which Asa adopted and the Chronicler reproves, an evidence that a high state of civilization had been maintained since Solomon's days. It is possible, however, that the majority of these were pretenders to magical powers, as was the case in Assyria. 'It is not to be supposed that Israel was more enlightened in such matters than the nations to which it owed so large a share of its civilization, or indeed than Christian England of the 17th century.'—Bull. 'But' is an emphatic word in this sentence; there is no opposition between the true healer's art and reliance on God's blessing. <sup>14</sup> Bed.] It may be that on which he lay in state, or it may be a costly bier. — Prepared.] Rather, compounded, as in Ex. 30. 25.—Great.] In quantity and costliness of spices, and perhaps also by the burning of the furniture he had ordinarily used. This last was the custom only among the high and wealthy, but the other (myrrh and aloes) was included, for all ranks, in 'the manner of the Jews to bury.' 'An hundred pound weight' was the amount provided by Nicodemus (John 19. 39; cf. Gen. 50. 2).

1 K. xxii.—41.] Hostility to Israel marked the opening of Jehoshaphat's reign. Israel might be expected to retaliate on him the injuries done by Benhadad at Asa's instigation (2 Chron. 10. 4), and precautions must be taken. It had been well for him had the feeling never changed (Ps. 139. 22).

1 K. xxii.—43. Asa his father.] So also Chr. 20. 32; but Chr. 17. 3 has David (omitted however in Sept.).—High places.] Cf. 1 Sam. 9. 12, note. Whether these high places were used for the worship of God or of idols is not stated. We should be disposed to assume that it was for the former, and that the sin was error in judgment, or a yielding to popular prejudice in favour of long-established, though unlawful, custom, and not breach of the second commandment, and to take Chr. p. 6 to mean that the high places connected with asherah-worship (Astarte's emblems) were removed. Thus a seeming contradiction would disappear: only, however, to reappear in 2 Chr. 20. 33, where the expression had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers, might indeed mean, were not (in spite of national religious education, 2 Chr. 17. 9) yet trained to worship Him on His holy hill only; but in general (cf. 2 Chr. 12. 14 & 19. 3) it seems, certainly, to refer to a forsaking God for idols. It is stated, however (Chr. p. 3), that none of the Baals received worship, and the expression doings of Israel, seems rather to apply to Astarte-worship than to the calf-worship, which could little attract any king of Judah.

His natural energy was increased and hope quickened. He 'was encouraged' (margin). — Groves. Rather, asherahs. His efforts to extirpate (Kin. v. 46) the impurity always connected with Ashtaroth-worship were more successful than his father's; cf. ch. 19. 3 and 1 Kin. 14. 24, note.

2 C. xvii. — 7. Third year. He lost no time in setting about such reforms as (Ps. 82. 5) were sorely needed, desiring to walk in 'the first ways' of Asa, and complete what he had begun, and fully persuaded that there was no security for the permanence of any reforms, but that general growth of moral tone which springs from religious education. Cf. Ezra 7. 10; Neh. 8. 8; ch. 19. — To his princes. Omit to throughout. — Ben-hail. = son of labour. Of his name only does God's name not form part (cf. Acts 6. 3). It may be a surname only; Sept. and Syr. have the plural, descriptive of the four others. — To teach. i.e. to arrange, each in his own district, for instruction by the appointed teaching priests (ch. 15. 3) and Levites. These five secular persons were as an Educational

Mal. 2. 4-7. — The law. i.e. the five books of Moses. Between the reigns of Jehoshaphat and Josiah the Law was lost; its contents were unknown to Josiah and his advisers. 10. Fear, &c. The light shining before men results ever in both God's glory and man's prosperity. 11. Presents. Solomon had in the same way received tribute from surrounding nations. — Tribute. The word massa is so rendered here only. It means literally burden, a load of silver. — Arabians. i.e. nomad tribes roving between Philistia and Arabia, 'having affinity with the Cushites' (ch. 21. 16). — Brought flocks. Mesha paid larger tribute of this kind to Ahab (2 Kin. 3. 4). 12. Castles. In ch. 27. 4, where king Uzziah acts similarly, and the only other place where the word occurs, it is coupled with towers. Probably it means fortresses standing alone, as distinguished from castles forming the citadels of towns (margin, follows Tarqums). In the forests, watchtowers rising above the trees would be necessary. The cities of store, or magazines, would also be fortified. 13. Business.

Probably the numbers are a confused copy of ch. 14. 8. [ISRAEL.] 1 K. xvii.—1.] A change in the style of the narrative is noticeable; it becomes more graphic, more like a series of passages from stirring biographies, less like extracts from official annals. Very probably the writers quoted belonged to some School of the Prophets.—Elijah.] Heb. Eliyahu; Sept. Ἠλιών; N. T. Ἠλίας. A name well borne out by the life, if its meaning be Jehorah is my God; but it would be perhaps more after the rule of such words (Eldad, God is a friend; Eliab, God is a father; Eliud, God is majesty; Elimelech, God is king; Elisha, God is welfare, &c.) if it meant God is Jehorah. (Cf. however Hezekiah, the Lord is strength; Elioenai, mine eyes are towards God; Daniel, God is judge; Ezekiel, God will strengthen.) 'The distinctive inspiration of Elijah was religious conviction and sentiment, and not mere patriotism. Against all the organised powers and social forces of his age, he stands in the simple might of his religious convictions.'—Allon. Both sacred and secular history furnish many examples (Moses and Paul, Athanasius, Mahomet, and Luther, 'the solitary monk that shook the world,' &c.) of weak solitary men becoming revolutionary powers in society simply through strong sense of Divine supremacy, depth of religious feeling, strength of religious conviction, and fixed consciousness of a Divine commission. Elijah is the supreme instance. We are left in uncertainty as to the scene of his bringing up, as to whether he was a native of Gilead (the tract on the east of the Jordan, from the Dead Sea to the sea of Chinneroth), or migrated thither; what is said is that he was a toshab of the toshabim of Gilead, i.e. either stranger of the strangers, or Tishbite of Tishbi (site unknown). He had watched the growing sinfulness; and, seeing no hope of remedy but through tribulation (under strong compulsion, Jer. 20. 9), had prayed earnestly that it might not rain (Jas. 5. 17). From God had come the assurance, that so it should be, and the bidding, which he was now fulfilling. Tradition says that Elijah pointed Ahab to the judgment on Hiel, and warned him in vain.—[Inhabitants.] Rather, sojourners in; though the root-verb means simply dwell, the noun means foreign-dweller.—[Gilead.] Gilead means rocky region, and the wild grandeur of its scenery, 'unequalled in any other part of Palestine' (Tristram), seems from the first (Judg. 11. 1) to have influenced the character of its people (Gen. 49. 19). It was, also, as a forest-clad region of mountains lying between the settled lands of Palestine and the Arabian desert, the natural resort of the refugee and the outlaw. Such incongruous characters as a fugitive king (2 Sam. 17. 24), an Elijah, a Jephthah, or a conspirator, might be found there (cf. 1 Chr. 12. 8).—[LORD.] Rather, Jehovah; the A.V. very frequently, but notably here, rendering Jehovah by LORD, keeps out of view that emphasis was intended to be laid on the fact that, since the revelation on Horeb that Jehovah was to be their God's distinctive name, every use of it was a reminder that Israel was a Covenant-people. Cf. 1 Sam. 17. 26, note.—Before whom I stand.] There is no higher, nobler title than that by which Elijah announces himself. Elisha also claimed it (2 Kin. 3. 14 & 5. 16), and St. Paul (Acts 27. 23). It is applied to Moses in Deut. 34. 5, who is associated with Elijah in Matt. 17 (where note, in vs. 1, 3, the association of 3 classes of 'servants of God'). Isaiah perhaps stands out as the prophet most mighty in word; certainly Elijah and Elisha in deed; Moses in both.—There shall not be.] Hope (dwelling on Solomon's prayer in ch. 8. 35) might utter this as a call (cf. Lev. 26. 18, 19) to repentance. It might be the saving of Israel, now hovering between precept and example, between the Law and the Court, between obedience to revealed religion and the attractions of that vice on which natural religion imposed no check. To us there seem no signs of indecision; Israel seems 'wholly given to idolatry'; but it was not altogether so (ch. 18. 21); there was a heaven of saints and prophets (ch. 18. 13 & 19. 18). Such hope, however, was not at present in Elijah's breast (Jas. 5. 17).—[Rain.] Of the four words for rain (mutar; geshem, a pouring rain; mal'kesh, the 'latter rain,' and yoreh, the 'former rain') he used the last, and unlikely, for the failure of the early rain was a very rare occurrence.—These years.] Three and a half (Luke 4. 25; cf. ch. 18. 1). <sup>3</sup> Brook.] Rather, torrent-bed, and so in v. 5, &c.; Vulg. in torrente; Heb. nachal, not to be confounded with nahar = river (perennial; from the verb to flow). Nachal (from the verb chalal, to perforate) is (like Arab. wady, and Ital. jiunara) commonly rather the course of the summer-dry stream (Sept. χεράδριος) than the stream itself.—[Cherith.] The position of Cherith is unknown; apparently it was beyond Jordan, which is fed by numberless small streams on either side.—Before.] i.e. E. of Jordan. The quarters of the heavens, in Biblical language, are named from the position of a spectator facing E.; hence 'the backside of the desert' in Ex. 3. 1 means the W. side of it. <sup>4</sup> Ravens.] Cf.—

'He by the brook of Cherith stood,
And saw the ravens with their horny beaks
Food to Elijah bringing, even and morn'; Though ravens, taught to abstain from what they brought.'—Milton.

Not the only instance of the inferior creation's employment in carrying out God's purposes; witness the locusts, flies, lice, serpents, quails, Balaam's ass, Jonah's whale, the disobedient prophet's lion, Elisha's bears, &c. The raven was an unclean bird; but Elijah's legal scruples might well be set aside, as David's were in the matter of the shew-bread. The name means black. It is worth notice how frequently the raven is cited as illustrating God's good providence (Job 38. 41; 1's. 147. 9; Luke 12. 24). 'The critical period of the great Baal apostasy, and of the struggle of Elijah and Elisha against it, is the second great epoch of recorded miracle in O. T.—the still more criti-

<sup>9</sup> Arise, get thee to <sup>6</sup>Zarephath, which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee.

<sup>13</sup> And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son. <sup>14</sup> For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, cal epoch of Moses and Joshua being the first.—Barry. 7. A while.) How long Elijah's food was miraculously supplied cannot be determined. At the end of days is literal. It may mean at the year's or at the week's end (as, not improbably, in Gen. 4. 3); it may be indefinite (see v. 4, note, and ch. 18. 1). 9. To Zarephath.) Possibly for security (though it was daringly near to Jezebel's father); but doubtless also to teach the lesson that Gentiles also may be members of the household of faith (Luke 4. 25); and it may be, as well, that otherwise than in praying against Israel and executing judgment, elsewhere than in the solitudes, he might learn lessons of sympathy. Sarepta lay between Tyre and Sidon, not far therefore from the spot where a similar lesson was taught later (Mark 7. 24-31). Again, I have commanded was an assurance on which Elijah's faith could rest. The unlikelihood was scarcely less. It is recorded in the life of Bp. Gobat, that once, when in a desolate part of Abyssinia, he thought he must prepare his companions' minds for a fast next day, but refrained, lest he might be showing want of faith in God. At noon next day a young man, a stranger, met him and presented a basket of provisions and a cruse of beer. He explained his coming thus:—'My master could not rest last night; he rose at length, and bade me carry this gift to the wanderer who would come along this road; you are the first stranger I have met.' Whether hers also, we are left to guess. Certainly her conduct passed the bounds of all mere human kindness. Of her heroic faith it might well be said, 'I have not found the like, no, not in Israel.' Acts 12. 20 (with Ezek. 27. 17) would lead us to expect that Phœnicia also would be suffering from famine, and Menander, a Phœnician historian, mentions a great drought, closing with thunderstorms, in the reign of Ethbaal.—Cruse.] Cf. 2 Kin. 2. 20, note.—Two.) Receiving a prophet in the name of a prophet, she received also a prophet's reward. <sup>17. Breath</sup>.] Sept. πνεῦμα; Vulg. halitus. The word occurs in Gen. 2. 7 (πνοή, spiraculum). Frequently rendered spirit, Prov. 20. 27; Job 26. 4 (πνοή, spiraculum, spiramentum), it is rendered soul in Isa. 57. 16 (πνοή, flatus); but it does not mean, what we commonly mean by those words, the immaterial, incorruptible part of man. <sup>18. What</sup>.] Equivalent to, Why didn't you leave me alone? why did you come to trouble me? Probably Elijah's leisure had been employed in instructing her and her son. Cf. 'He taught me all the mercy, for he showed me all the sin.' It may be that the memory of some such lesson came back upon her mind; but to connect sin with suffering, transgression with trouble, is natural all the world over—and not altogether an error; cf. 1 Cor. 11. 30; John 9. 2. It is in the transition from the general to the particular that misjudging is likely. She uses the recognized title for God's messenger (Judg. 13. 6, &c.). Her sin may have been the marriage with a heathen, being herself an Israelite. For us, trouble need not always be a reminder of a special sin, but always of a sinful rebellious nature, that needs discipline, of general short-coming and unworthiness (cp. Gen. 32. 10). But never should we suffer the bewilderment of trouble to lead us to think that it were better to be further from God's presence (Luke 5. 8) or God's interference. Cf.—

<sup>19. Give me</sup>.] Sept. δέξαι; Elijah must have been less than man in sympathy had he not been moved by pity now. It means a good first-floor room, more commonly a sitting-room than a bed-room, specially one set apart for state occasions and for guests. <sup>20. Stretched</sup>.] With Elisha (2 Kin. 4. 34), as here, prayer was the main effectual cause (cf. Acts 9. 40); but apparently he was directed to use means such as might restore suspended animation. Elijah's action was different. It was solemn, but not necessary for the result, like Christ's taking Jairus' daughter by the hand. Prophets and apostles (Acts 19. 12) seem at times to have possessed a share of that 'virtue,' the fulness of which, as of all else, resided in Christ [1 K. xvii. 16—24.]

1 KINGS XVIII.

<sup>1</sup> AND it came to pass after <sup>a</sup> many days, that the word of the LORD came to Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, shew thyself unto Ahab; and <sup>b</sup> I will send rain upon the earth. <sup>2</sup> And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab.

And there was a sore famine in Samaria. <sup>3</sup> And Ahab called Obadiah, which was the governor of his house. (Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly: <sup>4</sup> for it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) <sup>5</sup> And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts. <sup>6</sup> So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

<sup>7</sup> And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah? <sup>8</sup> And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. <sup>9</sup> And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me? <sup>10</sup> As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, He is not there; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not. <sup>11</sup> And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. <sup>12</sup> And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that <sup>c</sup> the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee, whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee,

1 K. xviii.—1.] The Jewish Lectionary appoints this narrative to be read with Ex. 30-34. Moses at Sinai, Elijah at Carmel are well compared; also cf. Josh. 24. 15; Deut. 30. 19. Similarly, the next chapter is read with Num. 25-30.—Third year.] From his coming to Zarephath; the drought lasted 3½ years. See refs. and ch. 17. 4, 7, notes. 3.] Obadiah means worshipper of Jehorah, a title of no little honour, when such worship was the likeliest road to death. It is to Ahab's credit, that, knowing Obadiah's stanchness, he yet, despite imperious Jezebel's rancour, retained him as οἰκονόμος, dispenser, steward (ch. 16. 9 & 4. 6), hofmeister. 4. Prophets of the Lord.] We have no clue to their number, either before or after this persecution. Their character we are left to infer from one or two prominent examples. Some, doubtless, were no better than the old Bethel prophet; others were endued, more or less, with the spirit and power of Elijah. It is of the few, however, rather than of the many that Milman's glowing words are true:—<sup>4</sup> At this period the prophets act their most prominent and important part in Hebrew history, particularly in that of Israel, where, the Levites having been expelled, and the priesthood degraded, they remained the only defenders of the law and religion of the land, a separate and influential class in the state, constitutional patriots, champions of virtue, liberty, justice, and the strict observance of the civil and religious law, against the iniquities of the kings and people. They boldly rebuke, but never factiously insult, their kings; they defend, but never flatter, the people.

On the eastern bluff of Carmel, where, 18 miles from Jezreel, and 16 miles inland from the cape Ras el Kerun, the mountain breaks off suddenly, the culminating precipice is 1,750 feet above the sea, and falls for 1,000 feet, first sheer for 300 feet, and then by a steep but grassy slope to the plain of Jezreel, the Kishon washing its foot. On the crest were heaped the stones of an ancient altar of Jehovah, overthrown by Jezebel. At the foot of the cliff, nestled under it, is an ancient fountain, with a reservoir partially roofed which receives the supply of the perennial spring. It is 8 feet deep, and the old steps are still in place. It is 'the water of the fountain' spoken of by Josephus. Writers ignorant of the topography have suggested water of the sea, which was a day's journey distant. At the bottom and on the sides of the tank are molluscs (Neritina nichenii), of a species never found except where the water is perennial (as at Engedi and Jericho). All other wells were dry; Kishon had shrunk to a string of pools, and then disappeared entirely; here was water still to fill Elijah's trench (Tristram). Around are oak and brushwood which would supply the wood. Many a historic scene is visible calculated to awaken wholesome recollections, a panorama of three quarters of a circle; distant Tabor, down which once poured the hosts of Barak; Gilboa, whence the gleam of Gideon's 300 spears flashed on startled Midian; where, too, the shield of the mighty but God-forsaken Saul was vilely cast away. The Mohrakah (place of burning) is like an amphitheatre in shape. The lower slopes would accommodate many thousand witnesses. Lev. 19. 28, and from tattooing), no doubt, arose from the latent knowledge that without shedding of blood is no remission. It prevailed in all quarters of the globe; Herodotus (ii. 61) says of the Carian worshippers of Isis, τὰ μέτωπα κόπτονται μαχαίρησι; 'their arms and tongues,' Lucian says of the Syrian priests; de femore, Tertullian (Apol. 9); cf. JEHOSHAPHAT—(Jehu).AHAB—(Elijah).

<sup>30</sup> And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him.

<sup>1</sup> And he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down. <sup>31</sup> And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, "Israel shall be thy name;" <sup>32</sup> and with the stones he built an altar <sup>2</sup> in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

<sup>33</sup> And he <sup>3</sup> put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and <sup>4</sup> pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood. <sup>34</sup> And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time. <sup>35</sup> And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled <sup>5</sup> the trench also with water.

<sup>36</sup> And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said,

LORD <sup>6</sup> God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, <sup>7</sup> let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that <sup>8</sup> I have done all these things at thy word. <sup>37</sup> Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

<sup>38</sup> Then <sup>9</sup> the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

<sup>39</sup> And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, <sup>10</sup> The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

Generally, however, what Ewald says is true of Elijah, as of most of the prophets. The northern kingdom alone is viewed as the field of their activity. For them Israel is comprised in that. Apparently Astarte's 400 prophets had declined answering to the summons. 'The deed was a solemn, terrible execution, not a fanatical massacre. It was needful at any cost to repress idolatry. Prophets of the Lord and priests of Baal could not co-exist (cf. v. 21). Idolatry was no mere religious error, it was treason, direct and defiant, against Israel's supreme King. It was better that these 450 priests should die [1 K. xviii. 30—40.]

And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; <sup>43</sup> and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees, <sup>43</sup> and said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, Go again seven times. <sup>44</sup> And it came to pass at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand.

And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

<sup>45</sup> And it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain.

than that the nation should become apostate and lost.—Green. 'It is better that the wicked should be destroyed a hundred times over than that they should tempt those who are as yet innocent to join their company.'—Arnold. But the rightful sense of burning indignation against moral evil must for the Christian be tempered by the recollection of Luke 9. 55. It may be they had instigated, or shared in Jezebel's crime (v. 4). Even Gospel condemnation of misleaders of others is stern (Matt. 18. 6).—There. For who would bury these 450 corpses? Cp. 41. Abundance. Rather, the noise (Var., so margin. 'a noise'; the word, however, does not seem to have that meaning in Isa. 60. 5, and cannot in Gen. 17. 4, 5). Vulg. multæ; Sept. τῶν ποδῶν τοῦ ὑετοῦ. 42. Went up. Ahab returned from Tell Cassis (v. 19) to the Mohrakah to enjoy the sacrificial feast, which usually accompanied sacrifice, though here we might hardly have expected it. Elijah's mind was to finish his Master's work. The rain was promised; already, the sound of its coming had reached his ears—yet he prays, πάλιν προσήύαστο (James 5. 18). So after the  $\frac{3}{2}$  years of Christ's prayers came the gracious rain of His Spirit on his inheritance.—The top. The spot where the ruined altar was. The place whence the western sea could be viewed would be about 200 yards further.—Cast. R.V. bowed.—Put, &c. The usual Oriental attitude for lengthened prayer.—Cf. 2 Sam. 7. 18, note. 44. Hand. Jos. sole of foot, cf. shon and its tributaries drain the plain of Jezreel; its floods are sudden, and its fords treacherous.'—Variorum Teacher's Bible, p. 61. Cf. Judg. 5. 21. 45. Meanwhile. Rather, instantaneously, as is usual still in the Levant. In the seeing of a pendulum would express in English the phrase, which Sept. renders literally, ὥς ὥδε καὶ ὥδε; Vulg. cumque se verteret huc atque illuc. 46. Ran. The ordinary Runner (shatir) is always expected to keep up with a horse. This 18 miles would be over the plain of Esdraelon; but Elijah's strength was supernatural. His purpose probably was to prevent its being said that he had lowered the king in his people's eyes. The effect on the court, however, was nevertheless only exasperation. Ahab's capital was still Samaria (ch. 22. 10, 37), but his favourite palace at Jezreel (ch. 21. 1).—Entrance. No further could he safely venture. Jezebel was there.—Jezreel. The modern Zerin occupies the site, but not a vestige of the ancient city remains, except some broken marble sarcophagi with the crescent-moon of Ashtaroth upon them; cp. 2 Kin. 9. 35. 'No destruction has been more complete and utter, even in this land of ruins, than that of Jezreel.'—Tristram. It lay on a gentle swell (having on one side a steep descent of 100 feet) under Mt. Gilboa, near the centre of Esdraelon, the east portion of which was known as 'valley of Jezreel.' Its name, seed-plot of God (in which sense the word occurs in Hos. 1. 11), testifies to the fertility of its soil. Its beauty now lies in its commanding views (towards Jordan, and Tabor, and Carmel) and verdant landscape. Its importance was limited to the reigns of Ahab and Ahaziah. In Hos. 1. 4 its name is used as synonymous with Ahab's house; cf. 2 Kin. 9. 35, note.

117.—Elijah's Despair.—The Revelation.

I KINGS XIX.

<sup>1</sup> AND Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had <sup>a</sup> slain all the prophets with the sword.

<sup>2</sup> Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, <sup>b</sup> So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by to-morrow about this time.

<sup>3</sup> And when he saw that, he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there. <sup>4</sup> But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper

1 K. xix.—The portion of Elijah's story which closes with this chapter is one of marked transitions; from the quiet obscurity of Zarephath to the prominence and tumultuous scenes of Carmel; from prayer against Israel to prayer for Israel; from sublime confidence to distrustful cowardice; from ardour to dejection; from being champion of God's honour to dishonouring God by doubting his wisdom and his power; from doing the king service to receiving commission to (indirectly) destroy him and all his house; from pinnacles of Hope to abysses of Despair.—2. Sent a messenger.] Either, in the impulsiveness of her anger, forgetting that would be the very means of making the accomplishment of her threat impossible; or (and the absence of the priests under her special patronage from the test-sacrifice rather points to this) in her heart afraid of one who had such power to sway the people and who dared to stand alone defying royal or priestly power, and hoping for the very thing which did happen, namely, Elijah's flight.—So let, &c.] Sept. εἰ σὺ εἰ Ἡλίου καὶ ἑγὼ Ἰε(άβελ, τάδε κ.τ.λ. Benhadad swore the same oath (ch. 20. 10; cf. 1 Sam. 25. 22; 2 Kin. 6. 31). <sup>3</sup> Saw, &c.] The Hebrew is almost as terse as Cæsar's Tenē, &c.: he saw (Sept. ἐφωβήθη; so Vulg., R.V. marg.), he rose, he went. The life of Elijah has been compared to that of Athanasius, full of sudden reverses, Sept. adds, κατὰ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ; Vulg. quocumque cum ferebat voluntas; i.e. taking no counsel with God.—For his life.] And yet his wish was to die; at least, so he said. The worse side of the character of him, whom St. James describes as 'subject to like passions as we are,' is not concealed from us. We admire his human sympathy at Zarephath, but even there his tone (ch. 17. 20) seems a misjudging of God after the manner of men; we admire, we covet, his manly outspoken fearlessness before Ahab; but we cannot see anything to admire in flight from the path of duty and usefulness, in forsaking his post, in peevishness, in loss of confidence in God, in displeasure with God, in presumptuously arraigning His method of dealing with sinners and establishing the Kingdom of righteousness and truth. The explanation of it all is this—Elijah was a man, subject to human passions and infirmities. It was not (as perhaps it was with Jonah), that 'last infirmity of noble minds,' the love of fame; his reputation was not at stake, the threat he had uttered had been fulfilled; it was simply bodily and mental exhaustion, the reaction after over-strain. Humanity knows it well; it leads to many an inconsistency, which must not be too hastily judged; and added to this was a strong, an overwhelming sense of loneliness. Certainly these three chapters prove the truth of St. James' statement.—Came.] Beer-sheba (the well of the oath betwixt Abraham and Abimelech, the scene of Hagar's despair and comforting, and of the revival of Jacob's hope) belonged to Simeon, now united to Judah. It was little short of 100 miles S.E. of Jezreel, a good two days' journey even to one going 'for his life.' Judah was too friendly now with Israel to allow of any permanent safety within its bounds (ch. 22. 4; 2 Kin. 8. 18), even at a border-town like Beer-sheba.—Left, &c.] Jewish tradition says it was the youthful Jonah. Cf. Gen. 22. 5; Exod. 24. 2; Mark 8. 23. <sup>4</sup> A juniper tree.] Rather, a broom-plant. Modern travellers have done the same and found good shelter from wind, and sun, and rain. The rôthem (Arab, retem; Alger, retama) is not a juniper, but the Retama (or genista) retam, a desert broom, bearing delicate pink and white flowers in February. It forms a thick bush 10 or 12 feet high. Its massive roots produce the finest charcoal (= the hottest fire, Is. 420. 4). The roots are bitter, but might be eaten in extremity (Job 30. 4). —Said, &c.] The despair of Moses and of Jonah found vent in similar words. We are to learn to believe that our prayer is heard even if the answer be something quite different from what we hoped or expected. Cf. 'So find we profit by losing of our prayers.'—Shaks. It was answer sufficient here that his depression of spirits was removed, and he led to feel no longer that he was a useless being in the world; cp. 2 Cor. 12. 9; Heb. 5. 7. We are to learn to add in every case, 'Let the answer be of what kind Thon seest best;' even with a prayer which we know to be for the right thing, 'And in the world to come life everlasting,' to add, 'Yet bring me to that by whatsoever road seems best to Thee, by a pathway of flowers or thorns, through a day of clouds or sunshine, over a sea of calm or storm.' Cf.—

'Oh teach Him not

When and how to hear thy prayers.'—Ulrich.

—Not better.] Perhaps, in his elation a short while before, he had been thinking otherwise, and that he was about to work such reformation as never man had wrought. He had passed, as is common, from one extreme of feeling to the other. No command for this journey is mentioned, as to Cherith and Zarephath; and the question of v. 9, repeated v. 13, and the return of v. 15 imply censure. See v. 11, note, and cf.—

'Back then, complainer; loath thy life no more,
Nor deem thyself upon a desert shore,

Because the rocks the nearer prospect close.

Yet in fallen Israel are there hearts and eyes

Thou knowest them not, but their Creator knows.

The command, however, is somewhat inexplicable. Only by a miracle could this food sustain him 40 days. It would seem immaterial whether he ate once or twice. Cf. Ex. 34. 28; Matt. 4. 2.

8. Forty days.] From Horeb to Kadesh was 11 days' journey (Deut.

1. 2) for Israel; to Beersheba would be perhaps 20 miles further, some 200 miles in all.

Elijah's journey therefore was leisurely or indirect; it was part of the discipline, may be, that he needed; his 'nets' needed 'mending,' though he was all unconscious of it.

—Horeb.] Horeb is the N. part of Sinai, called, apparently by anticipation, the mountain of God as early as Exod. 3. 1. Horeb probably means mountain of the dried-up ground; Sinai, mountain of the thorn. It is remarkable that neither name now survives.

'Transfigured mount' it has been called (Dis-

Sinai, as on the Mount of the Transfiguration, the three dispensations met in one.

Here Moses received the tables of the law,

The actual question and answer occurred in the still moments named in v. 12. Sept. reads in v. 11, 'Go forth tomorrow . . . the Lord shall pass by.' 10. Jealous.] And to what purpose, he would say, when God is so remiss concerning His own honour? Such also was the tone of Christ's brethren, 'If thou do these things, show thyself to the world' (John 7. 4), and of the Baptist's question, 'Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?' (Matt. 11. 3).—Lord God of hosts.] The title Jehovah Eloī Sabaoth is here first used, specially, no doubt, to mark the contrast with Baal and Astarte, the pretended sun and moon deities, and others of the host of heaven (Aets 7. 42, 43). We find the shorter title Jehovah Sabaoth both earlier and later. Idolatry was unknown after the Captivity. 11. Behold, &c.] It is difficult to explain the purpose of this vision without admitting that there is gentle censure on Elijah's fierce fiery methods of reformation. Probably Keble rightly points out its purpose—

'Hark! a still small voice
Steals on the ear, to say, Jehovah's choice
Is ever with the soft, meek tender soul;
By soft meek tender ways He loves to draw
The sinner, startled by his ways of awe:
Here is our Lord, and not where thunders roll.'

He looked for the God of judgment; he found the God of mercy. He was taught (comp. Exod. 19. 16 with 34. 6) that the gentleness of God (1 Cor. 1. 25) is more influential than his wonders, that God's forbearance leadeth to repentance (Jer. 31. 3; Zech. 4. 6). Probably, in a sense, Elijah also, like James and John, knew not what manner of spirit he was of. Here only, Gospel prophecy comes through Elijah. In no storm, earthquake, or fire of vengeance, wrath and might, 'would God be brought so near to man, as in the still small voice of the Child at Bethlehem, as in the ministrations of Him whose cry was not heard in the streets, in the awful stillness of the Cross, in the never-failing order of Providence, in the silent, insensible influence of the good deeds and good words of God and of man' (Stanley). 12. Voice.] Lit. a sound of soft stillness, coming like the Gospel after the Law. 13. Mantle.] 'A hairy man (which might apply to his cloak, but Sept. has δασύς, and cf. 2 Kin. 2. 23), girt with a girdle of leather' is the description of Elijah in 2 Kin. 1. 8. His mantle was of sheepskin (Sept. μῆλωτός; cf. Zech. 13. 4), not a linen gown; his belt of leather, not soft linen (cf. Matt. 3. 4); and he wore no large shawl, or abba, with which he might cover his head (cf. Ex. 3. 6; Isa. 6. 2). 14. I only.] 'Among the faithless, faithful only he' (Milton), Elijah thought, as many another has done; but wrongly. 15. Go, &c.] Sept. εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν σου; Vulg. in viam tuam; as though recalling that he was even now a wanderer from Duty's path. Cf.—

'Perhaps our God may of our conscience ask,

'Vengeance is mine;' 'Tarry thou the Lord's leisure;' these seem to be the lessons behind this command; and tenderly God removes the root of that sense of loneliness which had driven Elijah to flee from his allotted sphere (v. 18). He must have left two of the commands unfulfilled, because he thought the fit time had not come. Whether rightly or wrongly, we cannot tell; but there is this further message for us, Go; in the face of impossibilities, go forward; as the fire came down from heaven at the prayer of Elijah, and consumed the sacrifice, licking up even the water in the trench, so shall acceptance from above honour your weak yet hearty desire to glorify God's name, shall dry up the very tears with which you have mourned over the worthlessness of your offering; Go forward in prayer, in praise, in self-denial, in devotedness, in holy confidence. Cf.—

'An answer—not that you ask for,

But diviner—will come one day.

Your eyes are too dim to see it,

Yet strive, and wait, and pray.'

Procter.

—Damascus.] By the same 'way' did the Divine Will afterwards lead St. Paul.—When thou comest.] Geneva Vers. renders, that thou mayest.

16. Jehu.] Perhaps Ahab's penitence caused postponement of judgment, and consequently of Jehu's anointing. —Son.] Commonly so called; really grandson (2 Kin. 9. 2). —Shaphat.] The name means judge. Cf. 1 Sam. 8. 1, note. —Abel-meholah.] Near Bethshan (ch. 4. 12); in the Jordan valley, on Elijah's road to Damascus. —Anoint.] Anointing is recorded of priests and kings, not of prophets. It may be that 'anoint' was used simply with the meaning 'set apart for God.' 1's. 105. 15 points to this.—Touch not mine anointed (i.e. the patriarchs, one of whom was, in Gen. 20. 7, called prophet) = my chosen ones.

—In thy room.] 'Their work was continuous, but their linked missions differed as their names.—Elijah (Jehovah is God) proved to the lost sheep of Israel God's unity and his mastery of the universe by a few miracles of power, by a ministry of indignant condemnation and austere holiness, relieved by gleams of personal tenderness, on which the N. T. dwells. He lived in the storm, and was translated. His work was destructive. Elisha (God is help or salvation) illustrated his name to Judah, Israel, and the surrounding heathen by many miracles of mercy and of moral influence, by a ministry of personal pitifulness tempered by flashes of avenging severity. He lived in the calm, and died the death of all men. Elijah, the desert-mountaineer, the solitary Nazarite, by dress, mien, and habits, protested (like John) against Israel's sinful luxury; Elisha, the denizen of cities and courts, the statesman and counsellor of the least, living (like Christ) in the world, yet not of it, leavened society by consistent example and calm piety, as only lovers therein can.' His work was constructive, raising an edifice on ground which Elijah had cleared, as one clears a backwood allotment with axe and fire. 17. Come to pass.]

The fulfilment is to be found in 2 Kin. 8. 28 & 10. 32 & 13. 3 & 9. 24-33 & 10. 1-7, 18-25. In the three names, Hazael, Jehu, Elisha, is contained the history of the next generation of Israel.—Shall Elisha slay.] Not however after the manner of Elijah's late slaughter. To pronounce God's decree is spoken of as equivalent to executing it. Ezekiel (43. 3) says 'when I came to destroy the city.' The expression would accord well with Elijah's present temper. 18. I have left.] Var. will I leave (so R.V.), i.e. spare; the swords that execute this wrath shall not fall on them.

—Kissed.] 'They kiss calves' is in Hosea 13. 2 equivalent to worship them. 'Kiss the Son' is in Ps. 2. 12 equivalent to Do him homage (cf. 1 Sam. 10. 1). To 'kiss the hand to sun or moon' is said by Job (31. 27) to be denying God. Images of the Virgin worn away with kisses may be seen in many foreign churches. David from the sheepfold, Amos from the herd, Elisha from the furrow. Truly agriculture is not without her honourable men. It does not appear that Elijah had to break family-ties to enter on God's service. He was the Melchizedek of prophecy. Elisha would readily understand the meaning of the symbolic act (which formed part of the ceremony of adoption), viz. Follow me and succeed me. His seven years' service extended to the most menial offices (2 Kin. 3. 11), though he had been master of 12 ploughs.—He with the twelfth.] A touch of accuracy. Had he been anywhere but last, all behind must have stopped. Often a dozen ploughs may be seen in one field, following one another, making no proper furrow, only parallel scratches close together. Each day one sower can sow each day's ploughing, following behind. Sometimes the sowing is done first. Then ploughing is practically harrowing with a number of ploughs. Harrows are unknown, though hoes are sometimes used in a similar way to break the clods.—By, I rather, over unto. 20. Go back.] i.e. if thou wilt. The lesson of ch. 18. 21 must be learnt in some way by every man. We can only surmise that he forbore to risk a visit to his home in deference to the gentle rebuke of Elijah. Cf. Luke 9. 61, 21. Instruments.] i.e. plough and yoke (cf. 2 Sam. 24. 22); the sacrifice took place upon the spot, not at home, or this would have been unnecessary.—Ministered.] Apparently Elisha did not leave Elijah, but by a constant ministry and constant companionship with Elijah underwent a training for his future office. Compare and contrast Gehazi, the personal attendant on Elisha.

1 K. xx.—Both Sept. and Josephus (perhaps rightly) place the Syrian invasion later, i.e. after the episode of Naboth.—

1. Ben-hadad.] Son of Benhadad, Ouri's foe (v. 34), who was bribed by Asa (ch. 15. 19) to break his league with Baasha; cf. ch. 11. 14, 25, notes, and Jer. 49. 27 (a quotation from Amos 1. 4). The kings were subject-kings (v. 24), once probably Solomon's Hittite vassals, and in his days supplying themselves with horses and chariots from Egypt; cf. ch. 10. 29; the Syrian kingdom was a confederacy, owing the suzerainty of successive Benhadads. The present invasion is apparently an attempt to force Ahab to join it.—Besieged.] That he first overran the entire country is indicated by the absence of all mention of an Israelite army in the field, and by the presence of all the provincial 'governors' in the capital. 3. Goodliest.] The word means good in its widest sense; as eunuchs or concubines he would desire the good-looking, as hostages the most esteemed and influential.—Are mine.] The tone is that of Xerxes' demand for 'earth and water.' The demands even of Nadir on Delhi were more moderate, and he conquered it first. Refusal was looked for as a ground for violence, as an excuse for sacking the city; cf. 2 Kin. 5. 7. Ahab's submissiveness puts Benhadad in a difficulty (reminding of the fable of the wolf and the lamb). He next declares that he meant by

Whether the elders in towns were these members of the national senate, when at their several homes, or members of town senates, cannot be determined; cf. ch. 21. 8. rally, but less mountainous than the neighbourhood of Samaria. Mishor is the word always used of the trans-Jordanic downs. The Syrian generals naturally desired a battle on comparatively level ground (see v. 26, note), for they were strong in chariots. There were, and still are, no roads in Palestine. The strength of Israel was always infantry; and this by God's command, lest they should be tempted into wars of aggression (Deut. 17. 16). It may be that the Syrian counsellors here express their real belief, and think they are giving the real cause of defeat, or they may be merely seeking to inspire their men with hope. Either way, the Almighty is insulted by being called gods, and being limited. The belief in local gods is common to all polytheists. ## 119.—The Syrian Invasion.—The Ungodly Alliance.

1 KINGS XX. 26-43.

<sup>27</sup> And the children of Israel were numbered, and were all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians filled the country.

<sup>28</sup> And there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore <sup>b</sup>will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>29</sup> And they pitched one over against the other seven days. And so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day. <sup>30</sup> But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; and there a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left.

And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into an inner chamber.

<sup>31</sup> And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, <sup>c</sup>put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: peradventure he will save thy life. <sup>32</sup> So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

(‘simple lieutenants,’ Ewald), as likely to yield a stricter obedience; but these pachôth (pashas) were civil governors, though they might also lead in war; cf. ch. 22. 31; the kings were something lower than vassals if they could be so dealt with.

1 K. xx.—26. Up.] This Aphek, now Fik (the name means strength, and there were several Apheks, Josh. 12. 18 & 19. 30; 1 Sam. 4. 1 & 29. 1), was on a high table-land 6 miles E. of the Sea of Chinnereth, on the road from Damascus to Samaria (near the supposed scene of the destruction of the herd of swine). Here, later, Joash was promised victories over Syria (2 Kin. 13. 17). 27. Numbered.] Rather, mustered (as in v. 15).—

The primary meaning of the word is sufficed. Vulg. et acceptis ebaritis profecti ex adverso; Germ. und versorgeten sich; Ital. provvedutisi di vittuaglia.—Two.] Possibly points to the presence of auxiliaries from the south kingdom (h). 28. Man of God.] Probably not the former prophet; perhaps a resident beyond Jordan. It was arrogant scorn of God which brought down destruction on Sennacherib also (2 Kin. 19. 28).—Shall know, &c.] A formula constantly uttered by God’s messengers; God, condescending to human ideas, will give proof of his power, of his very existence. However, the providential success of his arms neither reconciled Ahab to the worship of the true God (cf. v. 43. note), nor taught him reverence for the institutes of his country’ (Milman). 30. A wall.] Rather, the wall. An earthquake would account for such destruction. One at Naples destroyed 40,000; at Lisbon, 50,000; at Peking, 300,000. No doubt the whole wall, and the space left clear for fighting purposes, would be one dense mass of men. There would be no escape from the fall of it and its towers.—Chamber.] Vulg. in cubiculum quod erat intra cubiculum; Sept.

eis τὸν οἶκον τοῦ κοιτῶνος, εἰς τὸ ταμεῖον. Many Eastern houses have secret chambers (ch. 22. 25). But probably, rather, dejection than hope of concealment led Benhadad thither. 31. Merciful.] No testimony, such as strangers to God’s influence have sometimes been constrained to bear, to the beauty of character discernible in God’s people; rather a condemnation of their sympathy and friendliness with idolaters.—Ropes.] In Egyptian and Persian sculptures both suppliants and prisoners of war appear (like the burghers of Calais before Edward III.) with ropes round their necks, indicating readiness for death or bondage. 32. Bro-

Ahab's covenant, like Joshua's with Gibeon, was made without consultation with God, and with a marvellous want of precaution; no hostages were required of Benhadad to insure his fulfilling his promises. It was in attempting to recover by force Ramoth, which Benhadad failed to surrender, that Ahab met his death. <sup>35.</sup> Sons of the prophets.] i.e. scholars; so called for the first time here, though referred to before. The judicial Murder of Naboth.

tion.] Literally, a man of (under) my bar. 43. Heavy.] Rather, discontented, sullen; cf. ch. 21. 4; or, as some interpret, malicious (with respect to the prophet). Ahab was not that wise man into whom reproof entereth more than an hundred stripes into a fool. A look sufficed for Peter; terror only could work penitence in Ahab, and that slowly (ch. 21. 27). In Ahab, as in Pharaoh, Eli's sons, Judas, we may find a corroboration of Prov. 29. 1. The three years' space intervening between the announcement and the doom was marked by no bettered spirit, rather by the grossest crimes of his life (ch. 21. 19 & 22. 27); he continued to the last to merit the character Hervey graphically depicts—'Weak, pliable, and therefore fickle; good-natured, but thoughtless; brave, but unstable; easily elated or depressed; emotional in religion, but without principle; vain and cruel; capable of rule, but from circumstances, influence, want of conscientiousness or force of character, a bad man and a bad king.' Comp. Tacitus' description of Felix, 'jus regium servili ingenio exercuit.'

'floor,' ch. 22. 10, marg.).—Jezreel.] Now Zerin, on a low spur of Mt. Gilboa; a lovely situation for a capital. No vestige of it remains above-ground, except perhaps a marble sarcophagus used as a horse-trough, or other such relics, serving their purpose, like Jezebel's skull and feet and palms. Still, the position is certain—the rocky slope where Naboth's vineyard stood; wine-presses (Besant); the road along which Jehu drove; and Jenin, the garden-house (2 Kin. 9. 27), to which Ahaziah fled. As a residence (in summer at any rate) it superseded Samaria and Tirzah for Ahab and two generations after him, though at present the court was at Samaria (ch. 20. 43). The whole plain bore its name. 2. Of herbs.] i.e. a garden, distinguished from a park of trees, or paradise. Kitchen gardens are mentioned in Deut. 11. 10 ('wateredst it with thy foot'); a cucumber garden in Isa. 1. 8. The irrigated gardens of Egypt, with their 'melons, leeks, onions, and garlic' (Num. 11. 5), probably illustrate this passage. The Hebrew flower garden is illustrated by Song 6. 2 & 4. 12. 15 (render, a garden-fountain). See Variorum Teacher's Bible, 'PLANTS—Gardens.'—Money.] Rather, silver. Coins were unknown till the Captivity. 3. Inheritance.] No doubt Naboth's refusal was not mere sturdy independence, but a matter of conscience. He felt it a religious duty not to part with his family's inheritance; all the more that now the year of jubilee, when all lands returned of right to their owners, was no longer observed. It was as if he asked the question of Acts 4. 19, for God's command was plain (Lev. 25. 23), sale in perpetuity was forbidden. 4. Heavy.] Rather, sullen. Cf. ch. 20. 43. Ahab's weakness, which made him ever the tool of Jezebel's unscrupulous and daring will, shows itself even in his wickedness. He sulked; Jezebel made haste to murder. He asked no questions; but his mouth watered for the blood—

Seals are frequently and early mentioned (Gen. 38, 18). Egyptian seals 4000 years old exist. Orientals carry them suspended by a string from the neck or arm, wrapped (cf. Cant. 8, 6) in the dress-folds on the bosom (sometimes on the finger also, cf. Jer. 22, 24), and regard them with greatest veneration (cf. Hag. 2, 23). A scribe is employed to pen a letter, but the author himself signs it by solemnly affixing a seal, which none dare copy. 'On it is engraven the name of the owner, and to duplicate a seal which he once made would cost a seal-cutter his life.'—Perkins' Residence in Persia. Their use as emblems of authority is instanced by Pharaoh, Asasuerus, Darius, &c.; as evidence of a covenant, in Jer. 32, 10, &c.—To the elders.] Unlike that of Nebuchadnezzar (Dan. 5, 19), the monarchy was a constitutional one, with a written code (1 Sam. 10, 25); the forms of law must be observed outwardly; the corruption of the municipal courts, the subornation of witnesses, these must be kept out of sight; as she hoped, perhaps, even the fact of court instigation as well. 9. A fast.] As though the whole city needed purging from Naboth's flagrant wickedness (cf. 2 Chr. 20, 3; Jer. 36, 9); or, it may be, without any assigned reason, but merely as a pretext for a public assemblage, from which a God-fearing man like Naboth would not absent himself. The forms of the ancient religion lingered still; it may be there had been something of a revival. Jezebel might scorn the religion and its sanctions, but not herself for using it to serve her wicked purposes.—On high.] i.e. forward or conspicuous, but whether as a man against whom they had a charge to bring (so Wordsworth) or simply (so Stanley) as an honoured citizen, is not stated. 'At the head of them, because he was of an illustrious family.'—Jos. Ant. viii, 13, 8. 10. Sons of Belial.] i.e. worthless hirelings. Cf. 1 Sam. 10, 27, note. The law required two witnesses (Deut. 17, 6; cf. Matt. 26, 60), and enjoined stoning (Lev. 24, 16; cf. John 10, 33; Acts 6, 13).—Blaspheme.] The word barac seems to have a double meaning, bless and curse (comp. ἀνάθημα, that wherein, ἀνάθεμα, that whereon, God is glorified, i.e. the holy offering and the accursed thing). It is rendered curse in Job 1, 5, which is perhaps there too strong: forget to bless might be better; or it may mean there, Go the length of saying, 'Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.' But not so in r. 11. The way it came to have these two opposite meanings was probably this; it might mean salute, whether at meeting or parting; to part is to turn one's back on, and so to renounce, reject, abandon, abhor, curse. There is a similar Greek usage. Cf. τὴν σὴν δὲ κῆρυν πολλαῖ ἐγὼ χαίρειν λέγω (bid a long farewell to).—Eur. Hipp. 112. Possibly the prime meaning of the word is to kneel, and so to pray and to imprecate. Or possibly it may strictly have no meaning but bless, but be used by the Jews as a euphemism for curse, a word they shrink from using. Vulg. bene-

They were, like the Hittites (Ezek. 16. 3), a leading nation. Amos (2. 10) calls Canaan 'the land of the Amorite.' Homer makes a like use of 'Achæans,' as representative of all Greeks.

Similarly 'Canaanite' is sometimes used for the lowland tribes generally; but (cp. Num. 14. 45 with Deut. 1. 44) Israel's knowledge of the various tribes to be exterminated was very inexact (as was likely, since intercourse was forbidden); and it has been supposed (Grove) that 'Amorite' was rather a 'local term, and not the name of a distinct tribe' at all. <sup>1</sup> Now Jehoshaphat <sup>a</sup> had riches and honour in abundance, and <sup>c</sup> joined affinity with Ahab.

1 K. xxii.—51. Seventeenth.] Jehoram became king of Israel in the eighteenth (his brother Ahaziah being dead); which year is also called (2 Kin. 1. 17) the 2nd year of Jehoram of Judah. This points to the conclusion that Ahaziah of Israel and Jehoram of Judah both began to reign in the same year, both their fathers being still on the throne. The year was Jehoshaphat's 17th, in which (cp. v. 41 with ch. 16. 29) the joint expedition to Ramoth took place. Each king would naturally appoint a pro-rex before starting. Here, however, ought to be quoted the remark of Huxtable: 'The various conjectures, either of interregnums, or of coregnums, or of repeated accessions, have become in a serious degree discredited by the records of Assyrian history which have lately come to light;' and the reader ought to be referred to his valuable note, Speak. Com. vi. p. 399.

—Two years.] Probably but little more than one year (2 Kin. 3. 1); cf. (words equally applicable to Ahaziah of Israel and to his nephew Ahaziah of Judah, whose brief reigns were alike evil enough to become dread memories in eternity) Τοῖσι μὲν εὖ πρᾶττον οὖν ἅπας ὁ βίος βραχύς ἐστι· τοῖς δὲ κακῶς μὴ νῦν ἀπλετός ἐστι χρόνος.—Lucian. 52. The way of his mother.] The mention of a man's mother's name is frequent. Sometimes perhaps merely to indicate by which wife he was his father's son. The phrase, 'way of his mother,' occurs here only. If Ahab was the worst of kings, certainly Jezebel, who induced him, deserves record as the worst of women (2 Kin. 3. 2), though truly her daughter Athaliah vied with her. The prominence of some women in ancient times is the more noticeable owing to the position of nonentity which Mahometanism has assigned to woman. These two, like 'blood-stained threads in the woof of Jewish history,' wielded a power for evil not surpassed by any of the kings; each (and even more as king's-mother than as queen) opened wide the door whereby the doom of national extinction (cf. 'when he offended in Baal, he died,' Hos. 13. 1) found entrance. During the later years of Ahab's reign Baal-worship seems to have somewhat languished; it revived now in Israel, and was very shortly to obtain footing in Judah.

1 K. xxii.—44. Peace.] Chr. 'affinity,' i.e. a matrimonial connection, cementing a political alliance. He (eight years before this, i.e. in his 9th year) married his son Jehoram to Athaliah, daughter of Ahab and Jezebel. By this fatal error the religion and corrupt morality of Ahab's house infected Judah also. This first alliance between the two kingdoms may have been prompted by a common dread of the growing power of Assyria, and even also by a hope of reuniting the kingdoms. The political alliance lasted some years. 1. Three years.] i.e. probably one complete year (when Syria and Israel alike were watching the threatening aspect of Assyria, perhaps encountering Shalmaneser II. together), + part of the year in which Benhadad was defeated, + part of the year in which Ahab and Jehoshaphat went to Ramoth. Syr. and Arab. read after two years in Chronicles. The inscription on the black obelisk in the British Museum states that Shalmaneser II. warred from about the 6th to the 21st year of his reign against 'Bin-idri of Damascus' (Benhadad II.) and 'Khaza-il, king of Damascus' (Hazael). It speaks of his chariots and his vassal kings (cf. ch. 20. 1); and of 'Ahab of Jezreel' (? Israel, cf. Ilos. 1. 4) as Benhadad's ally. The Assyrians, without doubt, were unsuccessful, though the obelisk alleges that they were victorious; and Ahab's claim on Hazael was a double one, viz. Benhadad's promise, and effectual aid rendered. The obelisk records no further help given to Syria by Israel, but, on the contrary, an attack on Syria, while engaged in repelling Assyria (cf. 2 Kin. 8. 29). Then it was that Ramoth was recovered (2 Kin. 9. 14). An interesting account of how it further depicts the submission of Jehu, and his consenting to pay tribute to Assyria, is given by Rawlinson, Bib. Educ. I. 128. <sup>3</sup> Is our's. Only not in their possession, because of Benhadad's breach of covenant (ch. 20. 34). It was a city of refuge in the lot of Gad. <sup>5</sup> At the word. Omit at.—To-day. i.e. without delay, and before taking any step, or seek once more guidance such as you had before (ch. 20. 13). But, either way, Jehoshaphat's conscientious scruples were roused too late. This step should have preceded those (v. 4) rash words of politeness, which on a later occasion also (2 Kin. 3. 7) rose too readily to his lips. Compare the case of Joshua and Gibeon. It is painful, but instructive to note the injury which Jehoshaphat's character sustained from his sinful (2 Chron. 19. 2 & 20. 37) friendships. It is a warning against ill-assorted or thoughtless marriages, which necessarily are unblessed, and the evils of which descend to successive generations. The sword of Jehu was needed, supplemented by that of Athaliah, to purge Judah from the taint of the 'affinity' with Ahab's house. <sup>6</sup> Prophets. It is not stated whether these were prophets of Baal, Ashteroth, the Calf (so Barry, Venables, Rawlinson), or Jehovah (so Jackson, Patrick). Possibly these had been the steps of their downward progress: at first, prophets of the Lord (i.e. holy men, teachers, and at times truly inspired); then, pretenders to inspiration, while still worshippers of God, 'prophesying lies' in God's name, unauthorized (Jer. 14. 14); then, avowedly connected with idol rites (Jer. 2. 8), neither seeking to know, nor professing to make known, God's mind. They never use Jehovah's name till (r. 12) they hear Micaiah has been summoned. The fact that Zebediah, who appears to be their leader (r. 24), has a name meaning Jehovah is righteousness is not enough to prove him a prophet of Jehovah.

There could not be 400 such, and any would, more likely, be found in prison or exile than at Ahab's court. We hear no mention in this reign of calf-prophets. They are called ‘thy prophets’ (v. 23; Chr. v. 22; cf. 2 Kin. 3. 13). Only 8 or 9 years before, all the Baal-prophets had been slain; 400 was then the number of Ashtaroth-prophets, ‘which ate at Jezebel's table.’ Their sentence is almost as enigmatical as that of the Oracle to Cressus: Κροίσος “Ἄλυν διαβάς μεγάλην ἀρχὴν καταλύσει. Since, however, that word has usually a bad sense, i.e. persuading by flattery or deceit; since also Christ said, that, whenever a man speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own (makes his parentage plain), for his father also is a liar, it seems more likely that the spirit is Satan. So Milton—

'What but thy malice moved thee to misdeem
Of righteous Job, then cruelly to afflict him
With all afflictions? but his patience won.
The other service was thy chosen task,
To be a liar in four hundred mouths;
For lying is thy sustenance, thy food.'

How Satan became evil and a liar, no man may venture even to guess (cf. Waterland, Scrip. Indic., p. 199). We only know that God made him otherwise. God permits Satan to range the earth; therefore let us beware. God controls him; therefore let us not be terrified. To Satan's presence in heaven, or having permission to enter there, we have no post-Incarnation allusion (cf. Zech. 13. 2; Luke 8. 31 & 10. 18; 2 Pet. 2. 4; Jude 6). The air to which his rule extends (Eph. 2. 2) is no more than τὴν ὅπ' οὐρανὸν of Job 1. 7, i.e. the sub-celestial region. The 'god of this world' he shall not always be; cf. 2 Cor. 4. 4; Rev. 11. 15. <sup>22.]</sup> Thou shalt persuade him is best illustrated by 2 Thess. 2. 9-12. Ahab was one by whom 'the love of the truth' had never been received, 'for this cause God sent him (ἐνέργειαν πλάνης εἰς τὸ πιστεῦσαι αὐτὸν τῷ ψεύδει) strong delusion, that he should believe a lie;' for 'I the Lord have deceived that prophet' (Ezek. 14. 9) means more than merely 'have permitted him to be deceived;' evil, no less than good, is God's servant, and can execute ultimately no purpose but His. Always disingenuous inquiry of God leads to deception in the direction of the inquirer's own wishes; always also the true prophet suffers contradiction from the time-serving and the false (Jer. 27. 14 & 29. 31, 32). <sup>23. [2 K. iii.] <sup>4</sup> And Mesha king of Moab was a sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand [JUDAH.] 2C. xix.—1. In peace. Lit. whole; as we should say, 'safe and sound.' Ital. sano et salvo; Fr. sain et sauf. Contrast 1 Kin. 22. 28. <sup>2</sup> Said. It required a brave man to utter rebuke, even tempered by commendation, at a moment when reproof must have been specially galling. Jehu was (so Ball, Stanley, &c.) the seer who reproved Baasha (1 Kin. 16. 1) and wrote a chronicle (ch. 20. 34). His father reproved Asa, and was imprisoned in consequence (ch. 16. 7-10). Union of the two kingdoms against Syria might seem expedient, but it could not be right (2 Cor. 6. 15).—Help . . . love. To what extent this abstinence from aiding, this checking of anything approaching to affection, this disassociation from, the ungodly, is to be carried, will ever be a perplexing question. It was the apostle of love who said, 'He that biddeth him God-speed is partaker of his evil deeds'; it was the man after God's own heart who uttered, many times over, such sentences as this: 'I hate them with perfect hatred, I count them mine enemies'; it was Nehemiah (4. 4), who certainly enjoyed the 'closer walk with God,' who prayed, 'Give them for a prey in the land of captivity.' Should any brother-man be able to fling at the Christian words such as those of Orestes (Æsch. Cho. 223, Plumtre), 'Wouldst drive me from all altars, and would none, None take me in, or lodge with me?' Or is it sufficient explanation to say, It is their own human feelings merely, which God, in his wisdom, is in such places suffering inconsistent men to record? Surely not. This, however, is not the place that calls for a justification of the language of all the imprecatory psalms (see Hessey's Moral Difficulties, ii. 1, 2). It will suffice to remind the reader that 'two cannot walk together except they be agreed,' nay, that it would be wrong to make the attempt; that 'Come out from among them, be separate' is no unmeaning phrase; that 'This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them' tells of no mere worldly association, for every-day purposes, still less for possible personal advantage; that, though wheat and tares, good fish and bad, are to be together till the end, one name is not to include all. When we do indeed love God with 'all our heart and all our mind,' then will this question cease to perplex, not before; when we are able fully to identify ourselves with God, to have no interests, no feelings but His, then will the warning of Jehu's reproof be unneeded by us.—Wrath. Showing itself, not, as in David's case (1 Chr. 27. 24 & 21. 14), by visitation of pestilence, but in an inglorious return home; in invasion, from which only prayer and fasting delivered; in disappointed commercial hopes.

2 KINGS.—To divide the book at this point (in the midst of Ahaziah's reign) is a manifest error on the part of the Greek-speaking Jews of Alexandria, who are responsible for it (as they were also for the division of the Law, as the Greek names of the books, Genesis, &c., testify). They followed what had become the customary Greek treatment of all books (e.g. Homer, Herodotus, &c.), but every Hebrew MS., up to Jerome's day, gives one 'Book of Kings' only. The Compiler of both parts is one, and the same. Records are quoted in both parts, viz. those Annals of the two kingdoms which sprang out of the earlier, briefer, less systematic Records of Iddo, Shemaiah, Hanani, &c. What is (almost) identical in 2 Kin. and Isaiah is, probably, quotation from Isaiah's contribution to those Annals. The reflections on the causes of Israel's fall (ch. 17), and the closing chapters of the book, are supposed to be of Jeremiah's composition. It is to be remembered, when such authorities and sources of information are named, that the same Hand guides all pens throughout; the inspiration, which at one time is shown in wisdom of selection, at another in original description or comment, is all of one and the same Spirit. Cf. 1 Kin. 1. note.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. i.—1. Rebelled. Moab was subject to Israel and tributary (ch. 3. 4) from the days of David (2 Sam. 8. 2) to the death of Ahab, with (as appears from the Moabite Stone, a monument recording mainly Mesha's account of his own successes, discovered near Dibon in 1868) an interval of independence from the Disruption to Omri.

Judicial Reforms.—The Local Courts.

cf. ch. 1. 1, note) he was son of Chemoshgad, king of Moab, the Dibonite; built a high place for Chemosh in Karkbah; submitted to Omri; rebelled successfully against Ahab, spoiling him of his city, Ataroth (Num. 32. 34, 38), also Nebo (there are ruins of a town, Nebbeh,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile W. of Mt. Nebo), slaughtering all the inhabitants and carrying away vessels of Jehovah; defeated also Ahaziah and expelled him from his city, Jahaz.—Sheep-master.] Heb. noked; lit. marker, i.e. a shepherd who marks his flocks, to distinguish his own, and also to distinguish their breeds (cf. Amos 1. 1, note). Tribute was rarely paid otherwise than in kind, indeed, could not be, except by commercial peoples like the Phœnicians and the Jews. Strabo mentions a similar tribute paid by Cappadocia to Persia, 1,500 horses, 2,000 mules, 50,000 sheep. Sheikhs of the flocks day in those parts own sometimes fleets of 30,000.—Rendered.] Rather, used to render. The word implies as yearly tribute; Isaiah (16. 1) appears to claim this from Edom as well.—Rams.] Rather, in wool. The value lay in the fleeces, and the Hebrew seems to mean ram's fleeces (so Ewald); the lambs were 'fatted lambs' (Heb. karin) for food. <sup>5</sup> Rebelle.] i.e. ceased to pay the oppressive tax. Vulg. prævaricatus est fœdus.

<sup>2</sup> C. xix.—<sup>4</sup> Dwelt.] i.e. after his return from Ramoth, and Jehu's rebuke, which roused no wrath (contrast ch. 16. 10), but brought forth 'fruit meet for repentance,' as here recorded.—Again.] On the former occasion he had sent out a commission of sixteen (ch. 17. 7).—From, &c.] The diminished kingdom.—Brought, &c.] As Asa had done before (ch. 15. 12); as the prophets whom Joash sent out (ch. 24. 19) failed to do. The nation was not at present given over to the worship of Baal and Ashtaroth (cp. ch. 24. 18 with ch. 14. 4 & 17. 3, 6). It was against irreligion, rather than false religion, that Jehoshaphat's present efforts were directed; against ignorance of, against want of appreciation, want of love for God's service, rather than against idolatry. Yet, perhaps, not altogether so; for, since many of Jehovah's high places were on Canaanish holy spots, since open-air worship was likely to tend to the worship of Nature and her powers, and was generally combined with festivities calculated to turn the thoughts away from God (Isa. 5. 12), there was, up to the Captivity, ever-recurring danger, that forms of natural religion would mingle with revealed religion, that the title Baal (my lord), rightfully belonging (Hos. 2. 16) to Jehovah, the alone Owner and Proprietor of all, would be misapplied. <sup>5</sup> Judges.] Local magistrates, probably Levites; cf. v. 8 and 1 Chr. 23. 4 & 26. 29. The judgment.] i.e., in passing sentence, He would have them mindful that (as Bacon says) their place was jus dicere, not jus dare, that their utterance must be in conformity with God's Word; 'the judgment is God's' (Deut. 1. 17). To forget this would be to 'trespass' (v. 10), i.e. fail in duty, and so incur guilt. Vulg. reads (wrongly) quodcumque judicaveritis in vos redundabit (cf. Matt. 7. 2), and Sept. καὶ μεθ' ὑμῶν λόγοι τῆς κρίσεως. <sup>7</sup> Let the fear, &c.] Cf.

'Fearing no man dare your God to fear.' The true fear of God is the doing, saying, thinking all as in his presence, in the consciousness of his observance, and the constant sense of responsibility to Him. 'Without fear or favour, as regards man, is only attainable by dreading in the highest degree the grieving of God's love, by craving above all other things the light of God's countenance.—Take heed and.] An application (cf. v. 11. note) of the figure hendiatys (*Verg. 'The righteousness or iniquity of the cause.'—Smalridge. The way in which the judge's righteousness will chiefly be shown is (next to probity) in guarding against iniquity, in the prime meaning of the word, unequalness. The principles on which he acts will be uniform (cf. Jas. 1. 17), and likewise his conduct towards all comers. God's vice-gerents must, beyond all other men, be God-like, true

Elohim (Ps. 82. 1). To the judge under the Hebrew monarchy Bacon's words are not inapplicable: he is 'a mortal God on earth, unto whom the living God has lent his own name as a great honour; but withal told him that he should die like a man, lest he should be proud and flatter himself that God hath, with his name, imparted unto him his nature also.'

<sup>8</sup> Chief of the fathers.] Rather, heads of the fathers' houses.—Judgment of the Lord.] It cannot be too often noted that the godly Hebrew monarch always had sounding in his ear the key-note which David had struck, 'the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel' (1 Chr. 28. 5). To this thought Jehoshaphat refers in vs. 6, 7; here the expression seems to have a different meaning (cf. v. 11. note).—Controversies.] Lit. strifes (cf. 2 Sam. 15. 2), i.e. cases of injury to life or limb (Deut. 17. 8 & 21. 5), slander (Deut. 19. 17), personal quarrels (Deut. 25. 1), or disputed inheritance (v. 10. note), any 'matter' where, not the Lord, but man is the plaintiff. Sept. εἰς κρίσιν Κυρίου καὶ κρίνειν τοὺς κατοικοῦντας.—When.] Rather, and (so R.V.); the verse ends with 'controversies.' Apparently the Jerusalem judges had accompanied the king when he went the circuit of (v. 4) all the cities of the land; or perhaps 'they' = simply king and suite, and the clause (omitted in Sept. and Vulg.) is parenthetic. <sup>9</sup> With a perfect heart.] i.e. with integrity, conscientiously.

125.—Jehoshaphat's Commercial Alliance with Israel.

1 KIN. XXII. 47-49. 2 CHRON. XX. 35-37.

All seem embraced elsewhere in the term 'the charge of the Lord' (cp. Gen. 26. 5 with 1 Kin. 2. 3). Probably Law = God's teaching generally, the 'ways,' the mind of God; Sept. πρόσταγμα; Vulg. lex; Commandment = that which is placed, constituted, including unwritten law, ἐντολή, mandatum; Statute = that which is engraven, written law, δικαίωμα, cæremonia; Judgment =, as in v. 6, the sentence, κρίμα, justificatio.—[Warn.] Lit. enlighten, i.e. instruct. Ps. 82 seems to describe Jehoshaphat's injunctions, which echo those of Moses (Deut. 1. 16 & 17. 8; cf. 1 Tim. 5. 21). <sup>11</sup> Amariah.] = the Lord hath promised. The name occurs (fifth after Zadok) in the list in 1 Chr. 6, which omits his successor as H. P., Jehoiada. Ball notes that Jehoshaphat also was fifth from David.—[Matters.] Causes ecclesiastical and civil—the 'judgment of Jehovah' and 'controversies,'—'matters of Jehovah' and 'of the king'—were in distinct hands, both deriving their authority from the king. Both Amariah and Zebadiah alike were to reckon themselves as judging 'for Jehovah' (Jehoshaphat's very name taught that—Jehovah judgeth) and to look for his aid. Grotius distinguishes the different 'matters' as those concerning which the law of God had spoken, and those where, it being silent, the king's will was law. Hildebrand's doctrine would not find sanction in this passage:—'As man consists of soul and body, so human affairs consist of spiritual and earthly; and as the body is ruled by the soul, so ought the world to be governed by the church. As there are two great lights in heaven, the sun and the moon, so are there two mighty rulers on earth, the pope and the emperor. Now, as the moon derives her light from the sun, so is all the power of the emperor derived from the pope. The pope is through God and instead of God upon earth, and therefore all things temporal as well as spiritual are subject to his power.' Hooker's view is apposite; after [2 C. xix. 11; 1 K. xxii. 47.]

naming the example of Moses, he says (E. P. viii. 3. 1), 'Jehoshaphat appointing one to be chief in the affairs of God and another in the king's affairs, did this as having himself dominion over them in both;' and he asks (viii. 4. 2), 'That which lawfully princes are, what should make it unlawful for men by special styles or titles to signify? If the having of supreme power be allowed, why is the expressing thereof by the title of Head condemned?' and he adds (viii. 4. 6), lest he should be thought to be robbing Christ of His honour, 'Christ being Lord or Head over all, doth by virtue of that sovereignty rule all; so he hath no more a superior in governing his Church, than in exercising sovereign dominion upon the rest of the world besides. All authority, as well civil as ecclesiastical, is subordinate to His.'—Zebadiah.] = the Lord hath bestowed, according well with the name of his coadjutor. —[Ruler, &c.] i.e. the emir of the tribe of Judah (Ball) is appointed president of the court of appeal in civil cases. Moses occupied a somewhat similar position (Ex. 18. 19-22).—[Officers.] i.e. either officials in your court, or local magistrates sitting in courts of first instance, called judges in v. 6.—[Courageously.] Lit. be strong and act (cf. v. 7, note). The same word is rendered be strong in the charge to Joshua (1. 1-9), coupled with another implying fearless vigour.—[Shall be.] Whether a pious wish, or an assurance (so Sept. and Vulg.), this is highly characteristic of the Chronicler's tone of mind (1 Chr. 9. 20; ch. 15. 2 & 20. 17); cp. Dominus vobiscum, Pr. Bk.—[The good.] i.e. judges, whether ecclesiastical or civil; cf. Ps. 4. 3; Vulg. in bonis; or perhaps Sept. is correct, μετὰ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ. Cp. 'God defend the right.'

revolted from under the hand of Judah, and had a king once more (2 Kin. 8. 26). Whether it was Asa who subdued it or Jehoshaphat we are not told, only that now its ruler was a Jewish viceroy. Such rulers were as yet rare. Later, Darius Hystaspis extended the system: his whole empire was a union of viceroyalties under one king. Solomon's system was to make the existing kings tributaries. Edom's vassalage is chiefly important as connected with the attempted revival of trade with Ophir, which an independent Edom, commanding the Arabian caravan-routes and the approach to Ezion-geber, might have hindered. <sup>48</sup> Ophir.] Cf. ch. 9. 28, note.—Went not.] He states, as is the wont of Hebrew historians, the result of the attempt immediately after naming the attempt itself.—Ezion-geber.] It took its name (backbone of the hero) from a ridge of rocks at the harbour mouth, which, no doubt, were the instrument of this disaster. Of how Elath became in consequence the port for this trade, and how the trade fell into the hands of Tiglath-pileser, and later of the Tyrians, being finally engrossed by the Ptolemies' rival ports, an interesting account may be found in Prieux (Conn. i., p. 7); cf. ch. 9. 26, note. <sup>49</sup> Then, &c.] Apparently Ahaziah—for 'the wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God; God is not (2 Kin. 1. 2) in all his thoughts'—judged the calamity to be due only to unskilful seamanship, and to be avoided in further attempts by the employment of Northern seamen from Asher or Dan (Judah had no sea coast), or it may be of Tyrians in his service. Jehoshaphat had learnt the true cause (Chr. v. 37).

2 C. xx.—<sup>35</sup> After this.] A man's foes may be those of his own household; for the second time does his 'affinity' with Ahab's house lead Jehoshaphat to incur a prophet's reproof (ch. 19. 2). Again he is conscience-stricken and receives rebuke meekly, if, at least, we may judge by the fact that his punishment was not severe, and by his refusing Ahaziah's second solicitation (Kin. v. 49); nevertheless, shortly after he is as ready as ever to 'touch pitch' (2 Kin. 3. 7. note).—Who did, &c.] Thus incidentally the Chronicler, as is his wont, points us to the moral of his tale. This is one of the many instances by which Murphy's remark is justified: 'Chronicles is continuous history, is supplementary history, but the leading characteristic of the book is its raising into conspicuous prominence the religious aspect of the Kingdom of God.' That it is so, is not due to the personal leanings, the caste feelings, of the Writer, as some allege, but to the condition of his times. Prominence is given to ecclesiastical influence because the civil administration had, when he wrote, ceased to be sacred at its fountain head; God is for ever put prominently before our notice because forgetfulness of God was the prevailing feature of his day.—Wickedly.] By supporting Cal-worship and Baal-worship (1 Kin. 22. 52, 53), to the exclusion of Jehovah-worship, which seems to have gained a better footing in the closing years of Ahab's reign. <sup>36</sup> To go to Tarshish.] No doubt (see 1 Kin. 9. 28, note) ships of Tarshish, i.e. merchant ships for Ophir trade, is intended; for even if transporting small vessels overland (so Keil) were a possibility (as Greek historians state), ships for Mediterranean commerce would not be likely to be built at Ezion-geber. Germ. (v. 37 also) auf das meer. <sup>37</sup> Mareshah.] It lay on the E. of the Shephelah. It was fortified by Ichobam. There Asa defeated Zerah (ch. 14). Cf. Sept. ἐθάρσεν . . . συνέτριβεν; Vulg. percussit . . . contrivit.—To go to Tarshish.] So Vulg., Sept., Arab., Syr., Ital., Fr.; yet, apparently, the meaning must be the Tarshish-ships were unable to go (Kin. v. 48). 'Either the word "ships of Tarshish" had become a technical term for sea-going ships fitted for long voyages; or (which seems more probable) the O. T. writers spoke of distant regions yielding strange commodities as Tarshish; just as "The Indies" were applied by Spaniards and English to all ## 126.—Ahaziah Consults Baal-zebub.—Elijah's Sentence.

'I the Lord thy God am a jealous God.'

2 KINGS I. 2-18 &amp; III. 1-3.

<sup>2</sup> AND Ahaziah fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron whether I shall recover of this disease.

tropical lands, east or west. Solomon's Tarshish-fleet must have gone to India, for only thence could it have obtained ivory, apes, and peacocks, and Jehoshaphat's intention was to resuscitate that Oriental trade.—Tristram.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. i.—2. Lattice.] Almost the only form of house-lighting before sheet-glass was made. On the street side of the house the window (challôn = aperture) would always be high up, sometimes over the doorway, and projecting (ch. 9. 30) over the street like a balcony; if the lattice were (ch. 13. 17) removed, egress would be easy (Josh. 2. 15; Acts 20. 9; 2 Cor. 11. 33). The Heb. sebâdâh = network (rendered net in Job 18. 8; cf. 1 Kin. 7. 17, note), is not the word in Judg. 5. 28, or in Cant. 2. 9; it may here (so Wright) mean rail, viz. that round the house-top.—Baal-zebub.] Cf. 1 Kin. 18. 18, note. It means lord of flies. Sept. βασις μύων, and so Josephus. If the name were not given in contempt it would mean (like Ζεὺς ἀποβύσιος) expeller of flies, or (μυίαγρος) fly-catcher, a being likely enough to receive divine honour in hot climates; or, perhaps, fly-hatcher, the being who so proves himself author and giver of life. 'Among the Philistines the sun was compared to a great fly (Hug suggests scarabeus pillularius = dung-hill beetle; cp. μυιάδης, Pliny), and accordingly worshipped under this name. Oracles seem to have been obtained at Ekron (at Babylon also myiomancy was practised from the hum and motion of flies.)—Sayce. Possibly the form Βεελα(ε)βοὺλ (Matt. 12. 24; cp. Matt. 10. 25), lord of the (infernal, or subcelestial, Eph. 2. 2) dwelling, is the correct one; or it is a corruption of Baal-samen, lord of heaven. Some (comparing the purposely-changed names Sychar and Beth-aven) connect the title with zebel = dung, a word used for idols by Talmudists, and so arrive at lord of false gods, and 'prince of the demons.' Wherever worshipped, Baal is the personification of the sun. Tyre was under the protection of Baal-melkzab (king of the earth), known to the Greeks as Hercules of Tyre

(comp. Ps. 19. 4, 5), whose gorgeous temple Herodotus visited. Human victims were never offered to him. His priests officiated with naked feet. His fire burned day and night, as it did also in his temple at Gades. The word itself, i.e. lord, had not necessarily any idolatrous connection. It frequently means husband (2 Sam. 11. 26). But, lest it might awaken thoughts of the idol, God declares that his people shall no more call him Baali (my husband), but Ishi (my man), Hos. 2. 16. In connection with sun-worship some interesting discoveries were made in the year 1881 at Abn Hubba. Surippak (the ark-city) was, according to Berossus, founded before the Flood, and was the dwelling of Xisuthrus, the Chaldean Noah; and also Sippara of the sun, the sacred city, where the records of antediluvian times were buried. The foundations of the latter have been excavated. One inscription on the temple runs, To the sun-god, dwelling within the city of Sippara. Another states that Xisuthrus buried there the history of the beginning, progress, and end of all things. Another contains memorials of the reign of Nabupallidina, king of Babylon, contemporary of Salmanneser. A tablet, 2 ft. by 1 ft., represents him and attendant priests worshipping the sun-god, seated on a throne beneath a baldachin. He has his beard and hair long, and holds in his hand a ring, emblem of revolving time, and a short stick. Before him, on a small table-altar, is a disc, ornamented with four star-like limbs and four sets of wave-like rays. Over is written, The disc of the sun-god, and the rays of his eyes. A table of festivals (wherein it is noticeable that the first and last months have the names of the Jewish April and March, and the fourth nearly resembles Tisri, the Jewish October) follows:—

1. Nisan, 7th day, Festival of the Rays (vernal equinox).
2. Aivu, 10th day, Festival of the Rays.
3. Ulul, 3rd day, Festival of the Illumination of the Palace.
4. Tasritur, 7th day, ditto (autumnal equinox).

JEHOSHAPHAT [Jehoram]—(Jehu, §c.).AHAZIAH—(Elijah).

<sup>3</sup> But the angel of the LORD said to Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

<sup>4</sup> Now therefore thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

<sup>5</sup> And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

<sup>6</sup> And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

<sup>7</sup> And he said unto them, What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words? <sup>8</sup> And they answered him, He was <sup>b</sup>an hairy man, and girl with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

<sup>9</sup> Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of an hill. And he spake unto him, <sup>b</sup> See Zech. 13. 4; Matt. 3. 4.

5. Marchesran, 14th day, Festival of the Rays.

6. Adar, 15th day, Festival of the Illumination of the Palace.

The great court of the temple is called Court of the sun-god, the other, the Court of Bel. At the adjoining place, Hubl Ibrahim, or Culta, have been found remains of chambers and corridors of the temple of Nergal (Mars) and his consort Laz, restored by Nebuchadnezzar.—Ekron.] The nearest Philistine town to Samaria, 35 miles S.E.; cf. 1 Sam. 5. 10.—Disease.] Perhaps, rather, affliction or calamity; the word is as frequently rendered grief as sickness; Sept., Vulg., and Ital. infirmity. Ahaziah's belief in idols goes far beyond Ahab's. He really desires information and cure. Here was no love of sensuous worship, no yielding to popular desire for pageantry. His heart's trust is set on Baal. This specie injuria forme would have deeply offended the representative of any false deity, how much more the jealous God!

3. The angel.] Rather, an (so Sept.; v. 15 also).—Samaria.] Israel, even Ephraim, were too honorable a title at such a time. Cf. Hos. 10. 7.—Is it not.] Omit not (so Sept.; vs. 6, 16 also). This was to carry Israelite inconstancy (Ps. 78. 57) to its extreme point, and to justify Jeremiah's language (2. 11). 'Hath a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? but my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit, have forsaken Me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.'

4. Therefore.] There might be a purpose (Mat. 4. 6) of mercy toward Israel (Ezek. 14. 4-8) in this reply, but for Ahaziah himself

there could be no hope; for 'they that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy.'—Departed.] Perhaps, rather, went, in obedience to the command of v. 3. The actual interview is not recorded; Vulg. abiit, and so Germ. and Ital., but Sept. ἐπορεύθη καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, and so Fr. Elie s'en alla donc et fit ainsi. 5. Him.] Vulg. Ochozian, and so Syr.—Why, &c.] From the time they had been absent he knew they could not have been to Ekron. In fact, they had probably got no further than the city gates, for Samaria stood on a hill, and twice (vs. 3, 6) the word 'up' is used. 7. What manner of.] Equivalent to What like man? so Syr.; Vulg. figura et habitus; Sept. κρῖς (distinguishing mark); Targ. νόμος (rank).

8. An hairy man.] Lit. a man an owner of hair; not precisely the expression used of Esau (Gen. 27. 11), though Sept. has in both places δασύς, and Vulg. pilosus. Matt. 3. 4 has led many to suppose that his (addereth, μηλωτής, not worn by any prophet before Elijah) rough sheepskin mantle (a piece of which is exhibited among the relics at Oviedo!) is referred to; but cf. 1 Kin. 19. 13, note, and 'facie squallente, quæ multitudine suorum crinum obumbratur' (Gregory of Nyssa).—Leather.] So rendered here only; rather, skin (Gen. 3. 21, &c.). 9. An hill.] Rather, the mountain; so Sept. Many have conjectured Carmel, because named as visited by Elisha in ch. 2. 25, and because already connected with Elijah's name; the Carmelites reckon St. Elijah their founder. As that, however, was full 30 miles distant, it is more probable that some mountain adjacent to Samaria is meant.—God.] Rather,

JEHOSHAPHAT [JEHORAM]—(Jehu, §c.).AHAZIAH—(Elijah).

Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down. <sup>10</sup> And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then <sup>c</sup>let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

<sup>11</sup> Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly. <sup>12</sup> And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

<sup>13</sup> And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty went up, and came and fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, <sup>d</sup>be precious in thy sight. <sup>14</sup> Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight. <sup>15</sup> And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him.

And he arose, and went down with him unto the king. <sup>16</sup> And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to enquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

the God; cp. 1 Kin. 18. 39. <sup>10</sup> If.] Rather, And it, as Sept.—Let fire come. It was a command (Luke 9. 54) of the nature of a prayer. 'According to my word,' said Elijah (1 Kin. 17. 1); 'Elias prayed,' says St. James. The sending of 50 men was a pretence of power which required signal refutation. There was not in Elijah the Divine majesty of Jesus (John 18. 6 & 7. 46); he must invoke God's interference; and God under the Law was revealed more as terrible sternness than as love; His interference was expected then to be rather for death than for life. That Elijah's request was not wrong under the circumstances we are sure, or it would not have been granted. We may perhaps question whether he would have made it had he fully understood the lesson of Horeb. Elijah, however, was the minister of judgment (cf. 2 Cor. 3. 9); apostles were ministers of mercy, and yet cf. Acts 13. 11 & 5. 9; Heb. 12. 29. <sup>11</sup> Said . . . said.] The former means utter merely; the latter, proclaim with authority, command. The first captain had not used this peremptory word, nor added 'quickly.' <sup>12</sup> The fire of God.] Omit the. Possibly lightning (Job 1. 16; Ps. 105. 32). Perhaps 'of God' may mean terrible; it is omitted in most Versions and some MSS.; but cf. 1 Kin. 18. 38. <sup>13</sup> Fell, &c.] 'God giveth grace unto the humble.' The other two captains might not make Ahaziah wholly responsible for their death. They appear to have shared his haughty pride (as the nation that of David in the day of the Census), and probably his unbelief in Jehovah.—Be precious.] Sept. ἐντιμωθήτω (i.e. be held worth something, not counted cheap) ἡ ψυχὴ μου (rendered my soul in 1 Sam. 24. 11). <sup>15</sup> Afraid.] i.e. of any treachery on his part, or incapability to restrain his zeal. <sup>17</sup> Now, when Jehoram, Ahab's son (Ahaziah's brother), succeeded to the throne of Israel, while Jehoram, Jehoshaphat's son (and father of another Ahaziah), sat on that of Judah, is not the only time when the kingdoms had princes of the same name (cf. Joash 1. and Abijah). That Judah's king should be the one pre-eminent in wickedness is noticeable (ch. 3. 18). Never before his day had Judah retrograded so far from God; weakness followed, and for Jehoram (exalted by Jehorah), whom Athaliah, Jezebel's daughter, stirred up, a dishonoured grave in the prime of life. A portion of the reign of Jehoram of Israel was perhaps one of the purest periods in Israel's history; Elisha's rebuke (ch. 3. 13) bore fruit; Baal-worship was for a time abolished (ch. 3. 2). Elisha was admitted to the king's counsels (ch. 4. 13 & 6. 21). Apparently Jehoram was now pro-rex, or associate-king of Judah, during his father's life. It was his

2 CHRONICLES XX. 1—30.

<sup>1</sup> It came to pass after this also, that the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, came against Jehoshaphat to battle. <sup>2</sup> Then there came some second year as such, Jehoshaphat's 18th year. The remark, however, of Rawlinson should be continually kept in mind:—'The chronology is thrown into inextricable confusion by the parenthetic synchronisms (e.g. 1 Kin. 16. 22, 23; ch. 15. 17, 23), which cannot be reconciled one with another, excepting by a long series of violent and most improbable suppositions, as that the initial year of a king is reckoned differently in different passages, and that long interregna occurred of which the historian says nothing.' This verse should be compared with ch. 3. 1 & 8. 16, and 1 Kin. 22. 51.

2 K. iii.—1. Son of Ahab. Ahaziah left no son. Cf. 1 Kin. 22. 41, 51. 2. Evil. The reformation was but slight. Other Baal-pillars remained (ch. 10. 19, 26), and the calf-worship retained was no more acceptable to God, whatever self-deceiving there might be in the cry, 'These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt.' No doubt, to counteract Jezebel's influence, who lived during all his reign, was no easy matter.

[JUDAH.] 2 C. xx.—1. After this. After Jehoshaphat's return in peace from Ramoth, and subsequent measures of reform. — Other beside, &c. Hebrew text, mecha ammonim; but probably, rather, some of the Moabites, called 'Mehunims' in ch. 26. 7, and coupled with Philistines and Arabians. They are named also in 1 Chr. 4. 41, where the word is rendered wrongly 'habitations.' They were probably (rs. 10, 22, 23) a clan of the Edomites. In Judg. 10, 12, Sept. has Midianites.—Battle. 'God is in the midst of her,' sang the Psalmist (Ps. 46), celebrating this occasion. That is the true 'chariot and horsemen' of defence. Both Jehoshaphat and Jahaziel are ready to confess this (rs. 12, 15). Elisha is mistaken when he mourns any man's departure, as though it were the loss of this. 'A heathen may say, 'Si fractus illabatur orbis, impavidum fertent ruina;' but his only ground of confidence is that he is justus ac tenax propositi, conscientious, firmly-purposed; the confidence of God's people has more stable ground. Judah knew, Israel did not; do we? that, as Luther's familiar paraphrase of Ps. 46 runs, Ein feste burg ist unser Gott, that Er hilft uns frey aus aller noth. 2. On this side Syria. Perhaps, rather, from beyond the (Dead) sea from Edom (cf. Ps. 83. 6), which the Hebrew Aram (Syria) very much resembles. — Which is. Taking the name of the stream on which it stood, Ain Jidy, fountain of the kid, Hazazon-Tamar (the pruning of the palms), one of the most ancient cities in Syria, perhaps in the world, lay on the middle of the W. side of the Dead Sea; cf. Eccles. 24. 14. No palms now remain. There are crumbled stone walls, and, in the ravines on either side, trunks of palms incrustated by the time from the streams. Invaders from the S.E. would still follow the Dead Sea shore up to this point, after which it becomes impassable, and they must turn aside at El-Hussasah, i.e. Hazziz, and take <sup>3</sup> And Jehoshaphat feared, and set himself to seek the LORD, and <sup>d</sup> proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah. <sup>4</sup> And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the LORD: even out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

<sup>5</sup> And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court, <sup>6</sup> and said, the Tekoah path. 3. A fast. The valley of Humiliation is the truest 'door of Hope,' leading on to the valley of Blessing; twice Solomon repeats, 'Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honour is humility;' this narrative attests the truth of it. 4. All. Syr. and Arab. the distant.

5. Stood. The word means, came and took a position, be the attitude what it might (vs. 9, 13, 23); especially is it used of standing in attendance (1 Kin. 17. 1, note), in the attitude of expectation. — New. The outer court, built by Solomon, renewed probably by Asa (ch. 15. 8); Syr. and Arab. new gate. 6. Said. Comp. the prayers in 1 Chr. 29. 10; 1 Kin. 8. 23; ch. 14. 11; 2 Kin. 19. 15; Neh. 9. 5. — Art not thou? His plea is, Thou art the true God, the Almighty; Thou art our God, giver of our land; Thou art God of this House; Defend it, and us, and so prove Thy power, and fulfil Thy promises to him with whom Thou wert wont to commune as a man with his friend (Gen. 18. 17), to him also who built and dedicated this House. See rs. 7, 9, refs. Intercourse with God leads on to friendship with God. Let us not forget it, when our knees are stubborn, our thoughts wandering (cp. Ex. 33. 11).

7. Thy friend. If they were truly 'children of faithful (Jas. 2. 23) Abraham,' they might count much on this plea. 'Shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me' (so the Hebrew for 'friend' is rendered in Ex. 20. 6) is true in all ages. The Arabic name for Hebron, Abraham's burial-place, is el-Khulil, i.e. the friend. 8. Sanctuary therein. The order of Vulg. is better, in illa (sc. terra) sanctorum nominum; for 'sanctuary for thy name' is one word, equivalent to House-of-God; God's Name is Himself as known to his own people. 10. Mount Seir. Cf. v. 1, note. — Not invade. As being akin, children of Lot and of Esau. 11. Reward. = award in return; used in A.V. of requiting evil more often than good (Deut. 32. 41; 2 Sam. 3. 39; Rev. 18. 6, &c.); award is the Fr. querdon; cp. Sax. wither-lean = wages-again. Cf. Let them so speak of his Heir, and it may be the land shall be their possession once more (Luke 1. 54, 55). God's ownership remains unaffected by any giving or withdrawing (Jer. 2. 7; Hos. 9. 3; Isa. 8. 8; Lev. 25. 23). — Possession. Cp. ## PSALM LXXXIII.

A Song or Psalm of Asaph.

Hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God.

<sup>2</sup> For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult:

And they that hate thee have lifted up the head.

<sup>3</sup> They have taken crafty counsel against thy people,

And consulted against thy hidden ones.

<sup>4</sup> They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation;

That the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.

They are confederate against thee:

<sup>6</sup> The tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites;

Of Moab, and the Hagarenes;

<sup>7</sup> Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek;

The Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre;

<sup>8</sup> Assur also is joined with them:

They have holpen the children of Lot. Selah.

<sup>9</sup> Do unto them as unto the Midianites: As to Sisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kison:<sup>10</sup> Which perished at En-dor:

They became as dung for the earth.

Yea, all their princes as Zebah, and as Zalmunna:

<sup>12</sup> Who said, Let us take to ourselves

The houses of God in possession.

<sup>13</sup> O my God, make them like a wheel;

As the stubble before the wind.

<sup>14</sup> As the fire burneth a wood,

And as the flame setteth the mountains on fire;

guide thee with mine eye.' <sup>13</sup> Little ones.] Strictly, children, while under the care of women; here, rather, families, as in Gen. 47. 12.

[Ps. LXXXIII.—Jehoshaphat's prayer ended, this psalm, it can scarcely be doubted, rose from the lips and hearts of the assembled nation, a prevailing Amen, indeed. 'Of' probably should be after 'Asaph,' i.e. in his style; or, to, i.e. assigned to him to be set to music; some think that the title implies that Jahaziel, one of Asaph's 'sons' (Chr. v. 14) was the author. <sup>2</sup> Lifted . . . head.] i.e. revolted (Judg. 8. 28). <sup>3</sup> Hidden points to the safe keeping of a stronghold (Ps. 27. 5 & 31. 20). <sup>5</sup> Against there shows a feeling akin to David's (1 Sam. 17. 36). Let the Church realize the truth contained in these words (cf. Zech. 2. 8) and she can sing, defiant of all confederacy,—

'The world, with sin and Satan,
In vain our march opposes;
By Thee we shall Break through them all,
Ere death our conflict closes.'

have assumed a threatening aspect, enough to justify the psalmist in describing Judah as the centre of a circle of hostility; Tyre and Philistia were allies of Edom (Amos 1. 6-9), and Philistia did actually invade Judah in Jehoram's reign (2 Chr. 21. 16). <sup>8</sup>] Assur is the earliest mention of the Assyrian power, apparently on this occasion merely auxiliaries of Lot's descendants, Ammon and Moab.—Both holpen and help were used as past participles. where had God's power been more signally manifested than in 'the slaughter of Midian' (Isa. 9. 4 & 10. 26); when Barak encountered their 900 chariots near Endor (between Tabor and Megiddo), and the Kishon's banks were strewn with their carcases; or, again, when Gideon slew 120,000, two princes as they fled, and two captive kings. <sup>12</sup> Who.] Agrees with them in v. 9, the confederates.—

Houses.] God's dwelling (Exod. 29. 45) is among his people; their possession is the land they occupy for Him (cp. 2 Chr. 20. 11). <sup>13</sup>] The whirl would better present the image than a wheel; cp. 'a rolling thing (marj, thistledown) before the whirlwind,' Isa. 17. 13.

<sup>14</sup>] After a double similitude for the dispersed foe, comes the same for the destroying Power: the latter part of which is explained to mean singeing (lit. licking up) the mountain tops (so Jennings), or scritgly blazing through the brushwood (so Cook, confirmed perhaps by Deut. 32. 22; Lam. 4. 11).

And make them afraid with thy storm.
 16 Fill their faces with shame;
 That they may seek thy name, O LORD.
 17 Let them be confounded and troubled for ever;

Yea, let them be put to shame, and perish:
 18 That men may know that thou, whose

 Art the most high over all the earth.

The Answer through Jahaziel—'Stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah.'

14 Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, <sup>a</sup> came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation; <sup>15</sup> and he said, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, <sup>b</sup> Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not your's, but God's. <sup>16</sup> To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the cliff of Ziz; and ye shall find them at the end of the brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel. <sup>17</sup> <sup>c</sup> Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to-morrow go out against them: <sup>d</sup> for the LORD will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat <sup>e</sup> bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the LORD, worshipping the LORD. <sup>19</sup> And the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with a loud voice on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; <sup>2</sup> Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper. <sup>21</sup> And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the LORD, <sup>a</sup> and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, <sup>b</sup> Praise the LORD; <sup>c</sup> for his mercy endureth for ever.

It is, however, supposition only which assigns this name to the valley that now bears it, the ravine of the Kedron, betwixt Moriah and the Mt. of Olives, at any date earlier than that of Eusebius and Jerome (about A.D. 350). Its basis, probably, was the fact that Joel (3. 2), depicting God's 'gathering all nations' confederate against Christ and his people for judgment, did place the scene of it in a 'valley' (using however the word enect, spacious valley, and not nachal, ravine, which alone would suit any wady near Engedi, or that of Kedron) of Jehoshaphat' (whether the real one, or one of his imagination which he so named), and might have been borrowing his imagery from the Lord's

PSALM XLVI.

To the chief Musician for the sons of Korah,
A Song upon Alamoth.

- 1 GOD is our refuge and strength,
A very present help in trouble.
2 Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed,
And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;
3 Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled,
Though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.
4 There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God,
The holy place of the tabernacles of the most High.
5 God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved:
God shall help her, and that right early.
6 The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved:
He uttered his voice, the earth melted.
7 The LORD of hosts is with us;
The God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.
8 Come, behold the works of the LORD, What desolations he hath made in the earth.
9 He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth:
He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder;
He burneth the chariot in the fire.
10 Be still, and know that I am God:
I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.
11 The LORD of hosts is with us;
The God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

Shout unto God with the voice of triumph.

- 2 For the LORD most high is terrible;
He is a great King over all the earth.
3 He shall subdue the people under us,
And the nations under our feet.
4 He shall choose our inheritance for us,
The excellency of Jacob whom he loved. Selah.
5 God is gone up with a shout,
The LORD with the sound of a trumpet.
6 Sing praises to God, sing praises:
Sing praises unto our King, sing praises.
7 For God is the King of all the earth:
Sing ye praises with understanding.
8 God reigneth over the heathen:
God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness.
9 The princes of the people are gathered together,
Even the people of the God of Abraham:
For the shields of the earth belong unto God:
He is greatly exalted.

PSALM XLVIII.

A Song and Psalm for the sons of Korah.

- 1 GREAT is the LORD, and greatly to be praised
In the city of our God, in the mountain of his holiness.
2 Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth,
Is mount Zion, on the sides of the north,
The city of the great King.
3 God is known in her palaces for a refuge.
4 For, lo, the kings were assembled,
They passed by together.
5 They saw it, and so they marvelled;
They were troubled, and hasted away.

Bk., incorrectly, 'God doth defend the earth as it were with a shield'; Germ. Denn Gott ist sehr erhöht bei den schüden auf erden.]

[Ps. XLVIII.—2.] Situation means elevation. Zion, until lowered by the Maccabees, rose above Moriah. This verse became proverbial (Lam. 2. 15). The Temple, God's city, God's palace, lay on its N. side, whence 'sides

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. ii.—1. Would.] God's purpose in translating Elijah is not revealed to us. The faith, the God-pleasing, the diligently seeking, of Enoch doubtless was Elijah's. It may have been reward (Heb. 11. 5, 6) simply. It might be to teach an unbelieving age that Jehovah was Lord of life and of the elements, or to foreshadow the day when Christ should similarly declare the kingdom of heaven open to all believers, or when (cf. 1 Cor. 15. 51-53; 1 Thess. 4. 16, 17) other mortal bodies shall be rapt and changed and put on immortality. Neither are we given a reason for the repeated command, Tarry here. Probably it was a trial of Elisha's constancy; and there seems to have been a doubt in Elijah's mind whether it was lawful or possible for man to see (v. 10) what was about to happen. Elisha may unconsciously have shared Peter's feeling (Matt. 16. 22, 23), and have looked over-despairingly at the loss of one who could ill be spared; cf. v. 12, note.—Whirlwind.] Rather, tempest (v. 11 also); s'ardh, in Ezek. 1. 4, is joined with riach—of wind (ventus turbis), and its accompaniments are 'a great cloud and a fire.' Thus, in the last miracle of his life, Elijah (as Elisha, in his first, with Joshua) is connected with Moses (Ex. 14. 21); the type of Christ's forerunner with the type of Christ, to be again connected on the mount of Transfiguration; the prophet the link between the Gospel and the Law. Gilgaid was the home of his youth. Dense thickets cover that shore, on which Pisgah looks down. <sup>9</sup> Let, &c.] It is not certain whether he meant double what Elijah had (and in recorded miracle Elisha surpassed him), or double what any other prophet might have. He was a man of very humble mind; his feeling may have been that nothing short of twice the heavenly aid that sufficed for Elijah would suffice for him. Deut. 21. 17 would lead to the supposition that he meant merely, 'Give me the firstborn's portion; I am to be thine heir, thy successor, let that be my inheritance.' If this, however, be the meaning, an explanation has yet to be found of 'hard' (v. 10). Cp. Matt. 20. 23. Certainly Elisha did not attain to Elijah's greatness, whether we look at his life, his end, or the frequency of reference in other Scripture. Still, he filled Elijah's place more than any one else did; he too was reckoned 'chariot and horsemen' to Israel (cf. ch. 13. 14 and 2 Chr. 20. 1, note). Sept. γεννηθῆσα δὴ διπλᾷ ἐν πνεύματι σου ἐπ' ἐμέ; Vulg. (Syr. 'in a chariot of fiery horses,' would seem to be inexact.—[Into heaven.] Sept. (v. 1 also) ἐν σπασσισμῷ ὡς εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν (not Vat. MS.), = usque ad, not according to classical (= as though, Thuc. vi. 61. 6) but to later and Biblical usage. Cf. Amos 9. 2 (Sept. εἰς). Cp. 'Le fils d'Alemène fut reçu dans le ciel.'—Flo-rian. The Greek word οὐρανός has three chief meanings: (1) the expanse above the earth = air and sky; (2) the vault which bounds these; (3) the dwelling of heavenly beings beyond. To the first of these corresponds raqia, never rendered 'heaven,' but always firmament (Gen. 1. 6, 14, &c.); Vulg. firmamentum; Sept. στερέωμα. Shamayim (used here and v. 1) means that which is high, the upper portion of the kosmos, of which earth is the lower (Gen. 1. 1, 9; ch. 7. 2, 19); Vulg. cælum; Sept. οὐρανός; above which (so Gesenius) the abode of God and the angels was supposed to be; rendered 'air' 21 times (Gen. 1. 26, &c.); once 'astrologers,' i.e. viewers of the heavens; and 'heaven' or 'heavens' 287 times. The expression 'heaven of heavens' (1 Kin. 8. 2) = infinity, illimitable space (cp. 'holy of holies'). The word 'heaven' is scarcely used in O. T. (though sometimes approximately) as we now use it (cf. Eph. 1. 10 & 3. 15; 2 Cor. 12. 2) for the abode of God, angels, and departed saints; its ordinary meaning is the atmosphere, or (as here) the visible sky (which probably is its meaning in such places as 1 Kin. 8. 30), or as in our expressions, 'God above' and 'God on high.' Cf. 'Thou art gone up on high. To mansions in the skies,' and compare Luke 24. 49 (ἐξ ὑψους) with 51 (εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν). To the statement there is no contradiction in John 3. 13, which may mean that none of the dead should precede Christ into heaven; Christ is the first-fruits of them that slept. More probably it does not refer to the ascension at all, but of rising into the region of absolute and eternal truth. No man has attained to that. <sup>12</sup>, Saw.] The conditional sign was vouchsafed (v. 10).—[The chariot.] His cry was one of despair, as though Israel's defence and strength were gone, as though there were not one godly man left. He naturally adopted the figure which the vision suggested. It brought to his mind chariotry and cavalry (cf. equites, 1 Kin. 22. 4) as the strength of an army at that date; here Sept. ἡς καὶ ἰππεὺς αὐτοῦ; Vulg. et auriga ejus. — [Saw him no more.] He was parted from him. 'A cloud received him out of his sight,' as once again (Mark 9. 7, 8; cf. Luke 24. 51; Acts 1. 9). 'Disappeared from among men and no one knows of his death to this very day.'—Josephus. The spot was not far from where Moses had vanished from the eyes of his countrymen. Cf. οὐχ εὐπρόκτετο, Heb. 11. 5. If joined with the question, they mean even He? If joined with the following words, they mean and actually he smote (so Syr. and Arab.). Vulg. has etiam nunc; Sept. (rendered now in ch. 10. 10), ἀφθού. <sup>15</sup>, Saw.] 'From the nature of the ground—Jericho being on the upper terrace or "plain" of Jordan (cillar), while the lower wooded terrace is only a few feet above the river, and very narrow on the W. side, but much broader on the E. side—the scene of the event is quite shut out from view at Jericho.'—Tristram. The 'water of Jericho' is named in Josh. 16. 1; and the trees, whose roots that water nourished, gave it the name 'city of palm trees.' Now the palms are as completely gone as the walls once 'fenced up to heaven,' or the 'scarlet line,' or the 'school of the prophets,' or the sycamore of Zachæus; the blessing of Elisha lingers still; a perennial fountain bears his name.—Naught.] Sax. ne-aught, i.e. not anything, worthless. Cf. 'The priest naught' (Latimer): 'The manner of removing that which is naught' (Hooker). Naughty appears to have been used at the same date in the same sense. Cf. Jer. 24. 2.—Barren.] Marg. causing to miscarry (v. 21 also). It is a question whether their meaning was simply that the land was unproductive because of ('from thence,' v. 21) the water, or that their city was without the blessing of Deut. 7. 14. 'This fountain caused not only the blasting of the earth and the trees, but of the children born of women; it was entirely of a sickly and corruptive nature to all things whatsoever,'—Jos. Wars. iv. 8. 3. The brackish water is best for the palm tree, but with that exception, though it supports a luxuriant vegetation, nourishes little valuable for human food. Sept. ἀρεσκονμένη; Ital. il paese è dipopolato. <sup>20</sup> Cruse.] Of old spelt cruise, and correctly, being derived from the Dutch kruidcke, a cup. Lowland Scotch crook, hence 'crockery.' Cf. 'A cruise of fragrance, formed of burnished gold.'—Pope. (Cruise, a voyage, is from the French croise. Vessels fitted out specially for the plunder of infidels carried a cross. Comp. 'Crusader'.) The tsôchôth was a flat metal sancer (ch. 21. 13; <sup>2</sup> Chr. 35. 13); different from the tsappachath, a glothlar earthen bowl like a teapot (1 Kin. 17. 12 & 19. 6), and the baqbûg, an earthen bottle, making a gurgling sound (comp. βόμβυλος) when pouring (Jer. 19. 1). New it must be, lest any medicament might be supposed clinging to its sides; flat, that its contents might be visible (John 2. 7). <sup>21</sup> Spring.] Probably the one called Ain-es-Sultan, or, by Jews and Christians, Elisha's fountain. Many springs in that district are brackish still. Salt, which makes water less potable, ground more barren (as the Dead Sea shore would testify), was the unlikely cure, and therefore the best to use as proof, that the excellency of the power belongs to God; it is also the emblem of soundness, material and spiritual (Matt. 5. 13). That Elisha uses means (though seemingly unlikely ones) more frequently than Elijah is noticeable, but a these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land.

<sup>22</sup> So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

<sup>23</sup> And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head. <sup>24</sup> And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the LORD. And there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them.

satisfactory reason has not yet been given. 22. Healed.] The water is tepid at the fountain head (an old ruinous basin); all agree that it is sweet, good for drink or for vegetation. 23. Go up . . . bald head.] Bethel stands high, some 3,000 ft. above the sea. The road up to this place, where met in strange companionship the Calf and the school of the prophets, lay then through a dense forest.—Baldness was always regarded with abhorrence, for it might be owing to leprosy. Elisha, though a young man (he lived 50 years afterwards) may have been bald, and his baldness might be the more noticeable in contrast with 'hairy' Elijah (lit. owner of hair, ch. 1. 8); but the name bald head is constantly used in the East, merely as an insulting epithet, even to men with abundant hair. As being a heathen sign of mourning, the shaving of the head was forbidden to Israel. Go up may possibly have been intended for an unbelieving jeer at the ascension of Elisha's master. We, who know nothing of their thoughts and motives, may not venture to call the judgment severe. One thing we do know—the curse had God's approval, or it must have fallen harmless to the ground. Also, we know that it was discriminating. 'Little children,' it says, came forth (ketanim na'arim). Naar is used of Ishmael at 14, Joseph at 17, and times without number of full-grown men. Allow that little may imply that some of this rabble were mere boys; none such died. 'Tare forty and two children of them,' it says; it does not say little now; it does not even use the vague word na'arim, but, as though purposely to mark a distinction, jeladim, the word used of the young men 'grown up' with Rehoboam and of Daniel (1. 4), when certainly arrived at years of discretion. We know, further, that Elisha was one of the most gentle and kindly of the goodly fellowship of the prophets. All his other miracles proclaim it; all, living or dead, bring blessing. Lange's suggestion is not improbable, that this was an organized attempt 'to make the new head of the class of the prophets ridiculous and contemptible at the very commencement of his career.' No likelier place, at any rate, for that than Beth-El, which forfeited its name and became Beth-Aven, House of a Nothing, an idol-calf. For argument, that even here we have an instance of 'mercy rejoicing against and over judgment,' see Expos. iii. 424 (Cox); and for argument that if these imprecations of Elisha and Elijah (ch. 1. 10) are justifiable, a fortiori those in the Psalms are; see Expos. iii. 471 (Hammond). Certain it is that we have here a very solemn warning against scorning any messenger of God, one that may profitably be set beside the language of our Lord in Matt. 10. 14, 15. If there seem to any to be still a difficulty unremoved, they will read with comfort these words:—'Instead of passing over it, or offering some solution of it, I think it is a plain duty to profess that I do not understand it, though better persons may. It cannot shake our faith to feel such ignorance and to confess it. If there were a hundred passages which I was unable to interpret, but which puzzled me as to their moral significance, I should believe in the God whom the rest revealed to me, and ask Him to instruct me what I should think of them. And this, I believe, in good time he would do, if I did not lose my hold upon that which I had, or attempt, by hasty efforts of my own, to grasp that which I had not.'—Maurice. 25. To Mt. Carmel.] Probably to visit some cave which had given shelter to Elijah. The changed state of Court-feeling suffered him to make his home, at least partially, at Samaria. Cf.—

'He, the Healer and the Guide,
 To Carmel top is gone, far from their woe and shame.
 Now from his lips the judgment word hath passed,

The lightning from his awful brow;
 Low on his knees in some bleak cavern cast,
 His prayers go up o'er ocean vast
 For those whom he hath doomed; he is their Patron now.

And our Eli-sha—falls he on the Mount
 To plead, His holy ones to pray

Ewald, on account of 1 Kin. 22. 47, would substitute Jehoram for Jehoshaphat here. But cf. v. 14. It was worth marching about 100 miles round to insure Edom's fidelity and co-operation; to avoid also, perhaps, risk of arousing Syrian opposition from Ramoth. An attack from the S. would be unexpected, and on Moab's strategically defenceless frontier; the Maonites of Edom had lately been allies of Moab (2 Chr. 20. 1, note), and Mesha had fortified a number of strongholds on the N. frontier. 9. King of Edom.] Strictly, Jehoshaphat's viceroy ('under his authority,' Joseph.); possibly 2 Chr. 20. 23 explains his readiness to take part against Moab.—Fetches a compass.] i.e. made a detour; cf. That God is, is almighty, is merciful, that when all other help seems vain, He can help, and will—these are truths which it may be doubted whether the inmost heart of any man ever utterly rejects (cf. v. 27). No doubt, the threat of 1 Kin. 21. 29 was present to Jehoram's mind. He was ever ready to find fault with God's dealings followers. <sup>18</sup> Also.] For the Lord is wont to give beyond what men desire or deserve. <sup>19</sup> Smite, &c.] This is the second time (2 Sam. 8, 2) that Moab is treated with exceptional severity (despite Deut. 2, 9). Not even when wood was needed for purposes of a siege was it lawful to cut down such trees as might be reckoned man's life (Deut. 20, 19, where see references to Egyptian custom quoted by Cook in Speak, Com.). Elisha's words, however, need not be taken as command here, but (as in ch. 8, 12) may be prophetic; and that prohibition may not have been humanitarian (like those of Deut. 24), but prudential, referring only to the land which they were themselves afterwards to occupy. It would appear from v. 27 that the savagery of Israel was held to be the main cause of the king of Moab's horrible deed of desperation; for Israel seems there to mean the allies, and the indignation to be there God's, as it is on every other occasion where the expression occurs (Num. 1, 53 & 18, 5; Josh. 9, 20 & 22, 20; 1 Chr. 37, 24, &c.). Assyrian monuments depict all these barbarities.—Good. Vulg. rightly, fructiferum; so Josephus. <sup>20</sup> When, &c.] To look for deliverance at the ordinary hour of prayer is not without encouragement in Bible story; cf. 2 Sam. 24, 15, note; 1 Kin. 18, 29; Ezra 9, 5; and note the hour of the beginning and the ending of the sacrifice of the death of Christ. The time of day was early marked by 'watches' (1 Sam. 11, 11, note); by hours not till after the Captivity. <sup>21</sup> When, &c.] Rather, Now all the Moabites had heard...and had summoned

As to the place, however, there is little uncertainty. Kerak of Moab is known to history, ancient and modern, as a very lofty (2,700 ft.) and strong position, near the capital, Rabbath-Moab, or Ar of

It is the only Moabite town remaining S. of the Arnon, pop. 7,000. It was early the seat of a bishopric, and was a stronghold of the Crusaders. It was the perfidy of Rainald, lord of Kerak, which brought about the battle of Hattin, A.D. 1187. The Emir of Kerak captured Jerusalem from the Crusaders A.D. 1238.—[Slingers.] Including probably catapults and other engines; cf. 2 Chr. 26. 15. <sup>26</sup> Too sore.] i.e. that the showers of stones from the surrounding heights were unendurable.—[That drew.] Rather, with drawn. Ital. con la spada tratta in mano. We cannot tell whether it was hope or hatred led him specially to endeavour to meet his late ally; hatred, certainly, if Pusey's interpretation of the next verse be correct, viz. that in this sortie, though he failed to reach the king of Edom, he succeeded in capturing the heir apparent, whom he put to death on the wall, rousing Edom's indignation against Israel as original instigators of the war. Such a death, however, would hardly be described as a burnt offering. More probably it was his own son whom he offered (so Josephus) to Chemosh. See note on v. 19. Apparently, the vengeance he desired to take on Edom found a later opportunity (Amos 2. 1). <sup>27</sup> Son.] Vulg. filium suum. This is the only individual instance of human sacrifice recorded in Scripture, though there are several allusions to the practice. Mic. 6. 6, 7 expresses a world-wide feeling; cf. 2 Chr. 33. 6; Ps. 106. 37, 38; Jer. 7. 31, and—

Of human sacrifice and parents' tears.'

Diodorus relates, that when Agathocles was about to besiege Carthage, 200 noble children were then offered. The similar records of Dahomey, Mexico, &c., are too horrible even to quote.—[Against Israel.] Some (Ewald, Keil) render, great wrath (of God) fell upon Israel. Ball adopts the surely less easily intelligible meaning, 'the wrath of Chemosh fell upon the Hebrew alliance.' If the superstitious in Israel were capable of ascribing to such a cause the breaking up of the alliance before the Moabite stronghold was taken, and the king a prisoner, certainly the sacred Writer was not; cf. v. 19, note. 'Yet the king of Moab seems to have been saved from total ruin by some dissension among the allies which led to the withdrawing of their forces.'—Milman.—[Departed from him.] This campaign embittered Moabite feeling; they became more aggressive than formerly, and were viewed by Israel as dreaded marauders (ch. 13. 20). Gradually they extended their dominion, as Israel grew weaker, occupying by the date of the death of Ahaz all their ancient territory. Their doom is pronounced by Isaiah (15 & 16) and Jeremiah (48). No doubt they suffered by the invasions of Pul and Sargon; but they appear to have made terms with Nebuchadnezzar (ch. 24. 2). Their hostility to Israel survived the Captivity; Sanballat was a native of their town, Horonaim. They and their name clung to the district round Rabbath as late, at any rate, as the time of Eusebius, i.e. cir. A.D. 350.

Josephus says he was Obadiah; cf. 1 Kin. 18. 12.—Bondmen,] Jewish Law, in most cases, adopted existing usage, and modified it. In many conditions of society there could be no better way of making any one pay a debt than by (as at Athens and Rome) making him work it off. Life-long servitude would do more than that; hence (cf. Lev. 25. 39-41) no Israelite (not even a thief unable to make restitution) might be made bondman for life; the year of jubilee brought freedom, if, i.e. a seventh year (Deut. 15. 12) had not already procured manumission (or, it may be, the out-door slave served till the jubilee, the domestic slave for six years only; see the note on Jer. 34. 8). We must look back a little in the history to find the cause. It was in the beginning of this very year that Elisha had said to this very king, 'But for Jehoshaphat, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.' Now he counts on influence with king and captain. Why? Because (ch. 3) he had saved king and captain from ignominy, if not from destruction. Incidentally we learn that to attend calf-worshippers' festivals at seasons of human appointment was not the pious Israelite's only resource. Instruction, at any rate, and worship, if not sacrifice, was available, and 'benefit' of Jehovah's own prophet, on days of Divine appointment. In the prophet's house, no doubt, a copy of God's Word would be found, and probably nowhere else. Its scarcity, even in Judah, is testified by 2 Chr. 17. 9; ch. 22. 8.—New moon.] Cf. Num. 28. 11-15.—Sabbath.] He cannot mean an ordinary Sabbath day, for harvest going on would let her know it was not that; nor would he, knowing nothing of the pressing need (nor probably even had he known) have suggested the possibility of her taking a 16 miles journey (a Sabbath-day's journey = 6 furlongs) on that day. No doubt 'sabbath' here means (so Hervey) those other days (the 'times' of Gal. 4. 10), as the day of Atonement, the 1st day of the 7th month, and the 8th day, when they were ordered to keep a which they believe to possess miraculous powers. Moses and the magicians had their rods (the word here is different, it is true; but both alike are used of an ordinary staff, or the shepherd's crook, to which circumstances or known ownership give the special character). We are left to guess that had the mother returned, believing and content, the staff would have sufficed. As it was not so, and her importunity prevailed on him to accompany her, naturally the divine power was made to await the presence of the divine agent. Cf. John 9. 6. Many miracles were for some time (ἐποίει) wrought by St. Paul without personal contact, with even less personal energy (Gal. 2. 8) than speaking the word only (Acts 19. 11. 12; cf. Acts 5. 15); but we are specially told that they were no ordinary miracles (οὐ τὰς τυχούσας).—Salute, &c.] As our Lord bade (Matt. 8. 22) that not even the holiest duty was to stand in the way of prompt obedience to his call, so Elisha bids that no ordinary courtesies, prolix in the East, shall delay this work of love, this work for God. 30.] Note the mother's faith and importunity. 31. Shunem was close to Nain (Luke 7. 15).

2 K. v.—1. Now.] Omitted by Vulg., Germ.; the word does not connect with anything preceding. Possibly (so Schenkel) the story belongs to Jehu's reign, but certainly it seems to belong to the period of peace between Ahab's death and Hazael's usurpation and hostility.—Naaman.] Rendered pleasant plants in Isa. 47. 10, and connected with the name of the Aramean god of love, the Sun; cp. the names Naomi and Naamah.—Syria.] Lit. Aram. 'It is from Elisha's time that the prophets appear as the oracles, as the monitors, not only of Israel, but of the surrounding nations. Elisha is the prophet of the Syrians as well as of the Israelites. It is this feature of his character that is caught in the only notice of him (Luke 4. 27) contained in N. T.' (Stanley); a view supported in part by ch. 8. 7, 8, but not by the preceding verse in St. Luke.—Deliverance.] In a war in which, as Assyrian monuments show us, Syria had shaken off the Assyrian yoke. Stanley, however, explains the expression by the tradition that Naaman's arrow killed Ahab (Jos. Ant. viii. 15. 5).—Leper.] Common in Israel at this time (Luke 4. 27). Indeed few lands have escaped leprosy. Pliny calls Egypt genetrix talium vitiorum; and certainly it was a prey to many loathsome diseases (Dent. 28. 27); Lucretius says, Gignitur Egypto in mediâ, neque preterea usquam. Reference to the Vulg. version of Isa. 53. 4 will sufficiently explain the use which it served as an illustrated lesson in God's school; Nos putavimus Eum quasi leprosum. Naaman could have been no sepulcrum ambulans, no horrible spectacle like that which induced Buddha to retire from the world; and the Syrians could not have reckoned his disease contagious. The leprosy of Scripture is of slow growth (the Heb. paśah, Lev. 13, is used of its spreading, and of nothing else); slight at the outset; of unknown origin. The æsthetic (as opposed to the tuberculated) variety generally begins with shining white patches on the forehead. It still prevails to some extent in Syria, and is still incurable. Naaman's was partial (v. 11), and like Gehazi's and Simon's (ch. 8. 4; Matt. 26. 6), unlike that of Miriam, Uzziah, and the Four at Samaria, of the 'clean,' not the 'unclean,' kind, necessitating neither dwelling alone nor abandonment of avocation; cf. Jos. Ant. iii. 11. 4. An interesting account (by a medical man) of how the name 'leprosy' has been used for scrofula, eczema, and elephant-

<sup>5</sup> And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel.

And he departed, and <sup>6</sup> took with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment. <sup>6</sup> And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.

<sup>7</sup> And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.

<sup>8</sup> And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel.

There was no actual war at present (v. 7).—By companies.] Sept. μυρόσχοι, i.e. as light-armed moss-troopers; Vulg. lat. runculi, marauders. Very early Chaldean inscriptions refer to such raids (Boscawen). See Smith's Hist. of Assyrian, p. 250.—Maid.] Perhaps as great an object of desire among Syrians, as Greek maids among Persians (Herod. iii. 134). Border-raids of the Philistines and others were frequently made with the special object of carrying off slaves; Jabin's host counted on 'a damsel or two' apiece; the Tyrians, unmindful of 'the brotherly covenant,' were the chief dealers in Israelite slaves (Amos i. 6, 9; Joel 3. 6). To the lesson of this little maiden's life, which should not be lost sight of while studying the more prominent characters, Keble thus points—

'Who for the like of me will care?
So whispers many a mournful heart,
When in the weary languid air
For grief or scorn we pine apart,
But One who ne'er forgets is here;
He hath a word for thee to speak.'

<sup>3</sup> Recover.] Lit. scrape together, collect (2 Sam. 12. 28), receive (Josh. 20. 4), hence re-admit (Gesenius) one excluded by leprosy, and so heal. The explanation scarcely applies to clean leprosy; the word however is not used of curing any complaint other than leprosy; Sept. ἀποσυνάξει. The corresponding word in the Assyrian inscriptions means enchant, i.e. remove disease by repetition of sacred formulae; asapu represents both sorcerer and physician (Boscawen). <sup>4</sup> One.] Rather, He (Naaman) told his lord the king; so Vulg.; Sept. his wife. <sup>5</sup> Go to.] Rather, with Oriental impetuosity, Go, start.—Letter.] Specimens of the old Aramaean script, resembling Phœnician, Hebrew, and Moabite, may be seen on Assyrian seals of the 8th century B.C. <sup>9</sup> So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha. <sup>10</sup> And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and <sup>6</sup> wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

<sup>11</sup> But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper. <sup>12</sup> *Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? Jehoram only who had seemed in any way to doubt it. The Syrians knew the name Jehoram, and Naaman's very presence was token of belief in His power, though He was unknown to them as the Alone-God, the Self-existent, and though they may have thought the gift of God could be purchased with money, and must unquestionably be bestowed on a noble suppliant. <sup>9</sup> Chariot.] Rather, chariotry; cf. ch. 2. 11 & v. 15; Heb. receb, but mercabâh in v. 21. <sup>10</sup> Wash in Jordan.] Naaman's haughtiness, and his master's, needed such humbling treatment. Again we notice that use of means (and unlikely ones) which specially distinguishes Elisha's miracles, and makes them the more like Christ's; cf. John 9. 7.—Seven times.] In this particular the command would probably not seem strange to Naaman. It appears from the Chaldean magic tablets that incantations had to be repeated seven times, and phylacteries to be tied in seven knots (Lenormant's Chald. Magic). 'Seven is the signature of the works of God.'—Keil. <sup>11</sup> Surely.] No doubt etiquette would have required it under ordinary circumstances.—Strike, &c.] Rather, make passes over. Vulg. has tangere; and healing by touch would be familiar to Naaman; it is frequently mentioned in the Chaldean tablets; Merodach the healer is asked 'to touch the sick man with his holy hands' (Boscawen). The Heb. nûph, however, has no such meaning, but = wave to and fro; cf. v. 3, note. <sup>12</sup> Rivers.] The Barada, on which Damascus stands, and the Awaaj; they fertilize the Oasis of Damascus, and disappear in irrigation or by evaporation in marshes outside it. 'Though insignificant in size, they are pre-eminent in beauty, their water being exceptionally pellucid and pure, and their banks are clad with the most luxuriant orchards. In all these points they present a striking contrast with the muddy and lonely Jordan.'—Tristram. Barada means cold-stream, and it had also the name Chrysorroas. <sup>13</sup> Some great thing.] So Simeon Stylites was ready to 'Endure as much and more Than many just and holy men, whose names

Are registered and calendar'd for saints';

so many are ready to ask, 'What must I do to be saved,' who are prepared to perform great deeds and make great sacrifices (cf. Mic. 6. 7), but that 'little' which the Lord requires—Believe, they scorn. <sup>14</sup> Seren.] With the faith and patience of Israel at Jericho, or Elijah at Carmel. The distance, too, was 20 miles. Naaman was exhibiting that first token of fitness for entry into the kingdom of heaven, the teachableness of a little child; the thankful heart, which desired to worship, surely Hope may reckon as another; cf. Luke 17. 15-19. He seems to go beyond Nebuchadnezzar and Darius (Dan. 3. 29 & 6. 26, 27). We are not, however, to look for full stature in the cradle of conversion. <sup>15</sup> Now.] Without emphasis; better omitted, as in Sept., Vulg., Germ.—Blessing.] The word is used for a present in any sense, but specially one on arrival or parting, one accompanying salutation, one on any solemn occasion. A trifling complimentary present on consulting a prophet was customary (1 Sam. 9. 7, note); but Naaman's was likely to be something sufficiently large to make it servant. <sup>16</sup> But he said, As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, <sup>17</sup> I will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

<sup>17</sup> And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD. <sup>18</sup> In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and <sup>19</sup> he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing. <sup>19</sup> And he said unto him, Go in peace.

seem that the aid of God's prophet could be bought. Elisha was too jealous of God's honour to accept any such gift. <sup>17</sup> Shall there not then? [Rather (as Sept.), if not, let there. — Earth.] Probably his idea was that he could best worship Israel's God (a local god in his idea) on Israel's land thus transported. As yet his knowledge was not in proportion to his fervour. He would have his little Holy Land in his grounds at home. He was not likely to have heard that Jehovah had ever ordered that his altars should be of earth. Compare the Mahomedan's love for the sacred earth of Mecca, and the Campo Santo at Pisa, supplied with earth from Palestine. — Sacrifice. i.e. thank-offering. <sup>18</sup> Rimmon. We meet with a place, Ain Rimmon (fountain of Rimmon) in Josh. 15. 32. Tab-rimmon (Rimmon is good) was the name of Benhadad's father (1 Kin. 15. 18). Hadad-Rimmon (a place named after those two gods) is mentioned in Zech. 12. 11. Hadad, no doubt, was the sun. Probably Rimmon (from rām, to be high; cf. Ramah) was the Assyrian (so Sayce and Schrader) god of the air or of thunder, worshipped also at Damascus. Among his (41) titles on the cuneiform tablets occur Rāmīnu, the thunderer, and Bārīqu, the lightener (Ball). Cf. 1 Sam. 14. 2, note. 'The primary meaning of the name was the Thunderer' (Boscawen, who quotes the Deluge Tablet, Col. ii. 12, in proof: 'Rammannu in the midst thundered, irimannar'). Cf. Pinches' note, Soc. Bib. Arch. Proceedings, Feb. 6, 1883, p. 73. — I bow myself. To worship is frequently expressed in Assyrian inscriptions by īaban appi = to bow down the face to adore (Boscawen). — House of Rimmon. The Kurkh Inscrip., Col. ii. 87, states that Shalmaneser III. of Assyria offered victims before the god Rimmon in the city of Aleppo (Boscawen). <sup>19</sup> Go in peace. Is the serving of two masters then allowable, or, for a sincere man, possible? Will God accept divided service? May we join God and the world as he joined God and Rimmon? Morality is progressive. The patriarchs might do what Israel, settled in Canaan, might not; men under the Law might do what men under the Gospel might not. With increased privilege comes increased requirement. 'Whoso denieth me,' &c., had not then been spoken. Besides, Naaman was reared a heathen, and had not yet altogether emerged from ignorance such as God then 'winked at; we are not to say sanctioned; cf. ch. 17. 33, 41. A Shadrach or a Daniel would not have so acted, or so acting been pardoned. St. Paul would not suffer the Christian to sit at meat in the idol's temple, however meaningless he might esteem his presence there. 'Wholly His' is the motto for Christian forehead; we may not suppose 'the offence of the Cross has ceased.' Some understand Naaman to ask pardon for what had hitherto been his custom. — Way. Lit. a length of ground (Gen. 48. 7). <sup>20</sup> As, &c. In Gehazi's phraseology there might, under other circumstances and in another tone, be no profanity; cf. r. 16. He is an illustration of the saying, 'The nearer the church, the further from God.' Judas, one of the twelve, was a thief; Gehazi, the prophet's servant, was a liar. Privilege is not purity. <sup>22</sup> Eren now. French, rightly, en ce moment même. — Two. Two sons of the prophets from the college at Bethel or Gilead; cf. ch. 2. 1, 3.

When his master had refused large gifts, that God's honour might not suffer, and he knew it, was no time for such conduct on the part of the servant. Truly warning examples of the length to which covetousness may lead abound in Scripture—Achan, Elif's sons, Ahab, Balaam, Ananias, Demas, Judas. Doubtless 'there is a time to every purpose under heaven,' but godly wisdom studies opportuneness, avoids excess, practices patience, and above all cleaves to the right and the true. For a forcible spiritual application of this inquiry, see Keble, 11th Sun. after Trinity. <sup>27</sup> White as snow.] In Assyrian inscriptions leprosy is sometimes styled 'whiteness of the body' (Boscawen).

Ex. 3. 22. 6. Stick.] As unlikely a means as the salt, or the meal, or the immersion on other occasions. Why he so frequently used means, and seemingly unlikely ones, or why he wrought so many miracles on occasions apparently unimportant, is open to conjecture. The general character of Elisha's miracles shows that acts of this kind must have been needed to counteract the materialism of the Israelitish people at that time, their low sensual idolatry, their reverence for evil powers, to undermine their religion of fraud and hatred, to establish, as no words or arguments could, the proof of an actual and a gracious ruler.—Maurice. Bishop Hall says this wood was designed as 'a helve (Sax. helf = handle) for the lost axe head.' The moral of this incident is thus pointed out by Cowper—

'Not one concern of ours is small
If we belong to Him;
To teach us this, the Lord of all
Once made the iron swim.'

We have the declaration of the Psalmist to rest upon (125. 2), 'The Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever;' and of God himself by the prophet (Zech. 2. 5), 'I will be unto her a wall of fire round about;' we may walk all our days 'as seeing Him who is invisible.' It is remarkable that we find in Hittite records the name Yahubidhi (= Jah is round me). 17. See.] More blessed are they, however, who do not see, and yet believe. Cf. Rom. 8. 31; Ps. 34. 7. be seen' (i.e. in every mountain of difficulty and distress the vision of God is to be looked for), the proof that God is 'a very present help.' God's interposition is to be looked for at critical moments, when things are seemingly at the worst, as with Israel in Egypt, Jacob at Peniel, David at Maon, Hezekiah before Sennacherib, Peter 'beginning to sink,' Peter again in prison (Acts 12. 6), Paul in Asia (2 Cor. 1. 8), whose inference suits every case alike, 'In Whom we trust that He will yet deliver us.'—Horses, &c.] Cf. He uses the intensive form of expression, smiting, shall I smite them, i.e. shall I utterly destroy them; cf. Gen. 22. 17; Luke 22. 15. Possibly he dreaded also the rebuke of Ahab (1 Kin. 20. 42). 22. Shall not.] The deed would have been as impolitic as barbarous. The benefit of

The food of his involuntary guests was to be all that was suitable and needful (cf. our daily bread). For how long this exhibition of power and generosity put a stop to border-warfare, we are not told; the Eastern mind is ever ready to ascribe magnanimity to fear; the next invasion (r. 24) was on a larger scale, and the plan of secret surprises was abandoned; 'after this' points to no long interval. <sup>24</sup> Samaria.] Cf. 1 Kin. 16. 24. note. <sup>25</sup> Pieces.] Eighty shekels (12*l.*) for the most worthless portion of an unclean beast shows the extremity of the destitution. Why not curse God, and die? Why not gratify his wrath against God by beheading His prophet? He insinuates a doubt as was no man there. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord had made the host of the Syrians <sup>8</sup> to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us <sup>4</sup> the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us. <sup>7</sup> Wherefore they <sup>10</sup> arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.

<sup>8</sup> And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

<sup>9</sup> Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household. <sup>10</sup> So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were. <sup>11</sup> And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.

<sup>12</sup> And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now shew you what the Syrians have done to us. They know that we be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.

<sup>13</sup> And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed;) and let us send and see. <sup>14</sup> They took therefore two chariot horses; and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see. <sup>15</sup> And they went after them unto Jordan: and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king.

2 KINGS IV. 38-44.

<sup>38</sup> AND Elisha came again to <sup>a</sup>Gilgal:and there was a <sup>b</sup>dearth in the land; and the sons of the prophets were <sup>c</sup>sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets. <sup>39</sup> And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap full, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they knew them not. <sup>40</sup> So they poured out for the men to eat.

And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O thou man of God, there is <sup>d</sup>death in the pot. And they could not eat thercof. <sup>41</sup> But he said, Then bring meal. And <sup>e</sup>he cast it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no harm in the pot.

This might have been (so Thomson) the ecballium elaterium or squirting cucumber; and, if this Gilgal was in mount Ephraim (cf. ch. 2. 2, note), it must have been. In itself the citrullus colocynthus (so Vulg.) would be a likelier plant (so Tristram), but it grows on the barren sands around the Dead Sea and on some places on the Philistine shores, and nowhere else in Palestine. It closely resembles a melon or pumpkin. A stranger (and perhaps Elisha's servant was the gatherer) might easily mistake them. It is bitter in taste, powerful as an aperient. Pekkaim, the masc. form of pakknoth (gourd), is rendered knops in 1 Kin. 6. 18. The two stories may be compared in many particulars, as indeed may also the Workers, Christ and Elisha, in more than in the fact that each had an 'Elias' to precede him. Keil calls attention to this difference, that Christ performs, Elisha merely predicts (cf. 1 Kin. 17. 14) the miracle. The Jews, however, reckon this among the miracles wrought by Elisha.

2 K. viii.—1. Then.] Rather, Now Elisha had spoken. There is no mark of time; it is an incidental mention. The famine had not only been foretold, but had actually come.

—Called.] Similarly in Ezek. 36. 29 God is said to 'call for the corn.' Famine is one of God's four sore judgments (Ezek. 14. 21).

2. Philistines.] For two reasons corn was likely to be more plentiful there; their plains were less liable to drought; the 'coasts of Palestine (Philistia)' engaged in foreign trade (Joel 3. 4). Both Abraham and Isaac had found refuge among them in time of famine. 3. Cry.] Though Eastern sovereigns are very far removed above their subjects, yet in some points they are more accessible than those of the West. Direct appeal by clamorous cry, by personal presentation of a petition, is very usual. It is somewhat the same still with the Tsar of Russia. 4. Talked.] Rather, was talking. Possibly Gehazi had repented, and his punishment been removed. Leprosy like Naaman's, however (called, for distinction, 'clean'), need not have kept him at all times apart from men or court; cf. ch. 5. 1.

2 C. xxi.—<sup>10.</sup> Libnah.] About midway between Hebron and Gaza.—This loss of dominion was a judgment on him for having led his people into spiritual unfaithfulness, and at the same time the natural consequence thereof; for Libnah belonged to the family of Aaron (Josh. 21. 13), who naturally would resent Jehoram's introduction of the worship of Baal. This was the beginning of that priestly protest on God's behalf, which culminated in the overthrow of Athaliah. Syr. reads, 'the Edomites that lived in Libnah.' It was followed by the invasion of the Arabians and Philistines (rs. 16, 17). <sup>11.</sup> He.] Emphatic; Sept. καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς; the people followed only under compulsion.—Mountains.] Heb. har, perhaps a corruption for ir = cities, which Sept., Vulg., and many Hebrew MSS. read; cf. Ezek. 16. 24.—Fornication.] The expression is specially suitable to describe that unfaithfulness to God which was coupled with so much impurity—the worship of Ashtoreth. The royal house of Judah were true to their God till the blood of the house of Ahab began to run in their veins. Not even now, however, had Judah permanently forsaken God; it was not till over a century later, that Isaiah (1. 21) had to cry, 'How is the faithful city become an harlot.' <sup>12.</sup> A writing.] All, and more than all the troubles named above—the sin, not in his day committed, and the terrible punishment, dreadful as the end of Herod—were prophetically announced in a writing (miktāb—not typereth or sepher, a letter) penned by Elijah, produced now, probably in accordance with instructions left by him, and by which he spoke now with a voice plain as that of the risen Samuel, convincing as that of the life-giving bones of Elisha. Cf. 1 Chr. 28. 19; ek. 35. 4; Isa. 38. 9, and Jer. 36; miktāb (= anything graven or written) is never rendered letter, or used of any ordinary written communication from one person to another. This is the only point of connection between Elijah and the house of David, the only mention of his name in Chron. If, as some think, this writing, though as genuine as authentic, was not prophetic, either it was sent from heaven (so some Jewish and Roman Catholic expositors), or (which is possible) Elijah's translation took place at a later date (after Jehoshaphat's death, and Jehoram's fratricide which followed it), and Elisha entered in some measure on his office before Elijah's translation. Some copies of Josephus insert here, 'for he (Elijah) was yet upon earth;' if so, age and infirmity might well account for his not appearing in person. On the other hand, the whole narrative of the Translation seems to imply that then, and not before, Elisha began any independent work and occupied a recognized position as prophet; nor does Elijah then show any signs of the infirmities of age. Kin. v. 29, note.—Never a son. His sons followed in his steps (ch. 24. 7). They could not have been many, for Ahaziah, the youngest, must have been born when his father was 18 (Kin. vs. 17, 26). Plainly brethren in 2 Kin. 10. 13 does not mean whole brothers; perhaps nephews, perhaps sons of concubines of Jehoram.

2 KINGS VIII. 7-15.

<sup>7</sup> And Elisha came to Damascus; and Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick; and it was told him, saying, The man of God is come hither.

<sup>8</sup> And the king said unto <sup>d</sup> Hazael, <sup>e</sup> Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and <sup>f</sup> enquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

<sup>9</sup> So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present with him, even of every good thing of Damaseus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

<sup>10</sup> And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover: howbeit the LORD hath shewed me that <sup>g</sup> he shall surely die.

tide of the estuary, but they never cease to flow till they reach the eternal ocean of unrest. <sup>27</sup> He walked. [He also in Chr. v. 3, i.e. as well as Jehoram.—Son in law.] The name of his wife is unknown. This connection explains what might otherwise seem a wanton act of blood on the part of Jehu, viz. the destruction of Ahaziah and his brethren (ch. 9. 27). Hervey understands 'son on the mother's side.'

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. viii.—7. Came. Probably on purpose to fulfil the duty inherited (1 Kin. 19. 15), knowing nothing, caring nothing, as to how he might be received. Benhadad owed him both gratitude (ch. 5 & 6. 22) and grudge (ch. 6. 9-12, 31, note, & 7. 1-7). The revolution under Jehu was about shortly to break the alliance between Israel and Judah, and prepare the way for Syrian invasion. <sup>8</sup> Hazael. The name means God seeth, but the recollection of its meaning acted as no restraint. His name and Benhadad's (as ally of Ahab of Jezreel) both occur on the Black obelisk in the Brit. Mus. as kings of Damascus defeated by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, who is named also as taking tribute from Jehu.—Present. Heb. minchah, constantly used of gift, tribute, and meat-offering; Sept. μαρά. Cf. 1 Sam. 9. 7, note.—Meet. At Hobah, four miles from Damascus, tradition says; where is the reputed grave of Gehazi; but 'hither' (v. 7) seems to imply that Elisha was already actually in Damascus.—Enquire. The instances of enquiry of the Lord by the heathen are few (cp. Balak); probably Hervey's suggestion is correct, that Benhadad was awed by his late supernatural discomfiture before Samaria, and by the dread of approaching death. It was to a prophet, of whose knowledge or power they had had proof, not to the H. P., possessor of the Urim, and permanent representative of Jehovah, that such would apply. We find Samuel consulted in both capacities (1 Sam. 9. 6 & 10. 22; cf. 1 Sam. 23. 9). <sup>9</sup> Took. &c.] We are left to guess that Elisha would probably decline the gift, though there were added to the gold, silver, and raiment of Naaman much luxurious produce of Damascus, such as the tissues of Helbon wool, which has given its name to damask (cf. Ezek. 27. 18; Amos 3. 12; and Herod, i. 50-54).—With him. Marg. and Sept. rightly, in his hand, as v. 8 and Gen. 43. 12, though the expression could only be figurative (ch. 5. 5, 23).—Thy son. Using craftily (cp. 1 Kin. 20. 33) a title corresponding to the customary respectful salutation of a superior (ch. 5. 13). <sup>10</sup> Mayest. &c.] Rather, Thou shalt not live, for; or Elisha's tone is something that of Micahiah; and his meaning, 'Carry back that complimentary message which a despot's messenger is sure to carry, true or false, yet,' &c. (This reading is doubtful; two words of the same sound (lō', lō') mean not (so c'thib) and to him (so k'ri); cp. text and margin in Ps. 100. 3; cp. Isa. 9. 3. Hebrew is weak in conjunctions, and their meaning is uncertain.) More probably, Thou mayest, &c., means simply, The disease is not mortal, and JEHORAM (son of Ahab)—(Elisha).

<sup>11</sup> And he settled his countenance stedfastly, until he was ashamed: And the man of God <sup>a</sup> wept. <sup>12</sup> And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know <sup>i</sup> the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and <sup>k</sup> wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child. <sup>13</sup> And Hazael said, But what, <sup>l</sup> is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, <sup>m</sup> The LORD hath shewed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

<sup>14</sup> So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldst surely recover. <sup>15</sup> And it came to pass on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face, so that he died: and Hazael reigned in his stead.

His oppression (ch. 13. 4, 22) is not described in detail, but there are sufficient indications of its thorough (ch. 10. 33) and cruel (ch. 13. 7) nature. Shalmaneser, God's instrument, was suffered to exercise similar cruelties on Israel's cities, notably Betharbel, as punishment for the calf-worship (Hos. 10. 14, 15 & 13. 16). <sup>13</sup> But what, &c.] This great thing Hazael calls those deeds, viewing them not as horrible, but as the ordinary privileges of conquest. But how (his exclamation means) shall thy servant, a nobody, a mere dead dog (Sept. ὁ κύνων ὁ τεθνηκώς; cf. 1 Sam. 24. 14; 2 Sam. 9. 8 & 16. 9, and 1 Sam. 17. 43, note; Vulg. quid enim sum tuus servus canis; Germ. was ist dein knecht, der handt hare the opportunity so to distinguish himself? And great [2 K. viii. 28; 2 C. xxii. 5.]

Jacob's deceit was a crime similar in nature. <sup>15</sup> A thick cloth.] Rather, the, i.e. probably, the bath-cloth, or the coverlet of quilted wool. To wet it and place it on him would be an ordinary way of treating fever in the East. To draw its sodden weight over Benhadad's mouth would be to bring about death without suspicion of violence. 10. Dogs, &c.] This sometimes signal wickedness meets with signally awful recompence (cf. Acts 12. 23); but, when it is not so, the cause is not God's blindness or consent. It may be hopeful forbearance; it may be the reserving for still sorer punishment; but the king conceals it in his own breast.—Portion.] Division, the French arrondissement, would be suitable here and in vs. 21, 25, where we have the fem. of the same word, inheritance. Possibly the idea had entered his mind 15 years before (v. 25). Josephus would lead us to understand him thus: 'You, rightly, called him mad, what need to repeat his words?' which accords ill with their reply, but well with the Sept. rendering of 'communication,' babble (the Hebrew, however, has no such meaning, but simply tale, or perhaps purpose). Many causes might account for their readiness to enter into this conspiracy: such as a guess that the messenger was sent by Elisha, weariness of the wickedness and tyranny of Jezebel, lax loyalty in a kingdom of so many dynasties, affection for a military leader—all causes that have worked revolutions many times over; but it was of God (cf. Chr. v. 7) suffices. Recognition of God is 'the true light;' the sum and substance of all knowledge must be, ultimately, God; we can read nothing in nature, in history, or in science aright, unless we trace God in it; everything in the world is, after all, the development of the mind of God, therefore God is the light of every subject; it should constantly be noted how the Chronicler is the truest reader of events and writer of history, because he sees most of God therein. writes most in the light.—Top.] Heb. gerem; lit. bone, substance; on the very stairs; Sept. γὰρ ἐν. Already the slaughter of princes of David's house had been great, as though God would have the taint of connection with Ahab's house washed out by blood. Jehoram slew all his brethren, sons of Jehoshaphat. The Arabians slew all Jehoram's sons, except Ahaziah. Jehu slew him and all the 'sons of his brethren' (2 Chr. 21. 16, 17 & 22. 8); but, through all, the ancient promise (renewed in Ps. 132. 17) never failed; never utterly was 'the light dark in his tabernacle' or 'his candle put out' (Job 18. 6; cf. 1 Kin. 11. 36).—Royal. Sept., rightly, τῆς βασιλῆας, i.e. all claimants to the throne.

The painting would be tinging the eyelids (to add brilliancy to the eye, and heighten the effect of the long dark eyelashes) and colouring the eyebrows with lines so curved as to make the eye seem almond-shaped. (Pliny calls stibium eye-broadener.) A languishing amorous look is the result. Antimony is used, and various lead ores and black powders. Lane mentions specially kohl, a lotion composed of smoke-black from burnt aromatic resin or burnt almond shells. The practice was common among Egyptians (see the mummy-cases), Persians, Assyrians. Comp. Jer. 4. 30 (where 'rentest' means divided thine eyelids with the kohl-dipped probe); Ezek. 23. 40.—Tired.] Tire may be corruption of the Persian tiara, head-dress, or the Germ. zier, ornament. Commonly it is applied to head-dress only, though in fact it is the same word as attire (cf. 'Women tyre themselves.'—Tyndal), which is rarely (Lev. 16. 4) so restricted (Spenser has both, 'in sumptuous tire' and 'a tire of gold'). We have head-tire in 1 Esdr. 3. 6; cf. Fr. atour = hood, which is probably its true derivation. The crescent moon, symbol of Ashtaroth, is seen on fragments of sarcophagi. No more is there to lead any one to say, 'This is Jezreel.' Its beauty might once merit its name, God's owneth, but its other meaning, God will scatter, accords better with its history. It was in the 'valley of Jezreel' (Hos. 1. 4, 5)—Græciæz (Judith 1. 8) 'the great plain of Esdraelon'—that, in the battle with Shalmaneser, God broke the bow of Israel finally. Yisrael, prince with God, becomes Yisrael, God shall scatter. ## 143.—The Zeal of Jehu.

2 KINGS x. 1-31.

<sup>1</sup> AND Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to them that brought up Ahab's children, saying, <sup>2</sup> Now as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour; <sup>3</sup> look even out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house.

<sup>4</sup> But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, two kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand? <sup>5</sup> And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king; do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

<sup>6</sup> Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.

Probably the preservation of moral and religious purity and of freedom was his object. The spirit of his command they somewhat transgressed, when, owing to the general insecurity, after the defeat of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar at Carchemish, they pitched their tents in the open spaces of Jerusalem. Therefore it was that the blood of Jezreel was to be avenged upon the house of Jehu (Hos. 1. 4). 'Motives makyth maune' were a truer saying even than William of Wykeham's. Motives make a good deed good or bad in God's sight. The execution even of God's will for our own ends is no true carrying out of God's will. Compare the course of Henry VIII. Jehu's stopping short (v. 29) disclosed his motives. When ambition and policy took one side, zeal for God the other, then was seen how the condemnation expressed in Rom. 2. 1-3 and Ps. 50. 17 (Pr. Bk.) belonged to Jehu. Therefore it was that, in spite of the successes of Jeroboam II. (ch. 14. 25), on the death of Zachariah, Jehu's fourth descendant (v. 30), that tide of murder and anarchy set in, which at the full 'caused to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel,' and the 'bow of Israel' was broken 'in the valley of Yidsreel,' and (as the play on the name indicates) the princes with God were scattered by God, by Shalmaneser, near Beth-arbel (Hos. 10. 14). See, however, note on Hos. 1. 4. <sup>18</sup>.] Serve him much.] Knowing Jehu's real motives, we see that we are not bound to find excuse for this dissimulation (Rom. 3. 8). God's truth needs no man's lie; but a lying spirit may be suffered to work His purposes. Of the three prevailing worship, i.e. of the Calves (called worship of Jehovah, v. 23), Baal, and Ashtaroth, the last (as most enervating, most ruinous to a nation's manliness) the people might have thought to be the object of the soldier-king's special aversion; cf. ch. 13. 6. <sup>19</sup>.] Servants.] R.V. worshippers. Some render ministers, as if a grade corresponding to Levites; but the same word is rendered worshippers five times in this chapter.—In subtilty.] No commendable quality; cf. Gen. 3. 1; John 1. 47; the admission of 2 Cor. 12. 16 was only for argument's sake. It exalts no man's character to become a πανουργος, one (according to Aristotle's definition) who 'chooses with shrewd discernment the aptest means for attaining unprincipled ends;' and the pretended goodness of his ends scarcely saves Jehu from earning that title. The poet's scornful exclamation is not unmerited—

The custom of dedicating robes to the temples for the statue of the god, for the priests, and for the worshippers, is frequently illustrated by the Assyrian inscriptions. — Boscawen. It is conjectured that these were white; no doubt the palace stores could supply any deficiency. So now at the Samaritan Passover, every worshipper wears a linen ephod, or surplice. The number of Baal-worshippers had probably been small since the massacre at Carmel. The worship of Ashtaroth was unabated. 23. Of Baal only.] His zeal for Baal cries, 'Oli profanum vulgus;' 'Procul este, profani!' (Hor. Jer. 48. 8. 26. Images.] Apparently not of Baal (v. 27), but of πατέδρῳι (Pind. The Phœnician deities on coins are not less monstrous and uncouth than New Zealand or Japan images; their pillar-idoles seem to have been mere columns; matzevah means merely that which is erect, as a column, or obelisk; tsalem, used in ch. 11. 18, means representation or likeness (see note). A.V. <sup>30</sup> Said.] It may be by Elisha. No other dynasty in Israel reached a fifth monarch, or ruled over 100 years (cf. v. 17, note). The reigns of Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, and Jehoram extended only to 45 years.—Well.] Bishop Ulpilas (4th century), when translating the Scriptures into Gothic, omitted the books of Kings, lest they should perpetuate a savage spirit. Certainly the details in these chapters might dispose one to do so; but this word 'well' forbids; R.V. marg. renders 'done well,' executed well.—Fourth.] Namely, Jehoahaz (17 years), Joash (16), Jeroboam II. [JUDAH.] 2 K. xi.—4.] Forethought, determination, calmness, firm persuasion that God and Right were on his side, mark each step of Jehoiada's work. The rise and progress of this Restoration may be thus summarized: First, the H. P., who for 6 years had watched his opportunity, showed the young Prince, secretly in the Temple, to the centurions of both the Jewish and foreign body-guards; divulged his design, which they pledged themselves to forward; and bound them by an oath of secrecy. The former were at once called on to take action. They visited the cities, inviting Levites and princes to do as they had done. Next, these, as representatives of the nation, repairing to Jerusalem, entered solemnly into the scheme, confident in God's promise to David's house. Then Jehoiada disclosed the details of his plan. The sabbath would secure the presence of a double portion of their followers, for on that day both household troops and Levites relieved guard. The military coming on duty were to hush suspicion, and provide against interruption by taking their usual stations as palace guards; the Levites coming on duty, and probably those also specially 'gathered,' were all (not merely 24 of the porters, as usual) to be sentries at the Temple gates, aided herein by both bodies, the military and the ecclesiastical, then going off duty. Next, the king was to await, between a double line of these guards, drawn up before the Temple, behind the altar, the moment for his coronation. Finally, he was to come 'forth,' mount a stand between the altar and the gate, surrounded by the princes, and there be proclaimed king.—Jehoiada.] The Chronicler (22. 11) had previously mentioned that he was H. P.; in Kings he has not been named before. — Hundreds, with.] Lit. rulers over the hundreds of (so Joseph., cf. v. 10 & Chr. v. 1). To use the word centurions would avoid some confusion. The word captains, hak-kari, may mean Chierethites (1 Sam. 30. 14; 2 Sam. 8. 18); or Carians (who were, like the Swiss, frequently mercenaries); or executioners (from karah, to stab). Probably the meaning is that the centurions of this body and of the native body-guard (cf. ch. 10. 25) were summoned. R.V. the captains over hundreds, of the Carians (marg. executioners) and of the guard (marg. runners). Sept. τῶν ὁπῶν καὶ τῶν παύων. The Levites also were summoned (Chr. v. 4), and received similar instructions. Chron. v. 2 seems to speak of an unusual gathering; v. 8 of the regular courses. We can scarcely fail to call to mind the question of a former day (Exod. 32. 26), 'Who is on the Lord's side?' and that response, 'all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him,' which wiped out the curse sin had incurred, changing it into blessing (Gen. 49. 7; Deut. 10. 5). Their present loyalty likewise bore fruit. Increased political influence of Levites dates from now, 'the centre of gravity of the nation, so to speak, being gradually but finally transferred to the ecclesiastical authority' (Green); and this because 'in the absence of any representative of David there was nothing else round which the nation could rally, so that Jehoiaad at this moment was little less than an Eli to it' (Newman).—With them.] That this includes representatives of the nation appears from vs. 13, 17 and Chr. vs. 3, 16.—Oath.] i.e. of secrecy, before revealing the king's existence or divulging the scheme (Joseph).

2 C. xxiii.—1. Captains of hundreds.] Apparently these are the centurions of the native body-guard (not the hak-kari of Kin. v. 4), which would therefore number 500. The Holy Name JAH entered into the name of all these chiefs; the names meaning, God helps, hears, works, judges—a useful reminder in any good work. 2. Went about.] They could testify that they had seen 'the king's son' (cf. 1 John 1. 1; 2 Pet. 1. 16), and fan the embers of loyalty by mention of their 'covenant,' yet only, among laymen, to the heads of the fathers' houses (so R.V.), the leading men of each family.—Israel.] i.e. the southern kingdom (cf. v. 8). 3. Congregation.] i.e. the summoned Levites and fathers, who did what the centurions had done (Kin. v. 4) before.—

The Lord hath said.] An irrevocable promise; see refs., and Luke 1. 32, 33; yet at the moment, that child of 7 years of age was the sole remaining scion of David's house; so low had alliance with the house of Ahab brought it. That evil influence was now hastening to a tragic close; she, who was for ever to be remembered as 'that wicked woman,' was to be the last of Ahab's race whose presence should provoke God's anger against his people. 4. Of you.] The one narrative seems rather to supplement than to contradict (so Davidson) the other. The conjecture that companies of the guards went on duty (Kin. v. 5) weekly, as did courses of the Levites, is not inconsistent with either. In addition to the courses of Levites, many out of 'all the cities of Judah' were now gathered; their numbers might easily cause them quite to eclipse, in the eyes of the Chronicler, that small body the Cherethites (Kin. v. 4). In making Jehoiaad the prime mover in the whole matter, each Writer equally allows that the Restoration of the rightful heir was due entirely to the ecclesiastical element.—Entering.] R.V. that come in. 5. King's house.] Probably not, as in Kin. v. 5, the palace, but the king's dwelling in the Temple precincts; or perhaps a private gate of communication between Temple and palace may be intended.—Foundation.] Cf. Kin. v. 6, note.—The people.] Not (so vs. 6, 10 also) the populace generally, nor even the loyal populace, but the out-going guards of both kinds, the armed Levites specially gathered, and (v. 8, 'all Judah;' Kin. v. 14, 'the princes') the leading men of v. 2, who would occupy the Sacred Court, and guard Temple and king.

2 K. xi.—5. Sabbath.] Here first mentioned in Kings; but cf. 1 Chr. 9. 25.—Keepers, &c.] It was essential that the ways to and from the palace should be absolutely under control of the conspirators. The military and ecclesiastical bodies now coming on duty ('enter in') occupy three positions at the entrance-hall: if at least (so Boscawen) we may suppose it to be after the pattern of the ruins at Nineveh and Khorsabad, where there is a guard-chamber at the outer door (Sept. εν τῷ πυλῶνι); double guard-chambers, right and left of the middle of the hall (from whence there may have been side-entrances to the palace-chambers), and a guard-chamber again 'behind' these, at the entrance (v. 19) to the royal apartments. To those now going off duty ('go forth') was entrusted the guardianship of the Temple and the king (v. 7).

The word in Isa. 8. 16, 20 is different (= the Prophets, Rev. 19. 10). Sept. ἔδωκεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν νεφέην καὶ τὸ μαρτύριον; Chron. τὸ βασίλειον καὶ τὰ μαρτύρια; Vulg. does not insert 'gave him,' but (Chron.) adds, dederuntque in manu ejus tenendam legem. Similarly the Archbishop of Canterbury presents to our Sovereign at the coronation a Bible, symbolically pointing at once to the source of authority and the course of duty. This occasion was one of special solemnity. The ceremony is fourfold: the Crown betokens kingly power; the Testimony, a rule according to God's will; the Anointing, that separation to God which is the pledge of God's aid; the Acclamation, popular acceptance and submission. — They . . . anointed.] Sept. he; Chron. Jehoiada and his sons. Doubtless the actual anointing was by Jehoiada (as with us Ordination is by the bishop), though priests and people might take part in it by some outward act. — God, &c.] More literally (Chr. also) simply Let the king live. life had outraged, with the princes of the nation at his side; the sacredness of the place secured her from violence for a few moments; the guard made her pass out of the Temple inclosure at the S.E. corner, where stood the Triple (or Horse) Gate (Jer. 31. 40; Neh. 3. 28), the entrance to the stables (see App.) (crypts in the rock); and there Loyalty and Religion executed God's doom.—'Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed.'—Temple.] i.e. the Sacred Court. <sup>14.</sup> By a pillar.] R.V. by the (margin, on the platform); Josephus, upon; rather, upon his stand (amūd), which may have been in the form of a column. 2 K. xii.—1. Began to reign.] If the number in 2 Chron. 24. 15 is correct, Jehoiada would be now about 120 years old. He lived to be 130 (cf. Hervey's Genealogies, p. 113). A regency of 10 or 12 years (cf. Chr. r. 3 and ch. 14. 2), and the fact that through the priesthood the lineage of David had been preserved, and the worship of Jehovah restored (2 Chr. 23, 18, 19), gave the Church an influence over the Crown which it had scarcely enjoyed before; but thus far, certainly, it was influence for good only. It is true that the suggestion to apply the sacred money to repairs of God's house is said to come from Joash, but probably he spoke only at Jehoiada's instigation, and that any money came at all must have been a new thing now; the priests might well be excused if they did not know how to apportion it to cover dilapidation and their own maintenance. They are not charged with slackness (cf. 2 Chr. 24. 5), nor is their honesty [2 K. xi. 20-xii. 4; 2 C. xxiii. 21-xxiv. 3.] 401

For acquaintance, however, Sept. has ἀπὸ τῆς πρᾶξεως αὐτοῦ, reading apparently meccer, sale, for maccar, friend. There might possibly be a reference to sale by priests of victims to worshippers coming from a distance. Their profits on such sale may be the money for sin, Heb. chattāth, mentioned in 2 Kin. 12. 16. Vulg. justa ordinem suum.—Wheresoever. R. The dilapidation extended to the very foundation (2 Chr. 24. 27, marg., 'Heb. founding').

THE BOOK OF JONAH.—The Prophets and Foreign Nations.—The Hebrew prophets were like the great tragic choros in the awful drama which was unfolding itself in the Eastern world. As each independent tribe or monarchy was swallowed up in the great universal empire of Assyria, they watched the progress of the invader. They did not confine their views to the internal affairs of the Hebrew kingdoms or to their immediate neighbourhood. Jonah appeared as a man under Divine influence in Nineveh; and Nahum described the subsequent fate of that spacious city (famous for its wide streets) in imagery never surpassed. (From Mitman.)

[ISRAEL.] J. i.—1. Now. Lit. And (so Sept., Vulg.). Cp. Ezek. 1. 1, where Currey notes that this connecting particle, common in the historical books, is found twice only in the prophets. This interlude is here placed (following Ussher) at the earliest possible date; it might have fallen much later; Ewald places it at about 823 B.C., the commencement of the reign of Jeroboam II. It forms part of the continuous history of God's people. God would furnish them with an acted-prophecy (cp. 1 Kin. 11. 30) of a truth which St. Paul puts in plain words in Acts 26, 23. He would strike a blow at their unloving, proud, exclusiveness (Matt. 3. 9), at their grudging narrow-mindedness (Luke 15. 28). He would stir them up to jealousy by a people that were no people, that were never called by His name. If to Gentiles God was seen to give repentance unto life, Israel, and Judah too, might be stirred up to a repentance more real, more thorough, more lasting than any they had yet known. True, a reformation had just taken place under Jehu and Joash, but it was partial and very transient. Perhaps they would learn from Jonah how vain it is to try to kick against God's goads, that guide, stimulate, and correct; perhaps learn from Nineveh, as well as from Jonah himself, God's readiness to forgive. Jonah was furnished with a word of promise for God's people (2 Kin. 14. 25). His name, the Dore, fitted him to be a messenger of peace; his father's, the True, to be an utterer of warning. Connecting this latter with 1 Kin. 17. 24, tradition has made him son of the widow of Zarephath. — Jonah.] His birth-place was Gath-hepher (Josh. 19. 13), now El Meshhad, not far from Nazareth. His tomb is pointed out at Nely Yunas, on the shore, seven miles north of Sidon. In him we learn how that it is not in their character, not in themselves, but in their history, their office, their sufferings, as we might say, their accidents, that men are types of Christ. A comparison of Enoch and Abraham with Melchizedek, Isaac, and Joseph confirms the lesson. Unreliable tradition makes him the servant of Elijah (1 Kin. 19. 3), and the messenger of Elisha (2 Kin. 9. 1). — Jonah's history is symbolic or typical, not in the first instance of Christ, but of that other "servant of the Lord" (Isa. 42. 19 & 44. 1), the people of Israel. The latter had been called by God to interpret the true religion to the heathen (cp. Isa. 2. 3 & 61. 6), but went "fast asleep," like Jonah, in worldly ambition or self-satisfied isolation. Jonah, seeking to evade his mission to Nineveh, was swallowed up by a great fish; so Israel complains in Jeremiah (51. 34), "Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, hath swallowed me up like a sea-monster" (A.V. a dragon, and so R.V.). After three days Jonah was cast out upon dry land; so Israel, in Hos. 6. 2, anticipates being "raised up" to a new life in the favour of God, and after the captivity actually did, however imperfectly, act as a missionary of the one true God. — Cheque. 2. Great.] In every sense. Dawning as early as Gen. 10. 11, Assyria's sun was now approaching the noon-day of its glory. Cf. ch. 3. 3, note and marg. 3. Flee.] Jonah would flee as far as possible from the spot to which duty called him. He chooses Tartessus, in the extreme W. (perhaps Cadiz, or near it, Phryg. iii. 2), willing rather to abandon for ever the proud position of one standing in the presence of God, of one inhabiting the land of God's special presence, than to go to Nineveh to denounce. That journey to Joppa was Cain-like (Gen. 4. 16), was going down indeed. But the cause was faith, not cowardice. Jonah believed that God never would fulfil His threatening (ch. 4. 2); but he never doubted God's power. He had enough foreknowledge (1 Pet. 1. 12) of coming days to make 'God is love' an unquestioned article of faith with him. If 'they only miss

The winning of the final bliss,
Who will not count it true, that Love,
Blessing, not cursing, rules above,
And that in it we live and move,' then Jonah's future happiness would seem secure. But self-consequence marred faith. He magnified too much his office and his wisdom. If mercy took the place of doom, he, the prophet, would be discredited; Israel (in his judgment) would be encouraged to stop short of complete repentance; so might Israel be swallowed up by Assyria, and God's glory be tarnished. He could not leave such matters to God's own judgment. How far prophetic 'quick foreknowledge of the coming pain' warned him of Israel's subjugation by Assyria, we cannot tell; cf. Hos. 9. 3 & 11. 5; Amos 1 & 6. 14; Isa. 5. 26. — Joppa.] 50 miles from Gath-hepher; the only considerable Hebrew port (till Herod built Caesarea), but both inconvenient and insecure. — Went down into it.] Rather, went aboard; Sept. ἀνέβη eis αὐτόν. 4. Sent out.] R.V. marg. hurled. In Sept. and in Matt. 12. 40 we have κῆτος, which frequently means whale, but is generally used (by Homer, Aristotle, Galen, Photius), as cetacea is with us, of any monster of the deep. 'A fish prepared

(cf. ch. 4. 6, 7, 8), i.e. appointed or provided, not necessarily created (Sept. προσέταξε), was by God's providential arrangement on the spot. It was not a whale, in our restricted use of the term, but, most probably, the white shark, Canis carcharias, of the Mediterranean, which usually swallows its prey whole, having no teeth but its incisors.

Its length is from 20 to 30 feet, and the circumference of its jaws 12 feet. There are indisputable instances on record of men and even horses being found entire in its stomach; and one instance, well corroborated by Ph. L. St. Müller, of a man swallowed by one of these sharks, which, being instantly struck by a bullet, disgorged its prey alive and but little injured (Des Linn. Natur system, iii., p. 268; Nürnb. 1773). The miracle does not so much lie in the sea-monster swallowing Jonah, as in his preservation inside the fish to the third day. It was simply the exercise of the same power which preserved the youths in the furnace, and raised Lazarus from the grave.—Tristram.—

Three days.] To be reckoned, no doubt, as the three days of our Saviour in the tomb are reckoned. We might not, perhaps, venture to say that God chose this special method of dealing with Jonah in order that he might be typical; but Christ's words seem to imply that the sign was not a mere accident (cf. John 3. 14; Hos. 6. 2). Jonah's resurrection was not only of newness of life, but to newness of purpose (cf. Acts 9. 9); and if there be any useful connecting link between Jonah and Andromeda (see Pusey, p. 262), Hope would lead us to find it in the poet's lines:—

'Always the memory
 Of overwhelming perils or great joys
 Avoided or enjoyed, writes its own trace
 With such deep characters upon our lives
 That all the rest are blotted.'

Epic of Hades (Andromeda).

J. ii.—1. Then.] Rather, And. It is not a mark of time. The psalm, as much one of thanksgiving ('the crown of all prayer,' Lightfoot on Col. 4. 2) as of prayer (see what pray includes in 1 Sam. 2. 1), is a record composed afterwards of his marvellous and blessed experiences. Never did living man seem further from the throne of grace, or in more hopeless state, yet the ear of God, that heard Samson in the land of that captivity to which his own sin had brought him, was open to his cry. 2. By reason of.] Rather, Hebrew Sheol means the hollow (and perhaps our 'hell,' Germ. hölle, has similar derivation; Germ. höhle = hollow; Sax. hela = to cover, hide), a vast vault to receive the dead; yet not rightly (though frequently) rendered by A.V. grave; it has never exclusively that meaning, any more than Hades has, or inferi, or the unterwelt of De Wette;

Jonah does but intensify (which his late experience naturally accounts for) the Psalmist's frequent language, e.g. 'out of the depths have I cried unto Thee'; 'Deliver me out of the deep waters' (Ps. 130. 1; 69. 14). <sup>10</sup> And the LORD spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

The Second Message.—The obedience of repentance.

[J. iii.] <sup>1</sup> And the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying, <sup>2</sup> Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

<sup>3</sup> So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey. <sup>4</sup> And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and <sup>5</sup> he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

<sup>5</sup> So the people of Nineveh <sup>m</sup>believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them. <sup>6</sup> For insert is here, and belongeth in Ps. 3. 8, mars the force of the ejaculation; rather, render be ascribed to. Sept. and Vulg. import the meaning, I will repay the Lord for his safe-keeping. Cf. Rev. 7. 10. When discipline has brought Jonah to this expression of, at once, belief and thankful praise, it may cease. Penitence is rewarded with a fresh commission. Cf. John 21. 15.

J. iii.—1. Came. He must have hailed it with joy; for, though willing now to obey, if obedience were still required, the true penitent's feeling ever is, 'I am not worthy.' Presumption, like Israel's (Num. 14. 40-45), God checks; diffidence, like Peter's (John 21. 15-17), is encouraged. Ch. 4 shows us that, though Jonah had learnt that he was wrong to attempt to disobey, he had not yet learnt that God's course was right and wise. 2. Preach. The word is the same as that rendered cry in ch. 1. 2; and (see v. 4) there is no record of anything more than a single utterance. Indeed we do not know whether anything further would have been understood. The words forty, days, destroyed are sufficiently similar in Assyrian and Hebrew. They knew his character; they knew before what Master he stood; and our Lord's saying (Luke 11. 30) that Jonah was 'a sign to the Ninevites' leads us to suppose that they knew his story, though how, we cannot tell. They would by conscience aid readily catch the meaning of his cry, and the phrase believed in God (v. 5) shows that it was to it they gave attention, rather than to any further preaching of the prophet. Equally brief was the message on Belshazzar's wall, 'Numbered, weighed, divided,' but blasphemous pride and drunken thoughtlessness silenced conscience, and it refused to interpret the words, even when aided by the allusion to 'Persians' in the last. So stubbornness made vain the 'Woe, woe, to Jerusalem' of Jesus son of Hanani. Faith to believe that God 'is and is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him' has not always been found in Israel. 3. Arose, &c. His promptitude, like Paul's zeal, is now used in a right direction. The changed man is ever the same man with new aims.—Great. Cf. 1 Chr. 12. 22, note.—Days' journey. A received measurement of length, approximately 20 miles, as hour (stund, 3 miles) is in German. A diameter of 60 miles would be most unlikely; not so a circumference of 60 miles, for a population of 600,000 (cf. ch. 4. 11, note), if we bear in mind that there would be a wide space uninhabited just within the walls; that the houses would for the most part be bungalows; that the better sort would have large pleasure-grounds attached (Assurnazir-pal kept a preserve of wild animals for the chase near the palace at Calah); and that, in view of possible siege, Eastern cities generally included a considerable extent of pasture (ch. 4. 11) and arable land. Jerusalem, from the necessities of its position, was an exception, as struck the captives when returning from Babylon: 'Behold,' they cried, 'a city compact together' (Ps. 122. 3); οὐδὲν ἔρημον εἶχε κατὰ τὸ μέσον (Chrysostom). A trapezium with its four corners at the modern Nimrud, Kouyunjik, Khorsabad, and Karamless, would just contain a city of such dimensions. It is studded with ruins, and may, almost with certainty, be pronounced the site of Nineveh. 4. Day's journey. A diameter of 20 miles would agree with what has been said above. From end to end (from W. to E., cf. ch. 4. 5) the cry was uttered. 5. So. R.V. and.—(Greatest.) i.e. in rank, as in Esth. 1. 5, 20. spring from the root itself, ever shows most vigour of life.—King.] Probably Assurnazir-pal, who reigned from 885 to 860 B.C. He rebuilt the palace and Istar-temple at Nineveh, and the city of Calah, now represented by the mounds of Nimroud. He may be regarded as the founder of the late Assyrian empire, which from his time gradually increased until it reached its greatest limits. He was succeeded by his son, Shalmaneser II., in whose reign the Assyrians first came in direct contact with the Israelites' (G. Smith). Jehu became tributary to him. In his 13th year he removed the court from Nineveh to Calah, which was not so much a new town as a new quarter.—Robe.] The word means ample dress; it is used of any dress which is distinctive, whether the prophet's (Zech. 13. 4) or the king's; described by Layard as flowing, fringed, tasselled, girdled, hooded. An Assyrian king would wear also a conical tiara, necklace, ear-rings, and gemmed armlets. The change from such a throne and such attire to sackcloth and ashes figures strikingly the mental change from pride to penitence.

<sup>7</sup> Published.] Rather, he published (marg. said). Apparently the form of proclamation runs something like our 'Oyez, oyez, this is to give notice,' &c.; 'By the decree of . . . as follows,' 'Let, &c. . . we perish not,'—Nobles.] It is thought that the notables, or grandees, had at Nineveh no constitutional voice as at Babylon (Dan. 6. 17). This may have formed part of the king's humiliation.—Beast.] Probably beasts of burden are intended, not cattle (1 Kin. 18. 5). <sup>8</sup> Turn.] It was this, rather than the outward show of sorrow, or even the vehement cry, that God gave heed to (v. 10).—Violence.] Nahum

'the eyes of the Lord,' 'the hand of the Lord,' &c.). Strictly, μετάνοια, afterthought, change of mind on reflection, change of opinion, is inapplicable to God (Jas. 1. 17; Num. 23. 19). God's purpose was conditional, or there was no need of Jonah's cry at all. His purpose knows no change. The other word, μεταμέλεια, change of purpose, regret, is still more manifestly unsuitable. God may relax the bow He has bent without fickleness; regret that He bent it—this He cannot do. We cannot too often notice that condition, expressed or implied, attaches to every promise, every threat of God, which has to do with man.

J. iv.—<sup>1</sup> Angry.] Cf. 2 Sam. 6. 8; 1 Chr. 13. 11. Jonah was grieved and displeased. In his hatred against Assyrian idolaters, whose growing power menaced his country; in his fear lest his own reputation should suffer, God's truthfulness be questioned, and Israel be encouraged to delay repentance, all feeling of compassion was utterly set aside. He had rather die than see any of these things occur. <sup>2</sup> Prayed.] Better go to God, even in petulant anger, than flee from his presence.—Fled before.] Rather, made haste to flee. Sept. προέφθασα φυγῆν; Vulg. praecuravi ut fugerem; R.V. mar- [J. iii. 7—iv. 2.]

Of these, the suggestion of the ivy may be at once rejected, ivy being a plant of northern and colder regions only, and its habitat nearest to Nineveh being the higher regions of Lebanon. The Hebrew word kikayon occurs here only, and etymologists have suggested the Ricinus communis, or castor-oil tree, identifying kikayon with kiki, the Egyptian name for that plant, which in Palestine is known as khurrah. But this is by no means a shrub suitable for shading arbours, being a straggling open growth. The identification of the A.V. is far more probably correct, i.e. with the gourd, the bottle-gourd, Cucurbita pepo, Arab. El kerra, in Palestine kurah, one of the most rapidly-growing plants in the world, and commonly used in the East for covering arbours and trellises. Comp. Isa. 7. 16. This would give 600,000 as the population of the city; see ch. 3. 3, note.

2 K. x.—32. Cut . . short.] Lit. cut gashes in; Sept. συνκόπτειν ἐν; Vulg. tædere super; A.V. margin, to cut off the ends. Till the Disruption the Hebrew monarchy had on the whole maintained its independence of foreign powers. But each introduction of a fresh dynasty—Jeroboam's, Baasha's, Omri's—had been marked by successful encroachments by Syria-Damascus. Jehu (Jaser), secured his throne by submission to Assyria, and so perhaps provoked Hazeal's attacks. Jehu's revolution called him away from Ramoth, and broke the alliance between Israel and Judah. However, in thus tracing the steps backward—invasion, weakness, revolution—we stop short of the fons et origo, and lose sight of the Divine purpose, if we do not go yet further and add sin. To account for events solely by reference to natural causes is not the purpose of any of the historical books of the Bible. 33. Eastward.] The land east of Jordan formed in extent, though not in population, a full half of the kingdom of Israel. 'Gilead was the name applied to the mountainous region from the river Hieromax to the river of Heshbon; while Bashan is the more level and fertile wide expanse N. of the Hieromax, and over which Manasseh roamed. However, part of the allotment of Manasseh was comprised in N. Gilead, the central and southern part of which was occupied by Gad. The tribe of Reuben, settled in the ancient kingdom of Sihon, was, strictly speaking, S. of Gilead, and occupied the Mishor, or Highland Plain, from north of Heshbon to the ravine of the Arnon. Aroer, on the northern brow of this ravine, was the southern frontier-city of Reuben. Here, therefore, it is implied that Hazeal overran the whole of Israel east of Jordan, from north to south.—Tristram.—River.] Rather, torrent bed (1 Sam. 15. 5 and 1 Kin. 17. 3, notes); R.V. valley of. The Heb. nachal is used of streams, which may have a mighty volume of water in winter or in the rainy season, but in summer may be mere brooklets, or have no surface current at all. 'The Arnon, however, is never dry. Its ravine is a magnificent gorge, in places two miles wide, and many hundred feet deep, forming a truly scientific frontier.'—Tristram.—Even.] i.e. that is to say. The effect of his conquests reached even further than the conquests themselves. Apparently a right of passage through Israel was secured, and used to attack Judah (ch. 12. 17.)

2 K. x.—34. Might.] From a verb to become strong, or prevail. The expression is used of Jehu only among the kings of Israel, and must refer rather to his successes at home. For Israel's decay began with Jehu,

Perhaps the word means daring here; 'great and inexhaustible valour' (Ewald). Vulg. et universa, que fecit, et fortitudo ejus; Sept. πάσα ἡ δύναστος, adding, καὶ τὰς συνάψεις ἄς συνήψεν (cf. 1 Kin. 16. 20). <sup>36</sup> Samaria.] 'Samaria had continued to be the capital of Israel from the time of its foundation (ch. 3. 1), and so remained to the end of the monarchy (ch. 17. 1). Jezebel was merely the unfortified summer residence of Ahab.'—Tristram.

[JUDAH.] 2 K. xii.—6. Not repaired.] Cf. v. 1, note. It appears that Jehoiada supported the king all along (rs. 2, 9; cf. Chr. v. 8); that the priests were not unwilling, but in doubt; the people coldly disposed (Chr. rs. 9, 19).

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xiii.—1. Three.] Josephus says one (cf. v. 10); but Jehu had reigned six years when Joash was crowned (ch. 12. 1), and reigned 22 years afterwards (ch. 10. 36); therefore <sup>35</sup>rd is correct. <sup>2</sup>. Did evil in the sight of the Lord.] Perhaps, beyond retaining Jeroboam's state-religion (see v. 6, 'grove').

[JUDAH.] 2 C. xxiv.—4. After this.] This purpose probably dates from Joash's coming of age (2 et. 16), or earlier, and failed because of his youth or want of authority, or because of the surviving influence of Athaliah's party, the Baal-worshippers, and because of the vitality, convenience, and supposed sufficiency of the worship at the local sanctuaries ('high places,' Kin. v. 3).—Repair.] R.V. restore. The Hebrew word here, and in v. 12, means to renew (so A.V. marg.) that which is deficient; the word in v. 5 and 2 Kin. 12. 5 means strengthen that which still exists; Sept. ἐπισκευάζω, καθίσχυνω.

<sup>7</sup> Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for the king of Syria had destroyed them, <sup>g</sup> and had made them like the dust by threshing.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xiii.—3. Hazael.] Shalmaneser II. on his black obelisk records his attacks on Hazael in 842 (and 839) B.C., but names Jehu as then king of Israel. Previously, according to that record, the Syrian league (Damascus, Hamath, &c.) had withstood him with some success. His victory on the Orontes (854 B.C.) had been dearly purchased and fruitless. During the next four years Babylonian had engaged his attention, and the league had been broken up. Still the battle with Benhadad II. in Aram (850 B.C.) was of doubtful issue; so also that in Hamath (849 B.C.); nor had his army of 120,000 men achieved more than victory in name (846 B.C.). In 842 B.C. Hazael suffered severe defeat, Damascus was besieged, Bashan devastated, and Phœnicia and Israel made tributary. In 839 B.C. Hazael was afraid to meet him in the field. Thenceforth Shalmaneser (having made Calah, i.e. Nimrud, his capital from 834 B.C.) directed his arms chiefly against lands E. of Assyria up to his death in 825 B.C. A century elapsed, and a new dynasty ruled the Assyrians, before Pul's invasion (2 K. 15. 19), p. 438. Among the tributaries of Tiglath-pileser II. (738 B.C.) are named Rezon of Syria, Hiram of Tyre, Enil of Hamath, and Menahem of Samaria (771 B.C., Ussher). Later, Ahaz tendered his submission.—Ben-hadad.] It was politic of Hazael to name his son by the name generally borne by the dethroned family.—Their.] Rather, his, or, literally, the. It was only when acting as his father's general that Benhadad III. was successful (rs. 22-25). R.V. continually, but marg. all the days. 4. Besought.] Lit. to smooth, i.e. the frown. The repentance of Jehoahaz is the turning point; it called forth God's pity, though Jeroboam's calf-worship was not abandoned (2 K.

13. 2).—Hearkened.] And answered, apparently through Elisha and Jonah. But the deliverance came only after Jehoahaz' death—partly in Joash's reign, completely in that of Jeroboam II.; and it was only a respite (Amos 7. 8), for Israel did not return to God heartily (Amos 4. 10; Hos. 5. 4-6). 5. [Apparently vs. 5. 6 are a parenthesis, describing what Joash achieved (rs. 25) in consequence of what is recorded in another parenthesis (rs. 14-19, p. 419).—A saviour.] i.e. Jeroboam II.—Tents.] The recollection of nomadic days of old leads to the word 'tents' being frequently used for homes (2 Sam. 20. 1, &c.). The expression here seems simply to mean in such security as is pictured in 1 Kin. 4. 25 and ch. 18. 31; no need to abandon even country-homes, to take refuge in cities, to shun highways, to approach wells in trembling (Judg. 5. 6, 11). 6. Who.] R.V. wherewith he. The mission of Elisha and Elisha does not seem to have included denunciation of Jeroboam's calf-worship.—Walked.] Marg. he walked, and so R.V. marg.—Grove.] R.V. Asherah. Cf. 1 Kin. 11. 5, note. Probably Ahab's (1 Kin. 16. 33) idol, which somehow had escaped Jehu's zeal (ch. 10. 18); but the Hebrew (= stood) may mean (so Ball) was set up afresh. 7. Neither did he leave . . . but.] R.V. For he left not . . . save.—Ten chariots.] Israel's lowest depth in the Syrian oppression was reached under Jehoahaz; cf. Am. 4. 10, 11. (Cp. Rabshakeh's sneers at the insignificant number of chariots in Judah, which was obliged to look to Egypt for a supply, Ezek. 17. 15; Isa. 31. 1).—By threshing.] R.V. in, but marg. to trample on. Cf. 2 Sam. 12. 31, note; ch. 10. 33; Hab. 3. 12. The expression may be merely figurative; the same word is used in Isa. 25. 10 and Dan. 7. 23. [2 K. xiii. 3-7.]

2 K. xiii.—10. Thirty and seventh.] Winer would read, with Ald. Sept., thirty-ninth. Probably the historian would in every case reckon his years from Nisan (or Abib = April), the first month of the sacred year, and would reckon any part of a year as a whole year; this might account for many discrepancies; but here Blunt (Un. Co., 193) finds a touch of accuracy—Joash of Israel became king in the 37th of Joash of Judah; Amaziah (son of Joash of Judah) became king in the 2nd of Joash of Israel (ch. 14. 1); therefore Amaziah became king in the 39th of Joash of Judah, i.e. one year before Joash died, for he 'reigned 40 years in Jerusalem' (2 Chr. 24. 1). The cause of Amaziah's kingship in Joash's lifetime is not named in Kings; but we may find it in the 'diseases' mentioned in 2 Chr. 24. 25.

[JUDAH.] 2 C. xxiv.—17. Death of Jehoiada.] We see that, however much Jehoiada may have kept himself in the background, his was throughout the influence for good. Of the people it might well be said at this epoch (Hos. 4. 4), 'thy people are as they that strive with the priest.' 18. Left, &c.] R.V. forsook. It is not said that the king joined in their idolatry, but at any rate he weakly (r. 22) assented; and rs. 24, 25 seem to imply (Josephus also) that he actually joined them. The nobles or governing class, probably chiefly of the house of David, constantly disclose idolatrous proclivities. They

That name means Blessed of Jehovah, and might well be a second name of Jehoiada (the Lord knoweth). Or, it might be the name of Zechariah's grandfather. It was the name of the father of the later Zechariah (called also 'son of Iddo,' his grandfather), who certainly is not meant. Probably there is an error in the text of St. Matthew's Gospel, arising thus: The transcriber saw that our Lord's purpose was to record the death of the first and last murdered servants of God named in the O. T. He thought the later must be intended, on account of his date. But, in fact, the earlier event stands the later, for the Hebrew Canon closes with Chronicles. Both Zechariahs were at once priest and prophet. —The priest.] i.e. the 11. 2 KIN. XII. 17, 18. 2 CHR. XXIV. 23, 24.

pass at the end of the year, that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus.

But contrast Stephen's words, 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.'

2 K. xii.—17. Hazeal.] Not in person apparently (Chr. v. 23 'sent'), and not in great force; unless the meaning be that Hazeal himself led a large army to Gath (a border fortress commanding the Valley of Elah, a main approach to Jerusalem), but that the defeat of Judah's entire army in the field by a detachment sent to invest or to threaten Jerusalem (cp. 2 Kin. 18. 14) obtained for him all that he aimed at—submission and enrichment. The Chronicler regards the invasion as God's vengeance for Judah's apostasy and Zechariah's murder. —Gath.] Probably now subject to Judah (2 Chr. 11. 8 & 17. 11), though independent again later (2 Chr. 26. 6; Amos 6. 2). —Set his face.] Not knowing that he was God's instrument (as he had already been against Israel, ch. 13. 3); thinking only that the disturbed state of things at Jerusalem offered a favourable opportunity. <sup>18</sup> Sent it.] Chr. v. 24 explains why he was thus reduced, like Asa and Hezekiah, to buy peace. Ahaziah apparently both enriched and plundered God's house (2 Chr. 24. 7).

The conspiracy was so far successful, if its object was to restore purity of worship, that Amaziah refrained from the worship of Baal. Punishment, however, was not escaped (ch. 14. 5), nor was idolatry altogether stopped (2 Chr. 25. 14-20). Cf. Ps. 89. 34. Joash presents a mournful instance of one who 'did run well' flagging and failing through weakness of character. The parasite withers when the supporting tree dies. ## 156.—Death of Jehoahaz.—Amaziah and Joash reign alone.

2 KINGS XIV. 1-6.

2 CHR. XXV. 1-10.

2 KINGS XIII. 9, 11.

<sup>2</sup> He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

<sup>3</sup> And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as Joash his father did. <sup>4</sup> <sup>c</sup> Howbeit the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

<sup>1</sup> Amaziah was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

<sup>11</sup> And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD; he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin: but he walked therein.

<sup>3</sup> Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was established to him, that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father. <sup>4</sup> But he slew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, <sup>d</sup> The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

It is to be noted that this clemency was due to right principle, and not to any natural clemency of disposition, for which, in fact, he was not distinguished (2 Chr. 25. 12), nor to that tendency to 'stay his hand' too soon, that want of thoroughness, which may perhaps have belonged to his character.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xiii.—9. Reigned. He had been associated with his father since 841 B.C., and Amaziah with his father since 840 B.C.; cf. v. 10, note.

AMAZIAH—(Anonymous prophet).JOASH (son of Jehoahaz)—(Elisha).Amaziah's military preparations.—Hire of an Israelite army.

<sup>5</sup> Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them <sup>6</sup> from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

<sup>6</sup> He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents of silver. <sup>7</sup> But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim. <sup>8</sup> But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle: God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for God hath <sup>9</sup> power to help, and to cast down. <sup>9</sup> And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel? And the man of God answered, <sup>10</sup> The LORD is able to give thee much more than this.

<sup>10</sup> Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.

The particular duty of both Elisha and Elijah seems to have been to denounce idolatry at home, and defeat the purpose of idolatrous enemies abroad. Since the anointing of Jehu, 45 years ago (15 years after his own call), Elisha's name has not been mentioned. Possibly God's message in ch. 10. 30 came through him. The trial of Joash's faith and earnestness.

<sup>15</sup> And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

<sup>16</sup> And he said to the king of Israel, Put thine hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha put his hands upon the king's hands. <sup>17</sup> And he said, Open the window eastward. And he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot. And he shot. And he said, The arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in <sup>b</sup>Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

<sup>18</sup> And he said, Take the arrows. And he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite upon the ground. And he smote thrice, and stayed.

<sup>19</sup> And the man of God was wroth with him, and said, Thou shouldst have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: <sup>c</sup>whereas now thou shalt smite Syria but thrice.

trasting. Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him; Noah walked with God, showed equal faith, yet he remained on earth, and died the death of all men. So Elijah is caught up to heaven with glory; Elisha ages, sickens, and dies. Some (as Ewald) have considered Elisha as the inferior character, as at first only half-ready to forsake the world for God (1 Kin. 19. 20), and needing therefore Elijah's rebuke; as lacking later the outspoken courage which made Elijah the reprover instantis tyranni. If, on the other hand, we dwell on the fact that Scripture records more of Elisha; that we have the history of twice as many of his miracles; that no such abandonment of duty, and Divine reproof, is recorded of him as of Elijah, when, deserting his post in the petulance of disappointment, he fled into the wilderness; that Baal-worshippers so diminished during his ministry, that in Jehu's time, after the lapse of only a few years, one temple sufficed to hold them all, we incline to think, Surely Elisha is the one who should receive the highest tokens of God's favour, the plainest 'testimony that he pleased God.' But it was Elijah who knew no wasting, no wearing down of the faculties, no reminder 'Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return;' it was not Elisha who 'went up' with the utmost splendour of miracle. The thought is founded on a double misconception. It is common to suppose that the invitation to the pious Christian, 'Come up higher,' is delayed because he is not ready, not ripe for glory; to suppose that work for God is confined to the activities of life, ends when bodily infirmity lays him on one side. Elisha's prolonged life, and Elisha's bed-ridden death, correct this supposition. We have no ground for saying that Elisha was not ready to die when Elijah was 'taken': his holy life is testimony that he was otherwise; and we cannot say that Elijah's brilliant translation did as much for Israel as the lingering death of Elisha. It was from the sick bed, not from the chariot of fire, that there went forth the arrow of the Lord's deliverance. The clue to the mystery is to be sought in the secret purpose, not in the favour of God. 16. Hands.] An emblematic fulfilment of Ps. 144. 1; perhaps also a token that the human instrument is meant to be lost sight of in the exercise of Divine power. 17. Window.] Heb. challôn=aperture, with, no doubt, a moveable eshnâb=lattice; cf. ch. 1. 2, note. —Eastward.] i.e. towards Syria, or Aphek. —The, &c.] R.V. The Lord's arrow of victory, even the arrow of victory over Syria. —Aphek.] In Bashan (ch. 10. 33), on the Damascus road (the Syrian head-quarters, 1 Kin. 20. 26); or the Aphek of 1 Sam. 29. 1, west of Jordan. 18. Smite.] Not the word rendered shoot in v. 17, yet it might be so rendered, for nâcah is constantly used of missiles (1 Sam. 18. 11; ch. 3. 25 & 9. 24). —Stayed.] Half-obedience springs from lack of ardour, half-heartedness, and ever betokens half-faith, and incurs wrath. God was willing to do more, but could not because of the unbelief of Joash; cf. Mark 6. 5, 6. This is not a solitary instance of one who, by despising the Sign, falls short of the Thing signified. The whole proceeding was quite after the manner of Elisha, who continually had been wont to test and to aid weak faith by some outward and visible sign (ablution, salt, meal, a stick, &c.). 19. Whereas now.] Faith can win God's co-operation only by persistent effort.

ASSYRIA AND ISRAEL.—Israel's fortunes seem to have varied with the pressure of Assyria on Syria-Damascus. The son of Shalmaneser II. (2 Kin. 13. 3, note, p. 414) being occupied elsewhere, left Hazael free to ravage Israel. But Rimmon-nirari, Shalmaneser's grandson, claims to have subjected Damascus (under Marih, probably the successor of Benhadad III.). After Rimmon-nirari's reign, Assyria declined greatly; see 2 K. 15. 2, note, p. 428.

No instrument is in itself (cp. the garment's hem, Matt. 9, 20; the handkerchief or apron, Acts 19, 12; the shadow, Acts 5, 15) incapable of being the vehicle of Almighty power. This is one lesson which Elisha's dead body 'prophesied' (Ecclus. 48, 13); it kept alive also faith in the resurrection of the body. It is worth noting, that, whereas analogies exist of resurrection—the chrysalis, the day-break, the spring-tide, the ear of corn—none exist of the ascension of the body; while, on the other hand, of complete resurrection, such as ours shall be, a returning to life in a body changed, spiritual, immortal, no instance exists, except only Christ's, though of ascension there are three distributed over the world's ages, viz. those of Enoch, Elijah, and Christ.

name of the same meaning in all languages (in Arab. Hagar). It lies in a ravine of mount Seir. Jeremiah (49. 16) refers to its caverns: 'O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock;' Bochart says, 'Sunt ibi domus excise in petra.' The richly sculptured fagades which remain belong to a later date.—[Joktheel.] In the spirit of Samuel's Ebenezer, he calls it Conquered by God. The city retained the new name for some time, probably until Edom rebelled against Ahaz (2 Chr. 28. 17). Ahaziah's change of feeling and conduct (Chr. v. 14) which followed is remarkable. Possibly tidings came of the ravages of the discharged Israelite mercenaries, and embittered his mind, sowing doubt as to whether God had altogether done such great things for him as at the first moment he rejoiced to proclaim. How often, in religious matters, second thoughts are not best! The first show the heart's warmth; the second, the world's and Satan's chilling power; cf. 2 Pet. 2. 21.—[This day.] The date of the record. Edom had been lost by Jehoram 50 years before now. Later, Uzziah held it in subjection; but in Ahaz' day it was again independent (2 Chr. 28. 17), and attacked Judah.

2 C. xxv.—12. Left alive... carry away captive.] R.V. carry away alive; so Sept. The motive for this massacre does not appear; possibly the elation of victory; or (for to suffer for doing well and take it patiently is beyond any but the 'perfect heart') exasperation at the tidings of v. 13; possibly fear (which is ever cruel) of a nation that would not be utterly vanquished even when Joab 'had smitten every male in Edom,' and might not be now, although their gods were taken captive (cf. v. 14, note); could their gods be propitiated, their subjugation might be final. Wordsworth suggests remorse and fear of the gods themselves, lest they should take vengeance on his cruelty. Moses called Edomites brethren (Deut. 2. 8), even after their enmity. The Law commanded, 'Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite, for he is thy brother' (Deut. 23. 7). But, more than once, 'the tabernacles of Edom' (Ps. 83. 4-8) had 'consulted together' with Israel's enemies. In the days of the Judges, of Saul, of David (cp. 2 Sam. 8. 13; Ps. 60), of Solomon, and of Jehoshaphat Edom was the aggressor. Obadiah's charge (vs. 10-14) is 'violence against thy brother Jacob,' and gloating over his disasters; Joel's (3. 19), 'shedding innocent blood in their land,' Ezekiel's (25. 12), 'taking vengeance.' And Amos (1. 11) declares, 'For three transgressions of Edom, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he did pursue his brother with the sword, and did cast off all pity, and his anger did tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath for ever.' These show the general tone of Edomite feeling. There was, probably, more provocation than we know of. Selah is the word used in Ps. 137. 9, and probably (v. 7) not without intention.—[Top.] i.e. the height above Selah. Sept. ἔφερον αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τοῦ κρηνοῦ. The Arabs call the ravine of Petra the Valley of Moses; the height above, the Mountain of Aaron; the torrent's entrance, the Cleft of Moses. Jerome says, 'Or mons in quo mortuus est Aaron juxta civitatem Petram, ubi usque presentem diem ostenditur rupes quâ percussâ magnas aquas populo dedit.' 13. Soldiers.] R.V. men; lit. sons of the troop.—[From Samaria.] The two Beth-horons were on the frontier of Ephraim and Benjamin. Upper Bethhoron being about 12 miles from Jerusalem. But the pass was in the territory of Benjamin. 14. Brought the gods.] The Assyrians held that their defeat of any nation was defeat of local gods by Assyria's armies (2 Kiu. 18. 33-35). The <sup>15</sup> Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after <sup>e</sup>the gods of the people, which <sup>f</sup>could not deliver their own people out of thine hand? <sup>16</sup> And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shoulddest thou be smitten? conqueror engraved his name, and the name of his national god, on their images. Esar-haddon carved an inscription to Asshur's honour on the Arabian idols captured by Sennacherib (G. Smith's Assyria, p. 132). Amaziah, however, may have sought by conciliation of Edom's gods to retain his control of their land. Seemingly fear tempered scorn—a fear resembling that of Ahaz (ch. 28. 23); or of the Romans, who, as Macrobius tells (Saturn. iii. 3. 9), tried to win over by vows the gods of any city they besieged; as Livy (v. 22) tells, removed to Rome Juno and the Veintine gods 'more after the manner of worshippers than of plunderers.' Names in use among them would seem to imply that the Edomites worshipped Hadad (1 Kin. 15. 18, note), Kôsh, and Molech.—Bowed down.] Well might the historian say of him, 'yet not like David his father' (2 Kin. 14. 3). It is not to be supposed that he abandoned the worship of Jehovah. <sup>15</sup> Could.] R.V. have not delivered. <sup>16</sup> Art, &c.] R.V. have we made thee.—Determined.] A.V. marg. counselled; rightly attracted attention to the play on the word; so Sept., Germ., and Ital.—Because.] i.e. hereby I know; none but the God abandoned would be suffered so to sin, or (Vulg. et insuper) to become so contumacious.

<sup>2</sup> C. xxv.—<sup>17</sup> Then.] Josephus (who regards the insolent message as equivalent to Xerxes' demand of 'earth and water') suggests, that, pulled up by his conquest of Edom, Amaziah aimed, not only at taking vengeance for the recent wrong, but also at uniting under his sceptre the two monarchies.—Took advice.] Doubtless, as in Jeroboam's case, only of men known to be like-minded. Too often is it true,—

'Tis not advice men want, in fact,
But confirmation in their act.'

—See.] R.V. look; cf. Kin. v. 8, note.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xiv.—<sup>8</sup> Come, &c.] Perhaps by adopting this form of challenge he would say, 'Attack me no more behind my back, as of late;' or he is using (Arab. let us come to the contest) an ordinary, well-understood euphemism; compare Joab's use of 'play' (2 Sam. 2. 14); and Regent Bedford's message to Douglas, before Verneuil (1424), that he 'would come and dine and drink wine with him;' and—

'Lord Percy to the quarry went,

To view the slaughtered deer;

Quoth he, Earl Douglas promised

This day to meet me here.—Cherry-chase.

<sup>9</sup> The cedar.] In Scripture is the prince of trees. The hyssop, the bramble, and (here) the thistle represent the opposite extreme. Such Oriental similitudes have usually only a small part strictly parallel to the matter illustrated; in fact 'omne simile claudicat,' and must not be pressed on all points; here there seems to be little more than an indirect expression of scornful superiority. This and Jotham's are the only fables found in Scripture. The parable differs from the fable in phesy (ch. 14. 25) indicated a refounding of the kingdom in his son. It is the only instance of repetition of name in either line of kings. That there is something of the ring of approval about this notice of Joash suggests that perhaps (despite v. 11) there was some period in his life when Josephus' words were true, 'He was a good man, and in his disposition not at all like his father.' Not so much could be said of any other king of Israel, though certainly length of days and prosperity were the portion of Jeroboam II.—Sat upon his throne.] Exactly this expression is not used of any other king of either kingdom. But it—the parallel expression.—With the kings.] The royal burial-place of Israel is here first mentioned; cf. 1 Kin. 2. 10, note.

The character of Joash is doubtful; he revived in his son the name of him who 'made Israel to sin,' but perhaps (compare his recognition of God's prophet in v. 14) to record his belief that Jonah's pro-

<sup>2</sup> C. xxv.—28. City of Judah.] This title occurs here only. The name Jerusalem means Foundation of peace. It is called Salem, Ps. 76. 2 (Gen. 14. 18), Jebus, Judg. 19. 10 (2 Sam. 5. 8, note); in N. T. sometimes the ἱερουσαλὴμ of Sept., sometimes Ἱερουσόλυμα; by Josephus and Pausanias Σάλαμα; by Isaiah Ariel (Lion of God, 29. 1); by Hadrian Ælia Capitolina (but the name was little used); city of David repeatedly; and that is the reading here of several MSS., of all versions except the Chaldee, and of the Massorah. [The Massorah, it may be stated here, means tradition, for many years oral, but finally embodied in a collection of critical and corrective comments on the Hebrew MSS., called by the Rabbis 'a fence to the Scriptures;' probably written in the third century B.C., by scholars of Tiberias for the W., and of Babylon for the E.; the Massorites might be called the Guild of the Scribes.]

<sup>2</sup> C. xxvi.—1. Uzziah.] Whether his double name was accidental, or intentional (cp. 2 Kin. 23. 34 & 24. 17), we cannot tell; almost invariably Uzziah is used in Chron. (as in Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah), and Azariah in Kings. (=the ʿzryahu of the Inscriptions).

<sup>2</sup> K. xiv.—21. All the people.] Although the nation may have even rejoiced at Amaziah's death, it did not desire to change the Davidic dynasty; this had become 'the centre and pivot of the national life.' Ewald thinks this sentence implies that Uzziah was not the firstborn; and probably Amaziah (at 59) would have older sons. It is noteworthy that the three kings omitted in Matt. 1. 8 (Abaziah, Joash, Amaziah) all died by violence, though that may not be the reason for the omission.

—Azariah (which was also the name of the H.P. at this time, 2 Chr. 26. 17 & 15. 1, note) means Jehovah helps; Uzziah, Jehovah is strength. We have a similar interchangeable compound with the word God (El) in Uzziel and Azareel (1 Chr. 25. 4, 18; comp. 1 Chr. 6. 24, 36).—Sixteen.] Uzziah's long and prosperous (and also religious) reign is in marked contrast to the contemporary anarchy in Israel after the death of Jeroboam II. Uzziah saw six kings on the throne of Israel—Jeroboam, Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah; enjoying a longer reign than any other king of Judah, except Manasseh, and one more prosperous than any, except Jehoshaphat's, in commerce, war, and agriculture. Isaiah wrote the annals of Uzziah's reign; for details of the prosperity in Judah and the underlying corruption, see Isa. 2-4. <sup>22</sup> Elath means trees, with a local speciality; in Palestine terebinths, in Arabia palms. There was a palm grove between Elath and Ezion-geber (whence Jehoshaphat's ill-fated mercantile fleet had set out, 1 Kin. 22. 48). Elath belonged to Edom (Deut. 2. 8); was conquered by David; visited and made the port of the E. trade by Solomon; lost by Jehoram; recovered now; seized by Rezin in the reign of Ahaz. Jerome and Theodoret mention it as a port for trade with India; and its recovery, doubtless, contributed largely to the commercial prosperity of Judah in Uzziah's reign.—After.] i.e. as one of the first acts of his reign, implying perhaps (so also the 'he built,' which Sept. and Vulg. rightly emphasize) that the undertaking had been commenced in Amaziah's lifetime. Seeing both kingdoms thus developing internal resources and strengthening and enlarging boundaries, a looker-on might be tempted to think that only prosperity was before them; this would be at once to forget the proof in the past that their reformations were but 'as the early dew,' and to overlook the increasing and lowering cloud of Assyrian power. Hosea and Amos denounce the abuse by both kingdoms of their recovered prosperity to increase their religious, social, and moral corruption; see Amos 7. 11, note, p. 433.

2 K. xv. — 1. Twenty seventh.] Josephus says 14th; but the true number must be 15th, if (ch. 14. 2, 17, 23) Amaziah reigned 29 years, and during 14 was contemporary with Joash of Israel (v. 30, p. 466). <sup>2</sup> Fifty two years.] i.e. 810-758 B.C. The Assyrian inscriptions state that in 763 B.C. the old Assyrian capital, Assur, 'revolted, and in the month Sivan the sun was eclipsed.' Hind's calculations prove that, on June 15th, B.C. 763, an eclipse passed over Palestine, Syria, and Assyria. Probably this was the one named by Amos (8. 9) in the days of Uzziah, and the received chronology and the monuments are thus far in accord. At that date Assur-dan III. was king of Assyria; he was succeeded by Assurnirari II., from whom Tiglath-pileser (II. or III.) wrested the kingdom (in 745 B.C., Inscr.). This military adventurer conceived the imperial idea of uniting the states of W. Asia under satraps, appointed at Nineveh (cp. Isa. 10. 8). In his 3rd year he besieged Arpad, meanwhile subjecting Hamath and penetrating to the Mediterranean. Uzziah (Inscr. 'zri-yahu) seems to have been allied with Hamath (p. 436, note). Arpad fell after a siege lasting 3 years, and 2 years later (in B.C. 738, Inscr.) Tiglath-pileser records a levée of subject-princes (cp. ch. 16. 10) at which Rezon and Menahem attended; see p. 414, note.

2 C. xxvi. — 4. Right.] Both he and his father suffered the high places to remain; that, however, was not in itself so displeasing to God as to forfeit prosperity. The Philistines seem to have been weak or largely subject to Judah from now until the reign of Ahaz (ch. 28. 18), when they invaded Judah, and were subjected by Tiglath-pileser. THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS.—The written prophecies which survive, dating probably from the reigns of Joash and Jehu (see Summary; Minor Prophets; App.) supplement the Histories by unfolding the internal condition, the impending dangers, and future prospects of God's People. The earlier of them recognise Assyria's aggressiveness as the cardinal fact of their age. The conquest by Jeroboam II. of an old enemy (Syria) had brought Israel into direct contact with Assyria, the great military Empire, whose highly disciplined armies are alluded to by Joel (2. 2-11), and by Isaiah (5. 26-30). Assyria's advance westward menaced Israel and her neighbours (Amos 1. 3-2. 16), and obviously the absorption of the principalities of the Mediterranean Seaboard by the Great King was but a question of time. Even the strongest, viz. Israel and Judah (Amos 6. 2), could not hope to maintain their national existence unless by special help from their Covenant-God, or (fatal delusion!) by alliances with Assyria involving tribute, or by anti-Assyrian leagues with their neighbours supported by Egypt, now Assyria's only possible rival in W. Asia. Successive prophets preach reliance on Jehovah and condemn the alternative (p. 402, note). Amos and Hosea in Israel, followed by Isaiah and Micah in Judah, expose the corruption, social, moral and religious, which was undermining both kingdoms, and reveal that Assyria is an instrument in God's hand to purge out evil doers. God, as Israel's king, had risen for judgment and would no longer pass by the sins of His People. All four prophets foretell the destruction of the N. Kingdom and urge Judah to avert God's wrath by repentance.

J. I.—1.] Joel prophesied to Judah. Beyond allusions in his Book which indicate a familiarity with Jerusalem and its Temple, nothing is known of Joel. He does not allude to Syria, Assyria, or Babylon—unless the Northern in ch. 2. 20 (where Var. supplies one, A.V. army) be Assyria.—Tradition and criticism place Joel at dates varying from the reign of Joash to post-captivity times, but Amos seems to take up Joel's prophecy (cp. ch. 3. 16, 18 with Amos 1. 2 & 9. 13), and the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem (ch. 3. 1) may only mean captivities such as Amos (1. 6-9) mentions (cp. ch. 3. 2-5, and p. 421, note 'Edom').

[JUDAH.] J. I.—4. Locust.] Arbeh, the usual word for locust. Four words here denote the completeness of the devastation: gazam ('palmerworm', lit. the gnawer); arbeh (lit. the multitudinous); yetek ('cankerworm', lit. the licker; the locust in its unwinged and most destructive state); chitsil ('caterpillar', lit. the consumer; the locust in its larva state). In vision (ch. 2. 20), Joel sees them coming from the N., the quarter whence the Assyrians would come (Isa. 14. 31, p. 468). Locusts come into Palestine on the S. or S.E. wind only. 5. New.] Or, sweet.—Cut off.] The vine would be a chief object of attack. Abuse of wine is the only vice of Judah specified by Joel. 6. Check.] Or, jaw. 9. Meat.] Rather, meal.—Cut off.] For lack of flour, oil, and wine, thank-offerings are suspended (v. 13). 11. For a like description of a drought see marg. ref. Locusts generally appear in a drought. 12. Dried up.] R.V. withered. Same word as below, and vs. 10. 11.—Pomegranate.] Cf. 1 Sam. 14. 2, note, p. 20.—Apple.] Tappach is probably the apricot; not a native of Palestine, but abundant; introduced from Armenia.—The plagues (cp. Amos 4. 6-9) are of such unprecedented severity that Joel regards them as heralds of Jehovah's judgment of sin, and he exhorts to sincere penitence and prayer, promising thereupon their removal and the repair of the devastation of the land by reasonable and sufficient rains, an earnest of a great outpouring of God's Spirit hereafter (fulfilled Acts 2. 17). The latter part of ch. 2 with ch. 3 foretell greater judgments and deliverances which the foregoing typify.

[ISRAEL.] A. I.—1.] Amos prophesied to Israel during some part of the period in which Jeroboam II. and Uzziah were contemporary and both kingdoms reached their zenith. Hosea began to prophesy during the same period. Amos left Tekoa upon a special and brief mission—going perhaps to Bethel only and on a single occasion (cp. 1 Kin. 13. 1-10)—to declare in Israel the doom of Jehu's dynasty and of the N. Kingdom with its sanctuaries (ch. 5. 5)—esp. the Bethel-altar, ch. 3. 14—and their degraded

He describes the ruling and wealthy classes of Israel (and incidentally of Judah) as blindly confident in their recovered martial strength (ch. 6, 13), and fanatically reliant on Jehovah's favour (cp. 2 Kin. 13, 17 and 14, 25) for lack of knowledge of His true character. That Jehovah could interpose—to judge, and no more to protect (ch. 5. 18–20), seemed impossible (chs. 6. 3 & 9. 10; cp. Mic. 3. 11). But Amos declares God's secret purpose (ch. 3. 1–7) to punish Israel and her neighbours (including Judah) by a nation from beyond Damascus (chs. 5. 27 & 6. 14) (evidently Assyria, though unnamed) for breaches of universal morality. The judgment must fall on Jehovah's family just because of its privileges. [ISRAEL.] A. ii.—6.] The cloud of God's wrath (ch. 6. 14) which had burst over her neighbours, now sweeps on to Israel.—Sold. Contrary to law (which allowed a man to sell himself only, Lev. 25. 39; Deut. 15. 12, Heb.), calamitous debtors were bought or sold (ch. 8. 6) to get some trifle (cf. 2 Kin. 4. 1).—Poor. R.V. needy. 7. That pant. Rather, Ugh! the panters, grudgers of a foot of ground, even of a grain of dust which the poor mourner has sprinkled on his head! (Job 2. 12); using crooked ways towards the unretaliating (Prov. 17. 23); guilty of shocking licentious lust in the name of religion (cp. Hos. 4. 13, 14); rolling through the night at their idol feasts, while their poor debtor shivers on the naked ground (Deut. 21. 12), and devoting (unjust) fines to religious revelry! And these, with backsliding Judah, form the nation with whom alone God held personal converse by revelation (ch. 3. 2, 3). The rulers have lost all sense of right; Jehovah's sore judgments have produced no repentance (ch. 4. 6-11); even Israel's assiduous worship, being based on self-pleasing and disobedience (Ex. 20. 4), God hates (ch. 5). The notables (in Zion also), blindly secure, put away the evil day and abandon themselves to luxurious self-indulgence, reckless of duty or danger; therefore they shall be the first to go into captivity (ch. 6). Then (ch. 7), in figure, Amos foretells Pul's (2 Kin. 15. 19, p. 438) invasion and retirement on receiving Menahem's bribe; and Tiglath-pileser's deportation of N. and E. Israel (2 Kin. 15. 29, p. 462; 1 Chr. 5. 26); and the final deportations by Sargon and Shalmaneser.

A. vii.—10.] No doubt Amaziah was H.P. of the calf-worship. Apparently Jeroboam disregarded both priest and prophet. Amos had just announced that Jehovah would forgive no more, and that the national high places and sanctuaries should be laid waste. Amaziah omits this part of the oracle. 11. A perversion. Amos had just announced a violent end to Jeroboam's house, i.e. that the promise of 2 Kin. 10. 30 would not be extended.

am.—Prophet's son.] i.e. one of the sons of the prophets.—Gatherer.] The Heb. (here only) is of doubtful meaning (p. 432, note); R.V. dresser (of the trees). Amos replies that he is no professional prophet, nor a member of a prophet-guild, but one inspired suddenly whilst earning a humble independence (cp. Ps. 78. 71), and sent by Jehovah Himself. He repeats Israel's doom (in Amaziah's words, v. 11), adding that Amaziah's family shall experience the horrors of war, and the priest himself die in captivity abroad (cp. Hos. 9. 3), and resumes his interrupted prophecy (ch. 8). The end is come: Israel's probation is over; in the day of visitation, those who had rescued the prophetic word shall vainly seek for such (cp. Isa. 8. 20-22); the Bethel-temple shall be overthrown upon its worshippers (ch. 9. 1), and no one of those sinners who say The evil shall not overtake or prevent us shall escape God's hand. The Sinful Kingdom shall be destroyed, but not the race; the survivors shall be dispersed over the world, but no grain of good seed shall be lost (ch. 9. 2-10; cp. Isa. 6. 13). A restoration from captivity is further promised, and a resettlement of Israel permanently in its own land—reunited under the restored kingship of David—and My people of Israel shall again rule the peoples who in doing homage to David had acknowledged the sovereignty of Jehovah (ch. 9. 12; cp. 2 Sam. 22. 44-46); for the empire founded by David shall be re-established to its former limits.

H. i.—1.] Hosea (or Hoshea, cf. Num. 13. 16), the elder contemporary of Isaiah (ch. 1. 1 with Isa. 1. 1), seems to have ceased to prophesy before Samaria fell (ch. 13. 16; 2 Kin. 18. 10)—but the last two chapters (13 & 14) may be referred to Hoshea's reign. He prophesied to the N. Kingdom, to which he evidently belonged (our king, ch. 7. 5), rebuking its unfaithfulness to Jehovah. He endeavoured to recall it (1) from idolatry, or a hideous blending of its national religion with Baal-worship, to the old order and ritual of the worship of Jehovah, and (2) from reliance on the 'arm of flesh' (its own or foreign) to a general and hearty submission to Jehovah and dependence on Him alone. Towards the close of Jeroboam's prosperous reign (chs. 1-3), the destruction of the N. Kingdom is foretold by Hosea in the same threefold doom as to Amos (ch. 1. 4-6 with Amos 7. 7-9). During the rapid decline of the kingdom after Jeroboam's death (chs. 4-14), Hosea rebukes the same national sins as Amos—with the addition of idolatry and heathenish practices, and the public crimes arising out of the disorders of the period (murder, highway robbery, &c., p. 438, note). In ch. 7. 11, 12, and onwards, he exposes Israel's hankering after foreign alliances (as Isaiah later that of Judah), and in particular he condemns the policy of a party which—probably after Tiglath-pileser's death (B.C. 727, Inscr., p. 467, note)—in order to recover the national in-

JEROBOAM II.—(Hosea).

170.—Death of Jeroboam II.

2 KINGS XIV. 28, 29.

<sup>28</sup> Now the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, “which belonged to Judah, for Israel, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?”

fulfilled at the Return (1 Chr. 9. 3, &c.). Israel's restoration is associated with re-union to Judah under 'David' (refs. & ch. 3. 4, 5), i.e. the ideal King of the Davidic Monarchy, and that perfect form of the Theocracy to which the prophetic Spirit was continually directing the hopes of the Faithful.—Come up.] The nation shall have a new birth, a second Exodus, from its captivity (ch. 2. 15; cp. Isa. 11. 16)—or, shall take the field from Palestine, united (Isa. 11. 10-14), to re-conquer the Davidic empire (cp. Amos 9. 11, 12).—Jezreel.] A further play upon the word reverses its meaning in v. 3—God-will-scatter i.e. sow broadcast (ch. 2. 23; Jer. 31. 27), multiply the restored nation (cp. Isa. 9. 3).

H. II.—1.] Lo (=not) is omitted. To the whole nation God says, Be ye, or Ye are, or Ye shall be Ammi (=my-people) and Ruhamah (=having-obtained-mercy). The reversal of the prophetic import of each name (as explained in v. 23) conveys God's promise of mercy. (Ch. 1 should end here.)—But first (ch. 3) Israel should be kingless, cut off from all ordinary means of communion with God; yet the discipline should lead to closer union in the latter days. Their immorality and idolatry (chs. 4, 5) might be traced to lack of knowledge, therefore the priests (Mal. 2. 7) should not escape; nor should Judah, if unwarned by the awful fate of Israel when let alone; as the moth the garment, or the dry rot the tree, so should God waste Israel, and rend them and carry them off as the lion, till penitence (ch. 6) awaken the resolution to follow on and know the Lord. Manifold (ch. 7) have been their sins; they have (ch. 8) sown the wind, they shall reap the whirlwind, be flung aside as castaway pottery. The days of visitation (ch. 9) are come. Samaria's glory (ch. 10) shall deport, Samaria's king vanish as the bubble from the fountain, and the cry Cover us be vain; only on amendment, on sowing righteousness, and by breaking up the fallow ground, uprooting sin, can the rain of God's goodness be obtained. What a return (ch. 11) to God for continued goodness! God taught them to go, as one holds up a little child; drew them with cords, not of coercion, as of a lord, but of love, such as a human father might use; yearned to deliver them from the doom of Admah and Zeboim (Deut. 29. 23). Yet, if only (ch. 12) Israel (Ephraim) will reform and turn to the covenant-God, and listen to His word by His prophets, instead of making covenants with Assyria or seeking Egypt's alliance, the God of Bethel shall be Israel's God once more. How are the mighty fallen (ch. 13)! Once Ephraim spake and there was trembling. Baal-worship brought death. O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; in Me is thy help; Thou hast (ch. 14) fallen by thine own iniquity. Take with you words, say: 'What have I any more to do with idols?'

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xiv.—28, Acts, &c.] 'Saviour,' restorer' (ch. 13. 5; v. 25) Jeroboam II. might be called, but not moral or religious 'reformer.'—Recovered.] Damascus, which commanded the N.E. approach to Palestine (across the desert by the oasis of Tadmor) from the ford of the Euphrates at Tiphshah (p. 203, note), belonged to Israel under David (2 Sam. 8. 3); Hamath, which similarly commanded the N. approach from the chief ford of the Euphrates at Carchemish, had been annexed by Solomon (2 Chr. 8. 4), whose Empire extended over Zobah eastward to Tiphshah (1 Kin. 4. 24; cf. ch. 15. 16). Jeroboam's successes were probably due partly to Assyrian non-interference: if not because (as some think) he was an Assyrian vassal, because the successors of Rimmon-nirari were occupied with wars elsewhere, or with the civil wars which ended in Tiglath-pileser's usurpation (pp. 420, 428, notes).—Hamath.] A small kingdom in the upper part of the Orontes Valley, where a break occurs in both the maritime and inland mountain ranges, so that this valley with its S. continuation, the rich and well-watered Mid-Lebanon Valley, affords natural highways into Phœnicia and Palestine from the N. This is the entrance of Hamath. The Hittite confederacy (sec 1 Kin. 10. 29, note, p. 250), of which Carchemish and Kadesh-on-Orontes were the chief centres, now included the city of Hamath-the-Great, which Amos (6. 2) associates with Gath probably because Jeroboam II. had dismantled it, as Uzziah, Gath, Hamath (with its neighbour Arpad, ch. 18. 34) were chief obstacles to the advance of Assyria. The confederacy was about to enter upon its death struggle with Assyria. Friendly relations seem to have subsisted between Judah and Hamath from David's time (2 Sam. 8. 10), and Uzziah, late in his reign, was allied with its king against which, Ewald, followed by Stanley, supposes the word to be the name, Qobolam, of one who had a brief reign between Zachariah and Shallum, reckoning him one of the three shepherds (i.e. kings or pretenders) said in Zeck. 11. 8 to have been cut off in one month. (Gratz would read 'in Ibleam'; if rightly, the coincidence is remarkable that Ahaziah fleeing from Jehu at Jezreel received his mortal wound on the Engannim road by 'Ibleam' (ch. 9. 27). The public murder of a king illustrates the rapid decline of morals in Israel. 12.] Thus, though postponed through God's promise to Jehu (ch. 10. 30), vengeance for the blood of Jezreel overtook the house of Jehu (ch. 10. 17, notes), and the words (p. 433, note) of Amos (7. 9) and of Hosea (1. 4) were fulfilled. The chequered, but mostly inglorious, history of Jehu's dynasty is a melancholy comment on Jehu's boasted zeal for Jehovah Sabaoth.

With the expiry of the promise to Jehu, the N. kingdom became again the sport of military adventurers, as previous to the accession of the strong dynasties of Omri and Jehu. Perhaps Pul regards Menahem as a rebel, and comes ('made an expedition against him,' Josephus) either to avenge the assault on Tiphsah (if really made), or to call him to account for not having applied for that confirmation in the kingdom which the Assyrians expected all tributary kings on their accession to ask at their hands. Otherwise, the Assyrian first intervened in Israel at the invitation of the reigning king, as later in Judah (ch. 16. 7). Though Hosea (8. 9, 10 & 10. 4-6) foresaw the [2 K. xv. 14-19.]

2 K. xv.—5. Smote.] Cf. Isa. 1. 5; Miriam (Num. 12. 10) and Gehazi (ch. 5. 27) incurred the like penalty. Josephus (Ant. ix. 10. 4) adds that Uzziah's punishment was accompanied by an earthquake (Zech. 14. 5; Amos 1. 1), causing a rent in the Temple, through which the sun's rays fell upon the king's face 'inasmuch that the leprosy seized upon him immediately.' 'But probably the earthquake happened earlier in Uzziah's reign.'—Green.

2 C. xxvi.—21. Several.] Separate, i.e. independent, disconnected. Cf. 'buried in a several place without the city' (Pilkington). R.V. marg. lazar (an objectionable rendering on all accounts; alien from the root; an anachronism before the days of Lazarus; and conveying a wrong idea, for, when lazar was in use, it meant, like lazzaroni, rather beggar than sick-man, and the lazzaretto was a poor-house before it became a quarantine). Not even the king might escape the law of the leper, which was to teach all men the loathsomeness of sin in God's sight. Hospital can hardly be intended, for the root chaphash means to set free, and nothing else; the idea of a hospital is refuge for destitute (not royal) sick; and the honour of carrying out the idea belongs to Christianity alone. The greater part of Ps. 88 is very expressive of Uzziah's condition and feelings, as dismissed from all human society, free among the dead.—King's house.] Jotham occupied the palace as Regent. Perhaps he held the office of Eliakim in Hezekiah's reign.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xv.—21. Acts.] Of his stern rule we have one instance; what the customs of the times might have sanctioned towards conquered enemies, he perpetrated on his opponents. Josephus says 'he continued to reign with cruelty and barbarity,' and adds that Pekahiah 'followed the barbarity of his father.'—Menahem.] Cf. vs. 17, 19, notes. He apparently died a natural death, and his son succeeded him without opposition. Allusions in Hosea (e.g. 5. 13 & 7. 11 & 12. 1) show the existence of an Assyrian and of an Egyptian party in Israel at this period (p. 434, note).

[JUDAH.] I. i.—1. Isaiah.] The histories of this period are largely supplemented by the prophecies of the city-prophet, Isaiah, and of Micah, the prophet of the country and commonalty, his younger contemporary. Isaiah's annals of Uzziah and Hezekiah are lost, though doubtless they are reflected in the Chronicler's narrative (2 Chr. 26. 22 & 32. 32). But chs. 1—5 of his prophecies—whether they embody his utterances during Uzziah's reign, or are a summary of later prophecies prefixed by him as a preface to the Book—disclose the internal corruption of Judah during the long and, outwardly, most successful reigns of Uzziah and Jotham. Restored prosperity—as in the sister-kingdom under Jeroboam II.—had corrupted (v. 10) the ruling class (cp. ch. 33. 15); even Jotham's godliness did but keep in check idolatries (chs. 1. 28-31 & 2. 8, 9) in which Judah's confidence was as yet unshaken. Security and wealth (ch. 2. 6, 7) had blinded the nation to its real condition and bred in the rulers a self-confidence (chs. 2. 10-17 & 5. 21), which, developing into independence of Jehovah, had reached even defiant infidelity (ch. 5. 18, 19, 24). Public worship was assiduously observed, and, like the Sanctuary itself, supported a spurious confidence in Jehovah's protection, which the professional prophets also fostered (Mic. 3. 5, 11); but Judah's heart was far from Jehovah (ch. 1. 10-17). The administration of justice was partial, corrupt, and oppressive (chs. 1. 23 & 5. 23; Mic. 3. 1-3, 9-11). Covetousness (ch. 5. 8; Mic. 2. 2) and luxury (chs. 3. 16-24 & 5. 11, 12) were rampant, and gratified by oppression of the weak (chs. 3. 14, 15 & 5. 7; Mic. 3. 2, 3). Manifestly, the nation had defeated the very object of its existence (Ex. 19. 6), and had already forfeited the Land of Jehovah (cp. Hos. 9. 3) and the protection of its Covenant-God (cp. 2 Chr. 12. 5). To Isaiah and Micah, the advance of Assyria portended the invasion and exile which were the recognised

(1 Kin. 8. 46) penalties of persistent unfaithfulness to the Covenant of Sinai. Both prophets reveal the purpose of Jehovah (Amos 3. 7) to punish the public and private sins of Israel and Judah by means of Assyria, and unfold the principles of grace which rule their future. But Isaiah does not name Assyria until the reign of Ahaz (ch. 7. 17). — Judah.] Isaiah's prophecies include also the N. Kingdom and the world of the Hebrews (chs. 13—21, 23). — Jerusalem.] Isaiah's home was in the lower part of the city (2 Kin. 20. 4, p. 497). Of Isaiah's genealogy and connections nothing is known. — In, &c.] The chronology of these kings is partly uncertain, and, as Isaiah's prophecies must generally be dated by internal evidence only, various dates have been assigned to each oracle; many doubt whether any belong to Uzziah's reign, and Isaiah refers none expressly to Jotham's reign. Chap. 6 is dated by Uzziah's death-year, and, if it be the record of Isaiah's call, ch. 1. chs. 2—4, and ch. 5 may have been separate units of later date prefixed to explain the severity of his commission (ch. 6. 9-12). — Hezekiah.] Probably, the bulk of Isaiah's prophecies, in their present shape, belong to this reign. 2. If chap. 1 was not Isaiah's first public utterance, its contents, which practically summarise the Book, may explain its position. — Hear, &c.] Almost identical with Deut. 32. 1; many phrases in this chap. resemble parts of Lev. 26 and Deut. 27 to 32. — I.] Isaiah's Covenant-God speaks. — Nourished, &c.] R.V. marg. made great and exalted (Ezek. 31. 4), i.e., Her God had made Israel a nation and elevated her among nations. — Rebelle.] The unnatural sons (Hos. 11. 1-4) had proceeded to the highest degree of sin (Job 34. 37). 3. Know.] Equivalent to own; other gods were their owners and masters (baalim). 4. Of.] i.e., a race consisting of. — Are corrupters.] Tar, do corruptly (2 Chr. 27. 2 & 26. 16,

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xv.—27. Twenty.] Probably either 29 or 30 would be more correct, as comparison of vs. 32, 33 with ch. 17. 1 seems to show. The text is doubtful (the Assyrian notices of the Kings of Israel do not leave room for more than a two-years' reign for Pekah), Var. Pekah apparently set himself to restore Israel's power—much weakened by the Assyrian tribute, by civil wars and disunion—his policy being anti-Assyrian, the reverse of Menahem's (2 Kin. 15. 19); which done, he allied himself with Syria-Damascus (v. 37, note, p. 450), and rebelled.

[JUDAH.] I. vi.—This chapter most probably records Isaiah's original call (but see ch. 1. 1, notes), and not a particular mission. It may have been placed here as a preface to a Book of Immanuel (chs. 7—12. 6). 1. Died.] Probably before Uzziah's death; other wise 'the first of Jotham' would be more natural. Uzziah's death-year, by Schrader's reading of two inscriptions (one mutilated) of Tiglath-pileser, would be brought down to B.C. 740.—Saw.] Cp. 1 Kin. 22. 17, 19—22. A theophany authenticates a message which, but for the answer to Isaiah's faith in v. 13, might seem to abrogate the Promises. Compare the theophany which in Amos (9. 1) introduces the doom of the N. Kingdom. (It was God the Son whom Isaiah saw, John 12. 41.) The vision may in part take shape from Solomon's Temple and its familiar services; but the heavenly temple seems to be contrasted with the earthly.—Train.] i.e. the fringes of His royal robe; marg. skirts (so R.V. marg.):

Exod. 33. 20 & marg. refs., also 1 Sam. 6. 20.—Unclean.] Holiness is an especial attribute of Jehovah, and demands a corresponding holiness in His people (Exod. 19. 6); cp. Luke 5. 8. But the actual life of the nation was unholy, unclean, glaringly at variance with its vocation. And God's holiness is specially exhibited in judicial interpositions within the sphere of His kingdom.—Lips.] As contrasted with the pure lips of the Seraphim; cp. Zeph. 3. 9, marg. Isaiah feels personally involved in the uncleanness of his nation (cp. ch. 3. 8, 9, their tongue and their doings are against the Lord, to provoke the eyes of His glory; the shew of their countenance doth witness against them; and they declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not). He reflects, moreover, that past sins of speech defile his lips and render him unfit for the prophet's privilege (Amos 3. 7) of admission into the secret counsel of Jehovah (as to His purposes towards His people) and for converse with Him. <sup>6</sup>. Live coal.] R.V. marg., hot stone (used instead of coal). Isaiah prays for purity, and receives pardon. <sup>8</sup>. Send.] With the message of v. 9, Isaiah being now qualified.—Us.] Jehovah speaks as if in council (cp. Gen. 1. 26). This plural, and the trisagion of v. 3, may not be alleged as more than confirmation of the doctrine of a Trinity.—Send me.] With Isaiah's unquestioning faith (cp. Job 1. 6-12) [I. vi. 5-11.]

and ardour contrast Jeremiah's infirmity of will (Jer. 1. 6-8 & 20. 7-18). Both prophets were called to a fruitless and disheartening life-task, to be the heralds to their countrymen of devastation, defeat, and exile. <sup>9</sup>. This people.] i.e. Judah; always an expression of disparagement or reprobation. Having rejected Me (ch. 1. 4, note) she is no longer My people (cp. Hos. 1. 9).—Indeed.] R.V. marg., continually; lit. (so Sept., Vulg., & N.T.) hear ye in hearing. <sup>10</sup>. Make, &c.] So 'harden' = abstain from softening. Vulg. Excava, but the imperative is not found in Sept. (ἐπαχύνθη), nor in Matt. 13. 15, John 12. 40, Acts 28. 27; v. 11, however, seems to require it (Ps. 90. 13 & 89. 46). Compare Ephraim's doom (Hos. 4. 17). Idolatry and spiritual deadness will work the nation's ruin; it can only be preserved by faith in the great and holy King (ch. 7. 9).

—Fat.] So pinguis and παχὺς are used. The delivery of God's message forces on mankind the responsibility of accepting or rejecting it. By hardening their mind and heart against the prophet's moral and spiritual teachings, the people will deaden their higher faculties, and so his warnings may be said to confirm them in their unbelief, to be the cause of their reprobate condition. Whatever Isaiah's work may accomplish secretly, it is to be in appearance fruitless. See 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24; Rom. 7. 13.—Shut.] Lit. over-spread, as with adhesive ointment. Jehovah, or the invader; or it (Var., so R.V.), i.e. Samaria's trouble. Micah anticipates an Assyrian domination over the Holy Land (ch. 5. 5, 6).—Is come. R.V. reacheth, see ch. 6. 16.—Gate. The centre of civic life—here, of the Chosen Nation. Micah imagines the Shephelah (rs. 10-16), next to Philistia, already overrun: Jerusalem holds out (cp. Isa. 1. 7, 8). [JUDAH.] 2 K. xv.—37. Began to send. There was no regular invasion till the reign of Ahaz; the Chronicler (ch. 28. 5) represents the crushing disasters which then befell Judah as God's judgments upon Ahaz for his apostasy. Some refer Isa. 9. 8-21 to this time. In Isaiah's view, the sins of the State (Isa. 5. 7, 24, 25) would be closely connected with this threatening conjunction of Judah's neighbours.—Apparently Rezin had proposed a league between Syria, Israel, and Judah to throw off the yoke of Assyria—for it appears from the monuments that Assyria now claimed Syria and even Judah as vassals, at least in name. Pekah agreed, but Jotham kept aloof; and yet (Inscr.) Judah under Uzziah had allied itself with Hamath against Assyria only a few years before. Rezin and Pekah therefore combined to abolish David's dynasty, and to place on the throne of Judah a creature of their own, 'the son of Tabeal,' probably a Syrian—being perhaps encouraged by a party in Jerusalem (Isa. 8. 6, 9, 12), and even by Egypt (Isa. 7. 18). King-making was now a familiar process in the N. Kingdom. Probably Jotham's vigorous administration delayed execution of the Syro-Israelite treaty, but the accession of Ahaz removed any hesitation (cp. Isa. 3. 4); the unnatural alliance,

Or else we may suppose that 25, in ch. 18. 2, should be 20 (i.e. kaph, not kaph-he); or else (ch. 16. 20, note) that Hezekiah was only the adopted son of Ahaz.—Not right. Ahaz at once led a willing people (2 Chr. 27. 2) into idolatry without precedent in Judah; cf. ch. 16. 3, 2 Chr. 28. 3. Judah's worst king (for Manasseh had a period of penitence) was the son of almost (cf. ch. 18. 3, 5, 6) her best; cf. Ezek. 18. 10-13. 'His character was petulant and childish; his policy was dictated in the harem; the rich nobles were steeped in sensual luxury; feminine extravagance and vanity gave the tone to aristocratic society, which, like the noblesse of France, on the eve of the Revolution, was absorbed in gaiety, while the masses were ground down by oppression.' ## 185.—The Syro-Israelite Invasion.—Isaiah as Comforter.

League of Pekah and Rezin to overthrow the dynasty of David.

2 KINGS XVI. 5.

ISAIAH VII.—IX. 7.

<sup>5</sup> THEN Rezin king of Syria and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, but could not overcome him.

<sup>1</sup> And it came to pass in the days of <sup>a</sup> Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it.

<sup>2</sup> And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria is confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

Mission of Isaiah.—The Message to Ahaz.<sup>3</sup> Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou,<sup>a</sup> 2 Chr. 28. 5, 6.

1 Kin. 18. 18, note. Moloch, as (Ammonite, 1 Kin. 11. 5, 7) fire-god, is frequently identified with Baal, the sun-god (Jer. 19. 5); Moloch means king, a generic name, like Baal (= lord) and Chemosh (= vanquisher); coupled with Ashtoreth on Moabite Stone, and apparently replaced by Baal in Num. 25. 3).

<sup>2</sup> K. xvi.—5. Then.] The opportunity was favourable for that invasion in force for which perhaps preliminary incursions in the preceding year (ch. 15. 37) had prepared—Jotham, a strong king, had just been succeeded by Ahaz, whose unfitness to lead at such a crisis was probably known; Judah's nobility was enervated, and her people disaffected (Isa. 3. 12-15), so that, notwithstanding the increased defensive power of the kingdom, it was in no condition to resist a formidable foe. Therefore, and perhaps encouraged by Joash's capture of Jerusalem (2 Chr. 25. 23), the allies hoped to dethrone Ahaz, and through a vassal-king to enlist the power and wealth of Judah in support of the anti-Assyrian league (p. 450, note). But Israel overlooked that this was to attack the Promises to David; that, take counsel as the allies might, except as God's instruments, they could have no power against His Anointed. Vainly was Ephraim leagued with an idolatrous nation for the extinction of 'the hope of Israel.' Judah overlooked this likewise, and, panic-stricken, considered only that either kingdom was ordinarily more than a match for Judah, and that Israel, hitherto Judah's bulwark against Syria, would now be made by Syria the base of operations against Judah. At this crisis, Isaiah stands forth as the intrepid statesman and the faithful witness for Jehovah.—Ahaz.] The attack was specially aimed at the house of David (Isa. 7. 2).—Overcome.] Lit. eat, so Chr. So strong had warlike Uzziah and Jotham made Jerusalem (2 Chr. 26. 9, 15 & 27. 3). It was perhaps in connexion with this siege that Ahaz sent his embassy with a submissive message and present to Tiglath-pileser; the news of its favourable reception may have caused the allies to retire. In the Hebrew style, the result is named in advance.

Hos. 1. 7. Damascus and Israel had been already doomed by Amos (1. 5 & 7. 17) and Hosea (1. 4-6). —Within, &c. The first of Isaiah's precise chronological predictions (see ch. 16. 14, & 21. 16, & 23. 15). Within 65 years, i.e. in about 678 B.C., Esar-haddon, Sennacherib's successor, colonised desolate Ephraim (Ezra 4. 2) with foreigners. This mixture of races ended Israel's existence as a nation. —Broken. Add in pieces, as ch. 8. 9. <sup>9</sup> If, &c.] Stated affirmatively in 2 Chr. 20. 20, where (Heb.) the same assonance occurs as suggests the rendering here, 'If ye hold not fast, verily ye shall not stand fast'; cp. Hab. 2. 4. A solemn warning to the Divinely-established House of David. Safety can be secured by their own resources if supported by faith in Jehovah. <sup>10</sup> Moreover.] Ahaz is silent and hesitates. His want of faith is met by the offer of a confirmatory sign—anywhere in the universe. <sup>11</sup> Sign.] i.e., Some visible evidence that Jehovah was speaking by Isaiah, which should be also an assurance of His Presence and His support. It is a characteristic of Isaiah to predict something in the near future as an earnest of prophecies, of which the fulfilment was more remote. The 'lower meaning' of this prediction is given in ch. 8. 4, but its full force was only to be seen after the fulfilments—the earliest of which Ahaz lived to see, but in vain. 'Ahaz and his house were judicially hardened, and their present unbelief was a fresh degree in the hardening' (cp. chs. 6. 9, 10 & 29. 10, 11). —Thy God. Notwithstanding Ahaz' recourse to other gods (p. 450)—perhaps extended in his present distress: cp. 2 Chr. 28. 22. The full name of Ahaz (p. 450, note) was an acknowledgment of dependence on Jehovah. —Depth. Heb. she'ol. The Underworld; Gk. Hades; cp. Job 11. 8. <sup>12</sup> Neither, &c.] A hypocritical pretext: a right principle (Deut. 6. 16) perverted. Ahaz refuses the sign because he dreads the truth. He pretends that he will not put Jehovah to the proof and so repeat Israel's sin in the wilderness (Num. 14. 22). Ahaz' purpose to rely on Assyria was distrust of Jehovah; he felt this, and he durst not say my God as Isaiah markedly does; cp. v. 12 with vs. 11, 13. He felt he could not pursue a worldly policy after asking and receiving a sign; therefore he refused. Probably already Hosea had rebuked the like policy (Menahem's) in Ephraim (Hos. 5. 13 & 8. 9, 10 & 10. 6). 13. House of David. Some princes of the Covenant-family doubtless attended the king; will they, too, refuse God's offer to reinforce their faith? Perhaps Hezekiah was present (he would be about nine years old)—he almost quotes Isaiah at the same spot later (2 Chr. 32. 7, 8).—Men. i.e., the prophet himself, or an allusion to the alienation of Judah by misgovernment; cp. ch. 8. 6 with 1. 21–26).—But will ye. i.e., that ye will.—God. See ch. 1. 14. By deliberately thwarting His gracious purpose. Ahaz was as obdurate as Jeroboam I. (1 Kin. 13. 33). 14. God Himself vouchsafes to the whole House of David another kind of 'sign,' a 'dark saying' by His prophet, a revelation which proved to have an extraordinary scope, but of which Ahaz and his suite probably understood no more than its promise of an early deliverance of Judah from the confederacy (v. 16; cp. ch. 8. 4). But, to the Faithful few (ch. 8. 16), the Promise should prove a germinant one (notwithstanding its setting of present chastisement of the sins of Judah and of David's House, es. 17–25); and each deliverance should be a fresh pledge of God's faithfulness to His Covenants with David and the Patriarchs (Mic. 7. 20).—A virgin. R.V. as A.V. (the Heb. the being interpreted as the article of species). But R.V. marg. renders the maiden, because almah is not the ordinary Hebrew for 'virgin' and cannot be shown to be exclusively applicable to one who was unmarried. Almah occurs elsewhere in O.T. 8 times:—Gen. 24. 43 (Rebecca); Ex. 24. 43 (Moses' sister); Prov. 30. 19, 'maid'; 1's. 68. 25, 'the damsels'; Cant. 1. 3 & 6. 8, 'virgins'; Ps. 46. title, 1 Chr. 15. 20, 'on Alamothe.' Perhaps St. Matthew (1. 23), enlightened by the facts of the fulfilment of the prophecy in the person of the Son of God, may have found an allusion here to the Virgin-birth, either in the Hebrew almah (by implication), or, in its Greek rendering παρθένος (the Arabic and Syriac Versions agree with LXX).—Shall conceive, and bear. R.V. as A.V., but R.V. marg., is with child (cp. Gen. 16. 11, Var., and beareth). Micah (5. 3) probably alludes to this oracle.—Immanuel. i.e. With us is God (ch. 8. 10, Heb.). A mother's faith shall rebuke the King's unfaith. The thought (viz. God present, that is aid, protection, guidance) occurs frequently (Gen. 28. 15; Exod. 3. 12 & 29. 45, 46; Josh. 1. 9; Hag. 2. 4, 5); but here much more is intended. The revelation is supplemented [I. vii. 13–16.]

in chs. 9. 6, 7 & 11. 1–10, &c. We learn from St. Matthew that this prophecy found its fulfilment in Jesus the Virgin-born, but no entirely satisfactory interpretation has been given of its details in their historical setting here. All explanations involve 'some assumption not directly sanctioned by the text'; some overpass, some fall short of the requirements of the context—especially ch. 8. 8, 'thy land, O Immanuel,' and ch. 9. 6, 7 (see notes there). Opinions differ mainly according as the mother and child are regarded as actual persons of this time or not. See Appendix. 15. But before the deliverance (v. 16), a time of trouble unparalleled since the Disruption (v. 17) shall ensue.—Judgment shall precede mercy. So Micah (5. 3), 'He will give them up (i.e., not protect them, let them suffer) until the time that she which travaileth has brought forth.'—Butter. Rather, curdled milk, v. 22 also; see Kitto Bib. Ill. vi. 59. R.V. marg. curds. Only wild honey and milk will then be obtainable (v. 22), for agriculture will have been suspended by war and insecurity; a curious inversion of Canaan's title (Ex. 3. 17). Or honey and curds may mean infant's food; cp. 'Ne eum putes in phantasmate nasciturum, cibus uter infantie.'—Jerome. If so, Isaiah foreshews here the human nature of Christ: He shall be brought up, and gradually come to maturity (cp. Luke 2. 52), like other children.—That, &c. So R.V. marg. (Vulg. ut sciat); R.V. When he knoweth. Or the Heb. may mean till he know (so the American revisers). The discernment of foods would follow weaning (customary in the third year, 2 Macc. 7. 27), and a period of between two and three years is thus indicated within which disaster will relieve Judah of both the confederates. But if 'the beginnings of moral consciousness' or even 'years of discretion' be meant, this promise would be fulfilled by later sufferings of Ephraim and Syria at the hands of Assyria. 16. For, &c. Before the child (? Shear-jashub) could reach the stage described, both Syria and Israel should be spoiled (ch. 8. 4) or suffer deportation (v. 16). The child is destined to grow up amid suffering and privation, yet he is still the mysterious pledge and symbol of Judah's deliverance.—The land, &c. Var. of whose two kings thou hast a horror (so R.V., abhorrest) or terror shall be unpeopled (so R.V., forsaken), i.e., Both lands (Israel and Syria) shall be forsaken: an unusual meaning for the land; or Doubtless it assisted Isaiah to promote the reformation under Hezekiah, and, later, became strong enough to oppose the reaction under Manasseh and incur a bloody persecution (p. 525). Reading to him, the 'joy' relates, primarily at least, to a deliverance from and recovery after the foretold Assyrian invasion (and perhaps also to Judah's Return from Babylon; cp. Mic. 2. 12, 13 & 4. 5-10 and ch. 11. 10-16)—the earnest (vs. 4. 5) of the perfect reign of 2 Sam. 23. 3-5.—Before thee.] The joy is religious; like the thanksgiving of a sacrificial feast (cp. ch. 25. 6; Dent. 12. 7, &c.).—4. For.] Cp. Indeed, there is but a step between an ideal Theocratic king, governing with perfect justice and wisdom, and securing peace, plenty, and power for Israel (cp. Ps. 72. p. 196), and the more spiritualized king of Israel remodelled as a holy nation; this step, 'perhaps unconsciously, the poets and prophets of Israel were for ever taking.'—Wonderful.] i.e. Marvellous One; cp. Sept. &c. render Father of the age to come. 'Father' expresses the ideal of loving and protecting government (Job 29. 16; ch. 22. 21); perhaps contrasted with or even prompted by the current misgovernment. The guarantee of the Davidic kingdom for ever (2 Sam. 7. 13) associated the king with the eternity of Jehovah.—The Prince of Peace.] (cp. 1 Chr. 22. 9, Micah 5. 5. Isaiah and Micah describe this reign of peace in the same language (ch. 2. 2-4; Mic. 4. 1-4), quoting perhaps from an older prophet. This hope of 'a Prince of Peace' who should quell the great enemy of man (Gen. 3. 15) was shadowed forth in mystical history by the priestly King of Salem (Heb. 7. 2); projected into prophecy under the title of 'Shiloh' (the Tranquil One); realised humanly, in faint outlines, in the person of Solomon (Shelomoh, the Peaceful One); then again linned by Solomon himself with greater richness of prophetic detail (Ps. 72); and, at last fully and clearly embodied in Isaiah's predictions concerning the Righteous King (ch. 32. 17, 18), and the 'Servant of the Lord' by whom our 'peace' would be worked out (ch. 53. 5; cp. chs. 26. 3, 12; 52. 7; 54. 10, 13; 60. 17; 66. 12).—King. 7. The extension and peaceful establishment of the Davidic kingdom (cp. ch. 11. 10-16).—David.] Therefore the child Immanuel will be the Covenant-heir of David, and so a 'Son' to Jehovah and the highest of all earthly kings (2 Sam. 7. 14; Ps. 2. 7 & 89. 26, 27. lit. the Most High to the kings of the earth, Var.). Here first it is indicated that the child Immanuel is of David's lineage, and the idea of a personal Messiah emerges (cp. Mic. 5. 2). Hitherto the Davidic Kingdom has been Israel's hope. This kingdom (destined to be overthrown and restored, cp. Mic. 4. 6 <sup>10</sup>) was ever to be David's, but should be administered not through David and his heirs, but by Jehovah Himself made one with the seed of David; if this fact be involved in the language of prophecy (eg. in the words the mighty God, the everlasting Father), probably it was one of the mysteries, i.e. secrets revealed through them, which the prophets themselves vainly sought to understand (1 Pet. 1. 10-12). <sup>7</sup> Order . . . establish.] R.V. establish . . . uphold.—With judgment and justice.] Rather, through justice and through righteousness: cp. 2 Sam. 23. 3, 4; chs. 1. 27 & 11 & 32. 15-18; Ps. 89. 14 ('habitation,' Var. foundation).—Zeal.] Holy jealousy would embrace the two ideas which are included in this word. It was so familiar, even as early as Lev. 18. 21, that 'pass through' was description enough. The view that it was a fire-baptism for purification is favoured by the Vulg. ('chr. n. 3'), lustravit filios suos in igne, but hardly by Num. 31. 23, on which the supposition rests. Perhaps the Hebrews connected the practice with the dedication of the firstborn (Ezek. 20. 26; cp. Mic. 6. 7). This Ammonite cult, like that of the host of heaven, became popular in the later days of the tottering Monarchy.

and 'restored it to Judah' (ch. 14. 22). The word, therefore, must be rendered gain, not regain or restore, its meaning elsewhere. But another reading (R.V. marg. see Var.) for Syrians is Edomites (so Sept., Vulg., and Kri.; the Hebrew letters of the two words are very similar); if so, Syria should be Edom. According to either version, Rezin enabled Edom to take advantage of Judah's disasters, which it was always prompt to do. Cf. Amos 1. 11; Obad. 10-14; Ezek. 35. 5.—Milman explains this part of the brief and obscure record of the Syro-Israelite invasions as 'a second more fatal descent' (and Mr. G. Smith's account of the Assyrian Canon supports the view). 'On the retreat of the Syrians, Ahaz ventured on a battle (Chr. rs. 5-8). Rezin, during the episode of Chr. rs. 9-15, seized Elath. The Edomites and Philistines revolted from Judah, and Ahaz, attacked on all sides, threw himself under the protection of Tiglath-pileser.'

2 CHRON. XXVIII.

2 KINGS XV. 29.

<sup>29</sup> In the days of Pekah king of Israel <sup>b</sup>came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took <sup>c</sup>Ijon, and Abel-beth-maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, and the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria.

of Assyria; but Tiglath gave them no time to unite; to strike quickly, and in detail, was his policy. Rezin, routed in the field, fled to Damascus, and was there 'shut up like a caged bird' for two years, till reduced by famine; meanwhile Tiglath captured 591 Syrian cities and every town of Israel except Samaria, overran Moab, Ammon, Philistia (penetrating even to Gaza and carrying off its gods; Hanun its king fled into Egypt), and Edom; Samsi, renegade queen of Arabia, he suffered to retain her kingdom under surveillance (Inscr.).—[Cities.] Named before (1 Sam. 6. 19; chs. 25. 23 & 11. 7, 10; Josh. 15. 41; Judg. 14. 1), except Gimzo, probably Jimzu, near Lydda.—[Low country. . south.] i.e. the Shephelah and the Negeb.—[Villages.] R.V. towns; literally, daughters. 19. Israel.] Cf. 1 Kin. 11. 42, note.—[Made . . . naked.] R.V. had dealt wantonly (margin, cast away restraint) in Judah. Heb. for 'naked' is not the same as in v. 15. Ahaz made Judah unfaithful to Jehovah by encouraging or introducing superstitious practices (Isa. 2. 6 & 8. 19) and foreign idolatries, esp. Moloch worship (2 Kin. 16. 3) and star worship (v. 24, note, p. 464).—[Transgressed.] Not the ordinary word; it means be faithless.

2 K. xvi.—7. Thy servant . . . thy son.] The title of David and that of the Davidic king, as the earthly representative of Jehovah (2 Sam. 7. 8, 14).—[Rise.] Rather, are risen. 2 C. xxviii.—20. Distressed.] The word means reduced him to straits.—[Strengthened him not.] He had no such purpose; cf. Kin. xv. 9, 29, notes. R.V. margin, renders 'unto' by against, and strengthened by prevailed against, and of his distress (v. 22) by that he (i.e. Tiglath-pileser) distressed him.

[2 C. xxviii. 19, 20.]

After his victories, the great king seems to have exacted further gifts or concessions of independence from Ahaz (2 Kin. 16. 10, 17, 18).

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. xv.—29.—[Came.] Pekah submitted early, leaving Damascus isolated (Schrader). While blockading it, Tiglath-pileser overran first, Transjordanic Israel, Ammon and Moab, and then Philistia; after Damascus fell, b.c. 732, he captured Samaria, and slew Pekah (Sayer).—[Took.] Tiglath annexed all N. N.E., and Transjordanic Israel, thus fulfilling Amos 6. 14. On the scene of the successes of Jeroboam II., a deeper humiliation befel Israel than even Hazael had inflicted: Israel was reduced to a petty kingdom of Samaria, cp. Isa. 17. 2-6.—[Gilead.] Cp. 1 Chr. 5. 26. But Sept. Galaan, i.e. probably the later Gaulanitis, E. and N.E. of the Sea of Galilee. W. and N.W. of this sea, Naphtali lay exposed; cf. Judg. 6. 35; 1 Kin. 15. 20; Isa. 9. 1, note (p. 457). The Galil or margin (1 Kin. 9. 11, note, p. 239, pl. 'borders,' R.V. regions) was now some border district; perhaps a limited section of Naphtali.—[Carried them captive.] To Halah, Habor, Hara, and the river Gozan, 1 Chr. 5. 26; cf. 2 Kin. 17. 6, notes. Tiglath-pileser records that he successfully invaded Media. It was he who 'first used to any great extent the plan of transporting large sections of hostile populations to other countries and of mixing the various races under his sway.'—In his reign also the Phœnician or old Jewish alphabet and language began to be much used in commercial affairs; Assyrian weights and contract documents after this period have often inscriptions in Phœnician as well as Assyrian' (G. Smith).

AHAZ—(Isaiah, Micah).PEKAH—(Hosea).The cost of Assyrian protection.—Fall of the Syrian Kingdom.

2 KINGS xvi. 8-18.

<sup>10</sup> And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof.

<sup>11</sup> And Urijah the priest built an altar according to all that king Ahaz had sent from Damascus: so Urijah the priest made it against king

<sup>21</sup> For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

<sup>22</sup> And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

<sup>23</sup> For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him: and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that <sup>g</sup> they may help me. But they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

Such application of the sacred treasures was not accounted sacrilege. 9, Hearkened.] Gladly, for some superstitious awe attached to Judah; her voluntary submission, moreover, would make the conquest of her neighbours easier. See note, p. 462. Ahaz thus hastened the ruin of the sister-kingdom. —Kir.] As yet unidentified. Cf. Amos 9. 7. As Isaiah (22. 6) associates Kir with Elam, probably part of Mesopotamia is meant (Cheyne). Thus Amos 1. 5; Isa. 8. 4 & 17. 3, were fulfilled. 10, Tiglath-pileser.] Tiglath-pileser (Chr.) is less correct. Tiglath names 23 kings, including Jotham (Ahaz), who attended at Damascus to do him homage and pay tribute.—It.] Rather, the, i.e. the most notable altar in Damascus: probably in the Temple of Rimmon (2 Kin. 5. 18), Ahaz having previously adopted the gods of Damascus. —Sent.] The frivolous and superstitious Ahaz was full of the artistic and religious curiosities he had seen. But Rawlinson suggests that the altar was Assyrian, 'connected with that formal recognition of the Assyrian deities which the Ninevite monarchs appear to have required of all the nations received into their Empire.' If so, the adoption of this altar was involved in Ahaz' vassalage. The altar would perhaps be of the kind depicted as portable, narrow, and five or six feet high. The Assyrians carried such to every conquered place. If so, the copy was on a large scale, for Solomon's brazen altar was 15 ft. high and 30 ft. square, yet the king calls the new 'the great altar;' also in v. 13 Sept. reads ἰεροκύριον, Urijah (cf. Isa. 8. 2) placed it in front, i.e. E. of the brazen altar (v. 14). No doubt Ahaz scientified and idolatrous; e.g. the sundial of Ahaz, ch. 20. 11, and the house-top altars for star-worship, ch. 23. 12.

2 C. xxviii.—21, Took, &c.] Rather, despoiled (omit out of).—He.] Rather, it. The Assyrian protectorate was attended with far-reaching (p. 451, note) and disastrous consequences to Judah. Ahaz instituted these sacrifices thinking, like most of his contemporaries, the traditional worship of Jehovah not incompatible with the cultus of foreign deities (Bull). Apparently his treatment of the Temple was (cf. Jos. Ant. ix. 12. 3) as much due to anger against God, as to desire to raise money to bribe and to satisfy Tiglath. —Because.] Vulg., omits

AHAB—(Isaiah, Micah).HOSHEA—(Hosea).

139.—Conspiracy of Hoshea.—Hoshea slays Pekah.

2 KINGS XV. 30, 31.

<sup>30</sup> AND Hoshea the son of Elah made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.
<sup>31</sup> And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

190.—Reign of Hoshea.—Invasion by Shalmaneser IV.

2 KINGS XVII. 1-3.

<sup>2</sup> And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

[ISRAEL.] 2 K. XV.—30. Conspiracy. Some think that Tiglath-pileser left Pekah on the throne, but in an inscription he says: Pekah their king I slew, Hoshea over them I appointed. Possibly Pekah, after Tiglath's departure, reverted to his anti-Assyrian policy and sided (as Hoshea later, ch. 17, 4) with the party which was leaning—perhaps since Menahem's reign—towards Egypt (Hos. 7, 11, 12 & 12, 1), and so provoked further intervention. At any rate, Hoshea obtained or secured his throne by submission to Tiglath, but he appears to have rebelled by withholding tribute from Tiglath's successor, Shalmaneser IV. (ch. 17, 3, 4).—Slew. Foretold Isa. 7, 16. The murders of Pekah, Pekahiah, Shallum, and Zachariah, are alluded to in Hos. 8, 4 & 7.—Twentieth. i.e. of Jotham's regency (he reigned 16 years, r. 33) = 4th of Ahaz. But (ch. 17, 1) Hoshea's reign began in the 12th of Ahaz. This implies eight years at least of anarchy and interregnum (cp. Hos. 10, 3, 7, 15); so Usher; but see rs. 1, 2, 27, notes, pp. 428, 445. Modern research tends to shorten the period between the death of Jeroboam II. and Samaria's fall by one half. The received chronology is seriously discredited by the Assyrian, recently discovered (see foot-note, p. 466); but the facts of the history are authenticated throughout by the inscriptions (Schrader).

2 K. xvii.—1. Twelfth. Cf. ch. 15, 30, note.—Nine. Rather, a nd reigned nine. 2. Not. Perhaps, as contrasted with Pekah especially, he did less violence to national feeling and the principles of the Theocracy. Or he may have discommenced the worship of Baal and Asherah. Possibly, as the Seder Olam states—if we may assume that the golden calf of Bethel was taken to Assyria as Hoshea's gift to his suzerain, and Hos. 10, 5 thus fulfilled—Hoshea did not restore the Calf-worship of Bethel. Several passages in Hoshea seem to point to some yearning, albeit too late and not wholly sincere, after a truer worship, a nearer approach to God; he says (ch. 5, 6), 'they shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek Jehovah;' he adds, 'yet they shall not find Him'; still God will be unto the house of Ephraim 'as a moth' (slowly destroying), 'as a lion' (shachal = one whose roar terrifies); and no Helper-king—perhaps Jareb (Hos. 5, 13 & 10, 6)=the king of Assyria—shall deliver. With the nation (however it might be with the king) the signs of penitence were unreal; 'Ephraim saw his sickness,' but sought help of Assyria or Egypt rather than of God. The pride of royal Ephraim, Jeroboam's tribe, the tribe that undertook to rival David's Throne and Solomon's Temple, was humbled; their Calf's protection was proved valueless; as a 'present' (minchah in r. 3, as at Hos. 10, 6) it might purchase condescending recognition by a haughty power, but it could bring back no golden days of glory and prosperity. Their Bethel (Hos. 10, 5) was become Beth-aven (house of vanity), and they knew it; Ichabod, the glory is departed; 'yet (God declares, Hos. 7, 14) they have not cried unto Me with their heart;' He describes their conduct as despairing, sullen, angry; they have no real desire to return to 'higher, better things; they are untrustworthy as 'a bow' that will not shoot straight, fit only to be flung away; worthless as 'a cake not turned,' witless as 'a silly dove,' wilful as 'a wild ass;' not for two centuries would the day come, to which even now a gracious God delighted to look forward, when they will acknowledge their God will no more, for the present, come forth as their champion and protector. 3. Against.] Hoshea apparently withheld the tribute on Tiglath-pileser's death. — Shalmaneser.] i.e. Shalman (the god) helps or be gracious. If it was Shalmaneser who (Hos. 10. 14) defeated Israel near Betharbel (a place not yet identified: two places E. and one W. of Jordan are suggested), Hoshea's ready submission would be explained; the bow of Israel was 'broken in the valley of Jezreel' (Hos. 1. 5). Shalmaneser, says Josephus (Ant. ix. 14. 2), made war on Tyre. It held out five years, which caused Hoshea to intrigue with Egypt (v. 4). Shalmaneser IV. appears in the Canon of Eponyms as reigning five years, from 727 B.C. (see foot-note), and as making three foreign expeditions.—Presents.] Heb. minchah, cf. v. 2, note. Probably a present in the first instance, followed by a yearly tribute. Thus for the second time (cf. ch. 15. 19) is it proved true 'Ephraim hath hired lovers' (Hos. 8. 9), i.e. allies.

[JUDAH.] 2 K. xvi.—20. Son.] Adopted son (Thomson). If Ahaz died at the age of 36 (v. 2; 2 Chr. 28. 1), and Hezekiah was then 25 (ch. 18. 2; 2 Chr. 29. 1), Ahaz was only by 11 years his 'son's' senior—2 Chr. 28. 3 suggests that he left himself without direct heir.

2 C. xxviii.—26. And of all.] R.V. omits of. 27. In the city, even in Jerusalem.] If this reading be correct (Sept. has, as Kin. v. 20, city of David), it is noteworthy in its bearing on Fergusson's supposition, that frequently 'Jerusalem' is used as of something to be distinguished from 'city of David' (i.e. Zion; cf. 2 Sam. 5. 7; 1 Chr. 11. 5-8), e.g. Ps. 132. 13; Isa. 60. 14; Jer. 31. 6; Joel 3. 21. The position of these tombs depends on the correctness of this supposition, on whether (so Tristram) Zion be the S.W. hill (separated from Moriah, the N.E. hill, by the Tyropæon valley); or whether (so Fergusson, Cheyne, and Thrupp) Zion be identical with Moriah or inclusive of it (cf. p. 87, note). Jehoram was buried 'in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings' (ch. 21. 20), presumably in the same burial-ground where Uzziah was afterwards laid, 'in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings' (ch. 26. 23); there Ahaz, the moral leper, the mentally diseased one, joined them. Cf. 1 Kin. 2. 10, note.—But.] R.V. for.—Israel.] Cf. 1 Kin. 11. 42, note.

ISAIAH XIV. 28—32 &amp; XIX. 23—25 &amp; XX.

Tiglath-pileser's death (B.C. 727), which probably synchronised nearly with that of Ahaz, would be a signal to Assyria's new vassals to rebel, and the monuments show that Hoshea's rebellion (pp. 466, 482) was part of a general ferment in Syria and Palestine, from Hamath and Arpad to Gaza, fomented by Egypt (p. 482, note), which lasted during Shalmaneser's reign (B.C. 727–722, Annals) and two-thirds of that of his successor, Sargon. The present section covers this insurrectionary period. Inscriptions of Shalmaneser are wanting (p. 466, note), but Josephus (Ant. ix. 14. 2) records two revolts of Phœnicia, and two expeditions by Shalmaneser against her, also an unsuccessful siege of Tyre, which lasted 5 years (i.e. until after Samaria's fall). Sargon's palace, however, lately discovered at Khorsabad, near Nineveh, has yielded a full outline of his reign (B.C. 722–705). Sargon records, besides the capture of Samaria and abolition of the N. kingdom in B.C. 721, the suppression of a rebellion of Hamath and its neighbours under Ihubid (or Jaubid), followed by a crushing defeat of Hannu (Hannu), King of Gaza, and So, King of Egypt, at Raphia, in B.C. 720 (p. 483, note), after which So became his tributary, also the suppression of a revolt headed by Ashdod, in which Judah was at least implicated, in B.C. 711 (p. 468). Isaiah in Judah, as Hosea in Israel (see p. 481, notes), but with characteristic vigour, exposed the delusiveness of Egyptian promises (ch. 20) and the unreasonableness of the expectations of the Egypt-party (scornful men, cp. ch. 28. 14–22), describing Samaria's ruin as imminent (ib. 1–4).

1. xiv.—28. Burden. Rather, utterance (oracle, R.V. marg.). Some reject this verse as implying that Ahaz is the broken rod (cf. r. 29), as a compiler's mistaken addition. Many interpret it of the last year of Ahaz, his death-year, B.C. 727, and place Hezekiah's accession in Nisan of B.C. 726 (2 Chr. 29. 3). —On Isaiah's prophecies from chs. 9. 8 to 14. 27, see Appendix; now (chs. 14. 28 to 19. 22) Isaiah seems to foretell Assyria's victories over Philistia, Moab, Damascus and Ephraim, Ethiopia and Egypt, while promising security to Zion and the survival and restoration of Ephraim. 29. Whole. Rather, entire, Var., all of thee, R.V. Cf. notes, 1 Sam. 14. 52; 2 Chr. 26. 6 (p. 429). Philistia and Phœnicia, which were closely connected with each other in politics as in trade, were at this period hot-beds of opposition to Assyria. And Philistia, because of its close geographical connection with Egypt and Tyre, and of its plains on which cavalry and chariots could be freely used, was the focus of revolt.—Palestina. Rather, Philistia (so r. 31), Heb. Pelasteth, whence the Greek Palestine.—The rod, &c. Some identify the rod and the serpent with Ahaz, but others with an Assyrian king—in either case identifying the cockatrice and flying serpent with an Assyrian king. Others recognize in the three snakes three personages, either Hebrew or Assyrian. If the Hebrew power be meant, the first serpent might be Uzziah (2 Chr. 26. 6), then Hezekiah, his grandson, would be the most destructive successor (2 Kin. 18. 8), and Ahaz, the cockatrice. If so, Ahaz must be regarded as having smitten the Philistines, either through his ally Tiglath-pileser, or directly, during their weakness after Tiglath-pileser's invasion. Taking the rod to be that of Jesse (ch. 11. 1), the Targum interprets that 'Uzziah's direct line fails, but Hezekiah's rises,' a reference to the supposed childlessness of Ahaz (2 Chr. 28. 3); but others find in the three snakes (1) Ahaz, (2) Hezekiah, (3) the ideal king of ch. 11. 1–9. More probably the Assyrian power alone (2 Kin. 18. 8) is meant (as in v. 31: cp. ch. 10. 5), and three successive Assyrian kings are described (cp. ch. 27. 1), viz. Tiglath-pileser, Sargon, and Sennacherib. Kay applies 'broken' to Tiglath-pileser's death in B.C. 727, but Cheyne (setting aside r. 28) to Sargon's murder in B.C. 705.—Cockatrice. Heb. Qeteph a; perhaps the great yellow viper (Daboia xanthina). 'Flying' is poetic merely. 30. Firstborn of the poor. Even the poorest—those who inherit the double portion—but of poverty. —North.] Thence the Assyrians would come. The 'smoke' is interpreted of burning villages, beacons or camp fires, or of the dust raised by an army.—

None . . . in.] Rather, there shall be no stragglers in his troops, Far, (so practically R.V. marg.).

R.V. none standeth aloof at his appointed times. Joel (2. 7) illustrates the irresistibility and perfect organization of Assyrian armies (cp. ch. 5. 26-30).

32. One.] i.e. the prophet, when consulted—whether by Judah, Philistia, or Assyria (ch. 37. 22) is doubtful. Perhaps Philistia was seeking Judah's co-operation in a scheme of revolt.—

Founded.] Cp. ch. 28. 14-22. Here, perhaps, he rather contemplates Jehovah's kingdom as the only one unmoveable by the overflowing scourge (cp. ch. 8. 8, 14).—

The poor, &c.] R.V. in her shall the afflicted of his people take refuge. Jehovah's city, if faithful, must enjoy Jehovah's protection.

In chs. 19 & 20 Isaiah seems to combat the new Egypt-party in Judah by foretelling a collapse in Egypt through internal dissensions, and the defeat by Assyria of the united armies of Egypt and Ethiopia. And (ch. 19. 24) he seems to comfort his 'disciples' (ch. 8. 16) by an assurance of the preservation of all Israel to fulfil her vocation (Gen. 12. 3). Chap. 7. 18, 19 is being fulfilled, but Isaiah, rising above party strife and war, points to a golden age in which these shall have ceased, when Egypt and Assyria (affliction-taught, chs. 19 & 10. 12) and Israel shall all be God's People, sharing the sacred titles peculiar to Israel.

I. xix.—This prophecy is plausibly associated with Sargon's defeat of So at Raphia in B.C. 720, which, according to Maspero, was followed by general disunion in Egypt. A state paper of King Piankhi (p. 490, note, Hanes) shows that all Lower Egypt was now divided amongst princes of Nomes (so Sept., v. 2; A.V. kingdom), whose connexion with their suzerain, the Ethiopian king of Upper Egypt, was nominal and precarious, see p. 481, note.

23. Abruptly, Isaiah foretells the conversion of Israel's oppressors (ch. 52. 4) to the true religion.—

That day.] When Jehovah, the universal Sovereign, shall be (Var., R.V. marg., make himself) known to Egypt by the teaching of calamity (v. 22), as to Assyria by her final overthrow in His land (ch. 14. 24-27).—

Highway.] i.e. communication uninterrupted by war (cp. Exod. 13. 17). Primarily fulfilled when Esar-haddon and Assurbanipal annexed Egypt.—

Serve.] Rather, worship, as in 2 Kin. 10. 19, &c. (do sacrifice and oblation, v. 21), i.e. to Jehovah in Zion (cp. 2 Chr. 32. 23; Zech. 14. 16-19). 24. The third.] The other two being incorporated in the ideal kingdom of God.—

My people.] Cp. Hos. 2. 1; p. 435. Doubtless many Hebrews took refuge in Egypt during the Assyrian invasions. Later, Alexandria and Babylon became the centres of the Jewish Dispersion.—

The . . . hands.] i.e. My instrument (chs. 10. 5, 15 & 37. 26), or, the new creation of My Spirit.—

Inheritance.] Israel (the 12 tribes) shall retain this proud pre-eminence.

I. xx.—1, The year.] Sargon's 11th year in the Assyrian Records, but probably his 9th (B.C. 711) Konyanjik Inscr. Sargon's victory at Raphia (B.C. 720) secured the submission of Syria and Palestine, but he records that later, Azuri, King of Ashdod, revolted, whereupon he made his brother Ahimuti, or Ahimut, king. The anti-Assyrian faction, however, deposed Sargon's nominee, and made one Yavan (or Yaman) king, who formed a league with his neighbours and invoked Egypt's support (see p. 483, note). Sargon, who boasts of his rapidity, invaded Philistia and besieged Ashdod, which, being unrelieved by Egypt, capitulated. Yavan fled to Napata, the Ethiopian capital, but Pharaoh made his peace with Sargon by surrendering Yavan. Judah doubtless sympathised, but Hezekiah—whether overawed by Sargon or dissuaded by Isaiah—seems to have remained inactive; possibly he gave such assurances as justified Sargon's claim to be 'the subjeetor' of Judah.

—Tartan.] Rather, the tartan, the title of the Assyrian Commander-in-Chief (cf. p. 507, note), who ranked next after the king.—Ashdod.] See p. 429, note. The Assyrians seem to have retained Ashdod until its capture by Psammitichus in Josiah's reign.—Sargon.] Named here only—a favourite objection against the inspiration of Scripture, until the recent discovery of his palace (pp. 467, 483, notes). Sargon was Sennacherib's father. 2, Sackcloth.] The prophet's mantle of camel's hair (Matt. 3. 4).—Naked. i.e. without the outer garment, the mantle. But probably Isaiah's symbolic adoption of the condition of a prisoner of war lasted three years, i.e. till events justified his protest or the temptation to revolt ceased. The three years might include a siege preceding Azuri's deposition, and the siege of the text (which lasted part only of a year, G. Smith); or, they might comprise the latter siege, and the two years following, during which Sargon was wholly engrossed with Merodach-baladan's rebellion in Babylon. Upon Merodach-baladan's capture by Sargon, in 709 B.C. (p. 483), this temptation to revolt would cease.—Wonder.] Rather, portent, Var. (so Vulg.).—Ethiopia.] Heb. Cush, S. of Syene (Ezek. 29. 10). It included the little kingdom of Napata (Meroe) whose kings Ptaukhi (p. 490, note) and So conquered Egypt. Probably the Ashdod confederacy is meant; Sargon records that 'the people of Philistia, Judah, Edom, and Moab dwelling by the sea . . . were speaking treason . . . to Pharaoh, a prince who could not save them, their presents carried and sought his alliance.' The strip of inhabited country between the Syrian and Arabian deserts and the sea would seem a coastland to the Assyrian king.—Such.] i.e. Thus hath it fared with our expected helper, and, if so, how, &c.—Flee.] Var. fled.

What feeling in the mind of Ahaz might it express? Was it mere conformity to custom, or a temporary outburst of higher aspiration? 2, Twenty-five.] Cf. ch. 16. 2, note.—Abi.] Abijah (Chr. v. 1), Jehovah is a father, would be a more likely female name.—Zachariah.] In this casual mention of Zachariah as Hezekiah's grandfather we have an incidental proof that Isaiah's prophecy is contemporary, and is no forgery. Isaiah names (Isa. 8. 2) Urijah and Zachariah as the two witnesses chosen, as persons connected with, and likely to be trusted by, Ahaz, and does not take care (as a forger would have done, whether they were so, or not) to explain that they are the Urijah of ch. 16. 16 and this Zachariah, whose positions plainly make them suitable witnesses. 3, Right. . . David.] The best king since 2 Sam. 8. 15, yet not a perfect character; he approached the standard, but was not the ideal king of David's 'last words.' No 'wives turned away his heart after other gods,' as Solomon's; he joined himself with no Abaziah, 'who did very wickedly,' as Jehoshaphat; he was never God-forsaking and God-forsaken as Joash was (2 Chr. 24. 20); he set up no gods of Edom to be his gods, as Amaziah did. Apparently this was not due to natural character; though distinguished in literature, and magnificence in taste (probably beyond any other king of Judah), he was rash, too easily elated by prosperity, unduly (almost childishly) depressed by sickness or trouble, open to flattery, given to display; nevertheless the record, 'Did that which was right,' remains like a golden thread woven into the web of his life; he 'trusted in the Lord'; he 'clave to the Lord': if this was in any degree due to early training, it was not to the tone of the Court. He may have owed much to the influence of Isaiah, to the warning language of Micah, but probably more to the teaching of his grandfather (v. 2).—Sight.] R.V. eyes (and so Chr.).

M. iii.—9-12.] Jeremiah (26. 18, 19, p. 556) records that v. 12 was uttered publicly during Hezekiah's reign, and brought about such national penitence and reformation as procured a respite for Judah: the time can hardly have been other than now. If this prophecy was not the direct cause of Hezekiah's Reformation (2 Chr. 29. 10), it must at least have assisted the king greatly. Micah here recapitulates the national sins (chs. 2. 1-3. 8), and strikes at the root of the false confidence of the official classes in Judah, viz. that the presence of Jehovah within the Temple protected Jerusalem (cp. ch. 1. 5, 9, notes, p. 449) from punishment. The priesthood and prophethood of Judah misled the people by teaching (cp. Jer. 7. 3-15) that Jehovah must exert His power against the enemies of His people (Assyria, ch. 5. 5), must save His Sanctuary from profanation.—Jacob.] i.e. all Israel (ch. 1. 5, note).—Princes.] Rather, rulers (Heb. as Isa. 1. 10)—esp. the secular

196.—The Great Passover.—Hezekiah Invites all Israel.

2 CHRONICLES XXX.

<sup>1</sup> AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

<sup>6</sup> So the posts went with the letters from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, <sup>d</sup> turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and

It is said of the last king Hoshea that he did evil, 'but not as the kings of Israel that were before him'; it is probable, therefore, that he would not at any rate interdict acceptance of this invitation; Jewish tradition says that he encouraged acceptance, removing the frontier guards lest they should hinder any; and adds that as Shalmaneser had carried away the Calf from Dan, the N. tribes of Israel were readier to accept than the S. tribes. 2. Second month.] Instead of the first of the year (Num. 9. 1-5); the king judging that a cause of postponement lawful for an individual (Num. 9. 9-12) was lawful also for a people under the circumstances stated in v. 3.

[2 C. xxx. 1-6.]

The motive makes or mays any deed: a similar postponement (of the Israelitish Feast of Tabernacles) by Jeroboam was reprobated (1 Kin. 12. 33). In fact, the Temple itself was not cleansed until two days after the 14th of Nisan (ch. 29. 17), the lawful day for the Passover; for a similar exceptional reason the Levites were suffered to perform the offerers' functions (v. 17). 3. At that time.] i.e. immediately after the reforms recorded in ch. 29.—Sufficiently.] R.V. in sufficient number. 5. From Beer-sheba to Dan.] In which direction the couriers from Judah would naturally travel; they did not actually reach Dan (v. 10).—Done . . . sort.] Rather, been keeping it in full numbers, i.e. as one united people; the meaning is plain from the use of the word (hārōb) in v. 13, 'much people,' and v. 24, 'a great number': R.V. in great numbers (so we say, 'in their thousands').—As it was written.] Joash used a similar expression in his invitation, 'Keep the passover as it is written in the book of this covenant' (i.e. the book just found by Hilkiah); Ex. 12. 3 prescribed the manner, Deut. 16. 2 the place, of observance. 6. Posts.] Lit. runners (Sept. οἱ τρέχοντες; Vulg. cursores); rendered 'footmen,' 1 Sam. 22. 17; 'guard,' 1 Kin. 14. 27; some of the body-guard.—From.] i.e. by authority of.—And.] *Sept. <sup>10</sup> So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but <sup>11</sup>they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them. <sup>11</sup> Nevertheless <sup>12</sup>divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

<sup>14</sup> And they arose and took away the <sup>15</sup>altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

<sup>15</sup> Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were <sup>16</sup>ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD. <sup>16</sup> And they stood in their place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites. <sup>17</sup> For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: <sup>18</sup>therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.

That the Chronieler, specially the upholder of the externals of religion, records this acceptance of 'spirit and truth' in lieu of exactitude in ritual, is noteworthy. <sup>21</sup> Loud. Sept. ἐν ὀργάνοις; Vulg. per organa; Germ. mit starken saiten-spielen: Ital. The word frequently means praise, thanksgiving (cf. ch. 31. 2), 'the crowning part of confession' (Rom. 15. 9); Vulg. has confiterentur in ch. 31. 2. <sup>23</sup> Other seven days. Cp. 1 Kin. 8. 65 and v. 26; one reason was that the rich had so abundantly (v. 24) supplied the poor with offerings, that enough remained over for another week's feast; cf. Exod. 36. 5. Note the readiness of the priests on this occasion. <sup>25</sup> Strangers. Not the Israelite settlers of ch. 11. 16 & 15. 9, but foreign proselytes (so Sept. and Vulg.); circumcision was required of them (Exod. 12. 48). <sup>26</sup> Not the like. The ritual at Josiah's Passover (2 Kin. 23. 21-23) was more exact, and in that respect it surpassed Hezekiah's.

2 CHRONICLES XXXI.

<sup>1</sup> Now when all this was finished, all Israel that were present went out to the cities of Judah, and <sup>a</sup>brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

The Priesthood and Levites reinstated.—Tithes, &c., paid.

<sup>3</sup> He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the <sup>d</sup>law of the LORD.

distribute among (v. 15) the Levites dwelling in the priestly cities their share of the offerings; and also among (v. 19) the priests dwelling in the pasture-lands ('suburbs,' to the breadth of 1,000 cubits) surrounding those cities. Of priests, men only (presumably over 30, the age for office) received the priestly portion; of Levites, all whose names were on the register. These portions of the Levites were over and above (v. 16) what those on duty received at Jerusalem per head, for themselves and their families, who, being (males) over three but under 20, were not allowed to officiate, yet were recognized if duly registered. And the registers for priests and Levites were (vs. 17, 18) kept on different principles; of the former only the heads of the families were enrolled; of the latter the entire families, male and female. 2 K. xviii.—4. Removed, &c. Thus completing in calmness the reformation, the enthusiastic commencement of which is described in 2 Chr. 31. 1. The bāmōth of God (pp. 195-6) had answered some of the purposes of the later synagogues, supplying a want keenly felt by the rural districts. They had never been removed till now, having practically been sanctioned by Samuel, Eljah, David, Solomon, and all the later kings, who had less excuse. Very possibly country folk, shocked or inconvenienced by their removal, shared the rab-shakeh's idea (v. 22). Cf. 1 Kin. 15. 14; 1 Sam. 9. 12.—[Images, . . . groves.] Rather, pillars . . . as he has (1 Kin. 11. 5, note).—He called it. So Sept. and Fulg.; lit. It certainly is against the idea of the title being one of scorn, that it was used as a royal female name in the next century (ch. 24. 8). 5.] Compare the eulogy of Josiah, ch. 23. 25; each was unsurpassed in that which was his special characteristic, Hezekiah in trust and steadfastness (v. 6), the heroism of patience and faith, Josiah in strict observance of God's written law.

[ISRAEL.] H. xi.—12.] Lies. R.V. falsehood.—But, &c. According to this rendering (Sept., Fulg., Pusey, Huxtable, Drake, and R.V.), Hosea here contrasts the faith and unfaith of the sister-kingdoms. About Israel there is nothing of truth or constancy; on every side God is met by their hollowness; their very worship had been a lie; worldly policy erected the Calves, and hypocrisy veiled it with the cry, ‘This is thy God, O Israel—the God of the Exodus.’ Judah is far from faultless; their goodness may be confined to the few; God may have a controversy with them (v. 2), and (‘yet’ points to this) punishment may be impending; still, the sincerity of some among them, and especially of their king, justifies the expression in the latter half of the verse; God is owned, the dynasty and the hierarchy are those of God's appointment; Abijah's boast is true still (2 Chr. 13. 10-12). But the reading of Gesenius, Ewald, Keil, and others, and of R.V. marg., gives a totally different sense, and refers to the insincerity underlying the present reformation, the outward faithfulness of the people of Judah, viz. and Judah is yet defiant (or wayward) towards God (R.V. marg. unsteady with God), and towards the All-holy One who is faithful; cf. v. 2. A.V. marg. is faithful with the most holy (R.V. the Holy One). From hankering after foreign alliances (p. 434, note), Israel had proceeded to covenants and embassies, acts of mistrust of her Covenant God.

successor).—Egypt.] Little heard of since Jeroboam's day, Egypt now begins to play a prominent part in Bible history. Tiglath-pileser had (B.C. 734, Inscr.) penetrated to Gaza (p. 462, note) after breaking down all opposition in Syria and Philistia, and thus Assyria and Egypt came into contact once more (cp. Isa. 7. 18–19). So aimed at setting up a bulwark against Assyrian aggressiveness by encouraging the states between Egypt and the Ephrates to combine and throw off the Assyrian yoke. The consequent revolts outlasted the reign of Shalmaneser IV. (B.C. 727–722, Annals) and were not suppressed until the 11th year of his successor, Sargon (B.C. 711, Inscr.). Hezekiah seems to have held aloof from these political combinations and to have remained loyal to his suzerain until B.C. 711 at least (see Isa. 20. 1, note, p. 469), and probably until the revolt of Ekron in B.C. 701. But early in his reign, a party appears in Judah—as already in Israel (p. 434, note)—which sought to recover her independence by a revolt in alliance with Egypt, and its influence increased notwithstanding the opposition of Isaiah and the successes of Sargon at Raphia in B.C. 720 (p. 453, note) and at Ashdod in B.C. 711 (p. 469, note).—Brought.] R.V. offered.—Present.] Rather, tribute.—Shut him up.] Having captured him, we must suppose, in the open field, before Samaria fell; Sargon records that he took the city, but does not mention Hoshea. Sargon's Inscriptions, which do not mention Judah in his 2nd year, call him 'subjector' of Judah in his 11th, probably a reference to Judah's continued vassalage, for the view that Sargon then invaded Judah and captured Jerusalem, must now be abandoned (Cheyne, 1883). Pending further discoveries, it seems better to regard Hezekiah's 'rebellion' as deferred (probably by Isaiah's influence) until it became the cause of Sennacherib's invasion of Judah. 8. Smote the Philistines.] Both when Ashdod (B.C. 711) and when Ekron (B.C. 701) rebelled against Assyria with the aid of Egypt, Hezekiah seems (from the Inscriptions) to have been on friendly terms with Philistia.

<sup>10</sup> And at the end of three years they took it: even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, that is the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel, Samaria was taken.

naser iv, was assassinated during the time. In the palace of Sargon (see Isa. 20, 1) at Khorsabad this inscription is found, 'Samaria I besieged, I took; 27,280 men who dwelt in it I carried away.' Sargon may have headed the besieging army, in the capacity of 'tartan' (i.e. commander-in-chief and second person in the realm), before he usurped the throne. Note that, at ch. 18, 10, it is not said that Shalmaneser, but that the Assyrians, took Samaria. 6. King of Assyria.] According to the Assyrian Canon, this king was Sargon, who reigned from 722 to 705 B.C. During Sargon's absence in Palestine, Merodach-baladan, the Chaldean, succeeded in securing Babylon as an independent throne. The capture of Carchemish (involving the final overthrow of the Hittite power) was one of the greatest successes of Sargon's triumphant career. After Samaria's capture, having crushed, in B.C. 720, Hamath and her neighbours, he defeated the Philistines and Egyptians under Hanun, King of Gaza, and so, at Raphia—S. of Gaza, on the edge of the desert, four days' march from the Egyptian frontier at Pelusium (cp. Exod. 13, 17). He captured Hanun; so fled and became tributary to Assyria. Isaiah alludes to Sargon's expedition of B.C. 711 against 'Philistia (Ashdod), Judah, Edom, and Moab' (see Isa. 20, 1-5, p. 469). In 710 B.C., Merodach-baladan abandoned Babylon, and, by his submission in the next year, Sargon extended the dominion of Assyria from the frontier of Egypt to the Persian Gulf. He records the submission even of Cyprus. Sargon consolidated his conquests by vast transplantations of population. — Carried away.] From no lack of love or power on God's part, but (as vs. 7, 13, and ch. 18, 12 point out) because, notwithstanding all His long-suffering and appeals, they persisted in breaking the Covenant.

—Israel.] Not all the population, for Sargon records that he reimposed the former tribute; compare Nebuchadnezzar's treatment of Judah.—From 1 Chr. 5, 26, it appears that Tiglath-pileser had transplanted the Transjordanic tribes to Gozan. — [Halah.] A district of N.W. Mesopotamia. Probably the Chalcitis of Ptolemy, N. of Tiphshah, next to Gazuantitis. Vulg. (at ch. 18, 11) speaks of Halah as a river (probably the Mygdonius, Nahr-al-Hualli). — [In Habor.] Rather, on the Habor, the river of Gozan, i.e. the Chabour, which flows through Gazuantitis (Ptolemy)—a district probably called also Habor—into the Euphrates at Circesium. Lazard mentions the fertility of its banks. — [By.] Rather supply, on (Var., so R.V.). — [Gozan.] Shalmaneser's records mention Guzana in Mesopotamia; this would be the Gazuantitis of Ptolemy, i.e. the district of the river Chabour, about 100 miles W. of Nineveh. It alone contains all four names, Halah, Habor, Haran (see below), Gozan (Ravlinson). — [Cities of the Medes.] Replaced in 1 Chr. 5, 26 by Hara, which may mean mountain land, i.e. of Media (Var., so Sept., but R.V. as A.V.), or Haran (Gen. 11, 32, Lat. Carrher). These cities would be settled between Nineveh and the Caspian. Sargon records his settlement of colonies of strangers in cities which he built in Media. — [Medes.] The Madai (Gen. 10, 2) had settled S.W. of the Caspian, with Parthia on their E., Assyria and Armenia on their W. Tiglath-pileser, Sargon, Sennacherib, and Esarhaddon, invaded Media. Nominally Assyria's vassal, its power grew as Assyria declined. Under Cyaxares (B.C. 633, cf. Tobit 14, 15), the Medes, aided by the Babylonians under Nabopolassar, captured Nineveh, and overthrew the Assyrian Empire cir. 625 B.C. 2 K. xvii.—7. For so, &c.] Rather, And thus it happened, because (cf. ch. 18, 12). and <sup>14</sup> became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should <sup>15</sup> not do like them. <sup>16</sup> And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and <sup>17</sup> made them molten images, even two calves, <sup>18</sup> and made a grove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, <sup>19</sup> and served Baal. <sup>20</sup> And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and <sup>21</sup> used divination and enchantments, and <sup>22</sup> sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

Dispersed in groups between the R. Euphrates and the Caspian Sea, they doubtless gradually lost the bonds of a common descent and of a distinctive religion, especially through intermarriages. Such a people as Amos and Hosea describe would be little fitted to resist, on grounds of religion or morality, this natural tendency. Unlike Judah in exile later, the Ten Tribes had no definite promise of restoration as a separate people. Hosea (3. 4, 5 & 14. 4-7) had been enabled to promise them God's ultimate forgiveness, but only through reunion with Judah under a Davidic king (involving the abandonment of all that was distinctive in the national policy of Jeroboam i.). Any who remained true to their ancient hopes and faith, either returned to Judah with Zerubbabel and Ezra under the common name of 'Israelites' (1 Chr. 9. 2, 3; Ezra 6. 17); or of 'Jews' (Acts 2. 5), or were merged in the Dispersion of Judah in Western Asia (Acts 26. 7; Luke 2. 36; James 1. 1). No historian of Alexander's conquests, or of Roman, Parthian, and Persian expeditions names an alien nation of 'Israel.'

THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH.

201.—Judah, Threatened by Sennacherib, is Encouraged.—The Doom of Assyria.

2 CHRONICLES xxxii. 1; NAHUM i.

"2 Kin. 18. 13, &c.; Isa. 36. 1, &c.

2 C. xxxii.—1. The establishment thereof. R.V. and this faithfulness. What is meant, apparently, is the genuine thoroughness of the work of reformation; Sept. καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν ταύτην; Vulg. hujusmodi veritatem; Germ. treue. — Sennacherib. Sargon's younger son; according to the inscriptions he reigned from 705 to 681 B.C. Another son of Sargon, who was made king of Babylon, died, and was succeeded by Hagisa, whom Merodach-baladan murdered. Merodach was ejected by Sennacherib within three months. His invasion of Judah is dated 702 B.C. Menahem is described as ruling then in Samaria. Sennacherib mastering all the W. side of Palestine, took 46 fortified cities, sent 200,000 of their inhabitants into captivity, and (he says, using the same expression as Tiglath-pileser of Rezin) 'shut up Hezekiah in Jerusalem like a caged bird, and built towers round the city to attack it.' — Thought, &c.] A necessary strategic step towards his goal, viz. Egypt. — Wtn, &c.] R.V. marg. break up; Sennacherib succeeded in taking some, as both Kings and Isaiah affirm. While he was besieging Lachish Hezekiah purchases Sennacherib's promise of retirement; the promise is broken (Jos. Ant. x. 1. 1) by the Assyrian king, one of whose titles of pride is 'the observer of sworn faith,' and a force ('a great host,' 2 Kin. 18. 17; lit. heavy, i.e. numerous, force, as in Isa. 36. 2 also; Sept. ἐν δυνάμει βασιλῆα; Vulg. manu valida; however, 2 Kin. 18. 24 and v. 9 seem to point rather to a, perhaps imposingly, strong escort) is detached against Jerusalem, 'while Sennacherib himself goes to war against the Egyptians and Ethiopians.' See note on 'host,' 2 Kin. 18. 17. Note, that it is by resisting not by mollifying, by braving not by cringing before him, that our enemy is put to flight (Jas. 4. 7). [For the argument to show that Sennacherib twice invaded Judah, see Rawlinson (Anc. Mon. ii. 158, 168); for the contrary, see Birks (on Isaiah, p. 377) and Lenormant (Premières Civilisations, ii. 270-289); the mutilated state of the inscriptions prevents their deciding the point; but on the chronological questions involved a valuable dissertation is to be found in Cheyne's introduction to Isa. 36 (vol. i. p. 201).] At this crisis Nahum's voice was calculated to bring comfort. He uttered doom on Nineveh, in a prophecy which may be called a sequel to Jonah's (showing, that, if there be relapse after penitence and mercy, tarrying judgment comes at length); but his utterance was in Judah and for Judah. His name means consolation; he tells trembling Judah that she has no cause to be fearful, for God, 'jealous' of his own honour, will undoubtedly 'avenge' his people. Generally there is 'a want of perspective in Hebrew prophecy, which causes near and far to come together into something like one plane in the written oracle.' Nahum's prophecy is no exception. He seems to point (1) to Sennacherib's utter discomfiture (2 Kin. 19. 35), and also (2) to Assyria's final ruin; and the 'good tidings' he speaks of (1. 15) can scarcely fail (comp. Isa. 52. 7) to carry our thoughts (3. 4) to those days as well, when spiritual Israelites shall approach unbidden a spiritual Jerusalem, and when the 'wicked' shall cease from troubling, and the weary be at rest beneath the sway of a Prince of 'peace,' i.e. to the Gospel-day, and, that which it foreshadows, the 'kingdom come.'

NAHUM, the Barnabas (Acts 4. 36) of prophecy, for sublimity, fire, and boldness of imagination, stands first among the Minor Prophets.

N. i. — 1. Burden. Rather, doom; cf. 2 Kin. 9. 25, note. — Nineveh. Isaiah (10 & 14) speaks of the overthrow of Assyria, but does not name Nineveh. — Vision. The prophetic Writer is always Seer also, the Speaker may or may not be so (e.g. Balaam, Nathan). Comp. the expression in Isa. 2. 1, 'The word which Isaiah saw;' the propriety of which is apparent if we refer ourselves to the mental process which takes place in meditating upon any important truth, especially while the vividness of the first discovery lasts; and its propriety becomes still more obvious as we read there the various pictures of military power, maritime commerce, wealth, luxury, pride, selfishness, and irreligion, of political misgovernment, anarchy, and decay, and of ultimate reform and restoration; or read here descriptions equally graphic of God's majestic dealings, and the advance of His armies to do His work of destruction and the desolation of an imperial city. No man could so describe who had not first had his eyes 'open' (Num. 24. 4). — Elkoshite. Alkosh, near Mosul, boasts a tomb of Nahum, and the fitness of his living within sight of the city whose doom he uttered has disposed some (since the 16th century) to assign that as his birthplace. Jerome assigns Elkosh (which cannot now be identified) in Galilee (Capernaum = village of Nahum), which would now be in the hands of the Assyrians; and the language of this prophecy would well suit an Israelite who had escaped the recent captivity (alluded to in v. 9) and dwelt in Judah; e.g. the mention (v. 4) of Carmel and Lebanon, and (to which Payne Smith calls attention) the use of a phrase (ch. 3. 2) for prancing, or charging, horses (referring to the circling motion of their feet in galloping) which is elsewhere used only by the Northern prophets Deborah (Judg. 5. 22). 2.] R.V. The Lord is a jealous God and avenger; the Lord avengeth and is full of wrath, &c. 3. Acquit the wicked. R.V. clear the guilty. 5. Is burned. Rather, lifteth itself up ('Ariorum); R.V. is upheaved; the verb may mean take away, here and in 2 Sam. 5. 21. 6. Thrown down. R.V. broken asunder. 8. But. Behold the goodness and severity of God. — Flood. Abundant traces of destruction by fire have been found at Nineveh, to which there is allusion in v. 10 and ch. 3. 13, 15; but there is no sign of any breach having been made in the walls by water; yet this is further alluded to in ch. 2. 6, 'The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved.' 'There was an old prophecy that Nineveh should not be taken till the river became an enemy to the city,' writes Diodorus (ii. 27), adding that when the Tigris so flooded as to break down 20 stadia of the wall, the king, abandoning hope, burnt himself, his wealth, his palace, and his family. Whether by fire or by water, the destruction by the Medo-Babylonian army should be complete and final; 'a full end' (R.V.) is repeated (v. 9); 'affliction' shall have no cause to strike a second blow. The last mention of Nineveh as an existing city is in Zeph. 2. 13. She has continued 'a desolation' to this day. — Thereof. i.e. of Nineveh. — Darkness, &c. Rather, shall pursue his

Smith, Assyria*, p. 161) shall be 'bruised' past healing, 'wounded' beyond cure, when all the nations shall exult in her downfall. In ch. 2. 1 Payne Smith sees rather encouraging advice to Jerusalem to prepare to withstand Sennacherib, than a taunting recommendation to Nineveh. However that may be, for Nineveh Nahum has no message of consolation; comforters for her are sought (he says) in vain (ch. 3. 7). Her penitence in the days of Jonah died never to be revived. Her doom is irrevocable. The prophet has not now to dwell upon the fact that God is gracious and merciful (Jonah 4. 2), but that He is a God of severity and vengeance; if his words ever reached her at all, this 'Comforter' would only 'convict' (John 16. 8) Nineveh 'of judgment.' The approach of the 'Devastator' is very grandly described; we seem to see before us the red shields and dresses of the Medo-Babylonian soldiery, the chariots gleaming with scythes of burnished steel, the brandished fir-spears, the hasty defence, the diverting of the water-courses, the ineffectual rally, the insult and the plunder, the conflagration. One verse (ch. 3. 8) demands notice, both on account of the incorrect rendering of A.V., and of the chronological question to which it gives rise. The prophet warns Nineveh that the fate of 'populous No, situate among the rivers,' awaited her. This should be rendered (so Variorum) 'No of Amon (i.e. the city of Amen, the solar god, viz. Thebes, which stands on both banks of the Nile, known as Diospolis, or city of Jupiter Ammon) enthroned on the Nile-canals.<sup>1</sup> Plainly he is speaking of its destruction as an event fresh in men's minds—if as a future event, which would be fresh in the Ninevites' minds in the day of their doom, the date here assigned to Nahum (which accords with Wright's view) may be correct; if as an event lately happened when he wrote, Nahum's prophecy must have been uttered many years later: for Nineveh (?) fell 625 B.C., and Thebes (under Nudammon, son of Tirhakah's sister) only succumbed finally to the armies of Assurbanipal (= Sardanapalus, son of Esarhaddon), who reigned 668-620 B.C., whose first expedition into Egypt took place at the very commencement of his reign (when Tirhakah, recovered from his defeat by Esarhaddon, was again master of Egypt), and the second not many years later.

I. xxxi.—1. Woe, &c. In substance this utterance is a repetition of ch. 30, addressed to the Egypt-party in Jerusalem. On this occasion Isaiah dwells on God's surpassing wisdom, might, and faithfulness, His divinity.

I. xxx.—1. Rebellious children. Vulg. desertores; Sept. ἀνοστήται; i.e. the ungodly, the irreligious section of God's people, those whose confidence was the very opposite of that of the author of the 91st Psalm; they were of Hoshai's spirit (2 Kin. 17. 4). Hezekiah did not (ch. 36. 15) share this feeling; yet, apparently, it was somewhat widespread, or at least influential, in Jerusalem, and from time to time the Egypt-party gained the upper hand. Probably they had sent deflant messages (2 Kin. 18. 20) after Hezekiah's submissive embassy. No doubt Isaiah had frequently to use such plain speaking—receiving only for answer (v. 10), 'Seers! see not; prophets! prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits,' i.e. prosperity, without the conditions—repentance, righteousness.—Cover, &c. Rather, we have a web, i.e. treaty (Alexander); or, as R.V. marg. pour out a drink-offering (so A.V. marg., Gescinus); or, make a league (so Sept., Vulg., Syr., Lowth); or, form a molten image (Kay); Heb. massakah; but no one of these renderings will suit all places where the word occurs. 2. Walk.

It was the capital of the dynasty of the Hyksos or shepherd kings of Egypt. Gk. Tanis. Arab. Sân, and was the key of Egypt, as commanding the route to Palestine and Syria. Abandoned by the kings of the 18th dynasty, Zoan was enlarged and fortified by Rameses II., the Pharaoh of the Hebrew oppression, who made it his residence (Ps. 78. 12. 43). The sandy plain round it ('the field of Zoan,' sokhot Zoan of the Egyptians) was the exercising ground of the Egyptian armies. Minpeth II., the Pharaoh of the Exodus, still continued to reside at Zoan, and on its plain the miracles of Moses were performed (Tristram). Hence began the Exodus. As the port and emporium of Egypt it was superseded by Pelusium (Sin), and later by Alexandria (Poole).—Hanes.

go back into the old path of trust, of belief that your God is all-sufficing; that is your best military preparation; with which perhaps it might accord best to render here—'Your (true) Rahab (the only reliable helper) is Trust.' This brief sentence Isaiah was bidden (c. 8) to write large and plain, and place conspicuously, because of their unwillingness to hearken (c. 9). He tells them that their want of trust will cause (c. 18) delay of God's graciousness, and a feeding on 'bread of adversity,' (c. 20), i.e. the scant supply of a siege; yet that day should not be one for silencing their teacher (c. 10), but of hearkening, and reformation, and the casting away of the unclean thing (c. 22 and ch. 31. 7; cp. σκῦβαλον, Ph. 3. 8; to actual idolatry there was no return after the Captivity; abundance shall follow (c. 24), and they shall know that under the sun of God's favour 'gratior ille dies.' Then the name of Jehovah (c. 27), His attributes, His severity and goodness, shall be displayed; every stroke of 'the staff of doom' (c. 32) shall be accompanied with Hebrew song that 'the Lord hath triumphed gloriously'; then (c. 33) the melek (the vaunted king of kings) shall be the Molech-victim,—for him a Tophet, a valley of destruction, is prepared by Him 'whose fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem' (ch. 31. 9).

ISAIAH XXXVI. 1; 2 CHRON. XXXII. 2-8.

on the people at large. The 14th year of Hezekiah would be eight years after the capture of Samaria. The Assyrian inscriptions (which, when perfect and intelligible, are the authority of greatest weight, as being contemporary, and not a later compilation and liable to errors in transcription) seem to place the end of that siege in the first year of Sargon, and this invasion in the fourth year of Sennacherib, i.e. after an interval of 21 years. It is possible that the date here is incorrect (Rawlinson would read 27th), or a later insertion; but it is not necessary to suppose an error in all MSS. and all ancient versions. The word 'king' is loosely used. A Crown Prince is so called (Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kin. 24. 1; Belshazzar, Dan. 5. 1). Sargon may have been still alive, though Sennacherib is called king here, and though the Assyrian cylinders date his reign as already begun. Herodotus (ii. 141) says, ἐπ' Αἴγυπτον ἐλκύνειν στρατὸν μέγαν Σαναχάριβον βασιλέα Ἀραβίων τε καὶ Ἀσσυρίων. Egypt and Assyria were the two great rival powers of the civilized world at this time. Sennacherib's aim was Egypt, and as he supposed Judah to be banking after an Egyptian alliance, he could not leave fortified towns in hostile hands behind him, though he was already some 30 miles beyond Jerusalem (S.W.) on his road to Egypt, and might have passed it by, as out of his line of march, had not Hezekiah's display of weakness and wealth tempted him. Judah suffered in a corresponding manner later (2 Kin. 23. 29), when Egypt was marching against Assyria, but then Josiah was the aggressor. Hezekiah personally may have been all along of a very determined spirit, and bold in the true form of confidence—Immanuel (Chr. v. 8); but his spirit seems not (as yet at any rate) to have been shared by the mass of the people. To their timidity and distrust Hezekiah yields.—Fenced.] Lit. with access cut off. Cawdray uses defenced (as in Isa.) in similar sense. towers; cf. 2 Chr. 32. 1, note. 14. To Lachish. His submission (Layard) is depicted on a bas-relief now in the British Museum. Another inscription describes the capture of Lachish (Lakis); over the king's head is written, 'Sennacherib, the mighty being, king of the country of Assyria, sitting on the throne of judgment at the entrance of the city of Lachish: I give permission for its slaughter.' The captives moving in procession to torture and death 'have a strikingly Jewish physiognomy.' Cf. 2 Chr. 11. 9, note.

—Offended. Lit. sinned; no greater sin against an Oriental suzerain than any independent action. The term = revolt in Assyrian inscriptions (Ball). — Appointed. Cf. ch. 15. 19. Probably the silver (120,000*l.*) was to be a yearly payment; the gold (180,000*l.*) a sum down as ransom. Sennacherib's own statement is 30 talents of gold, and 800 of silver (320,000*l.*). No wonder Hezekiah was reduced to straits to raise such a sum, especially after the bribes paid by Ahaz (ch. 16. 8) to Tiglath-pileser. Possibly (so Tristram) inability to pay the whole caused the discrepancy between Kings and the Nineveh inscription; the expression 'all that was found' may imply inability to collect the whole at that time; or (so Rawlinson) the 300 may be in addition to 500 taken with them, but insufficient to satisfy his cupidity. Sennacherib speaks of tribute and tokens of submission as sent out by the chiefs and elders, and also as sent to Nineveh. 16. Pillars. Rather, door-posts (so R.V. marg.); cp. ch. 16. 17. Thus to undo his own work must have grieved him bitterly. No doubt he had followed Solomon's example (1 Kin. 6. 20-35) in covering all with gold, though the Heb. does no more than imply that here. Vulg. laminas auri; Sept. ἐξπύσωσε. The silver would be that which was stored for use as money (Ball); sacred vessels of silver, however, are named more than once (1 Chr. 28. 14). Apparently repentance followed immediately, and words of defiance that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,<sup>3</sup> he took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him.<sup>4</sup> So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

(ch. 18. 20) followed these humble offerings, for nothing is said of any interval between Sennacherib's receiving the offerings, and sending his generals to demand surrender of the city. Perhaps he took the offerings as a token of readiness to surrender, and then for the first time purposed to meddle with Jerusalem.

2 C. xxxii.—3. Fountains. Cf. v. 30, which seems to show that 'stop' here must mean cover and conduct underground (v. 30, note), though in 2 Kin. 3. 19, 25 it plainly has the meaning which Sept. and Vulg. give it everywhere, i.e. dam up. Ecclus. 48. 17 records, before naming the coming of the rabshakch, that Hezekiah 'fortified his city, and brought in water into the midst thereof (by an aqueduct, 2 Kin. 20. 20), digged the hard rock with iron, and made wells for waters.' Isaiah says, 'gathered together the waters of the lower pool,' and he adds, that Hezekiah made a reservoir between the two walls that skirt the Tyropœon valley, and pulled down houses to provide material for the repair of the wall. Apparently, however, the heart of the people did not go along with their king, for Isaiah says (22. 8-11) that they trusted rather in the strength of Solomon's house of the forest of Lebanon and its armoury, and that they forgot the Giver of the fons perennis which fed the pools. No doubt Ahaz was contemplating a similar work, when Isaiah (7. 3) met him 'at the end of the conduit of the upper pool,' and this passage is as the key to that; it furnishes incidental proof that Isaiah's message was a revelation as to something still future, was a genuine prophecy.—Help. By placing the services of all their following at his disposal (v. 4). 4. 1. x.—5. O.] Marg. Woe (so Sept. and Vulg.); R.V. Ho; marg. Woe to Asshur. — Assyrian] In ch. 10. 5 to ch. 12. 6, Isaiah first prophecies directly of Assyria; the place of the prophecy shows that it completes the Immanuel revelation, that the sucker from the downhewn trunk of Jesse (ch. 11. 1) is the Child of chs. 7 and 9. Isaiah describes Sennacherib's march upon Jerusalem, his fall, and the glory of David's house culminating in the Messiah. It is undecided whether this self-deifier, God's instrument (rod, staff, axe, saw), is Sargon (so Sayce), or Sennacherib (so Rob. Smith, Loeth, &c.). We know from his records that Sargon captured Samaria in 722 B.C. This prophecy must be of later date, for, whether Sargon be the represented speaker, or Sennacherib (claiming his father's glories as his own), v. 11 alludes to that siege as past. Tristram writes: 'On the assumption that Jerusalem was never attacked from the North either by Sargon or by Sennacherib, much controversy has arisen as to this descriptive picture of the Assyrian advance (rs. 28-32). Some have supposed it (i.) "an ideal march" (Pusey and Stanley); or (ii.) Sennacherib's future march as his imagination depicts it (Ewald and Delitzsch); or (iii.) an actual march of Sargon's, of which the date is unknown and no record preserved (Cheyne, Sayce, and Brandes). But these conjectures appear superfluous, if we consider the position of the Assyrian army at Lachish, and the strategical conditions of the country. To imagine that the description, in which Sennacherib is the central figure throughout, applies to Sargon's past campaign is to dislocate the natural chronology. The true interpretation seems to be that Sennacherib, after he had subdued the border fortresses, such as Lachish and Libnah, which dominated the Philistian plain, determined to strike at the capital itself. To reach Jerusalem from the South, through the labyrinth of the valleys of the hill-country of Judah, studded with fortresses, would have been impracticable for an army of which chariots and horsemen were a chief arm. The invader therefore, reversing the march of Joshua, skirted the foot of the Judaean range from Libnah to the lower Beth-horon, and ascending the pass, emerged into the north road where it crosses the valley between Michmash and Ai. Thence his advance would be by Migron, opposite Michmash, the Wady Suveinit, and Geba, within sight of Ramah and Gibeah of Saul. This would be by far the easiest route for any army with many camp followers.' 6. I will send] His coming then was (in a sense he did not specially David's title. The promise is fourfold: life; no lingering malady that should keep him, as leprosy kept Uzziah, from God's house; lengthened life; deliverance from Assyria. <sup>6</sup> I will add, &c. Cf.—

'We too, O Lord, would fain command,
As then Thy wonder-working hand,

And backward force the waves of Time,— Time's waters will not ebb, nor stay,
Power cannot change them, but Love may;

What cannot be, Love counts it done,—
O Thou who keep'st the Key of Love,
Open Thy fount, eternal Dove,

And overflow this heart of mine—
Till, as each moment wafts us higher,
By every gush of pure desire,
And high-breathed hope of joys above,
By every sacred sigh we heave,
Whole years of folly we out-live,

In His unerring sight, who measures Life
by Love.'—Keble.

—Fifteen years. This then was his 14th year, for he reigned 29 in all (ch. 18. 1); within three years a son was given to him (ch. 21. 1). 'And the nation had 15 jubilee-periods added to its term of existence; the last jubilee falling in A.D. 26, the year in which our Lord read out Isa. 61. 1, 2 (to preach the acceptable year of the Lord) in the synagogue at Nazareth.'—Kay. The nation's downward course toward ruin was arrested, as was that of the king toward death. <sup>7</sup> Lump of figs. R.V. cake (Isa. also); such a poultice was a remedy likely in kind, but as insufficient (without miracle) in power, in a case of carbuncle, or tumour, or ulcer, as the four loaves among 4,000, or the warmth of Elisha's body. The word shechin is rendered boil in Exod. 9. 9; Job 2. 7; boil, the beginning of leprosy, in Lev. 13. 18; the botch of Egypt, that cannot be healed in Deut. 28. 27, 35.—Recovered. Strictly vs. 8-11 should intervene; but it is the Hebrew mode to pursue the main point to its end before naming incidental details. <sup>8</sup> Said, &c. Not in the spirit of Matt. 12. 39, 'An evil and adulterous generation seeketh a sign.'

2 K. xx.—<sup>9</sup> Degrees. R.V. shall the shadow go forward ten steps (marg. degrees), or go back ten steps (marg. is gone forward, shall it go back). This is the earliest mention of any method of measuring time. Dials are said to have been invented by the Chaldees. It may be that Ahaz had seen one at Damascus (so Conder, Measures of Time, Bib. Educ. iii. 238). More probably this was not one. The word means steps. A stair might easily be so placed that the shadow should take some definite time over each step. As to the manner of the miracle's accomplishment we may guess, if we please, that the earth's motion was reversed for that space of time; that an eclipse produced it; that whatever served as gnomon was elevated by an earthquake; that there was a miraculous deflection of rays; but after all we shall know the How as little as we know in what way the 'sun stood still' for Joshua, or Peter's tribute money found its way into the fish's mouth. We know from 2 Chr. 32. 31 that the fame of it spread, and that it was viewed as a local wonder. Cf. Quintá dum linea tangitur umbrá (Persius, iii. 4); Ὅταν ἡ δεκάπουν στοιχέων (Arist. Eccles. 652). The walls of the temple of the winds at Athens served as a sun dial. <sup>10</sup> It is a light thing. i.e. in seeming; the miracle were equally great either way; possibly the dial ('like the mānmandir of Benares,' Kay) was large, and visible where he lay. — Go down. R.V. decline; Sept. κλίνειν.

I. xxxviii.—9. The writing. This psalm, and the sickness that preceded it, must date before the overthrow of Sennacherib's army, or that could not fail to have been mentioned. <sup>10</sup> Cutting off. Rather, perhaps, in those still days, meaning when his sickness was on him; quiet (Var.); R.V. makes his speech begin with in the noontide; Sept. ἐν τῷ ὑψει (zenith) τῶν ἡμερῶν μου; Vulg. in dimidio dierum meorum.—I shall go. Or, let me go—said despairingly (Variorum).—Go... grave.] Rather, pass (unless, as being the seat of judgment, 'gates' be taken to mean realm, rather than portals; cf. Matt. 16. 18) the gates of Hades. Sheol is constantly rendered Hell, or the grave, meaning simply the home of the dead, rarely, if ever, the abode of the lost (Ps. 9. 17). Cf. 'Thou hast power of life and death, thou leadest to the gates of Hades and bringest up again' (Wisd. 16. 13); Ps. 9. 13 & 107. 18; Job 38. 17.

"Hell," if it could be taken in its original sense as used in the Creeds, would be a fairly adequate equivalent for the Hebrew word; but it is so commonly understood of the place of torment that to employ it frequently would lead to inevitable misunderstanding. The Revisers therefore in the historical narratives have left the rendering "the grave" or "the pit" in the text, with a marginal note "Heb. Sheol" to indicate that it does not signify "the place of burial;" while in the poetical writings they have put most commonly "Sheol" in the text and "the grave" in the margin (Revisers' Preface). <sup>11</sup> Lord. i.e. Jehovah, the saviour; Sept. τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ.—With, &c. R.V. marg. when I am among them that have ceased to be. <sup>12</sup> Age. R.V. marg., more literally, habitation. The word occurs, coupled with a possessive pronoun, only here and Isa. 53. 8 ('generation'). It means career, span, or period of life; or, the dwelling (so Arab.) in which that is spent; or perhaps the bodily frame (2 Cor. 5. 1, R.V. marg.) in which the soul dwells.—Departed. Is struck (or shifted); lit. plucked up.—I have cut off. Meaning, It is some sin of mine has caused it; cf. 2. 17.—Cut off. Or, rolled together (Variorum); R.V. rolled up.—With pining sickness. Rather, from the warp; R.V. loom (marg. thrum); i.e. when but half completed. The word is used of slender threads, hair, the thrums which tie the web to the beam.—From day, &c. i.e. in a single day; cf. Job 4. 20. <sup>13</sup> Reckoned. Rather, kept thinking; R.V. quieted myself (marg. thought).—Day. Rather, dawn. Tristram writes:—'This passage is one of the most important, and yet the most difficult in its bearing on the topography of Jerusalem, in the whole Bible; and its importance has been much enhanced by the discoveries of the last four years. The water supply of Jerusalem previous to the Captivity is referred to in Isa. 7. 3 & 36. 2, "The conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field;" in Isa. 8. 6, "The waters of Shiloah that go softly;" Isa. 22. 9, 11, "Ye gathered together the waters of the lower pool... Ye made also a ditch between the two walls for the water of the old pool;" as well as 2 Kin. 20. 20, "He made a pool and a conduit, and brought water into the city." The last three passages can only refer to the works named here. The Upper and Lower Pools of Gihon have generally been identified with the modern Birket Mamilla and B. Sultan, west of Zion. But the discovery of a tunnel from the Fount of the Virgin to the pool of Siloam, with a long inscription which cannot be later than the time of Hezekiah, and also of another aqueduct from the same, trending westward, has compelled a reconsideration of the old identification; and the best authorities are now agreed in placing the Upper Pool of Gihon at the Virgin's Fount, in the Kedron valley opposite the rock Zoheloth, and the Lower Pool at Siloam, just before the king's garden. The identification is supported by the meaning of the word Gihon, i.e. 'a gushing spring,' this being the only true spring of living water in or adjoining Jerusalem. It was also called En-rogel, 'The fuller's spring,' and before the inclusion of Ophel in the city, was 400 yards outside the wall (ch. 27. 3). Hezekiah, about 50 years after the building of the Ophel wall, the massive foundations and substructures of which have been traced by Sir C. Wilson, determined to form a communication from the city to the spring, and to close up the outlet by which the water escaping down the valley might be useful to an enemy. The tunnel is 1,760 feet in length, winding considerably; and at 450 feet from the spring is a shaft by which water could be drawn within the city. About 20 feet from its lower end, partly in the water, a long inscription has recently been discovered, relating the history of the making of the tunnel, how the workmen commenced at either end, and met, having, as two little culs de sac show, passed each other a few feet. Unfortunately there is no name by which the date can be decided, but from the form of the characters Dr. I. Taylor and all authorities agree in placing it about the time of Ahaz or Hezekiah. The discovery is the more interesting as this is the only indisputable inscription of the period of the kings of Judah as yet brought to light in Jerusalem itself. Besides this tunnel, another aqueduct has very recently been discovered, cut in the rock and artificially roofed, running in a westerly direction from the Virgin's Fountain. This has not yet been traced throughout its whole course. Either of these may have been the work of Hezekiah. It would appear that in the time of Ahaz there was the spring with a stream down the Kedron, and two pools for rain water, the Upper and the Lower, connected by a rock conduit, still existing. Hezekiah constructed a new pool at the spring, the cave-pool of the Virgin's Fountain. At the same time he cut the shaft which has been mentioned, 'to bring water into the city,' and excavated and continued the Siloam aqueduct beyond the pool westwards on the slope of the hill of the upper city, which was the stronghold of Zion and part of the city of David. There does not appear from the text any necessity for revolutionizing our received ideas of the topography of the Jerusalem of the kings, and grotesquely confining the city of David to an area of eight acres on Ophel, a suggestion which needs only to be named to refute itself, when we remember that Samaria occupied 160 acres, Casarea 300, and Jerusalem of the Hasmoneans 200 acres.<sup>1</sup>

I. xxii.—1.] It remains an undecided question of what place, and at what date this utterance was spoken. If 'burden' means utterance simply, it might be that the prophet saw a vision, being himself in the valley which separates either Samaria or Jerusalem (both cities stand on hills) from the surrounding higher mountains; if 'burden' has its usual meaning of doom, uttered against the place named, one or other city, itself, and not an adjoining valley, must be intended. Kay (following Birks) argues forcibly in favour of Samaria (see Speak. Com.). It becomes necessary in that view to interpret vs. 15-25 allegorically, as symbolizing the two Dispensations. The 'mystical representative of the worldly men named in rs. 8-14 is Shebna = sit down now (cp. the seated figure of Judaea Capta and Jer. 13. 18); Eliakim = God will raise up; Hilkiyah = my portion is the Lord; 'it becomes also difficult to explain why preparations for a siege of Jerusalem made (see 2 Chr. 32. 3, note, p. 492) in Hezekiah's day (vs. 8-11) stand in the midst of a vision concerning Samaria. On the whole, perhaps, it is correct to understand the prophet to be speaking to Jerusalem, and that (not in Zedekiah's reign, when Nebuchadnezzar was approaching, but) at the present time, when Sennacherib seemed bought off, and prosperity engendered recklessness; when, though words of warning had been spoken, yet sentence against evil works was not executed speedily.—Wholly] Archilochus (not many years later) counsels ἀλλὰ χαρτοῖσιν τε χαῖρε, καὶ κακοῖσιν ἀσχάλα, μὴ λίην· but these set no bounds to their festivities (cf. 2 C. xxxii.—31. Princes.] A vague form, not intended to imply that the country mentioned was under the rule of more than one man. The plural is thus used in several passages by the sacred writers, when speaking of countries of which they had little knowledge (v. 4; Jer. 46, 25 & 51, 11, 28).—Tristram.—Babylon.] 'The first mention of Babylon in connection with Judah. Babylon, the oldest city in the world (Gen. 10, 10), was one of the capitals of northern Chaldaea in the earliest empire, the other three being Sippara (Sepharvaim, the city of the Sun-god, now Sura), Borsippa, and Cuthah. But at that time the supremacy was with southern Chaldaea, of which the chief cities were Ur, Erech, Calneh, and Ellasar of Genesis, the Hur, Huruk, Nipur, and Larsa of the Assyrian records. Ur on the Euphrates was the most important capital. Its ruins are now known as Mugheir, "the bitumened." Though now left inland by the alluvial deposits. Ur was a great maritime emporium, and the chief source of the early development of the first Chaldean empire. The records of this early Cushite kingdom reach back to the 24th century B.C., and some scholars think that they stretch even 2,000 years further, setting aside the mythical first dynasty of 36,000 years. The great men of the historic Chaldean empire are Nimrod, Uruk, and Chedorlaomer; Nimrod the founder of the great cities; Uruk the great architect; and Chedorlaomer, or Kudurlagamer, the great conqueror, who founded the Elamite dynasty, and added Assyria and the country west of the Euphrates, and east of the Tigris, to his empire. The Chaldean empire seems to have sunk about 1500 B.C., and for about 900 years remained subject to, or dependent on, Assyria, till the rise of the great Babylonian empire, 747 B.C., under Nabonassar, which, rather Semitic than Cushite, occupied the region and resuscitated the glories of the first Chaldean empire. This latter empire, finally fixed by Nabopolassar, B.C. 625, was little more than a reproduction of the Assyrian, and was not marked by the original developments which stamp the early Chaldean nation. It is to the Cushite or first Chaldean empire, of which Babylon was a part, that Europe owes the origin of her civilization. From it Assyria drew her learning, architecture, laws, religion, and most of her customs. Babylonia excogitated an alphabet, worked out arithmetic, invented instruments to measure time, studied the movements of the heavenly bodies, marked chronology with accuracy; in fact, made a beginning in almost every branch of science. From Babylon, rather than Egypt, Greece derived her architecture, sculpture, science, philosophy, mathematics, and her intellectual life. The original language called Akkadian (Akkadai = highlanders), from Accad (Gen. 10, 10), the ancient capital, was agglutinative, i.e. combinations, not inflexions, were used. It fell into disuse after the Assyrian conquest, but remained the language of religion and of literature. The material for records and for every kind of writing was clay; the tablets and cylinders stamped with the cuneiform characters were at once burnt, and have thus become practically imperishable; thus the literature of Chaldaea is second in amount to that of Egypt alone.—Tristram.

2 K. xx.—12. At that time.] Rob. Smith and Schrader place this embassy in 704 B.C. Sayce says:—"Sargon in 711 B.C. checked the formation of an alliance between Merodach-Baladan, king of Babylon, on the one side, and Hezekiah with the Philistines, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, and Egyptians, on the other, by invading Palestine, taking Jerusalem (see Is. 10 & 22), and utterly destroying Ashdod, the centre of the confederacy (Is. 20, 1). Merodach-Baladan, who is called the son of Yagina or Yagans, was originally the chief of a tribe named Caldai or Chaldeans, on the Persian Gulf. His embassy to Hezekiah (2 K. 20, 12-19) was sent with the purpose of forming the confederacy against the common enemy. In B.C. 705, Sargon was murdered, and Sennacherib his son mounted the throne on the 12th day of Ab, or July. Four years after (B.C. 701) occurred his well-known campaign against Hezekiah, which ended with the destruction of his army and the overthrow of his schemes of conquest in the west' (Variorum Teacher's Bible, p. 100).—Berodach-baladan.] The B is merely copyist's error for M. The name (and it was a common custom with Assyrian royalty to embody names of gods, specially Merodach, Nebo, and Bel) means Merodach (a Babylonian 'deity' = the planet Jupiter, or the Sun-god) gave a son. The confirmation of the truth of Scripture by the monuments, and vice versa, is specially noticeable in his case. They state that, contemporary with Sargon, king of Assyria, whom they place in 722-705 B.C., Merodach-baladan was king of Babylon (uninterruptedly from 722-710 B.C.), and was attacked by Sargon and expelled from his country. Scripture gives the reason: he had tampered with a vassal of Sargon's (a thing which Sargon complains he frequently did) at the very time when Sennacherib, his son and co-king, was purposing, so soon as he had leisure, to chastise Jerusalem for defiant words. An inscription states that, while Kalah (Nimroud) continued to be his capital, yet in 710 B.C. Sargon styled himself 'king of Babylon,' as well as of Assyria.—Son of Baladan.] Perhaps grandson, for Tiglath-pileser II., stating that he made him tributary in 731 B.C., calls him son of Yakin, the founder of the dynasty, who had named his new capital after himself, Bit-Yakin. He was the third of the name: the first dates 1325 B.C., the second about 900 B.C.; there was a Nebo-baladan in 880 B.C.—Sent letters.] Rather, a letter (and so in Isa. v. 1), Variorum. Sept. adds, in Isa. v. 1, 'and ambassadors,' to which the 'them' following refers.—Had heard.] What would specially interest the Chaldeans (with whom our astronomical system originated) would be (cp. the energetic zeal and spirit of inquiry in their successors, the Magi of our Lord's day) the miracle (Chr. v. 31) of the sun's shadow. No doubt Baladan's secret aim was to strengthen himself by Hezekiah's aid against Assyria. <sup>13</sup> Hearkened unto them.] A scribe's error for (as Isaiah and some MSS. here) was glad of them (Bab); so Sept. and Vulg.—Shewed.] Solomon did the same to the queen of Sheba, and was blameless; it is motives that mar actions; that God was owned in all, appears in more than one verse in 1 Kin. 10: He is unnamed here. Well for Hezekiah, if he could have heard the poet's warning:—

'When Heaven in mercy gives thy prayers return,
And angels bring thee treasures from on high,
Shut fast the door, nor let the world discern,
And offer thee fond praise when God is nigh,
In friendly guise, perchance with friendly beard,
From Babel, see, they haste with words of love;
But if thou lightly all thy wealth impart,
Their race will come again, and all remove.'

When praying for deliverance 'in all time of our wealth,' Hezekiah's day of folly warns us,—

'Think of the babes of Judah's royal line:
Display but touched them with her parching glare

Once, and for ages four they bear the sign,
The fifth beheld them chained in Babel's lair.'

—Precious ointment.] The expression is the same that is used of the holy consecrating oil (Ps. 133. 2).—Dominion.] It can hardly mean his realm here; 1 Kin. 10. 4, 5 would suggest his majesty, his royal state; rendered power in 2 Chr. 32. 9; Sept. ἐξουσία; Vulg. potestas; Germ. herrschaft; Fr. cour.

2 K. xx.—14. What said.] Ashamed to confess how captivating their overtures had been to him, Hezekiah omits to answer the first question. An appeal to vanity succeeds where an appeal to fear fails. Theirs was not exactly the case of 1 Kin. 8. 41; but Hezekiah might haply have made it so, if at the moment self had been less, and God more, in his thoughts.

'He would make his hospitality seem a duty.'—Strachey. <sup>17.</sup> The days come.] As yet Judah knew little of Babylon, except as an unspeakably magnificent city; soon she shall know too much; besides the royal treasure, the royal prince (Manasseh, not yet born) shall be carried thither (2 Chr. 33. 11), and other of the royal family shall become attendants (courtiers or chamberlains, Variorum) in Nebuchadnezzar's palace. Cf. Mic. 4. 10. <sup>19.</sup> Truth.] Hezekiah is ready with the submissiveness of Aaron or of Eli (Lev. 10. 3; 1 Sam. 3. 18), to acknowledge the justice of the impending judgment; he rejoices that peace and stability (or, continuance, Variorum) should for his time take the place of war and ruin, not in a spirit of selfishness (cp. 'After me the deluge'), but as acknowledging the goodness of God in deferring a merited punishment. His calmness is strikingly shared by Isaiah; he utters appalling truths unshrinkingly, without a tear or 'lamentation;' that it is 'the word of the Lord' suffices him, and he is able to take a more hopeful view of his people's reception of the Gospel glories revealed to him, than Christ could (Luke 19. 41) 700 years later.

<sup>1.</sup> xxxix.—<sup>6.</sup> Behold, &c.] Only by 'the word of the Lord' could he thus speak. Could Isaiah himself harmonise these utterances, to which the movement (2 Pet. 1. 21) of the Spirit of God compelled, but regarding which the Spirit would only have replied, if asked as to their meaning. The application is for generations to come (1 Pet. 1. 12)? Surely there is no such thing as prophecy at all—in the sense of revealing an unknown (it may be, as this was, a seemingly unlikely) future—if the utterance is to be limited by the understanding of speaker or hearer, either of the thing itself (which here was intelligible enough), or of the mode in which that thing is to be brought to pass. <sup>7.</sup> Eunuchs.] Frequently means simply chamberlains or court-officials, which in itself would be degradation to royal princes; Josephus adds here, 'and lose their manhood.' <sup>8.</sup> For.] Rather, Surely; Syr. reads as one sentence, 'Good is the word . . . that there shall be.'

cherib thought that the visit of Merodach-baladan's ambassadors might lead Hezekiah to renew the alliance which had formerly existed between Israel and Egypt (Isa. 30 & 31 & 20. 5, 6); and which (he suggests) the distrustful spirits in Jerusalem yearned for now. His whole conduct verifies Isa. 33. 8. — Tartan, Rab-saris, Rabshakeh.] Rather, his tartan, &c. All are titles of office. Neh. 1. 11); or perhaps, as 'saki' meant officer, rab-saki meant superior officer (next to the tartan; see Isa. 20. 1, Variorum). See also Jer. 39. 3, where the rab-saris is accompanied by the rab-mag or chief of the Magi (or learned men, the 'wise men' of Matt. 2. 1; see also Dan. 1. 4, &c., 'the Chaldeans'). — Host.] R.V. army. Obviously the gates are shut, and the Assyrian is defied, yet much feared. The scene recalls the 'parley' of the chroniclers of English history. The story is simply this: Sennacherib had invaded Judah, which had rebelled by withholding the tribute to which Ahaz had pledged it. Hezekiah sent to Lachish to deprecate the conqueror's wrath, and paid the fine (v. 14). Sennacherib now sends a sufficient detachment to awe Jerusalem, and, relying on disaffection within, summons it to surrender. The commissioners appeal to the people against Hezekiah's policy. Such is the hesitation of Hezekiah, that all Isaiah's influence is needed; but Hezekiah bears the test, and is promised miraculous relief. Rab-

God's 'servant' is now verifying his name (= whom God will establish) and title ('father' to Jerusalem and Judah). His ultimate successor in the office is Christ (cp. ch. 22. 22 with Rev. 3. 7).

Pharaoh held out encouragements to the revolvers, but did not give them any assistance when the hour of danger came; cf. Isa. 20. 1). Isaiah uses an apt similitude (as Hoshea had lately found, ch. 17. 4-6; cf. Isa. 31. 1). Kāneh (from same root as cane) is the generic name for any kind of reed (Gk. κάλανος; same word in Isa. v. 6 & 42. 3); a reed bruised and bent would leave a sharp jagged penetrating edge.

He was the last and most distinguished king of the 25th or Ethiopian dynasty, which was founded by Pianchi the Ethiopian priest-king of Napata about B.C. 750, a generation before Isaiah, as Mariette proved by the discovery, at Oropata (Napata), Tirhakah's capital, of the stèle of Pianchi, recording his conquest of Egypt. "This dynasty stood for a while against all the might of Assyria, the heroes of the great conflict for world-dominion, in the tumult of which the kingdom of Israel disappeared for ever" (Poole). Tirhakah is called here "king of Cush," not "of Mizraim;" and a Pharaoh is mentioned (Isa. 30. 2) as reigning in Egypt, while Herodotus makes Sethos to have been a native king of Egypt at the time of Sennacherib's invasion. It seems probable that Tirhakah was ruling in Ethiopia at this time, Sethos, a native Pharaoh, being a subordinate king in Lower Egypt, and that Tirhakah as his superior put himself in motion to defend his vassal against Sennacherib.'—Tristram.—Saying.] In a formal letter (v. 14), whether in Hebrew or Aramaic does not appear: the latter was the international language of the period.

PSALM LXXX.

To the chief Musician upon Shoshannim-Eduth, A Psalm of Asaph.

- <sup>1</sup> GIVE ear, O Shepherd of Israel,
Thou that leadest Joseph like a flock;
Thou that dwellest between the cherubims, shine forth.
<sup>2</sup> Before Ephraim and Benjamin and Manasseh stir up thy strength,
And come and save us.
<sup>3</sup> Turn us again, O God,
And cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.
<sup>4</sup> O LORD God of hosts, How long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people?
<sup>5</sup> Thou feedest them with the bread of tears;
And givest them tears to drink in great measure.
<sup>6</sup> Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours:
- And our enemies laugh among themselves.
<sup>7</sup> Turn us again, O God of hosts,
And cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.
<sup>8</sup> Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt:
Thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.
<sup>9</sup> Thou preparedst room before it,
And didst cause it to take deep root,
and it filled the land.
<sup>10</sup> The hills were covered with the shadow of it,
And the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars.
<sup>11</sup> She sent out her boughs unto the sea,
And her branches unto the river.
<sup>12</sup> Why hast thou then broken down her hedges,
So that all they which pass by the way do pluck her?
<sup>13</sup> The boar out of the wood doth waste it,
And the wild beast of the field doth devour it.
<sup>14</sup> Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts:
Look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine;

'Joseph,' however, may be taken as a national title (so Pusey on Obad. 18), especially in a psalm which refers (comp. Ps. 77. 15 & 81. 5) to deliverance from Egypt, and by a king who re-united the nation to some extent (2 Chr. 30. 1, 5) about 16 years before the present time.—1. Thou that dwellest, &c.]

213.—The Second Answer through Isaiah.—Sennacherib's Retreat and End.

2 KINGS XIX. 20-37 (Isaiah xxxvii. 21-38) ; 2 CHRONICLES xxxii. 21.

20 THEN Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying,

Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria <sup>a</sup> I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him ; The virgin <sup>b</sup> the daughter of Zion hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn ; the daughter of Jerusalem <sup>c</sup> hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed ? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high ? even against <sup>d</sup> the Holy One of Israel.

23 <sup>e</sup> By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord, and hast said, <sup>f</sup> With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar trees thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof : and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into the forest of his

2 K. xix.—20. That which.] R.V. Whereas. 21. Virgin.] Jerusalem is called daughter of Zion by Zechariah (2. 10) ; called virgin-daughter here, scornful virgin, perhaps because the city of David, on Zion, had never been taken since David's day, though the other part of Jerusalem had yielded to Shishak and to Joash (1 Kin. 14. 26 ; ch. 14. 13). The expression, however, may have no such meaning, for Jeremiah (46. 11) speaks of the virgin, the daughter of Egypt ; the place is personified as mother of its inhabitants.—Shaken her head.] In mockery ; cf. Matt. 27. 39. 22. Holy One of Israel.] The title is peculiarly Isaiah's. He uses it more frequently than all the other writers together. 23. Said.] The words may have been in the letter (the language is not unlikely to be Lebanon and Carmel represent the wild mountain, and the softer woodland surrounded with vine and olive, throughout the land. They are similarly used in Cant. (cp. 5. 15 & 7. 5) to represent the grand and the gentle, the king's majesty, the queen's beauty. As of Tiglath-pileser, the passes ('doors,' Zech. 11. 1) of Lebanon were his entrance (Lebanon = snow, as does Himalayah in Sanscrit ; comp. Sierra Nevada, Ben Nevis, Snowdon, Mt. Blanc). Isaiah (10. 34) speaks of the Assyrian power as 'Lebanon' ; Ezekiel (31. 3) compares it to 'a cedar in Lebanon' ; it was Sennacherib's special boast that he penetrated the most sacred spots of Lebanon, and destroyed the cedars (Layard).—Sides.] Rather, recesses (Variorum) ; R.V. innermost parts.—Fir.] Including pine and cypress, but the former is the predominant tree (Tristram).—The lodgings, &c.] Rather, his loftiest height ; or, his furthest lodging-place (Variorum, and so [I. xxxvii. 21—24.]

Such boastful language is not without parallel in the West. Lothair, king of France, swore that the horses of France should drink up all the rivers of Germany. Otho II, replied that he would cover France with straw bats (alluding to those worn by his Saxon soldiers over their helmets). Alaric also boasts—Subsidere nostris sub pedibus montes, arescere vidimus amnes. Cf.—

Heb. mazor, which may be (so Cheyne) an abnormal form of Mizraim, and mean Lower Egypt, intersected by the arms of the Nile, and called the Fortified Land because protected by a wall at Suez (cf. Mic. 7. 12); while, however, its more ordinary meaning, 'fortified place,' might suit Ps. 31. 21, where to render by 'Egypt' would be impossible. Poole would rather derive Mizraim from the Arab. for red earth or mud. <sup>25</sup> Not heard?] Thou, i.e. Sennacherib, who might answer 'No,' and, in a sense, truly; but, though he might say, 'Who is Jehovah? I know not Jehovah; all nations are suffered to walk in their own ways;' yet would his ignorance not be excusable, for God had not left Himself without witness (Acts 14. 17); to a God who redeems and sanctifies Natural religion affords no clue; it does make known a Creator and Providential Ruler. — I.] i.e. I Jehovah. Emphatic.—Donec.] The Hebrew word has the wide variety of meaning of do in English, as Fr. faire or Lat. agere; from of old I settled this, from ancient days I purposed it (= formed the plan in my mind); i.e. Are you not aware that you can only be My instrument, and execute My sovereign will? (a lesson Nebuchadnezzar also was made to learn, Dan. 4. 32); or, that long ago I made it, that in ancient days I fashioned it; R.V. how I have done it long ago, and formed it. <sup>26</sup> (Of small power).] Lit. short-handed; the converse of almightiness (Isa. 50. 2 & 39. 1). We have a somewhat similar colloquial phrase, 'I never saw him stand amiss or sit amiss.' In Deut. 6. 7, sitting, walking, lying, rising represent the daily round (cp. Ps. 1. 1). 'He prayeth whether lying on his side, or sitting or standing' (Koran. x. 13). The Sanscrit phrase is 'lying down, sitting, eating.' <sup>28</sup> Tumult.] Vulg. superbia; Sept. σφῆνος; boastfulness of strength; R.V. and for that thine arrogancy.—Hook.] Vulg. (more correctly) circutum; not the hook, as for the fish, but the ring, as for the bull or wild beast (Ezek. 19. 4, 9). Captives are depicted so led in a bas-relief at Khorsabad and a rock-tablet at Sir-i-Zohab. Many a lip, many a nose had he and Sargon so tortured. Both images (the beast and the fish) occur in Amos 4. 2, 3, though neither word there is the word used here, both of those words having also the meaning thorn; cf. 2 Chron. 33. 11, note.

<sup>29</sup> And this shall be <sup>a</sup> a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

The promise.

29. And this, &c.] The words are Isaiah's own again, and addressed to Hezekiah. God volunteers a sign (as to Moses at Horeb, Ex. 3. 12); Heb. the sign, as though one might reasonably be looked for, that (for one thing, perhaps) they should be unmolested by Sennacherib during the remaining years of his reign; certainly that the land should not, could not (Lev. 25. 23), be utterly and for ever taken from them. The words used, and the year itself point to this as the thing signified. The year 710 B.C. is a central year, and remarkable perhaps now on that account. Canaan was fully occupied 1445 B.C.; John proclaimed 'The kingdom of heaven is at hand' A.D. 25. Again, the Tabernacle was erected at Sinai 1490 B.C.; the Temple was destroyed by the Romans A.D. 70. In each case 710 is the half-way year. In it also a great event happened of world-wide importance: Deioces was elected king of the Medes, the first step towards the overthrow of Nineveh and Babylon. But at the moment the year was more to be noticed on another account. Every seventh year was a sabbatical year; every seventh seven was followed by a jubilee-year (from Heb. yôbél, trumpet-sound). Fifteen such periods, reckoned from 1444 B.C., the year of the first occupation of the land, amount to 735 years, i.e. 710 B.C. Therefore 709 B.C. was a jubilee-year. In every seventh year (shabbath shabbâthôn) they might not sow, or prune a vineyard, or even gather and appropriate the natural produce (safâch = that which growth of itself). It was to be food for all, to which all might help themselves (Lev. 25. 5, 11; Ex. 23. 11). For the jubilee-year the law was the same, with this addition—In the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession. This year and next year they should be able to keep this law, though possibly only the faithful few might care to do so (2 Chr. 36. 21), unhindered by a besieging enemy, or by damage from his approach; let them take it as a sign that the deliverance was of God, a sign, that, whatever Ahaz might have yielded (ch. 16. 7), and come what might meanwhile, an emancipation should surely take place, an ἀφεσις (Sept., an ἐλευθερία (Josephus); a restoration, a παλιγγενεσία, an ἀποκατάστασις (Matt. 19. 28; Acts 3. 21) should be enjoyed by them. The vision that Isaiah mentally had before him might be only the return from Babylon; but Isaiah was pre-eminently a Gospel-prophet. Eccles. 48. 24 says of Isaiah, in reference to Hezekiah's reign, 'He saw by an excellent spirit what should come to pass at the last, and he comforted them that mourned in Sion; he showed what should come to pass for ever, and secret things or ever they came.' — Grow ... springeth.] Safâch occurs only in this prophecy and in the sabbatical law; shachis (literally, sproutings) occurs here only. Sept. αὐτόματα . . . τὰ ἀνατέλλοντα; Vulg. quæ repperis . . . quæ sponte nascuntur; in Isa. ὁ ἔσπαρκας . . . τὸ κατάλειμμα, and quæ sponte nascuntur . . . pomis rescere. This promise could only be fulfilled if Sennacherib's army had departed. 30. Remnant.] The remnant of Israel had scorned any such suggestion (2 Chr. 30. 6; comp. Isa. 27. 6). Sennacherib says he had carried off 200,000 prisoners on the first occasion (ch. 18. 13). 31. Escape.] Sept. ἀνασωζόμενος (cp. Isa. 37. 32; Acts 2. 40, 47); R.V. out of Mt. Zion they that shall escape. — Zeal.] i.e. jealousy for the honour of His name (cf. v. 34; Ps. 69. 9; John 2. 17). 32. Come into.] It is not said shall not come to. He may have advanced to its very walls, in hope that his threatening letter might induce submission at once, and leave him free to meet Tirhakah; he may have been somewhere between Libnah and Jerusalem; or have remained at Libnah; or possibly (so Rawlinson and Cheyne), as Herodotus (ii. 141) says, he was on the Egyptian frontier, at Pelusium. There, according to the story of the priests of Memphis, king Sethos met him, encouraged by a vision sent by Ptah, and, after a swarm of mice had devoured bow-against it. <sup>33</sup> By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD. <sup>34</sup> For <sup>q</sup> I will defend this city, to save it, for mine own sake, and <sup>r</sup> for my servant David's sake.

(2 Chron. xxxii. 21.)

<sup>35</sup> And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

<sup>36</sup> So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at <sup>s</sup> Nineveh.

So he returned with shame of face to his own land.

<sup>37</sup> And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons <sup>t</sup> smote him with the sword: and they escaped into the land of Armenia. And <sup>u</sup> Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew him there with the sword.

strings and all that was of leather, utterly routed him. All that we know certainly is that the blow fell the very night after Isaiah spoke (a fact omitted by Isaiah), wherever Sennacherib might then be; that not even the first steps towards an assault had been taken, no single soldier, under cover of tall shield (his own or his comrade's), had shot an arrow against the defenders on the walls, or heaped up laboriously a mount (see Hab. 1. 10), on which the catapult might stand level with the wall's weaker part, or from which the storming party might leap upon the wall; that the blow was God's doing, whatever the means. As to the means, except that an angel smote, and that the survivors slept on till morning, we are left to conjecture, and a comparison of similar events. In 2 Sam. 24 a visible angel with a drawn sword is mentioned; but pestilence is named as the instrument of death. In Ex. 12 Jehorah himself is spoken of as passing through the land, and over the blood-sprinkled doors, the destroyer (ὁ ἀλοφρεύων, Heb. 11. 28) as the agent, but, as here, no instrument is named. Visitation of God is all we can say. That might suffice here. It is possible, however, that God made use of some natural means miraculously directed and magnified. The story awakens holy awe and confident courage (cf. 1 Mac. 7. 41); and the motto engraved on the statue of Sethos and the mouse (symbol of invisible destruction) is appropriate: 'Ες ἐμέ τις ὀρέων εὐσεβῆς ἔστω. Sennacherib died 679 or 680 B.C. (according to Rollin 710 B.C.). According to the cuneiform inscriptions Sennacherib became king 703 B.C.; Hezekiah's 14th year is 693 B.C.; Sennacherib died 680 B.C.; Esarhaddon succeeded 679 B.C., died 666 B.C. The death of Sennacherib, though it actually occurred many years after, is related here as the sequel, in the dispensations of Providence, of his Syrian expeditions.

Hezekiah, like Isaiah, manifests a desire to mitigate the Jewish spirit of exclusiveness (cf. Matt. 3. 9). On the part of the nations of v. 4, it was, as yet, only temporal interests that attracted them in Jerusalem, but (the Psalmist triumphantly declares) they should one day yearn for a yet closer connection, even to be reckoned sons of Zion themselves (vs. 4, 5).—1. His.] Not Her, as Pr. Joseph said, 'For God hath made me forget all my toil.' So God had made Hezekiah forget, within three years, the anxious moments when he lay (as he thought) dying, and sonless.

2 K. xxi.—Manasseh's reign is the longest and darkest in the Hebrew annals. His [2 K. xx. 21—xxi. 2.]

irreligion was only equalled by his tyranny. His vices brought their own punishment in the contemptible weakness to which the state was reduced. Jerusalem surrendered to Esarhaddon, and the unworthy heir of David and Solomon was led away captive to learn wisdom and piety in the dungeons of Babylon (Milman).—1. Manasseh.] i.e. one who forgets; 'a name strangely significant, itself an amnesty, embodying what had been for years the cherished object of Hezekiah's policy and hope' (Plumptre); cf. 2 Chr. 30. 6, 11 & 31. 1; contrast the spirit of Charles II., who 'had learnt nothing and forgotten nothing.'—Twelve.] Unborn, therefore, at the date of his father's illness, 710 B.C.; and amenable to the irreligious influence of the nobility of the Court, 'the traditional policy of "the princes of Judah" being to tolerate foreign religions and conciliate foreign nations' (*Bib. So gross was the idolatry, licentiousness, superstition of his reign that not even (ch. 23. 26) Josiah's reformation could avert Judah's doom. Isaiah, now 80, was perhaps un influential.—Hephzibah means My delight is in her. The name is used allegorically in Isa. 62 for God's church, ceasing, as Christ's Bride (Beulah, married one), to be any more called Azubah (desolate). Cf. v. 7, note; 1 Kin. 16. 33 & 18. 19. 5. Host of heaven.] From this superstition Judah had hitherto been free (cf. ch. 17. 16). Probably it was imported from Arabia or Babylonia, Hezekiah's ally (ch. 20. 12; 2 Chr. 32. 31). This verse explains to what part of the Temple v. 4 refers. Apparently he did not stop at this outrage, but even erected (cp. Jer. 7. 30) his asherah in the Holy Place (v. 7), and kept there all the vessels connected with every form of idol-worship (ch. 23. 4).—The two courts.] i.e. the outer 'of the people,' the inner 'of the priests' (2 Chr. 4. 9). 2 K. xxi.—7. Of the grove.] Rather, a graven image, an asherah; cf. v. 3; Chr. v. 7; 1 Kin. 11. 5, note; the graven image of Asherah (Var., and so R.V.). He introduced also Baal-pillars (cp. 2 Chr. 33. 3, & 15). Whether it was he who broke down God's altar, and removed the Ark, is not stated (2 Chr. 33. 16 & 25. 3; Jer. 3. 16). Tradition says he removed God's name from all documents and inscriptions. In the days of his penitence he removed this asherah, and cast it out of the city (2 Chr. 33. 15); Amon, his son, restored it;

which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son,<sup>9</sup> In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:<sup>8</sup> neither will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

He does not name any of these peoples, who had been certainly conquered before this, but the date of their deportation is not mentioned. Probably a remnant of Israel (2 Chr. 34. 9; ch. 25. 12) remained in the country districts; still the land must have continued thinly peopled for some time, or the lions (v. 25) would not have so increased. Ezra (4. 10) says that 'the great and noble (a satrap's title) Asnapper' (possibly a corruption of the Hebrew form of Esarhaddon) brought colonists from Media (?) and Persia (various parts). Esarhaddon may have brought them during his father's reign, being called king because known as such afterwards. In Ezra 4. 2 the Samaritans say, 'Esarhaddon king of Assur brought us up hither.' He 'reinforced these earlier colonists' (Ball). The events here recorded may have occurred earlier, but scarcely much later than the date assigned—otherwise the 'priests brought from thence' (v. 27) would not have been alive; a not improbable date is (677 B.C.) when Esarhaddon took Manasseh prisoner (2 Chr. 33. 11), and of necessity his attention was called to that region.—Cuthah, &c.] The Assyrian inscriptions name Nergal (Mars) as the special god of Cuthah, now Habl Ibrahim (12 miles N.E. of Babylon), where, the Talmud states, Abraham was imprisoned by Nimrod. Two of Nebuchadnezzar's officials are named after Nergal (Jer. 39. 3). Ava is probably Ivah (ch. 18. 34, *Syr. So Sargon says of Kharrak, 'I called the city Kir Sargon, and set up there the worship of the god Assour.' No doubt the Israelite remnant were familiar with all the rites, but the foreign settlers might think otherwise, and regard the worship as incomplete without the proper priests. 28. Taught.] A blind leader of the blind! He could only restore the calf-worship of Bethel. Yet Samaritans afterwards were no idolaters. Probably the remnant of the Hebrew nation who, later, returned from captivity had profited in the school of Media (it is thought that they prompted the Median iconoclasts); probably, also, many Jews (besides the grandson of Eliashib the H.P., who married Sanballat's daughter) married into settlers' families; and the leaven worked. The Word of God (if only the Pentateuch), when really prized, is safeguard enough against idolatry. They might have pleaded, it may be, in answer to Christ's charge, 'Ye worship that which ye know not,' that 'Moses, without 'the prophets' and their 'testimony of Jesus,' could carry them no further than that semi-light; yet Christ declared that to 'believe Moses' was to know Him (John 5. 46), and that to know Him was to know God (John 12. 45). The Samaritan is called ἀλλογενής in Luke 17. 18, and they are distinguished (Matt. 10. 6) from τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἀπολωλότα οἴκου Ἰσραὴλ; yet they were not altogether viewed by the Church as heathen. Cornelius (Acts 10), not Samaria (Acts 8), is always reckoned the first fruits of the Gentiles. 29. Every nation.] Sept. follows the Hebrew idiom (repetition of a word to indicate distribution) ποιοῦντες ἑθνη ἑθνη θεοῦ αὐτῶν; comp. τοπρῶι πρωῒ = every morning (1 Chron. 9. 27); ἄνθρωπος ἄνθρωπος = any man (Num. 9. 10).—Made gods of their own.] Recent 'scientists' desire to demonstrate that religion, like every other human peculiarity, is the inevitable outcome of an undirected process of Evolution. The whole course of their argument involves one or other of two assumptions—'either there is no God, and it must have taken a long time to invent Him; or there is a God, but men were born, or created, or developed, without any sense or feeling of His existence, and the acquisition of such a sense must of necessity have been the work of time' (Duke of Argyll). Both these assumptions fail the moment it is perceived that religion, as distinct from particular systems of religion, is an invariable characteristic of humanity, that the sense of Divine Existence, so far from being a comparatively modern faculty, a last result of intellectual development, is in fact a corollary and consequence of our mental constitution, a primary and universal feature of our common humanity. Cf. 'The creeds which the Indo-Aryan and Iranian religion embody were derived from a common source, and all that is true, ennobling, and spiritual in them is due to that origin. The best in religion is the first in time; the effect of religious development as observed in history has mostly been not gradual elevation to higher levels of belief and practice, but progressive decline, degradation, and decay.'—Cook, Origins of Religion.—Houses.] Buildings connected with the worship on the high places are frequently mentioned.—Samaritans.] i.e. former inhabitants of the land of Israel. The word occurs here only in O. T. Strictly it should mean dwellers in the city of Samaria; but we find Samaria used earlier (though less frequently) of the land than of its after-capital (1 Kin. 13. 32, and cp. Hos. 8. 5; Amos 3. 9; Ezek. 16. 53). As a land it was continually diminishing in extent; Judah had long ago absorbed Simeon and Dan; Pul and Tiglath removed Reuben, Gad, and half Manasseh (1 Chr. 5. 26), and Naphtali (ch. 15. 29). At this date 'Israel' meant simply the city of Samaria and a few adjacent towns.

30. Succoth-benoth, &c.] The Assyrian goddess Zirbanit (the creating lady), wife of Merodach, whose name became corrupted by a confusion between zir (lady) and zarat (tents; Heb. succoth). Ashima was perhaps the Phœnician Esmûn, or Pan, or Æsculapius. Nibhaz and Tartak are unknown; possibly the former (nâbach = to bark) may be a Syrian Anubis, dog-headed deity; and the latter may mean prince of darkness or ill-luck. 'There is some reason for the conjecture that the Jews purposely altered the names of heathen deities by way of derision, and that there is a contemptuous play upon words in the titles here given.'—Tristram. 31. Adrammelech.] i.e. the glorious king.—Anammelech.] 'Probably a caricature of Anunnit, the sun-goddess of the Babylonians.'—Tristram. Rawlinson and Cotton regard these as the male and female power of the sun; Cheyne, however, considers kings; Esarhaddon held his court at Babylon, not at Nineveh, which no previous king of Assyria had done, proclaiming himself as king of both (G. Smith). Nineveh is not mentioned after Manasseh's reign. Babylon, which Sennacherib had destroyed, was rebuilt by Esarhaddon, who held his court there half the year (Sayce in the Variorum Teacher's Bible, p. 100). Esarhaddon conquered Egypt at least as far as Thebes; Tirhakah, Sennacherib's old enemy, retiring into Ethiopia. Though uncannonical, and in the strict sense (2 Pet. 1. 21), uninspired, yet its beauty and its instructiveness (cf. Art. vi.), and its truthful exposition of what the penitent king's feelings were likely to have been, and moreover its value as clear testimony before Gospel-days to the truth, that even from the darkest reprobation the free will of man and the grace of God may achieve a deliverance, claim for it (at least as an illustration) a position in the history of the Hebrew Monarchies.—Brought him again.] 'Learn therefore that God not only forgives the penitent but reinstates them in their former dignity' (*Apost. Ps. 86. 15.—The evils of men.] i.e. which His just anger has led him to bring on men, as Joel 2. 13 shows. 7. Promised repentance.] i.e. that repentance on His part spoken of above; it is a human way of expressing that God never afflicts willingly, that His will is loving-kindness, which would also be His universal law, save that man compels Him for a while to lay it aside; yet is He ever ready to revert to it at the earliest possible opportunity; the Psalmist's appeal (51. 1 & 69. 16) to this feature in God's character is similar. That man's repentance is not only God's appointment, but also God's gift, is proof of the reality of this repentance in the Divine mind.—Appointed repentance.] i.e. on man's part, as the condition of the Divine repentance being carried into action. Cicero says, 'Quem pœnitet peccasse, pœne est innocens'; i.e. remorse for sin almost constitutes innocence; God's scheme for making man's repentance avail and His own mercy practicable goes further; God's love embraces the returning penitent, and reinstates him just as though he had never wandered; the chain of His love is as though it had never been broken, and the penitent sinner is accounted righteous, as though he had never sinned. 8. God of the just.] Equally, through Christ, of the justified; rightly he calls him later 'God of them that repent.'—Not sinned.] Not a fact, but so humility and shame make them seem to him; he feels himself, not only less than the least of all saints, but chief of sinners, the sinner (cp. Luke 7. 47), the debtor of 10,000 talents (Matt. 18. 24); it was not true that the patriarchs needed no repentance, but they had no such need, he felt, as he. Much in the language here ascribed to Manasseh is calculated to call to mind one of the humblest of God's saints, and this reference to his case by the poet may with advantage be read here by us, who may be conscious of sharing the sin of both:—

'What can we do, o'er whom the unbeholden
Hangs in a night with which we cannot cope?
What but look sunward, and with faces golden
Speak to each other softly of a hope?
Can it be true, the grace He is declaring?
Oh let us trust Him, for his words are fair!
Man, what is this, and why art thou despairing?
God shall forgive thee all but thy despair.
Truly He cannot, after such assurance,
Truly He cannot and He shall not fail;
Nay, they are known, the hours of thine endurance,
Daily thy tears are added to the tale;

Not as one blind and deaf to our beseeching,
Neither forgetful that we are but dust,
Not as from heavens too high for our up-reaching, Coldly sublime, intolerably just.'

2 Sam. 6. 6). Chr. v. 20 (probably accidentally) omits 'in the garden,' and Syriac reads there 'in his house, in the garden of treasure.' Cf. 2 Chr. 28. 27, note.

<sup>2</sup> K. xxi.—19. Amon.] His mother's name, Meshullemeth, means one devoted to God (cp. Ezra 8. 16), but she was perhaps an Edomite. Jotbah was near Ezion-geber (Num. 33. 33). It is probable that he was not the son of his father's idolatrous days; but it is generally thought that his own name has connection with idolatry. Amon (= the invisible) was the god of No (Thebes, rightly called No-amon in Nah. 3. 8, R.V.), the Sun-god (Jupiter-amon), and the name of Manasseh's heir may point to a transfer of the allegiance of Judah from Assyria to its rival Egypt, now rising into power under Psammitichus. Cp. Jer. 2. 18, 36, 37, and the policy of Josiah, and of his son and his successors. Wordsworth, however, derives the name from aman, to establish, and certainly we meet with the name before any Egyptian connection existed to account for it (1 Kin. 22. 26). Prideaux makes Manasseh's captivity last one year only, 677-676; others attribute his restoration to the death of Esarhaddon, 667 B.C.; Amon was born in 665 B.C. For arguments that the book of Judith in the Apocrypha is historic, that Nabuchodonosor (1. 1) is Esarhaddon's son and successor Sennacherib, who defeated Belshazzar (Arphaxad, 1. 5)

king of Media in the battle of Ragau, see Prudeau, i. 38. It seems altogether inconsistent with this idea, that the Assyrian general, Holofernes, has to inquire (5. 3) who the Jews are, and that Joachim (? Eliakim or Hilkiah) the H. P. is spoken of as supreme ruler, no king being named. Pusey considers that Manasseh was sent back by Esarhaddon 'as a trusted tributary, a frontier power against Egypt.' Josiah seems to have been ruler of the whole kingdom, N. and S. (2 Chr. 34. 6). <sup>20</sup> Erit.] The terrible picture of moral and religious depravity sketched by Zephaniah describes Judah at this period. <sup>23</sup> Servants of Amon.] Points rather to some palace-cabal than to insurrection. recording perhaps God's forgiving mercy to his grandfather. Jedidah means Beloved (cp. Jedidah, beloved of the Lord, 2 Sam. 12. 25); Adaiah, Jehovah hath adorned: suggestive names.—Unfortunately, we have only the Chronicler's brief record (c. 3) of Josiah's minority. Doubtless, at Josiah's accession, pure religion was not friendless, although the persecution by Manasseh had deprived it of its chief champions and in the previous 57 years the kingdom had twice over been deluged with all the abominations of idolatry. Probably, as was Joash's case, the young king was influenced by a party of reformers, and, on coming of age, he commenced a series of reforms more sweeping than those of any previous reforming king. About Josiah's 6th year the Scythians, according to Herodotus (i. 104), overran Media, and defeating Cyaxares its king, who was then besieging Nineveh, they became for some time masters of 'all Asia.' They appear to have advanced into Palestine as far as Askalon, when P'sammitichus (then besieging Ashdod) met them and persuaded them to retire. Bethshean (12 miles S. of the Sea of Galilee) 'received the name Scythopolis (2 Macc. 12. 29) under the Selucidæ during the Scythian occupation' (Tristram). It was probably the moral effect of this invasion, 'the

2 C. xxxiv.—3. Eighth.] Few brighter examples of early piety, followed by a consistent life, are to be found in history—the heart first, then the hand, given to God; his people's speedy relapse proves that their reform was rather due to force of circumstances. Historians and prophets attest that the mass of the people, and 'the princes' or elders of the people who had a constitutional share in the government, were still attached to the fascinating local superstitions.—Twelfth.] By 'seeking' he found; by thinking he had prepared the way for action. Asa, Joash, and Josiah appear to have become independent at 20. The civil reforms that made Josiah's reign that of an ideal king (Jer. 20. 15, 16) probably began now.—Began to purge.] The reforms of Josiah, are summarised: (1) those which he began in the 12th year of his reign, and (2) those resulting from the special impulse given by the national ceremony of the 18th year (2 Kin. 23. 3) after the discovery of the book of the Law.—Groves.] Rather, asherahs (Var.: R.V. Asherim), vs. 4, 7 also; cf. p. 252, note.—Carved.] Rather, graven, v. 4 also; see

But not improbably the death of Assurbanipal and the precarious situation of that great king's successor, Saracus, encouraged Josiah to assert a sovereignty over part of Jeroboam's kingdom.

Z. i.—Zephaniah probably prophesied before Josiah's reformation, for he speaks of gross idolatry and depravation of public worship as prevalent in Judah together with shameless oppression and corruption. 'The Hebrew commonwealth was almost incredibly corrupt; it was thoroughly infected with the most malignant forms of political and spiritual disease. The interior of the Temple, which had been suffered to fall into ruinous repair, was an apt symbol of the spiritual decay that was eating out the very heart of the national life and unity and strength.'—Cox. Zephaniah speaks of Nineveh's fall (foretold by Nahum) as still in the future (ch. 2. 12-15), but he predicts, in general terms, the Chaldean invasion (the view that Scythian inroads are meant cannot be sustained); it is to involve Judah and her neighbours and also Ethiopia and Assyria. He promises, however, Messianic blessings to a remnant of the Chosen Nation, when purified by affliction and brought back from captivity, Jehovah being depicted as the king of Israel in the midst of it in language which shows that the Messianic prophecies of Isaiah (9. 5 & 12. 6) were well remembered. The promised blessings would be extended to all the nations of the earth.—1. Zephaniah.] Perhaps he was a great-grandson of Hezekiah. 2. All.] Omit things. He names three classes: (1) those who avow idolatry in their very homes; (2) those who profess fealty to Jehovah, but really trust another king (melek; it may be Baal or Moloch), renegades; (3) the utterly indifferent, living without God in the world.

They halt between two opinions: they swear by Jehovah and also by Maleham. — Malcham.] Rather, their Melech, Var. = Molech, i.e. king of heaven; R.V. marg. their king. Zephaniah passes on (chs. 1, 2)—in a prophecy which for comprehensiveness is scarcely surpassed in Scripture, and with abundant minute allusions to the facts and events of the age—to foretell judgment coming on every class, nobles, traders, wealthy classes, covetous, grasping, oppressive. They may seem to escape notice, but God shall search them out with candles. He urges obdurate Judah, while there is yet time, to seek the Lord, to seek righteousness and meekness; the great day of the Lord's wrath is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly—but Zephaniah does not specify the nation which God has appointed as His instrument of chastisement. His doom embraces Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Ethiopia, Assyria; he names specially Nineveh, now an exulting city, shortly to be a desolation and a byword. Once more (ch. 3) he points at Judah's rotten condition; princes, judges, prophets, priests, all are bad. God will not spare them any more than other peoples; but, hereafter, those peoples shall learn to offer pure worship, and the enlightening of the Gentiles shall tend to the glory, the restoration, of God's people Israel. [He names the land beyond the rivers of Ethiopia to describe the very ends of the earth. Ethiopia was the southernmost part of the known world (ep. Ezek. 30. 9): even thence 'shall the new Church draw adherents.'] An afflicted and poor, but trustful, remnant shall be left, and a day shall come when once again the Lord shall be in the midst of his people, 'Immanuel' be their cry, and their captivity be ended.

J. i.—1. Jeremiah.] i.e. Jehozah layeth the foundation (possibly referred to in v. 10). Hilkiah = portion of Jehorah, the name of Jeremiah's father, was a common name, and nothing connects him with the High Priest who found the lost book of the Law (2 Kin. 22. 8). But Jeremiah's priestly origin implies a good literary training, and there are many indications of his high birth and station. He was about 20 at this time. We have in ch. 1 his preparation for his work.—Anathoth.] Cf. 1 Kin. 2. 26, note; the meaning of the name (= answers, echoes) explains in part the manner of Isaiah's allusion to it (10.30). Anathoth was a little more than an hour's walk from Jerusalem, but not in sight of the Holy City. It was the home of Abiathar (1 Kin. 2. 26). 2. Came.] The tense has a frequentative sense; God's will and pleasure was the only law that governed it. 3. Also.] More exactly, under Josiah 18 years, Jehoahaz three months, Jehoiakim 11 years, Jehoiachin three months, Zedekiah 11 years; i.e. 40½. Probably the heading was altered from time to time as fresh matter was added.—Fifth month.] The 10th day of it (2 Kin. 25. 8 has 7th, reading zain for yod) was long kept as a day of mourning (Zech. 7. 3), because then the capture of the preceding month was carried to its terrible conclusion; Nebuzaradan burned the Temple and palaces, razed the walls, and removed the great bulk of the population (ch. 52. 12). 4. Then.] R.V. now; Sept. Vulg. and. 5. Before.] A statement concerning God's purpose similar to those about John (Luke 1. 15), Samson (Judg. 13. 5), and we may add Christ (Luke 1. 35), of whom Jeremiah was typical in more than mere name (cf. 1 Pet. 2. 6). The conviction of the truth of this was a necessity alike for the young king and the young prophet. Had Josiah fancied that he held his power, not as David's heir, but because there were some special virtues in him which entitled him to it; had Jeremiah fancied that he was a prophet, not in fulfilment of a Divine destiny, but because there was in him a certain aptitude for uttering Divine discourses and foreseeing calamities, both alike must have failed to fulfil their mission. 'Nothing but the persuasion—marked was I and sealed for this function before I had done good or evil—written and re-written in a man's heart, could sustain him against the conflicts outward and inward which pursue the righteous king and the true prophet.'—Maurice.—

That he spoke of the Wine-cup of God's anger to be drunk (ch. 25) by Gentiles, the Jews are ready to admit; promises concerning Messiah they would appropriate wholly to themselves (ch. 23. 5 & 33. 15); that the Messiah should be, more than Son of Da-

This caldron symbolizes the Chaldean empire of Nabopolassar (seething with the stripes of Babylon, Nineveh, Media, and Elam), whose overflowing, as the instrument of God's vengeance, he is to predict. (less literal) fürsten.—Throne. See refs. Attention is called to the judicial nature of the calamity; as the Babylonian king is God's 'servant' (ch. 25. 9), so this military tribunal is executant of God's judgment (v. 16). The somewhat confused description, which hastens to describe the judging, before naming the siege, has led some to render encampment or tent; but the word never has any such meaning, and instances of similar confusion, of the intermixture of the real and the figurative, are frequent in Jer., e.g. ch. 6. 3-5. 16. Utter, &c.] Perhaps, rather, pronounce, or (as is the prime meaning of dāvar) array; but it is rendered speak in rs. 6. 17; R.V. marg. speak with them of (ch. 12. 1); Var. hold my session upon them; rendered give sentence against them in ch. 4. 12.—Who have. R.V. in that (Variorum, because) they (i.e. Judah) have.—Other.] Sept. ἀλλοτρίους; Vulg. alienis. 17. Dismayed . . . confound.] The Hebrew has one word only, meaning lit. break to pieces. Sept. appears to desire to mark the play by a rhyme: μὴ φοβηθῆς ἀπὸ προσώπου αὐτῶν, μηδὲ πτοηθῆς ἐναντίον αὐτῶν. It might be rendered, 'Be not dismayed at them, lest I make thee dismayed' (so Variorum; R.V. I dismay thee (as an active transitive verb, however, dismay has passed out of use). To speak as commanded was to honour God, no other course could be followed by honour from God. 18. For, &c.] Cp. Acts 18. 9, 10. Seemingly we have but one figure, the two latter parts of which (Sept. omits the pillar) are descriptive of the first; the prophet shall be as secure as an impregnable stronghold, which stands as firm as a building whose supports are iron pillars, and is as unassailable as though its walls were of bronze (cf. ch. 15. 20); Jeremiah was enabled to drink in confidence from these words (ch. 20. 11); he that hath ears to hear, let him hear, learn to be bold for God, 'fearing no man, dare his God to fear.'—Against . . . against. It was Jeremiah's sad mission to be 'a man of contention to the whole earth' (ch. 15. 10-18); to live 'a life-long martyrdom,' struggling against all the powers and classes of the state, e.g. ch. 22 (kings), ch. 23 (priests and prophets)—a reluctant but conscientious prophet of evil to his own country. — Kings. Perhaps merely equivalent to the royal power; or it may indicate that he was to prophesy during more than one reign. 19. Not prevail.] i.e. so far as to shorten his days. Strongly compares the fulfilment of this promise, as found in the history, with the fulfilment of Christ's prayer for Peter, 'that thy faith fail not'; it failed almost immediately afterward, yet not ultimately.—In ch. 2. God reminds his people whence they are fallen—once holy and beloved as a bride—now forgetful of all God's past dealing; no other nation from Chittim to Kedar, from the far west to the far east, have changed their gods, been guilty of such folly as to forsake a fountain of spring water for a broken rain-water tank; no other bride ever forgot, but prized, her wedding girdle. Though faithless (ch. 3), God will take her back, if she be ready to cry, 'My Father, thou art the Husband of my youth.' He continues in the same strain down to the end of ch. 6, urging them by every plea, by shame, memory, fear, to circumcise their hearts (cf. ch. 9. 26).

2 CHRONICLES XXXIV. 8-28.

<sup>3</sup> AND it came to pass in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying, <sup>4</sup> Go up to Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is <sup>a</sup> brought into the house of the LORD, which <sup>b</sup> the keepers of the door have gathered of the people: <sup>5</sup> and let them <sup>c</sup> deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the house, <sup>6</sup> unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house. <sup>7</sup> Howbeit <sup>d</sup> there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.

<sup>8</sup> Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God. <sup>9</sup> And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup> And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house: <sup>11</sup> even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to Shaphan's family is prominent: one son, Ahikam, was Jeremiah's chief protector, and father of the governor Gedaliah (Jer. 26. 24; 2 Kin. 25. 22). Cp. Jer. 29. 3 & 36. 10-12, 25; Ezek. 8. 11. Luby adopts the view of Reuss. 5. Doers.] Perhaps workmen (as Chron. v. 10) or artisans better suits the two places. The first are overlookers; the others actual workers; Vulg. detur fabris per prepositos. The first combine the duties of contractor and

Mistake and imposition were alike impossible. Other existing Scriptures abounded in quotations from it; it is not impossible that (as in the case of the Samaritan Pentateuch) persons could repeat the whole five books; large portions were embodied in the Liturgies; and some copies, if not many, must have existed in the houses of men of learning and wealth, and in the schools of the prophets. 9. Gathered.] Heb. nāthak. Not the word (disaph) in r. 4 (which occurs again in r. 20 with a rather different meaning—the reception among one's own people, joining the assembly in Hades), but poured out (as in Chr. rs. 24. 25), i.e. from the chest into bags, as in ch. 12. 10; Sept. and Vulg. melted down, which is the commoner meaning; R.V. emptied out. — In the house.] Strictly speaking the collecting box was outside the house, in the Court (cf. 2 K. xxii. 8, 9; 2 C. xxxiv. 12—17.)

This is implied in vs. 2, 3. But the book itself (more than 850 years old) he had never seen, nor had the awfulness of some of the passages, such as Deut. 28 & 29, or Lev. 26 (which evidently Huldah has in mind) ever before so struck him. It came home to him how terrible, and how imminent the danger was. Nowhere does the Sacred History supply better illustration than in this story and the story of Josiah's son Jehoiaquim (Jer. 36, 21–26), of Christ's words, 'Everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be re-proved; but he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God.' <sup>13</sup> Go.] 'Bring hither the ephod' is no longer heard. Apparently prophets are the only revealers of God's will at this time. Why Huldah is consulted rather than Jeremiah or Zephaniah, we are not distinctly told; but cf. v. 14, note. We find here together (as though there were a fashion in names) Huldah (mole), Achbor (mouse), Shaphan (coney). The mother generally chose the name, subject to the father's approval. Seven prophets, besides Huldah, were descended from Rahab. Miriam (Ex. 15. 20; Mic. 6. 4), Deborah (Judg. 4. 4), Isaiah's wife (Isa. 8. 3, note), Anna (Luke 2. 36), and Philip's daughters (Acts 21. 9) are styled prophetesses, but the word does not always mean more than wife or relative of a prophet. the evil was approaching, out of the way of which (Isa. 57. 1) God moves the righteous, delivers the godly (2 Pet. 2. 9). Some of his council were for alliance with Egypt (Jer. 2. 18, 36). Jeremiah opposed equally an alliance with Egypt or with Assyria. Josiah 'sped to battle, fought and died.' Behold the goodness and severity of God!

2 C. xxxiv.—31. Place. Lit. standing; cf. 2 Kin. 11. 14, note. 32. And Benjamin. Ball suggests that this addition (occurring here only) may be a corruption of 'to the covenant' (Kin. v. 3); the resemblance, however, between ubinyamin and babb'rith is but slight; the absence of 'to the covenant' here would seem to point to adopting the literal rather than the figurative meaning of 'stand.' The expression 'Judah and Benjamin' occurs not infrequently.

prophets as Jeremiah and Zephaniah, but others whose names have not been preserved, and all belonging to the schools of the prophets. The prophets (e.g. Jer. 6. 13) are constantly coupled with priests. Probably in the Chronicler's day the Levites were more prominent than the prophets.—Read. Perhaps, rather, caused to be read (cp. ch. 22. 16, 10). The septennial reading enjoined by the law (Deut. 31. 10-13) had of course not taken place since Manasseh's accession, 75 years ago. 3. By a pillar. Or, on the (his) platform (Var. and R.V. marg.). H.P., is called in 1 Chr. 27. 5, R.V. m, the chief minister. In ch. 25. 18 Zephaniah is called the second priest. In 2 Chr. 24. 11 we have the officer of the H. (R.V. chief) P. Probably they were deputy high priests (sagan; so Syr., Arab., Targ.; Sept. ἱερεῖς τῆς δευτερώσεως). We do not find mention, however, of more than one at a time. Perhaps, therefore, if the plural be the correct reading here (the sing. is usual before the captivity, the plural after), the heads of the 24 courses, the 'chief priests' of the N.T., are meant; or it may be merely ordinary priests as distinguished from the H.P.—[Baal, &c.] Rather, the Baal (i.e. Baal-pillar), and the asherah (vs. 6, 7, 15 also), Variorum.—[Host of heaven.] These altars were in the two courts; the asherah was in the Temple itself (ch. 21. 5, 7).—[Burned.] As the law directed (Deut. 7. 25).—[Without.] Not to defile the city.—[Fields of Kidron.] At the foot of the Mt. of Olives.—[Unto Bethel.] The beginning of the fulfilment of 1 Kin. 13. 2; it was but ten miles distant. <sup>5</sup>. Put down.] Lit. cause to cease; the same word is rendered took away in v. 11.—[Idolatrous priests.] The word (= uncoverers of spells, or black robed, white being the recognized priestly dress) is chemarim, Syrian for priest of any sort (used even in Ps. 110. 4). This Zeph. 1. 4 was fulfilled. Chemarim is not used of God's lawful priests; but cohanim, a word used of them only, except when joined with Baal, of Dagon, &c.; cf. Hos. 10. 5 and Zeph. 1. 4, note. The chemarim were man-appointed, the cohanim God-appointed. Apparently both (cp. v. 8), though only a portion of the cohanim, burned incense on high places; and that, nominally (2 Chr. 33. 17), as worship of Jehovah, for even the chemarim here are distinguished from priests of Baal and Astarte, of the zodiac (mazzaloth = stations, the Babylonian name for the divisions of the zodiac), and of the stars; and this perhaps was why these cohanim were more leniently dealt with than those attached to the Samaritan high places (v. 20). We have not, however, a very definite knowledge of the nature of the high-place worship after Solomon's days, and consequently have not the means of measuring the guilt attaching to it.—[The sun.] The Assyrians had a distinct deity, the Sun (Samas, whence Bethshemesb); Baal (= lord) is rather Zeus than Phoebus-Apollo; nevertheless Baal, wherever worshipped, is a personification of the Sun. Baal, the universality of whose worship in Canaan before the Hebrew conquest is indicated by the number of names to which Baal is prefixed, is supposed to be either 'a Sun-god, and as such the vehicle and source of physical life and of the generative and productive powers of nature' (Keil)—or is regarded as uniting the characteristics of the Sun-god, Mars and Saturn, i.e. 'the engendering, preserving, and destructive principles' (Movers, 'The Phœnicians'). The early Assyrian worship separates the worship of Bel from that of Samas (Shemesh) the Sun-god (Rawlinson). However, it is certain that Baal-worship was a grossly licentious and demoralizing cultus, as the local form of it recorded in Num. 25 shows. Cf. p. 344. <sup>6</sup>. Grove.] Rather, Asherah, and so in vs. 4, 7, 15. Probably (see p. 252) some emblem of Ashtoreth. The expressions here, however (v. 7 also), favour Movers' view that it was the name of a distinct deity, perhaps (sher = happiness) the goddess of luck, or a title of Ashtoreth, the 'grove' being an image of her—usually of wood (v. 14), but in part graven (2 Chr. 33. 22, note), i.e. of stone or metal ('powder'). Asherah is constantly coupled with Baal in Scripture (Judg. 6. 25, &c.), as Ashtoreth (and not asherah) is in Phœnician inscriptions; e.g. that of Eshmunazer (4th cent.) has, 'We have built temples to the gods of the Sidonians, a temple for Baal and a temple for Ashtoreth, our lady. This 'grove' was probably introduced by Amon, for Manasseh removed his (ch. 21. 7; 2 Chr. 33. 15).—[At.] Rather, in the tormented of.—[Graves.] Cf. 2 Chr. 34. 4, note.—[Children of the people.] Cf. 2 Chr. 34. 4, note; rendered the common people in Jer. 26. 23, and so Variorum and R.V. here; but in 2 Chr. 35. 5 (note) the same expression evidently means simply the laity as distinguished from the tribe of Levi. <sup>7</sup>. So

On decorative curtains for heathen temples, see Dict. Antiq., art. Veil. 8. Priests.] Cf. v. 5, note. Collected into Jerusalem, the priests of the local sanctuaries in Judah were not deprived of maintenance, yet, as being defiled, were not suffered to wait on God, or eat the food which fell to the lot of His priests in their company.—Defiled.] And thus probably accomplished finally what pious predecessors had attempted in vain. The popular prejudice could no longer favour high places, where God had hitherto been persistently, though illegally, worshipped.—Geba to Beersheba.] The 'manner of Beersheba' became proverbial. Amos (8. 14 & 5. 5) speaks of its worship as on a par with that of the Calves.—The two places (compare 'from Beersheba to mount Ephraim,' 2 Chr. 19. 4, and 'Beersheba to the valley of Hinnom,' Neh. 11. 30), like the former from Dan to Beersheba, mark the limits of David's kingdom. The wells of Beersheba (Gen. 21. 31) are the first interesting site reached by the ordinary traveller entering Palestine from the south. Beersheba was in Simeon, outside the circuit of Samuel, and so his sons were his deputies there (1 Sam. 8. 2). Ophni, and not Geba, was the most northerly city of Benjamin; but it was unimportant, and lay beyond the line of defence, viz. the Wady Suweinit, in which Geba (now Jeba) was situated, right opposite Michmash (cf. Isa. 10. 29). Asa fortified Geba with the materials of Ramah (1 Kin. 15. 22).—That were . . . which were.] Rather, the one . . . and the one.

This valley (Ge-Hinnom) skirted Jerusalem on the south and west, beginning near the Joppa gate on the southwest, ending with (Aeldam) the south-east corner, where it joins the Kidron valley (see note on 1 Kin. 11. 7) just opposite the Mt. of Offence. The origin of its name is uncertain. 'The Tophet' was the part of the valley specially devoted to Molech-worship. The word probably comes from tuphan, to spit, and means abomination (possibly from tôph, the drum which drowned the victims' cries, i.e. if (2 Kin. 16.3, note) not put to death before they were passed through the fire); or from a root taph, to burn (Sans. tap; Pers. taftan). The refuse-heap of the city was here, and so it became proverbially abominable.—Molech.] Always the Molech, i.e. the king, except 1 Kin. 11. 7 (Variorum). 11. Horses.] The dedication of a white chariot and white horses to the Sun was of Persian origin (Herod. i. 189). These may have been the gift of Manasseh, Amon, or Ahaz. Cf. Ovid, Met. ii. 47. Horses were sacrificed to the Sun; there were also sacred horses connected with the worship of Hercules (Tac. An. xii. 13). These chariots, emblematic of the Sun's course, appeared in the procession in honour of the Sun.—At . . . by.] Lit. from . . . towards, meaning that their stables were there. The chambers were built to receive tithes and other valuables (Neh. 10. 38 & 13. 5; 1 Kin. 6. 5).—Nathan-melech] = gift of the king (or Molech, the sun-god); perhaps, like Ebed-melech (servant of the king), he was (as chamberlain literally means) a eunuch (Jer. 38. 10).—Suburbs.] Probably the meaning is precincts (so R.V.), or porticoes (Gesenius); but the word occurs nowhere else

It is true that many hundred dolmens (as the Celtic monuments, consisting of one horizontal stone placed on two vertical ones, are called) exist in Palestine, but there seems no need for Ball's supposition that Jeroboam's 'high place' was no more than one of these; cf. ch. 25. 9. The golden Calf did not require Josiah's destroying hand, for (probably in Hoshea's reign, ch. 17. 3) it had been broken up, and its gold 'carried into Assyria for a present to king Jareb' (= the contentious, or arguing, king of Assyria, the rod of God's anger; Hos. 8. 6 & 10. 6. <sup>16</sup> The mount.] The opposite hill-side, not the hill of the altar.—Burned. &c.] Of course before the altar was stamped to powder, which, more Hebraico, has been named first (r. 15).—According to, &c.] Intimating, perhaps, that this was his reason for doing what would otherwise be specially abhorrent to Jewish feeling. Jeremiah's (22. 15, 16) testimony concerning him is, that he 'ate and drank,' i.e. lived the life of contentment with his God-appointed sphere, not seeking to aggrandize self at the cost of his people (1 Kin. 12. 4), doing 'judgment and justice' to all classes, so proving true acquaintance with the mind and character of God—increasing it also (John 7. 17). The dawn of the day described in Prov. 1. 24-33 could no longer be delayed. Yet outwardly all seemed well (Chr. c. 33).—Because, &c. God repeats by Jeremiah (15. 4) that it was Manasseh who had corrupted the nation past redemption. From his day the national hardness of heart became such that no 'rising early,' no earnestness on the part of God or of prophets like Jeremiah and Zephaniah, could touch Judah. 27. Out of my sight. God's eye is for ever on a cast-away people, an eye of pity and tenderness, even though it be of anger; but they are cast away from His favour, and lose the light of His countenance (Ps. 93. 14; Rom. 11. 2).—This city, &c. R.V. this city which I have chosen, even Jerusalem.

2 K. xxiii.—21. Passover. Not that the Passover had not hitherto been observed in his days; but the newly-found Law disclosed where the observance had been defective. The spirit of the people moreover, as the king hoped, was now roused, and they would attend in large numbers, and from both kingdoms, as in the days of old. In exactness of ritual observance (cf. 2 Chr. 30. 2, 18), in superabundance of offerings, and in the fact that now there was no great mass of people who, though they had opportunity and invitation, scorned to come (2 Chr. 30. 10), this feast surpassed even Hezekiah's, though that had surpassed any from the days of Solomon. Even Samuel's time was inferior in one respect: the Tabernacle was less glorious than the Temple. Then, however, the nation was at unity in itself, all the tribes would keep the feast at one Sanctuary; and now the N. kingdom was little more than a name.—The . . . this. R.V. adopts the Version of 1611, 'this book of the covenant;' Ital., rightly, in questo libro del patto; this book = the before-named (ch. 22. 8) copy, which 'gave the impulse to the reforming movement.'

2 C. xxxv.—1. First month. At the appointed season: in Hezekiah's case there had been necessary delay (ch. 30. 2, 3). 2. Charges. Rather, duties, or (as Vulg.) offices, viz. the superior functions, the inferior pertaining to the Levites (i.e. to praise and minister before the priests, ch. 8. 14). The corresponding expression in 1 Esdras 1. 2 is according to their daily courses. The word is different from that rendered (the 24) courses in rs. 4, 10, and that rendered divisions in Ezra 6. 18. It means a watching, a heeding of command. 3. Taught. The frequent reference to Levites as teachers points to the conclusion that 'priest' in Mal. 2. 7 is meant to include the whole tribe. The text-book was the book of the Law (ch. 17. 9), i.e. the Pentateuch, and the due order of service (ch. 30. 22); God's judgments and God's law (Deut. 33. 10); cf. Neh. 8. 7.—Holy. Cf. ch. 23. 6.—Put, &c. Manasseh put his Asherah in the Temple; Amon trespassed more and more (see 2 Kin. 23. 4); but a removal of the Ark would surely have been recorded.—Ark. The chief emblem of the presence of God (cp. 1 Sam. 4), and the symbol of the covenant betwixt God and his people. When Messiah shall be actually present (Jer. 3. 16)

Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build; <sup>h</sup>it shall not be a burden upon your shoulders: serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel, <sup>4</sup> and prepare yourselves by the <sup>i</sup>houses of your fathers, after your courses, according to the <sup>k</sup>writing of David king of Israel, and according to the <sup>l</sup>writing of Solomon his son. <sup>5</sup> And <sup>m</sup>stand in the holy place according to the divisions of the families of the fathers of your brethren the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites. <sup>6</sup> So kill the passover, and <sup>n</sup>sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

<sup>7</sup> And Josiah <sup>o</sup>gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance. <sup>8</sup> And his princes gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: Hilkiah and Zechariah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen. <sup>9</sup> Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah and Jeiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

If so, more careful study of the newly-found Book now enabled Josiah to explain that to bear the Ark was no longer the priests' function, that they had other duties to perform as attendants on the House and the Priests (1 Chr. 23, 26–32).—It . . . be.] R.V. there shall no more be. <sup>4</sup> Courses.] i.e. divisions; cf. note, 1 Chron. 23. 3, ad fin. 1 Esdras 1. 5 says, 'According as David the king of Israel prescribed, and according to the magnificence of Solomon his son, and standing in the temple according to the several dignity of the families of you the Levites.' killed the passover, and the priests <sup>9</sup> sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites <sup>7</sup> flayed them. <sup>12</sup> And they removed the burnt offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, as it is written <sup>8</sup> in the book of Moses. And so did they with the oxen.

<sup>13</sup> And they <sup>4</sup> roasted the passover with fire according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings <sup>5</sup> sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them speedily among all the people. <sup>14</sup> And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron. <sup>15</sup> And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their place, according to the <sup>2</sup> commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and the porters <sup>9</sup> waited at every gate; they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them. <sup>16</sup> So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

<sup>22</sup> Surely there was not holden such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah; <sup>23</sup> but in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

<sup>18</sup> And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup> In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

<sup>20 a</sup> After all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Charechemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him. <sup>21</sup> But he sent ambassadors that during this interval Judah enjoyed comparative peace, prosperity, and independence, until the abrupt and astounding close of Josiah's career. The parallel non-Israelite history is so scanty and uncertain as not even to afford a clue to Josiah's reasons for opposing Necho II. (the 5th or 6th king of Psammetichus' dynasty) and his expedition against either a last ruler of Nineveh or the first Chaldean king of Babylon, called here of Assyria as now possessing the territories of Nineveh. In 1 Esdras 1. 28 is added, 'Not regarding the words of the prophet Jeremy spoken by the mouth of the Lord.' The date of the cardinal event, the Medo-Chaldean conquest of Nineveh, is still uncertain. Prieux puts it before 612 B.C. Ball says this king of Assyria was Esarhaddon II. (Sarcus), the last of the rulers of Nineveh. Either the siege of Nineveh, by the combined forces of Cyaxares the Mede (father-in-law of Nebuchadnezzar) and Nabopolassar the Chaldean, was just about to take place, or (so Josephus) their success induced Pharaoh to pause in his advance. Many assign 605 B.C.; some 625 B.C.; the Babylonian Cylinders give 583 B.C. Ball points out that Nineveh must have fallen before 606 B.C., the fourth year of Jehoiakim, because Assyria does not occur in the list of countries mentioned by Jeremiah in that year as destined to be subdued by Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. 25. 19-26). Payne Smith places it 2 years after the battle of Megiddo (Sp. Com. p. 314).

2 C. xxxv. — 20. Came.] R.V. went. — Carchemish] = citadel of Chemosh or of Mesha. 'On the right bank of the Euphrates, where a bend in the river facilitates a ford, or rather a ferry, about 14 miles below Birajik, the present great thoroughfare into Mesopotamia. It was renamed by the Greeks Hierapolis, which name it still retains under its Arabic form of Yerablis. At the foot of the great Hittite mound, beneath the remains of the Roman city which extends far into the rich plain, have been exhumed many Hittite sculptures, part of the avenue which led up to the Hittite citadel. This great mound completely commands this important ford and therefore the passage of the Euphrates. The desert south of Damascus being waterless, the ordinary caravan route passed necessarily (as now) by this ford, and across Mesopotamia to the fertile and peopled valley of the Tigris, the valley of the Euphrates being barren and uninhabited. — Tristram. — By Euphrates.] Josephus says, 'to fight with the Medes and Babylonians who had overthrown the dominion of the Assyrians.' — Went out.] i.e. took the field.

2 K. xxiii. — 29. Pharaoh-nechoh.] Milman explains that Necho II. decided to take the offensive against the rival empire of the Euphrates valley, now, probably, weakened by dissensions among the different kingdoms of which it was composed. His design was to gain possession of Carchemish and to make the Euphrates his frontier. The further results of Necho's campaign are unknown, but Necho and his troops are found at Carchemish about four years later (Jer. 46. 2, notes). — Megiddo.] Called by the Romans Legio, now El Lejjūn. The scene of Ahaziah's death (ch. 9. 27). — "The valley of Megiddo" is the name given to the S.E. portion of the Plain of Jezreel, familiarly known to us under its Greek form, the Plain of Esdraelon. This plain is a wide rent in the mountain range of Central Palestine, from the Mediterranean to the Jordan, measuring 12 miles where at its narrowest. Its undulations are very slight, and the watershed, a little to the W. of Mts. Tabor and Gilboa, is an almost imperceptible rise. The Kishon, meandering westward from this point to the north edge of Carmel, is little more than a ditch, forming no valley, but scarcely fordable after rain (Judg. 5. 20, 21). A slight ridge north of the Kishon marks off the western part of the plain, known as the plain of Acre. To the east of the great central portion, three branches slope gently towards the Jordan — the northern from Tabor and Little Hermon, or Jebel ed Dûhy; the central north of Gilboa, running down to Bethshean (Beisan) in the Jordan valley; and the southern fork between mount Gilboa and Engauim, or Jenin, at the opening of which is Jezreel, and which may be looked on as strictly the Valley (not plain) of Jezreel. This was the great battlefield of Western Asia. Long before the invasion under Joshua, Thothmes III. took the same line of march which Necho II. followed, and in B.C. 1577 crushed the great Hittite confederacy at Megiddo. In the central and western portions of the plain was waged the battle of the Kishon, when Barak delivered his nation from the iron yoke of Jabin. The eastern part was the scene of Gideon's great victory over the vast hordes of Midian. On the same field the chivalry of Saul fell before the Philistines, in the battle of Gilboa. On the edge of the central plain, Shalmaneser dealt his fatal blow against the last king of the N. kingdom, Hoshea, thus breaking "the

to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war: for God commanded me to make haste: forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not. <sup>22</sup> Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but <sup>d</sup>disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo.

<sup>23</sup> And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore wounded.

<sup>30</sup> And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre.

bow of Israel;" and on the scene of Sisera's defeat Josiah fell, fighting at Megiddo. The battle-roll of Esdrachon still continues in the struggles of the Crusades, and close by occurred the crowning fight of Hattin, where all was staked and all miserably lost by the Christians. Almost in our own days, Napoleon's battle of Nazareth was fought on the field of Ibarak and Josiah, and with a close repetition of the tactics and the results of the former event, Herodotus speaks of Necho's battle as being ἐν Μαγδόλῳ, evidently a rendering of Megiddo. Armageddon in Rev. 16. 16 means hill of Megiddo. So deeply were the great struggles of which this spot was the scene imprinted on the memory, that Armageddon is taken as the name of the last great conflict of human history.—It is not probable that Necho came by sea to Megiddo. The natural and easy military route was by the coast and round the base of Carmel. Jerusalem lay so entirely out of the line of march that it was quite unnecessary for any hostile force passing by the plain to mask it. Carchemish, the old capital of the Hittite empire, was at that ford of the Euphrates which would be naturally selected by an army advancing either against Nineveh or Babylon.—Tristram.—When, &c.] This (Variorum) is explained to mean at the beginning of the battle; possibly the meaning may be so soon as he recognized him (Chr. r. 22). 'And the princes came against king Josiah' (1 Esdras 1. 29) recalls the Syrian captains surrounding Jehoshaphat at Ramoth. <sup>30</sup> Chariot.] Seemingly (Chron. r. 24) a fresh and lighter chariot ('his second chariot,' 1 Esdras 1. 31) was kept ready in case of need.—Dead.] No other king of Judah died in battle, and Josiah may have lived to almost reach Jerusalem (Chr. r. 24). Zechariah (12. 11), comparing this mourning to that over the rejection of David's Greater Son, may imply that Josiah died at Hadadrimmon (now Ramān), on the road to Jerusalem. Hulda's words, 'gathered into thy grave in peace' (ch. 22. 20), found fulfilment, as indeed she herself indicates, in his escape from those times of trouble now about to follow. The promised peace came, though not (as so often happens with God's promised blessings) in the way man might have anticipated. Necho did not tarry now to take further vengeance on Judah, but probably he felt aggrieved at the election of a new king without reference to him (r. 33). And, indeed, Josiah's act had put an end to all possibility of peace.—Josiah's death was to his subjects a piteous tragedy; faith was paralyzed and the heart of the nation seemed to stand still. Universal sadness and consternation spread through all classes. Every family felt bereaved (Zech. 12. 11, 12), but the "chief mourners" would be the poor and weak (Jer. 22. 15, 16) and the little band of reformers, especially Jeremiah.—Cheyne. Jeremiah's Dirge has not descended to us, but the national mourning became (1 Esdras 1. 32) 'an ordinance to be done continually.' Ecclus. 49. 1-4 compares Josiah's memory to perfume, honey, and music, and classes him with David and Hezekiah as kings not 'defective.'—His own.] Probably in the garden where Manasseh and Amon lay.

2 C. xxxv.—21. What, &c.] The τί ἐμὸν καὶ σὸς of N.T.—House.] Bertheau suggests reading Perath for beth, making Necho say that he is hasting to Euphrates (so Josephus and 1 Esdras 1. 27).—Commanded, . . . haste.] R.V. marg. hath given command to speed me. By God (Elohim) the Egyptian potentate means Providence, or his own oracles, which latter is plainly the meaning of 'from the mouth of God' (nippī Elohim) in r. 22, i.e. his own national god, to whom Egyptian conquerors in their inscriptions refer all their successes. For, everywhere, when a Hebrew speaks of God's utterance (Deut. 8. 3; Josh. 9. 14; 1 Kin. 12. 21; ch. 36. 12; Isa. 1. 20 & 40. 5 & 58. 14 & 62. 2; Jer. 9. 12 & 23. 16; Mic. 4. 4), or pretends to (2 Kin. 18. 25; Isa. 36. 19), the word Jehovah is used. An ancient Egyptian inscription makes Piankhi (king, 750 B.C.) say, 'The Divine shade was over and Zedekiah, were but creatures of a foreign power. There was no longer 'a question of independence, but of choice between two foreign sovereigns. When Judah recovered from the shock of Josiah's death, it found itself in the grasp of the Egyptian Necho' (Stanley). From Necho's interference to the end, 'the kingdom of Judah fell into a state of alternate vassalage to the two conflicting powers of the valleys of the Nile and Euphrates. The shadows of kings were dismissed at the breath of their liege lord. It is a deplorable period of misrule and imbecility. Without ability to defend them, these kings had only the power of entailing the miseries of siege and conquest on their people by rebellions which had none of the dignity but all the melancholy consequences of a desperate struggle for independence' (Milman).—The people.] As on the death by violence of Amaziah and Amon. 'In such cases the people apparently took a part in deciding the succession, which they would not do where the deceased monarch had made arrangements in anticipation of the vacancy.' They passed over Eliakim (God will raise up), the elder brother. Ezekiel seems to acknowledge this right of election, when (19) mourning kings Jehoahaz and Jehoiachin he ignores Jehoiachim and Zedekiah as intruders. He asks, 'What is thy mother?' and answers, 'A lioness,' meaning Judah. At the same time he owns that the former by their oppressive and rapacious conduct deserved to be styed lion's whelps; each 'learned to catch the prey, devoured men.'

<sup>2</sup> K. xxiii. 30.] The kingdom of Judah virtually perished with Josiah. Of Josiah's successors, the two who came to the throne in independence, Jehoahaz and Jehoiachin, reigned for only three months a-piece. The two who reigned 11 years each, Jehoiachim

his own brother Zedekiah (ch. 24. 18). Perhaps it was to place himself on an equality with Eliakim that he took the name Jehoahaz (he whom Jehovah holdeth). But the special name of the Covenant God of the Hebrews appears now (and indeed earlier) to have been embodied in the throne-name taken by the king on his accession. Thus Eliakim becomes Jeho-iakim (Jehovah will raise up) on his accession (v. 34, and compare Gen. 41. 45; Ezra 5. 14; Dan. 1. 7). A change of name upon a king's accession is in accordance with Eastern custom.—[Hamutal.] Mother also of Zedekiah. <sup>33</sup> Riblah.] After overrunning northern Syria for three months, Necho apparently held a court at Riblah on the Orontes (in the N. opening of the mid-Lebanon valley commanding the routes to the Euphrates from Palestine and Phœnicia, and Nebuchadnezzar's headquarters later when besieging both Tyre and Jerusalem, ch. 25. 6, 20, 21). He summoned Jehoahaz as king of a conquered kingdom appointed without his leave and as the head of the Assyrian party (or anti-Egyptian, Jeremiah's party) in Judah, seized him (like a lion in a pit, Ezekiel says), and ended his brief reign by carrying him to Egypt, where God doomed him to remain till his death (Jer. 22. 10-12). In this campaign Necho captured Kadytis (see notes, v. 21 and p. 250). ### JEREMIAH XXVI.

Stand in <sup>a</sup> the court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, <sup>b</sup> all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; <sup>c</sup> diminish not a word: <sup>3</sup> if so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may <sup>e</sup> repent me of the evil, which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings. <sup>4</sup> And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD;

<sup>f</sup> If ye will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you, <sup>5</sup> to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, <sup>g</sup> whom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending them, but ye have not hearkened; <sup>6</sup> then will I make this house like <sup>h</sup> Shiloh, and will make this city <sup>i</sup> a curse to all the nations of the earth.

not promoting the national reformation begun by Josiah, and finally throwing the weight of the royal authority into the opposite scale. In Jehoiakim's 4th year, Jeremiah cannot enter the Temple, but deposes Baruch to make the final public appeal by reading there to assembled Judah the collected warnings of the past 23 years. This Baruch does in the winter of the 5th year; Jehoiakim burns the roll and orders the arrest of both prophet and secretary. Jeremiah then disappears until just before Jehoiakim's death, Judah being left to her predicted doom—desolation by the Chaldeans.—Jehoiakim had apparently regarded his throne as secure. Jeremiah (22, 13–18) describes him as arrogant, tyrannical, unscrupulous, and luxurious, indulging heartlessly a love of splendour (e.g. building a palace by forced labour), whilst his subjects groaned under the burdens of his extravagance, the means for which he partly obtained by perverting the administration of justice. But Jehoiakim witnessed the First Captivity, and died on the very eve of the Second, unregretted, and even denied decent burial.

J. xxvi.—This chapter apparently summarises 'the Temple Sermon' of chs. 7–10, delivered soon after Jehoiakim's accession, and records its consequences. It also illustrates Jeremiah's position and work during the first period of Jehoiakim's reign, up to the crisis of the 4th year. 'In the royal palace and in the Temple he uttered his solemn warnings; his honest zeal offended the priesthood.' The more definite his warnings, the greater the wrath of the prophets and their party; finally, at the explicit prophecy here summarised, the indignation of the people and their leaders boiled over, and they sought to compass his death (Streane, &c.). <sup>2</sup> Stand. Not, as in ch. 2, 2, 'Go and cry'; he dwells now (cf. ch. 7, 2), not at Anathoth, but at Jerusalem, surrounded by that idolatry which city, Temple, and Tophet witnessed (ch. 7, 17, 30, 31).—Court. Cf. p. 213, note; he was standing at the gate leading from the outer (people's) to the inner (priests') court (ch. 7, 2 and v. 10).—Diminish. R.V. keep back (not, however, at Deut. 4, 2 or 12, 32). <sup>3</sup> If so. R.V. it may. <sup>4</sup> Law. Var. teaching. <sup>5</sup> Sent . . both. R.V. send . . even.—Rising up, &c. A characteristic phrase with Jeremiah (from ch. 7, 13 onwards) to denote great earnestness. <sup>6</sup> Like Shiloh. i.e. the God-deserted place, the utterly insignificant Shiloh; cf. note, 1 Sam. 8, 4, ad fin. In ch. 7, 12 Jeremiah gives the cause of the desertion: 'See what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel.' In the first stage of the Jewish Commonwealth, Shiloh and the Tabernacle were what Zion and the Temple were later to the Monarchy. As God abandoned the first national sanctuary for the idolatry of the people and the corruption of the priesthood, and especially for the sins of Eli's sons (note the allusions in detail in Ps. 78, 57–64), so would he abandon Zion and the Temple, the sanctuary of David and Solomon. This prophecy attacked the superstitious trust of the nation in the outward and visible pledges of the sure promises to David—which it could not believe to be conditional.—A curse. i.e. the obvious subject of a curse; a metonymy; cf. 'A reproach and a proverb, a taunt and

<sup>7</sup> So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD. <sup>8</sup> Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die. <sup>9</sup> Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

Of this, Amend your ways is the key-note; he says, Holy ways, not the claim of privilege. We are Jehovah's temple, count with God; mere outward service brings no absolution (ch. 7. 10); God's house must be one of genuine prayer; you use it merely as a den of retreat in the intervals of violence (ch. 7. 11; Matt. 21. 13); take warning by Shiloh, which knows God's presence no more. No words in the Sermon roused greater indignation than those (cf. vs. 9, 11). He goes on—Intercession is vain (ch. 7. 16); burnt offerings, peace offerings, all are vain (ch. 7. 21); obedience is the only true token of a right heart. Well may Jerusalem mourn; the valley of Ben Hinnom shall be Tophet, object of abhorrence, indeed; the burials there shall fill it to overflowing. Mirth shall end; graves shall be desecrated (ch. 8. 1); life be unendurable. The migratory birds return, but Judah never returns back into the right way (ch. 8. 7); persistence in self-sufficiency, fruitlessness, false teaching, that cries Peace, when there is no peace (ch. 8. 8–13), has made it vain for Judah to rouse herself now against coming invasion (ch. 8. 14–17). Alas, from a far country the cry is sounding, The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved. Once Gilead yielded balm, my country had physicians; is there none to bind up the daughter of my people now (ch. 8. 18–22). Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people! It is misery to live among such, liars, slanderers, untrustworthy (ch. 9; cp. Mic. 7. 5), disobedient, idolatrous. Oh for a dwelling in the wilderness!

Soon God will feed them with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink. Already Jeremiah bears the railing of women, and sees the dead lie like ungathered gleanings. Once more he cries, Hear ye the word; once more he reasons on the folly of idol-trust (ch. 10. 1–16), and mourns over pastors become brutish, and flocks scattered; and then closes his Sermon with the prayer, O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself, it is not in the strongest man to direct his steps, O Lord, correct me, but with judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing. Pour out thy fury on the heathen (cf. Ps. 79. 6, 7), not on Thy people, who are Thy people still.—House of the Lord.] The expression is frequently used for the Court of the Temple (2 Chr. 23. 42, &c.). <sup>8</sup> End.] Unlike Stephen (Acts 7. 51–53), Jeremiah was heard to the end.—Took.] i.e. seized and carried him before the proper tribunal.—Die.] Under the law of Moses, as having spoken what they could not believe to be truly a message from God (Deut. 18. 20). <sup>9</sup> Why.] As much as to say, When you know the thing can never be.—House . . . city.] This is not the only point at which the reader is reminded of the impeachment of a Martyr (Acts 6. 13, 14) and a Prophet (Matt. 26. 61) of later days.—Am.] R.V. omits.—Against.] R.V. unto. Gamaliel's advice in the parallel case of Peter and the Apostles (Acts 5. 33–40). Little is recorded of the political organisation or civil institutions of the Hebrews. But out of the patriarchal system would naturally spring a government by Elders or heads of families, and we trace such in the transition period previous to the Exodus (Ex. 3. 16). During the Wanderings, Moses appointed a representative council of 70 elders (Num. 11. 16). In Judges (21. 16) we find the elders of the congregation, i.e. of the National Assembly, acting as an Executive Council of the nation in general matters, and in Samuel's time we find them acting in war (1 Sam. 4. 3) and in the political crisis of the demand for a king. The institution is traceable during the Monarchy (e.g. 1 Kin. 20. 7, 8). Here, 'the Elders were probably the heads and spokesmen of the congregation,' i.e. of the people in assembly, and after the princes who represented the king had given their decision, they added their approval on behalf of the assembly. <sup>18.</sup> Micah.] So R.V. marg.; R.V. Micaiah. H. I.—Habakkuk probably wrote shortly before the battle of Carchemish. The social condition of Judah as described by him closely corresponds to that of Jehoiakim's reign (cp. chs. 1, 2, 3 with Jer. 22. 13-17); Habakkuk even uses the same language as Jeremiah, Violence and Spoil (cp. Jer. 20. 8). Both prophets denounce class-oppression and judicial maladministration, but neither accuses Judah of idolatry: a state of things consistent with an early stage in the relapse after Josiah's death. Habakkuk is the first to name the Chaldæans; and the incredible 'work' which he announces is (see Jer. 25. 11 & 35. 11, notes 'the king of Babylon') the impending invasion of Syria and Palestine by the Chaldæan armies with its astounding sequel, the sacking of the Temple at Jerusalem and the great Captivity of Judah. 'The book is semi-dramatic. Habakkuk's complaint (rs. 2-4) is followed by the reply of Jehovah (rs. 5-11) and the prophet's comments thereon (rs. 12-17). In ch. 2 the prophet obtains a reply indicative of the ultimate destruction of the foe, when the special work for which that foe was raised up should have been accomplished. Eventual triumph is not for the proud and godless, but for the persevering and patient believer in the God of the Hebrews, whose reward shall be ultimate deliverance. Habakkuk has been well called the prophet of faith.' See Rom. 1. 47 and Gal. 3. 14. Ch. 3 describes a Divine theophany, in which the past glories connected with the redemption of Israel from Egyptian bondage are related in order to encourage the righteous to stay upon their God in the days of trouble that were near (Wright).—See.] The appropriate word for that which comes to a Sec's knowledge; cf. Nah. 1. 1, note. 2. How long.] He inquires, How long will God leave the 'corruption and social disorganisation' he sees around unpunished? He is answered (v. 5): Punishment is at hand by the hands of the Chaldeans, pitiless, impetuous (hasty; comp. Homer's πρόδης ὀκρός), withering as the east wind, and gathering and driving before them numberless captives as the east wind gathers and bears along the sand (v. 9). Their mounds will easily command every stronghold (v. 10). Habakkuk marvels how God's justice suffers Him to use as His instrument an agent even more grossly wicked than Judah. 'Wait' is the answer; God's dealing shall be justified; the successes of the Chaldeans will breed ruin: their insatiable lust of conquest will at length provoke a successful uprising against them of the peoples that survive; whereas Judah's calamities will issue in renewed life for the faithful. No sin of the Chaldeans will go unpunished; their arrogance and self-reliance will cause them to exceed their commission (v. 11, pass over = transgress) and to become guilty in God's sight. Moreover—in a five-fold woe directed against their notorious methods of self-aggrandisement, viz. unpunishing oppression (ch. 2. 6-8), accumulation of spoils (chs. 9-11), disregard of human suffering and life (chs. 12-14), and against their notorious excesses, especially in wine (chs. 15-17), and against their gross idolatry (chs. 18-20)—the prophet records his confidence that judgment upon this future oppressor of the Covenant-Nation is only a question of time. 'The God of the Hebrews, the Almighty Ruler of the World, The Lord, is in his holy temple at Jerusalem (cp. 'Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?' Gen. 18. 25). Habakkuk then (ch. 3) bursts forth into an Ode or Hymn of 'thankful reply,' expressive of his conviction that God will in wrath remember mercy, i.e. limit mercifully the duration of the impending visitation, according to the answer vouch-

232.—Ode on the Battle of Carchemish.

JEREMIAH XLVI, 1-12.

4. 8. 10. Heap dust.] i.e. cast up a mound (contrast Isa. 37. 33) with contemptuous ease. 11. His, &c.] R.V. he sweep by as a wind, . . . even he whose might is his god.

J. xlv. — 1. Against.] Rather, concerning; so Var. and R.V. (v. 2 also). — Gentiles.] Rather, nations (so Var. and R.V.); Sept. Αἰῶν, Elam. ‘Oriental empires before that of Darius had little cohesion; their founders were content to make the neighbouring nations tributaries. The early monarchs only built a vast central town, and peopled it with drafts from the conquered peoples, that the resources of the capital might control the empire. No sooner was the conqueror’s strong hand withdrawn than the conquered were ready to combine and free themselves.’ — Sp. Com. But the new Chaldaean power was destined to disappoint any aspirations after independence that Necho’s defeat might have prompted. The defeat of Egypt at Carchemish was only an important step towards the substitution of a Chaldaean vassalage for the Egyptian; it was to be followed (chs. 47-49) by the subjection to the Chaldeans of the neighbours of Judah, i.e. Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Syria, Arabia. Against each of these nations a prophecy is directed; so that ‘the whole country from the Nile to the Euphrates is comprehended in one view.’ On Carchemish, see 2 Chr. 35. 20; 2 Kin. 23. 29, notes. 2. Against Egypt, against.] R.V. of Egypt: concerning (the two words, however, are the same in Hebrew); Vulg. has contra, ad, adversum. The title of the prophecy following (cp. ch. 23. 9). Human foresight would have predicted another Egyptian triumph at Carchemish (Pasey). Probability was with those prophets, diviners, dreamers, enchanters, and sorcerers who told the people of Judah, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon (ch. 27. 9). — Pharaoh-necho.

Prideaux thus describes Necho’s campaigns: After Megiddo, Necho captured Carchemish; three months later, leaving a garrison there, he began his return to Egypt; hearing that Jehoahaz had been made king without his assent, Necho summoned him to Riblah, and sent him in chains to Egypt, and then went to Jerusalem to place Jehoiakim on the throne. At the end of Jehoiakim’s third year Necho returned to Carchemish, hearing that the Prince Nebuchadnezzar had been sent thither with an army. Being utterly defeated he lost all Syria, which thus coming into Nebuchadnezzar’s power in Jehoiakim’s 3rd (or 4th) year caused the Jews to reckon that year Nebuchadnezzar’s first, though the Babylonians make his reign begin, two years later, on his father’s death (Conn. i. 62). Thus Egypt, which—consolidated under Psammetichus, by the aid of mercenary troops, chiefly Carians and Ionian Greeks, after its disintegration by Esarhaddon and his son, Assurbanipal, kings of Nineveh, who respectively made and kept Egypt an Assyrian province—had become a first-rate power, and had grown in strength as Nineveh declined, lost its aggressive power in Jehoiakim’s fourth year. The danger, if not the fall, of Nineveh (see 2 Kin. 23. 28, note) had enabled Necho to occupy Syria as far as Carchemish on the Euphrates—the victory of Nebuchadnezzar at Carchemish replaced Egyptian ascendancy by Chaldaean. 3. Order, &c.] The song of triumph depicts the advance of Pharaoh Necho, and the crushing defeat at Carchemish, whereby Josiah’s death at Megiddo and the subsequent national humiliation was avenged. But to Jeremiah, who realized Nebuchadnezzar’s mission, it was God’s enemy who was crushed; Necho’s defeat was but the first step of the conqueror whose mission was to humble Jerusalem. 4. Get up.] Rather, mount. — of hosts.—Made drunk.] R.V. shall drink its fill of. 11. Balm.] See Var. T.B. p. 38. The English word is probably a corruption of the Lat. balsam, and that (so Tristram) of the Heb. bosem = spices. Gilead was noted for balm as early as Gen. 37. 25. Balm is the gum of one (or all) of three trees, viz.: Pistachia lentiscus = mastick, Balanites ægyptiaca = modern balm of Gilead, and Balsamodendron gilcadense = true balm of Gilead or opobalsamum, now grown around Mecca, said by tradition to have been brought by the queen of Sheba to Solomon, and thenceforth cultivated in the plains of Jericho. The healing and soothing (hence our word balm) properties of the yellow, sticky, resinous gum yielded by the bark and berry are referred to by Tacitus, Strabo, and Pliny. Balm was a product of Palestine characteristic enough to be carried in the Triumphs of Pompey and of Titus. It is spoken of as a 'fruit of the land' of Canaan in Gen. 43. 11, and, in Roman times, it was cultivated in gardens in the sub-tropical depression of the Jordan.—Virgin.] See p. 516, note; it is a favourite expression with Jeremiah (ch. 14. 17 & 31. 21; Lam. 1. 15 & 2. 13). Var. and R.V. virgin-daughter.—For . . . cured.] Rather, For there is no cure; lit. ascending, i.e. rising up as of a wound that is healing, or that which 'goes up' on the wound, i.e. plaster (Strane); Var. There is no plaster (R.V. healing), for thee. On Egyptian skill in medicine, see Rawlinson (Herod. ii. 116). For the fulfilment, see 2 Kin. 24. 7, 'The king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land,' &c. 12. Laud.] i.e. the world of the Hebrews; Virg. terram.—

Stumbled.] i.e. trampled one upon the other in hasty flight.

J. xxv.—1. The word.] This message from God had no purpose but to announce the approaching judgment, and to justify it by reference to Judah's past impenitence; there is no call to penitence, no word of hope. See ch. 7. 13, 25 & 35. 15). The only approach to consolation is the limitation of the period, and the assurance that God will eventually avenge them (v. 12).—Fourth year of Jehoiakim.] A turning-point in history. The Jews reckon Nebuchadnezzar's reign as beginning with Jehoiakim's fourth year, when he first besieged Jerusalem; Ezekiel adopts the Babylonian reckoning, two years later, i.e. from the death of his father. The dates given for Jehoiakim's accession are:—Usher, Clarke, Mant give 610; Greswell, 609; Jahn, 611; Horne, 606; Hales, July, 607 (with Nebuchadnezzar's early in 604); Babylonian cylinders, 590 (Nebuchadnezzar 586). At the date of this prophecy, probably Nebuchadnezzar, as crown-prince (cp. the position of Titus), was advancing against Egypt from Carchemish.—Nebuchadnezzar.] A more accurate form of the name of the king Nebuchadnezzar (Patriorum). See ch. 35. 11, note.

2. Unto all the people.] This seems to imply that it was not fear which deterred Jeremiah at ch. 36. 5. 3. That is, &c. Rather, these three and twenty years (Var., so R.V.), viz. 19 years in Josiah's reign, and four in those of Jehoiakim and Jehoiakim. Observe that this is the period comprised in the Collection of prophecies dictated by Jeremiah to Baruch later in this year and read by Baruch in the Temple in the next year (ch. 36),

Because ye have not heard my words, <sup>9</sup> behold, I will send and take <sup>g</sup> all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, <sup>h</sup> my servant, and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and <sup>i</sup> make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations. <sup>10</sup> Moreover I will take from them the <sup>k</sup> voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, <sup>l</sup> the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle. <sup>11</sup> And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.

The period is treated as corresponding with the times that observance of the Sabbatical year had been neglected (Lev. 26. 35; 2 Chr. 36. 21), but the number 70 need not of necessity be other than a round number. Streane appears to take 'nations' of v. 9 to be identical with 'families' (v. 9) and 'nations,' whose deferred punishment is described in the latter part of the chapter, and consequently to think that the 70 years applies rather to the duration of the Babylonish empire than of the Captivity.

—The king of Babylon.] The Chaldean empire was the work of one man; virtually it began and ended with Nebuchadnezzar. Until the victory at Carchemish, and Jeremiah's present prophecy, there was nothing to foreshow Nebuchadnezzar's coming greatness (Sp. Com.). <sup>13.</sup> Book.] The verse should probably end with this word, as in Sept., which has not v. 14, and treats the remainder of the verse as the title of the following prophecy, That which Jeremiah, &c., viz. Jeremiah's prophecy of the wine cup. This prophecy, vs. 15-29, describes 'the manner in which the Chaldean empire was to execute Jehovah's judgments upon the nations far and near'—as the administering of a wine cup full of God's anger, which all the nations named shall drink to the dregs, including, at the last, Babylon herself under the enigmatical name Sheshiach (v. 26; ch. 51. 41). Jerome explains Sheshiach to mean Babel, written according to a cypher in not uncommon use. Thus (to take first an English example), the word man is composed of the 13th, 1st, 14th letters of the alphabet (counting from the beginning). In this cypher (known as Atbash) it would be represented by the 13th, 1st, 14th letters, counting from the end, i.e. nzm; or, omitting what stands for a vowel (vowels being omitted in Hebrew, and the vowel points merely 'representing a post-Christian exegetical tradition') nm would be put for mn. Similarly Ba Be L is spelt with the 2nd, 2nd, 12th letters, counting from the beginning, i.e. Beth, Beth, Lamed. The 2nd, 2nd, 12th letters, counting from the end, are Shin, Shin, Caph, or Sh, Sh, Ch, which, with the vowels in reverse order, gives She-Sh-a-Ch. By the same cypher Chasdim (i.e. Chaldeans) is in ch. 51. 1 (A.V. the midst . . . me) written (so R.V.) Leb-kamai (the heart of them that rise up).

—Nations.] Here follow in Sept. the prophecies against foreign nations (chs. 46-51 in our Bible).—Variorum. The Sept. places the prophecy of the wine cup between chs. 49 and 50, as an introduction to chs. 50 and 51, which were certainly not written now, but probably 11 years later. <sup>14.</sup> Serve themselves of them. i.e. enslave the enslaver. This retributive punishment, so in accordance with pre-Christian ideas of justice, e.g. 'an eye for an eye' (Ex. 21. 24; Matt. 5. 38), is repeatedly foretold in the prophecy against Babylon (ch. 50. 29, 'as she hath done, do unto her'), and with especial mention of Judah (ch. 51. 24, 'evil done in Zion').

In times of invasion (as we constantly read) the people of the country took refuge in fenced cities, and now necessarily in Jerusalem, which alone was likely to hold out. Drinking no wine, the Rechabites would not be tempted to plant vines. Without cornfields or vineyards, they would not seem to claim a portion in a land entirely allotted to others; and hence they might hope to be suffered to 'live many days in the land' of their adoption unmolested. After the siege, they probably retired into Arabia. Several writers have mentioned them as dwelling in the neighbourhood of Mecca, known as Jewish, yet not owned as Jews, 'because they did not observe the law,' i.e. as interpreted by the Talmud (Niebuhr). Dr. Wolff met with them, found them familiar with the O.T., and ever proud to refer to this chapter. — Ye shall.] Streane mentions that precisely the same language is used by Diodorus (xix. 94) in describing the Nabathæans, the descendants of Ishmael's eldest son. <sup>7</sup> Be strangers. Thus.] R.V. *sojourn. ## 235.—Jeremiah Foretells the Irremediable Ruin of Judah, and is Persecuted.

JEREMIAH XVII. 15 &amp; XIX. &amp; XX. 1-6.

15 BEHOLD, they say unto me, "Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

The prophecy of the Broken Vessel is delivered in the Valley of Ben Hinnom.[J. xix.] <sup>1</sup> Thus saith the LORD, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests; <sup>2</sup> and go forth unto<sup>a</sup> Isa. 5. 19; Ezek. 12. 22; Amos 5. 18; 2 Pet. 3. 4.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.—Judah had been visited not long before these events with God's 'sore judgment,' drought, A.V. dearth. God's message as to this drought commences a series of prophecies in which Jeremiah's intercession is rejected and Judah's doom is specifically announced (chs. 14-17, 18). God is weary with repenting (ch. 15. 6); His long-suffering has even been regarded as assuring Judah impunity. Now He will punish her this once, i.e. by an unique manifestation of his hand and might (ch. 16. 21). Jeremiah intercedes in vain. He is answered, Pray not for this people for their good. Nay, even Moses and Samuel, the most acceptable of intercessors, would now plead in vain. Disastrous war with its consequences, famine, pestilence, and exile, is at hand, and God will abandon Judah to her enemies. Jeremiah pleads the number and influence of the prophethood, which, deluding the people, promised them assured peace in this place and neutralized Jeremiah's efforts (ch. 23. 9-40; cp. Mic. 3. 5, 11). He is answered that this is no excuse (cp. ch. 5. 30, 31, 'the prophets prophesy falsely, the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so'). The falseness of these prophets shall be proved by their sharing the predicted death or exile. Jeremiah, bitterly disappointed, reproaches God with exposing him for nought to the labours and sacrifices, the mental anguish and the obloquy entailed on him by his mission ('every one doth curse me'), if, after all, his labour was to be lost. He is rebuked, and promised that by steadfastness he shall secure personal deliverance. But he is bidden, by abstaining from marriage and holding aloof from the houses of mourning or rejoicing, to make his mode of life a sign to his contemporaries that the common usages of mankind will shortly cease in Judah, for the land shall be desolate (R.V. become a waste), ch. 7. 34. A single word of promise (ch. 16. 15, repeated in ch. 23. 7) lightens the gloom, but even this promise is only a measure of the extreme character of the chastisement. The nation on which national apostasy is so indelibly written must be broken up; and though a remnant shall be restored, it will consist of fragments to be gathered from so many countries that the deliverance at the Restoration shall eclipse that of the Exodus.

J. xvii.—15. Where.] Thus—evidently 'before any very signal fulfilment of Jeremiah's words had taken place,' such as the siege and the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and the First Captivity in Jehoiakim's 4th year—they expressed their disbelief of his predictions, unwarned by the amount of fulfilment they had already received.—Now.] Omitted by Sept. Vulg., and with advantage; Germ. lieber; i.e. if you please, ironically.

J. xix.—God had commanded Jeremiah, probably very early in Jehoiakim's reign, to visit a potter's workshop (ch. 18). He was there taught, by the potter's power to obliterate his work if it did not satisfy him, and to make of the same clay a wholly different vessel, that God had absolute power to determine the fate of nations (His Chosen People included), but that the exercise of this power depended on their moral conduct; up to the last moment, blessings could be forfeited by sin, and punishment postponed or averted by repentance. Accordingly, Jeremiah had appealed to Judah to avert the threatened catastrophe by repentance. But evidently Judah had rejected Jeremiah's appeal based upon this lesson, and the privileged classes, in defence of their position and prestige, had conspired to bring accusations against the prophet ('smite him with the tongue,' v. 18) and to discredit his message.—Now, probably at the outset of Jehoiakim's fourth year, God charges Jeremiah with another allegorical message (ch. 19), in which the irretrievable ruin of obdurate, idolatrous Judah is publicly proclaimed. 'Jeremiah repeats this prophecy in the Temple, and so provoked the ecclesiastical authorities. Apparently this was Jeremiah's last public prophecy in Jehoiakim's reign, and was the cause why in Jehoiakim's fourth year it was no longer safe for him to go into the house of Jehovah (ch. 36. 5). It is probable also that Jehoiakim's Roll ended with this prophecy of the potter's vessel and the account of the contumelies to which the prophet had in consequence been exposed' (P. Smith).—1. Get . . . ancients.] Rather (Variorum), buy . . . elders; so R.V. For Hinnom.* The name of the ravine which, 'like a deep moat,' skirts Jerusalem on the W. and S. It joins the upper ravine of the Kidron, which (under the name of the Valley of Jehoshaphat) similarly skirts Jerusalem on the E., near the S.E. corner of the city. Thence, the Kidron forms the natural outlet for all drainage from the city eastward to the Dead Sea. Near the junction, the Valley of Ben or Ben-Hinnom is described by Jerome, cir. A.D. 406, as 'watered by the springs of Siloam, pleasant and well wooded, the site of delightful gardens.' Three gates opened upon this valley, viz. 'the gate of the valley,' 'the dung gate,' and 'the gate of the fountain' (Neb. 2. 13, 14), the last near the S.E. corner of the city. Perhaps the gate which Jeremiah was directed to use was the second; at any rate it could not have looked east-ward (see Variorum); but Tristram inclines to think it was the third gate, 'the gate of the fountain,' for that was nearest to the lower end of the valley and close to its junction with the Tyropoeon ravine. It must have looked south-ward. Probably, the lower end of the valley had become the refuse-heap of the city, since Josiah defiled Tophet and the altars of Molech there with dead bodies, men's bones, &c. From the Heb. gat-Hinnom comes the Greek Gehenna, a type of abomination.—The east gate. Kather (Variorum), the pots/herd gate; so R.V. marg.; but R.V. the gate Har-sith, the Hebrew word being treated as a proper name. A.V. marg. renders the sun-gate (from heres). 3. Kings. i.e. royal Perhaps Manasseh's persecution is meant (2 Kin. 21. 16). 5. They . . . also. R.V. And (have built) in the—High places of Baal. Baal is here Molech (as in ch. 2. 23 & 32. 35), i.e. the Sun. Comp. 'See thy ways (doings) in the valley' (ch. 2. 23); 'The high places of Tophet in the valley . . . Hinnom' (ch. 7. 31). Kings Ahaz and Manasseh sacrificed their children here to Molech (cf. Mic. 6. 7). Rawlinson suggests that, as the royal gardens were near this spot, a site may have been dedicated, if not earlier, by one of Josiah's three immediate predecessors, Ahaz, Manasseh, or Ammon, to this revolting worship. Solomon's wives induced him to establish Molech-worship, and the closely parallel worship of Chemosh (cp. 2 Kin. 3. 27), on the hill E. of Jerusalem, i.e. on part of Mt. Olivet overlooking this spot. 6. Valley of Slaughter. Where Molech's altars had received their innocent human victims, there the guilty carcases of the apostate people of Judah, cast into it during the sieges of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, shall soon so cover the ground as to give the valley a new name. 7. Make void. Rather (Variorum), pour out; as if Jeremiah emptied the vessel which represented Judah and Jerusalem, 'the mean symbol of a proud nation,' before crushing it; cp. Isa. 44. 24-26. Jeremiah (ch. 17. 5) denounces Judah's trust in man as a

<sup>p</sup> Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again: and they shall <sup>q</sup>bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.

<sup>12</sup> Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet: <sup>13</sup> and the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled <sup>r</sup>as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose <sup>s</sup>roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and <sup>t</sup>have poured out drink offerings unto other gods.

Another interpretation, with A.V., is (comparing ch. 8. 1; Ezek. 6. 2-5): As Josiah polluted with dead bodies, &c., the site of the public worship of the Sun, so shall the unburied corpses of their owners pollute the palaces and other homes in which these and like idolatries (see marg. refs. and ch. 44. 19) have been practised. <sup>14</sup> Tophet.] Rather, the Tophet (Variorum); R.V. Topheth. <sup>15</sup> All her towns.] Cp. ch. 34. 1. 7. When speaking in the Tophet he named Jerusalem only; probably his audience here was larger, and included visitors from other cities of Judah. — Hardened.] R.V. made stiff. A frequent phrase, expressive to those used to driving a yoke of oxen; ch. 7. 26; 2 Kin. 17. 14; Neh. 9. 16, 17, 29; Prov. 29. 1; equivalent to were stubborn and unheeding.

[J. xx.] <sup>1</sup> Now Pashur the son of <sup>y</sup> Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

<sup>2</sup> Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD. <sup>3</sup> And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks.

Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur, but Magor-missabib. <sup>4</sup> For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends: and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword. <sup>5</sup> Moreover I <sup>z</sup> will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon. <sup>6</sup> And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all thy friends, to whom thou hast <sup>a</sup> prophesied lies.

J. xx.—1. Pashur.] This Pashhur (R.V.) is to be distinguished from Pashur the son of Melchiah (see ch. 21. 1, note). He belonged to the 16th course of priests, the sons of Immer (1 Chr. 24. 14; Ezra 2. 35). He was pākid nāqūd, 'deputy governor,' of the Temple (cf. ch. 29. 26), Seraiah the H.P. being nāqūd, governor. Pashur, politically, belonged to the party of resistance to the Chaldeans, whereas Jeremiah preached submission to them as to God's instrument. Pashur's party (friends, v. 6) relied on an Egyptian alliance. The action of this party should be observed in the history.—Governor.] R.V. officer, omitting also; Vulg. princeps; Sept. καθεσταμενος ἡγούμενος, which suggests deputy.—That . . . prophesied.] Rather, heard Jeremiah prophesying; Vulg. (and so Sept.) audivit Jeremiam prophetantem, and yielded to sudden provocation (1 Kin. 22. 24; Acts 23. 2 & 7. 51, 54). If (cf. ch. 14. 13) Pashur himself professed prophetic power (v. 6), this would intensify his bitterness. <sup>2. Then.</sup>] The solemn publicity of the allegorical act and of its explanation could not be overlooked. Jeremiah is treated as a madman and a pretender to prophetic inspiration, by the 'second priest' (ch. 52. 24; cp. ch. 29. 26). The respect due to his prophetic office is violated, perhaps for the first time.—Smote.] 'Inflicted the legal 40 stripes save one, and made him pass a night in the stocks, exposed to the jeers of the scoffers at the most public gate of the Temple.'—Sp. Com.—The prophet.] The unusual use of the title thus is equivalent to saying though a prophet.—Stocks.] Rendered prison in ch. 29. 26, where a different word is rendered stocks; Vulg. nercum (in Lat.

nercus is frequently used for carcer); Sept. καταβράκτην (which, by its meaning, portcullis, might suggest prison, or, by its derivation, the rack, but has no such meaning as stocks in classical Gk.). The Hebrew means that which twists or cramps; Stracoe suggests pillory; compare τὸ ξύλον, Acts 16. 24, where Paul and Silas are scourged and put in the stocks in the inner prison at Philippi.—High.] Rather, upper, Variorum (so R.V.)—By the house.] Rather, in (so Vulg., Sept., and R.V.); at (Variorum). There was another gate of Benjamin in the wall. This was Jotham's (2 Kin. 15. 35), the N. gate of the inner Court. <sup>3. Called thy name.</sup>] No play on the two names seems intended here. Magor-missabib is Jeremiah's refrain (like Isaiah's 'Immanuel' and 'a remnant shall return'), indicating the calamity which he was continually foretelling. Terror on every side, he cries continually; ch. 6. 25 & 20. 3, 10 & 46. 5 & 49. 29; Lam. 2. 22. (The word occurs elsewhere in Ps. 31. 13 only.) The meaning may be that on all sides the sea of calamity is rising, visibly to him, around the hill of Zion. <sup>4. Terror.</sup>] Magor has the sense both of fear and an object of fear; here Vulg. points to the meaning a warning, and gives a better sense, dabo te in parorem, te et omnes amicos tuos; Sept. takes the name to mean μετοικον, i.e. exile, and gives the play thus: διδωμί σε εἰς μετοικίαν σὺν παντί τοῖς φίλοις σου. <sup>5. Strength.</sup>] Rather, stores (Variorum); R.V. give all the riches; Vulg. substantiam.—Labours.] Variorum, profits; R.V. gains.—And all.] R.V. yea, all. <sup>6. ## 236.—Nebuchadnezzar Captures Jerusalem.—Jehoiakim his Vassal.— The First Captivity.

2 CHRONICLES XXXVI. 6, 7.

DANIEL I. 1, 2.

was held by Zephaniah in Zedekiah's reign (ch. 29, 26), it would appear that Pashur went into captivity with Jehoiachin after the death of Jehoiakim.—Lies.] R.V. falsely; i.e. in encouraging Jehoiakim to adopt a policy of resistance to the Chaldaean power, which ended in Judah's ruin. 'When he should see Jehoiakim's disgraceful end, the slaughter of his partisans, the captivity of Jehoiachin and the best of the land, his remorse as the author of so much misery should be terrible to himself and his party.'

2 C. xxxvi.—The Captivity of Judah, of which the commencement is recorded here, was one of the events overruled by God (1) to purify the Chosen People, and to make it more fit for its mission to be 'the light of the world;' (2) to spread amongst other nations the knowledge of the True God, while discrediting their superstitions and idolatry, and so (3) to prepare for the coming of 'the king of the Jews' and of His World-empire, which Daniel reveals by its title so familiar in St. Matthew's Gospel, 'the Kingdom of Heaven.'—Observe the 'great out-pouring of the Spirit of God' about the period of the Captivity; three of the greater prophets, Jeremiah in Judah, Ezekiel and Daniel in Babylonia, occupy a full century. 6. Came up.] The invasion began 'in the 32nd month of Jehoiakim's reign, and therefore early in his 4th year.'—Payne Smith. 'By comparing Berossus with the Canon of Ptolemy, we can fix the date to the 3rd completed and 4th commencing year of this king.'—Rawlinson. According to Berossus' account of this expedition of Nebuchadnezzar, preserved by Josephus (Ant. x. 11), Nebuchadnezzar, after defeating Necho's frontier force permanently stationed at Carchemish (see 2 Kin. 23. 29), moved southwards on Egypt, overrunning Syria, Phœnicia, and Judah (capturing Jerusalem), and had reached the borders of Egypt (Pellusium, Josephus), when he was suddenly recalled to Babylon by the news of his father's death. Nebuchadnezzar himself, accompanied only by light troops, hastened back to Babylon by the short route across the Syrian desert. His army took the ordinary route, skirting the desert, bringing, with other captives (Josephus), a number of Hebrews, including Daniel. By thus seizing all the Egyptian possessions in Asia, Nebuchadnezzar partly fulfilled the prediction of Jeremiah (25. 18–26).—This is the first siege by the Chaldeans—the first-fruits of that vintage which left Israel bare; the second occurred in Jehoiachin's reign (v. 10); the third in Zedekiah's (2 Kin. 25).—Fetters.] The dual number as being fastened to the two feet; cf. 2 Sam. 3. 34; Judg. 16. 21; ch. 33. 11 ('of bronze,' says Sennacherib's inscription, of Suzubu, king of Babylon); Jer. 52. 11.—To carry him.] It is practically certain that this intention was not carried out. Nebuchadnezzar was in haste to secure the throne of Babylon (which was, according to custom, held during the vacancy by the chief of 'the Chaldeans'), and apparently contented himself with making Jehoiakim his vassal and with taking from the treasure-house of the God of the Hebrews an offering to the victorious god of the Chaldeans. 7. Temple.] Probably of Bel, his tutelary god (p. 571); R.V. m. palace.

'The Book of Daniel is the earliest example of apocalyptic literature. The form, the style, and the point of sight of previous prophecy are relinquished upon the verge of a new period in the existence of God's people, and fresh instruction is given to them suited to their new fortunes. To the old prophets Daniel stands, in some sense, as a commentator (ch. 9. 2–19); to succeeding generations, as the herald of immediate deliverance. Like the Book of Ezra, Daniel is composed partly cf. p. 581, note) in Eastern Aramaic (A.V. marg. Chaldee), which became the international language, until superseded by Greek after the conquests of Alexander the Great. The remainder of the Book is in the sacred Hebrew, as though these parts were specially addressed to the Hebrew nation. According to its contents, the book divides thus:—(1) Introduction (ch. 1); (2) A general view of the progressive history of the powers of the world and of the principles of the Divine government, as seen in events of the life of Daniel (chs. 2–6); (3) In the remaining chapters (7–12), Daniel writes mainly in the first person: the fortunes of God's people are traced in minutest detail as typical of the fortunes of the Church in all ages. Josephus (Ant. xi. 8. 4) states that the prophecies of Daniel gained for the Jews the favour of Alexander the Great.—In doctrine, the book is closely connected with the writings of the Exile, and forms a last step in the development of the ideas of the Messiah (ch. 7. 13, &c.), which formed the basis of later speculations, but received no essential addition in the interval before the coming of our Lord.—Westcott. 'No one of the prophets has ever spoken with equal clearness about Christ.'—Jerome.

D. i.—1. King of Babylon.] Nebuchadnezzar probably was, for 3 years, associated as king with his father Nabopolassar; Daniel's three years' probation ended in the 2nd year (v. 5) of Nebuchadnezzar's sole reign; see Chr. v. 6; ch. 2. 1; Jer. 46. 2, notes.—Besieged.] During Jehoiakim's 4th year. 2. Part.] Nebuchadnezzar took another part after his second siege of Jerusalem, at the second and great Captivity, with Jehoiachin. The residue left in the Temple and the two parts removed became then the subject of prophecy and counter-prophecy as to their reunion and that of the separated parts of Judah—to take place in Babylon according to Jeremiah, in Jerusalem according to Hananiah and the false prophets (Jer. 27. 16, 18, &c.).—The residue of the sacred treasures and masterpieces of art was taken to Babylon by Nebuzaradan (Jer. 27. 18 & 52. 17; 2 Kin. 24. 13). The sacrilegious use of the sacred vessels removed to Babylon was the crowning act of dishonour to God which called for the Writing on the Wall (ch. 5. 2). The treasures of the Temple (and the Palace) had been already despoiled on various occasions. Casual references indicate that the treasures of the Temple were refilled by the offerings of kings and other devotees from time to time. Shishak took Solomon's golden shields (1 Kin. 14. 26); Joash, Jehu's grandson, many vessels (2 Kin. 14. 14); Ahaz and Hezekiah, silver and gold (2 Kin. 16. 8 & 18. 15); Ahaz to buy Assyria's aid, Hezekiah to allay its resentment, Cyrus restored the sacred utensils (Ezra 1. 7–11).—Which.] Possibly, so Sept. including Jehoiakim; but see 2 Chr. 36. 6, note, ad fin.—Shinar.] 'An archaic Hebrew name for N. Chaldaea, and especially for the region N. of the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates in which Babylon was situate. Its derivation is uncertain.'—Tristram. Though frequently mentioned in the Inscriptions of its Egyptian conquerors, the name of Shinar has yet to be certainly identified in the cuneiform inscriptions of the country. But it is, probably, the Sumir of the Inscriptions (so Sayce), the S. part of the Aram Naharaim (highlands of the two rivers, p. 340) of the O.T., i.e. the vast plateau of moderate elevation separating the Tigris and Euphrates, the Greek Mesopotamia. It is distinguished from Assyria in Isa. 11. 11; see Josh. 7. 21, 'Babylonish garment' (L.V. marg. mantle of Shinar), and Gen. 10. 10, 11, 'Babel, Erech, Acad, Calneh in Shinar. Out of that land went forth Asshur (R.V. he went forth into Assyria; but marg. as A.V.), and built Nineveh.' &c.—Vessels.] The restoration of these seems to be foretold by Jeremiah, with the discomfiture of Bel and Merodach, when the Medes shall capture Babylon. See Jer. 50. 2 & 51. 44 ('Strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the Lord's house.' 'I will bring forth . . . that which he (Bel) hath swallowed up').—House of his god.] The temple of Belus or Bel-Merodach, as Nebuchadnezzar's own inscriptions show, e.g. that in which he calls Bel 'the sublime master of the gods,' 'who confers empire,' 'creates to govern.' When Bel was identified with Merodach, i.e. the planetary god Jupiter, he was the patron god of Babylon, and especially of Nabopolassar and Nebuchadnezzar, who apparently attributed or ascribed their great successes to him. This temple was the chief of the great buildings which made Babylon one of the seven wonders of the world (cf. Herod. i. 181–183). It was in the form of a pyramid; the ground floor was the sanctuary of Nebo, i.e. the planetary god Mercury, the special protector of kings; above, in two stories, were Merodach's sepulchral chamber and oracle respectively. An inscription of Nebuchadnezzar says, 'I built it of bitumen (the 'slime' of Gen. 11. 3) and bricks according to the rules of art . . . the temple of him (Nebo) who confers the sceptre . . . I placed its sanctuary, the place of repose of . . . Merodach, the master of the gods . . . with pure gold . . . stored up inside silver and gold and precious stones, and placed there the treasure-house of my kingdom.' This temple was practically the fortress on one side of the Euphrates, as the palace was on the other side (Bib. Dict.). Berosus (i.e.) says that Nebuchadnezzar adorned the temple of Belus and the rest of the temples of Babylon magnificently with spoils taken in this war. He also dedicated an image of the god, Bel is represented holding a sceptre, a dagger, and an axe, as described in Baruch 6. 14, 15. In Persian times, a colossal image of Belus, Bel's consort, also occupied the sanctuary.

His position as the rab-saris ('master' — 'prince' in vs. 7, 9) does not necessarily imply that he was a eunuch (cf. 1 Sam. 8. 15, note), and might perhaps be better represented here by Lord chamberlain; Germ. oberster Kämmerer. — Eunuchs.] i.e. courtiers (Var.). — Bring.] R.V. bring in; i.e. select from a number of captives (see 2 Chr. 36. 6, note), deported probably both as living monuments of his triumph and also as hostages for the fidelity of the more influential families. — And of.] R.V. even of. Josephus (x. 10. 1) says that some were made eunuchs; if so, sons (i.e. heirs) of Hezekiah fulfilled 2 Kin. 20. 18. He adds that Daniel and his three companions were of the family of Zedekiah. — Princes.] Rather, nobles, Esth. 1. 3 (Variorum), and so R.V. 4. Children.] Probably aged about 14; R.V. youths (vs. 10, 13, 15 also). From the Hebrew captives of high birth and corresponding manners and education, youths were to be selected, first, for their physical beauty, and then for their intellectual attainments and capabilities, with particular reference to the prospect of their becoming, after special local education, efficient court-officials. — And whom, &c.] R.V. and that he should teach them. — The learning.] Heb. sepher; lit. books; compare (Judg. 1. 11) Kirjath-sepher, i.e. city of books (Cheyne). These youths were now to study the ancient and modern languages and the peculiar, ancient, and extensive literature of the Chaldeans, stored up in the cuneiform character chiefly on the clay tablets now yearly being decyphered. See Tristram's note on Ezek. 4. 1. The formation at Nineveh of a great library of such records for public use was the especial pride of the conqueror Assurbanipal son of Esarhaddon. The systematic observations of the Babylonians date from before the time of Abraham, and 'the standard astrological work of the Babylonians and Assyrians was drawn up as far back as the 16th century B.C. for the library of Sargon, king of Agade.' Indeed, their astronomy and its superstitious development, astrology, did for the science of astronomy what the mediæval alchemists did for chemistry. They rendered possible the science of Greece and of modern Europe, and especially the formation of a calendar (see Suyce in Var. Tea. B., art. 'The Monuments,' p. 103). — The tongue.] i.e. Accadian, or of Accad, a Turanian language, which had become a dead language appropriated to science and learning, and especially to religious things, as early as the 12th century B.C., so that in the time of Assurbanipal, the 7th century B.C., translations of the Accadian litanies, hymns, and documents into the vernacular, i.e. Assyro-Babylonian, the (Semitic) language of the inscriptions of Nineveh and of Babylon including those of Nebuchadnezzar, were indispensable to the people. The cuneiform system of writing and 'magic' were of Accadian origin. Therefore Accadian was the language of the 'magic' of Babylon, the language of religion and prayer, and that had the mysterious power to command spirits; while her astronomy, &c., being of Semitic origin, had also its own language, the Assyro-Babylonian. The Chaldeans address Nebuchadnezzar in Aramaic (A.V. Syrian, 2 Kin. 18. 26; A.V. marg. Chaldee), ch. 2. 4. — The Chaldeans.] Heb. chadim, which in the Book of Daniel has two meanings. In Nebuchadnezzar's time, this name was limited to those educated in the sacerdotal schools, i.e. to (1) a learned body, (2) to a part of it to which it was strictly appropriate, viz. the astrological priest-class. [In ch. 5. 30 & 9. 1 the word retains its wider meaning of 'the Chaldees'; see 2 Kin. 24. 2, note.] Here, 'Chaldean' means the body or order, a sacerdotal, learned, scientific caste, combining features of the Brahmin, the Magdian, the Magician, and the Philosopher, to which admission was obtained by hereditary right, or by education. This body had now obtained exclusive possession of all priestly functions, and used its powers to govern the State. All statesmen belonged to this dominant scientific and political order, from (so to call him) the grand vizier downwards, Daniel would only become 'a Chaldean' so far as his worship of the one true God would allow, and his genius seems to have developed in the direction of statesmanship. The classes of the order named in Daniel (see the several notes) are the khakanim, A.V. 'wise men'; khartummim, A.V. 'magicians' (Var. lettered men); assaphim, A.V. 'astrologers,' or enchanters; meashephim, A.V. 'sorcerers' (Var. astrologers); gazerim, A.V. 'soothsayers' (Var. astrologers); chashim, A.V. 'Chaldeans.' These classes overlapped somewhat, and their relative rank seems to differ in Nebuchadnezzar's and in Belshazzar's time; but their 'learning' is becoming known to us through the decyphering of the cuneiform literature. The great work on magic, or Magism, the fragments of which Layard brought from Nineveh to the British Museum, divides itself by its contents generally into three parts, which curiously (Lenormant) correspond with the first three classes above mentioned, viz. into (1) incantations potent to heal divers diseases; (2) formulae to repel demons and evil spirits; (3) hymns to certain gods, the recital of which induced supernatural and mysterious power over the demons of disease. <sup>5</sup> Them . . . prorsion . . . meat. R.V. for them . . . portion . . . meat (dainties, marg.).—So, &c. R.V. and that they should be nourished. <sup>6</sup> Were. R.V. inserts a comma, were, of &c. Youths of other tribes than Judah had been selected. <sup>7</sup> Names. A change of name was usual when a foreigner was taken into the service of Oriental kings. Pusey regards the new names of these four Hebrews as 'a badge of servitude destined to obliterate the memory of their early home and of their God.' Cf. Ps. 45. 10 and Gen. 41. 45, where (A.V. marg.) Pharaoh gives

Joseph a name meaning a revealer of secrets, or the man to whom secrets are revealed; comp. ch. 2. 30, 47. These names were probably not used among themselves (Daniel does not call himself Belteshazzar). Each Hebrew name had a religious meaning: Daniel means, God is judge; Hananiah, Jehovah hath graciously given; Mishael, Who is what God is? or = Michael, Who is like God? Azariah, Jehovah helps. Likewise (so far as explained, for Shadrach and Meshach await explanation) the names conferred by Ashpenaz are compounded with the name of a god. The inscriptions show that such was the custom with persons trained in the schools of the Chaldeans.—Belteshazzar. i.e. his life do thou preserve, O Bel = Belshazzar (Cheyne); or Beltis defend the king, Bilat being the feminine of Bil = 'a lord,' and the name of the goddess-spouse of Bel (Sir H. Rawlinson and Sayce), and equivalent to Istar the Babylonian Venus (the planet).—Abednego. Probably should be Abed-Nebo, i.e. servant of Nebo (Isa. 46. 1); comp. Nabopolassar, Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, &c. <sup>8</sup> Not defile. Apparently Jehoiachin had no such scruples (Jer. 52. 34). The words had not yet been spoken which have 'purged all meats' (Mark 7. 19), and even they did not utterly remove 'conscience of the idol' (1 Cor. 8. 7) from all. The grounds of objection might be three: interdicted flesh, as of swine; a mode of slaughter that did not entirely remove the blood; or connection with idol-sacrifices and idol-feasts. <sup>9</sup> Now God had, &c. Rather, And God brought (Vari-orum); R.V. made Daniel to find favour and compassion in the sight of. 'The king's heart (this high official's no less) is in the hand of the Lord, He turneth it whithersoever He will.' Man's favour, sought by seeking first God's, is seldom missed. <sup>10</sup> Sort. R.V. [D. i. 5—10.]

A different word is used in Isa. 8. 1, meaning tablet.—Write, &c.] This would be a work of time, for Jeremiah had been bidden to collect in a single roll his utterances of the last 23 years (ch. 25. 3), including God's purposed work of desolation on the neighbours of the Hebrews (ch. 1. 10); his view was to include the vast area to be affected by the newly-risen Chaldaean power, viz. Egypt (ch. 46), Philistia (ch. 47), Moab (ch. 48), Ammon, Edom, Aram (Gk. [As to his personal history, see ch. 45. 5, note.] As regards the scribes, until Josiah's reign scribes are only mentioned as political officers, secretaries of state. But in Jer. 8. 8 ('the law,' Heb. torah, . . . the pen of the scribes is in vain')—Payne Smith holds that the class which during the Captivity acquired preponderating influence, and after the Return was powerful enough to prevent the restoration of the kingly office, must have existed before the fall of Jerusalem, and is referred to there. He considers that Elisha's active management of the schools of the prophets gave rise to a progress in learning, which culminated in the reign of Hezekiah, and caused certain Levites to gradually devote themselves to the study of the Law. These were at some time, he considers, previous to this date, organised and had become already a leading class in the state (see 1 Chr. 24. 6; ch. 36. 6, notes).

He was ambitious (ch. 45. 5), but how, we can only surmise. Payne Smith thinks that he aspired to the gift of prophecy. He was, apparently, to Jeremiah what Elisha was to Elijah, and Timotheus to St. Paul. It was revealed to Jeremiah that Baruch's hopes should not be gratified. Baruch seems to have been of an honest straightforward character, true to the prophet and his God, qualifications which only brought upon him the accusation of the <sup>5</sup> AND Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the LORD: <sup>6</sup> therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon <sup>a</sup> the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities. <sup>7</sup> <sup>b</sup> It may be they will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

<sup>8</sup> And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

<sup>9</sup> And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

proud,' i.e. presumptuous, 'men' in ch. 43. 2, viz. that he abused his supposed influence with Jeremiah. Several apocryphal books are falsely ascribed to him.—Life.] In such times life is as much as any man may hope for; bare life, without any of its honours or its comforts, an escape like Lot's, the being saved 'so as by fire.' Life, whatever his fortunes, he may consider secure, and reckon that in that he has carried off prize sufficient.—A prey.] A frequent expression in Jeremiah = either something not one's own, something obtained without rightful claim; or something saved hastily at the last moment, which a refugee snatches up and carries off, pleased that even that little may be saved. Baruch shares Jeremiah's fortunes after the fall of Jerusalem (ch. 43. 3, 6).

J. xxxvi. — 5. Shut up.] Variorum, detained; referring to 1 Sam. 21. 7, 'detained before the Lord' (Doeg). R.V. marg. restrained; Sept. φυλάσσομαι; Vulg. clausus sum; Heb. atsur, which properly means surrounded by walls, imprisoned, as in ch. 33. 1 & 39. 15; Jeremiah, however, was free (v. 19). Atsur may mean merely hindered, debarred, as in 1 Sam. 21. 5, 7, where it is rendered kept and detained. Ceremonial uncleanness (1 Sam. 20. 26) is an explanation that would hardly accord with the use of the expression concerning Shemaiah (Neh. 6. 10, Sept. συνεχόμενος; Vulg. secreto), for he directly after proposes going into the Temple. Cowardice would be inconsistent with Jeremiah's life and character; prudence it might be (v. 19). extreme unpopularity of his recent utterances.'—Streane. 6. Read.] Baruch, the scribe, is to fulfil the double duty of his profession—who can write can read. Few Orientals can read to this day, and very few attempt to write. The idea conveyed by the title 'scribe' differs at different periods of Jewish history. See 1 Chr. 24. 6, note. To this day, in all Oriental lands, the scribe's is practically a distinct profession, and every civil and military official has a scribe who reads and writes everything for him, and is his most trusted confidant, although not even to him is the signet or seal-ring entrusted. This is always kept and impressed on the written document by the owner himself.—Tristram. Cp. 2 Kin. 22. 10 and v. 17.—The fasting day.] So R.V., but Variorum (and R.V. marg.) a fast(ing) day. (as marg.) their supplication shall fall, alluding to the prostration of a suppliant; to the same expression the idea of successful pleading is sometimes added, e.g. ch. 37. 20 (so 'hear my prayer,' Ps. 39. 12, implies 'and favourably answer it'). 8. And . . . reading.] A summary of what follows. 9. They proclaimed.] R.V. <sup>10</sup> Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

<sup>11</sup> When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD, <sup>12</sup> then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes. <sup>13</sup> Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

<sup>14</sup> Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them. <sup>15</sup> And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

<sup>16</sup> Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words. <sup>17</sup> And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth? <sup>18</sup> Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book. <sup>19</sup> Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

<sup>20</sup> And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king. <sup>21</sup> So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

Jerusalem in Zedekiah's 11th year, the destruction of the Temple, the assassination of Gedaliah (2 Kin. 25. 25), and the commencement of the blockade in Zedekiah's 9th year (with the revelation of the fact to the exiles in Babylon, through Ezekiel, the same day, Ezek. 24. 1).—Baruch seizes the opportunity. Apparently he read to a representative audience; only the priests might enter the inner (p. 213, note) court, but 'all the people' might occupy the outer; and if the Secretary's room in the Temple, by Jotham's new gate (2 Kin. 15. 35), the scene of Jeremiah's trial (ch. 26. 10), adjoined the outer court, the words read at the entrance would reach them all. <sup>10</sup> Higher court] i.e. the inner (Variorum) = R.V. the upper. <sup>11</sup> Gemariah] No doubt as friendly to Jeremiah as his brother Ahikam (ch. 26. 24). <sup>25</sup> Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would not hear them. <sup>26</sup> But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.

<sup>27</sup> Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, <sup>28</sup> Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

<sup>29</sup> And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast? <sup>30</sup> Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah; kin had finally sealed the fate of Judah and Jerusalem, is unknown. But as regards Jehoiakim, Jeremiah's voice is henceforward silent. It was Jehoiakim's last chance, the last offer of mercy, and as he threw the torn pieces of the roll on the fire, he threw there in symbol his royal house, his doomed city, the Temple, and all the people of the land. When Jeremiah appears again, Nebuchadnezzar's forces were advancing upon Jerusalem to execute the doom pronounced in vs. 30 and 31 of this chapter (Sp. Com.).

D. i.—17.] 'Man's opportunity is the call of Providence,' and God's blessing attends the conscientious use of opportunity. Daniel and his three companions so profited by their education in the learning of the Chaldeans, that they entered the personal service of Nebuchadnezzar with the most brilliant prospects. The career thus opened to them afforded opportunities of influencing Nebuchadnezzar and the government of the land, which were doubtless used, as by Mordecai more than a century later (Esth. 10. 3), for the benefit of the Hebrew exiles, as well as the good of Babylonia (cp. Jer. 29. 7); it also glorified Jehovah among the heathen.—Children. R.V. youths; Heb. yelcdh; cf. Gen. 37. 30, &c.—Gave. God rewarded the devotion of their hearts—first, by the compassion of Ashpenaz, now by the choicest mental gifts, and by crowning their studies with success. And in the case of Daniel, God gave that choicest of gifts, enjoyed by Joseph and Zeehariah the prophet (Gen. 41. 15; 2 Chron. 26. 5), the prophetic power to discriminate God-sent dreams and to truly interpret such revelations (Num. 12. 6). This special gift was peculiarly adapted to give Daniel influence with Nebuchadnezzar and the superstitious Babylonians. It harmonized with their religious beliefs, but far exceeded them in scope and in degree (ch. 2. 7, 10, 11 with 27, 28). Accordingly, Nebuchadnezzar explains Daniel's power of reading the future by the Chaldean 'learning.' He attributes it to the indwelling in Daniel of 'the spirit of the holy gods' (ch. 4. 8 & 5. 14), an expression which, like others used in this connection in the Book of Daniel, we now can decipher in the 'magical' books of the Chaldeans recently recovered.—Daniel had. To him alone of the three great Hebrew bondmen was it given to enjoy both the court-life and education of a Moses (Acts 7. 22), and the prophetic gift and the princely influence and power of a Joseph (Gen. 41. 15). 18. Said, &c. So Heb.; R.V. appointed for bringing them in; at the 3 years' end (v. 5), a date corresponding nearly with the date of Jehoiakim's rebellion, after 'three years' vassalage to Nebuchadnezzar; i.e. about the 6th year of Jehoiakim according to the reckoning of v. 1, or the 7th year according to that of Jer. 25. 1.—Them. i.e. all the selected youths of ch. 1. 3. 19. Communed. Sept. ᾠμολογῶν, i.e. conversed. A lighter test than that of v. 20; perhaps to satisfy himself as to their manners, address, tact, &c.—Stood before the king. i.e. obtained posts involving personal attendance upon Nebuchadnezzar at his court; they 'saw the king's face' (2 Kin. 25. 19, R.V.) i.e. had free access to the royal presence, like the courtiers of Zedekiah and Solomon (1 Kin. 10. 8) or the seven princes of Persia (Esth. 1. 14). 20. Enquired. Tested their mental power by 'hard questions,' after the Eastern method, e.g. theses on given subjects; cp. the testing of Zorobabel (1 Esd. 3) and 1 Kin. 10. 1, note. Daniel lived beyond that date; A.V. marg. compares 'till' in Ps. 110. 1 & 112. 8. Daniel was alive in Cyrus' 3rd year (ch. 10. 1), but is supposed to have died shortly after. His life was nearly commensurate with the Chaldean empire; the part spent in Babylon corresponds with, but exceeds, the 70 years of

DANIEL II.

<sup>2</sup> Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came the Captivity of Judah, for he lived to serve the king of the second of the series of empires revealed to him. And it is probable that his great reputation and influence [added perhaps to the ancient oracle of Isa. 44. 28, presumably, as well as ch. 2. 39 & 5. 28, communicated to Cyrus] induced Cyrus in his first year to issue the Decree enabling the Jews to return to and reoccupy their fatherland. Daniel's great age and official position (ch. 6. 28) probably prevented his sharing that Restoration, for which he had waited, and watched, and prayed (ch. 9. 2-10).

D. ii.—'Man's perplexity is God's opportunity.' The supernatural dream with its supernatural interpretation (of which ch. 7 is an expansion) instructs both unbelievers and believers, Babylonians and Jews, by its manifestation of the supreme power of the True God. The Babylonian potentate, with the zenith of his glory in view, is brought to confess that Daniel's God is greater than all known gods (cp. Ex. 18. 11). This God reads his thoughts and reveals to him the fate of his empire and of its successors, in short, an outline of the future course of the world. In the immediate future, the Hebrew captives will console themselves and take courage, while awaiting the Restoration, by the memory of this (and other) marvellous manifestations in the career of faithful Daniel and his companions (see Ezek. 11. 16 & 36. 39). And in a farther future, all faithful Jews, at home or dispersed abroad, will be encouraged, amid trouble and even persecution, to await patiently the coming of the 'kingdom of God' (v. 44), i.e. for 'the consolation of Israel' (cp. Luke 2. 25).

1.] Daniel and his three companions appear now as acknowledged members of the Chaldean body, and Daniel's special gift brings him, when one of its youngest members, to Nebuchadnezzar's notice, and wins him promotion. In this chapter the pretensions of the Chaldeans are illustrated, and, when tested by Nebuchadnezzar, so fail as to bring into the strongest relief the superior knowledge of a Chaldean who is the worshipper of the True God. Compare the magicians of Pharaoh discomfited by Moses and Aaron; cp. Ex. 8. 18, 19 with 12. 12. Second.] i.e. of his sole sovereignty. See Jer. 25. 1, where Nebuchadnezzar's first year is said to be the 4th of Jehoiakim. But, at the very least, the 'three years' of Daniel's probation have elapsed since Jerusalem fell in Jehoiakim's 4th year (i.e. after Jer. 46. 2), or according to ch. 1. 1 in Jehoiakim's 3rd year. The discrepancy is explained by regarding Nebuchadnezzar as associate-king with Nabopolassar when he defeated Pharaoh at Carehemish, and by dating (1) Nebuchadnezzar's first actual regnal year as late, and (2) Jehoiakim's regnal years as early, as the facts and the considerable differences between the Babylonian and Hebrew methods of reckoning will permit. say that the requirement is beyond the power of man, however privileged or saintly, because only these greater gods could make such a revelation. They thus unconsciously prepare the way for a revelation of the True God, 'the God of Heaven' yet so far dwelling with flesh, even according to the Babylonian creed, as to read Nebuchadnezzar's thoughts, visit him, and show him the future. 12. Wise men. Aram. khakimim; Var. and R.V. render as A.V. Compare the English 'wizard,' which originally meant 'wise man' (1 Sam. 28. 3); so in Acts 13. 8, Elymas = 'wise man' (Cheyne, Var. T. B.). Comp. also the books of those who practised 'curious (R.V. marg. magical) arts' in Ephesus (Acts 19. 19 with ibid. vs. 11, 12, 13).—As a class, these 'wise men' were properly 'medicine men,' the art being in Babylonia only a branch of magic; illness was treated partly medicinally, but chiefly as the work or presence of evil spirits, to be undone or expelled by incantations and exorcisms. The unmanageable was reckoned unknowable, and at once put down to evil spirits. These 'wise men' administered simple remedies, but, relying on impressing the patient with the supernatural power of the practitioner, used various rites, amulets, talismans, philtres, &c.; also incantations reputed to possess the power of healing certain diseases. 13. That . . . should. R.V. and . . . were to be.—Sought, &c. As members of the 'Chaldeans of Babylon.' Went in. Used his privilege (ch. 1. 19) of access to the king. Daniel asked for time—but for prayer, and, unlike his fellow-Chaldeans, he in faith promised an answer. The respite shows Daniel's reputation and influence with Nebuchadnezzar already.—Give, &c. R.V. (marg. as A.V.) appoint him a time; Sept. χρόνον; not the Hebrew word of vs. 8, 9 (both occur in v. 21). 18. They. So 'we' (v. 36). Daniel associates his companions with himself, as for prayer, so in the result and its rewards.—God of heaven. Abraham uses this title in instructing Eliezer of Damascus (Gen. 24. 7). In the mouth of Daniel the Chaldean, it is equivalent to 'God of my fathers' in v. 23, and amounts to an assertion that Jehovah is the God of the whole stellar system, and especially of the chief gods of Babylon, the sun, moon, and planets. Daniel's thanksgiving (Germ. lobbe) (vs. 20–23) is likewise 'replete with true faith, and yet with unobtrusive familiarity with the religious teaching of his Chaldean preceptors.' See ch. 4. 26, where 'the heavens do rule' is used as being a Babylonian 'thought and mode of expressing it,' applied to Nebuchadnezzar's own god, Bel-Merodach, which would be to Nebuchadnezzar 'a stepping-stone' to a higher belief, i.e. towards the Most High God whom Daniel believed in and reached by faith. (From Sp. Com.) Cp. Is. 96. 5.—The rest. Daniel and his companions are classed with the khakimim (A.V. wise men); see v. 12. 21. Changeth. Comp. v. 9. Jehovah governs times and seasons. from the Persian empire, making the successors of Alexander the 4th empire. The descending scale of the materials, correspondent to the decrease in dignity of the several parts of the figure, indicates the gradual degeneracy of the successive World-empires, until the whole fabric, the result of all that human power and intellect could achieve, crumbles to dust at the contact of the spiritual power, the kingdom of God, that is destined to sway the world for ever. <sup>34</sup> A stone cut out without hands. Cp. 'My kingdom is not of this world' (John 18. 36); a Stone quarried without human agency, an empire not based on conquest, power, or riches (a Man divinely born, a Kingdom not founded as are other kingdoms) appears; drops on the heterogeneous feet and shivers them; no trace of any of those empires remains; the Stone remains, and it swells (cp. the figure of the mustard seed) till the earth is full (of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea). The Jews allow that this stone means the Messiah.—Feet. The destruction of the feet takes place during the existence of the 4th empire, and is retrospective in its effect. It causes the utter disappearance of the whole colossal fabric. <sup>35</sup> Together. Or, with one stroke (Keil). — Mountain. R.V. marg. rock. <sup>37</sup> A king of kings. Omit a. A superlative, [D. ii. 33—44.]

This kingdom is not 'from hence;' cometh not with observation; and it never passes away; R.V. nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people.—Left.] i.e. forsaken, so that others may destroy it; it shall itself be the destroyer of all that is merely worldly (cf. Matt. 21. 44).—People.] This is the true kingdom of David (Jer. 23. 5), an empire differing from the preceding as the spiritual from the temporal; Daniel so reveals it that only its actual advent could reveal more. This oracle of the great Hebrew 'Chaldean' was, according to Josephus, communicated to Alexander the Great. It probably prompted the general expectation throughout the East, prevalent about the time of our Lord's birth, as Tacitus records, of a great Hebrew kingdom. And it probably led to the visit of the 'wise men from the East,' the successors of the Chaldeans of this period, to seek and worship the new-born 'king of the Jews.' 46. Worshipped.] Worship is the recognition of deservingness (p. 189) in God or man; here it is rendered to the divinity recognised as latent in the humanity, 'the spirit of the holy gods' (ch. 4. 8). Nebuchadnezzar was advancing beyond the 'Chaldean' knowledge named in note on v. 11. He recognises in the God of Daniel (as later in the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, ch. 3. 26, 29) an unknown superlative God, to be reverenced, like his national gods, by himself (ch. 2. 46, 47) and to be conciliated by his subjects. So the half-civilized Lycaonians treated Paul and Barnabas (Acts 14. 11, 12), and the islanders of Melita St. Paul (Acts 28. 6). 47. It is that.] Omit; and for 'a God,' 'a Lord,' read 'the God,' 'the Lord,'—'Couldest.'] R.V. has been able to. Nebuchadnezzar acknowledges a God greater than any known to him, who is the Lord even of 'the king of kings,' because he recognises the existence of some God who revealed to Daniel what all the gods of the country could not reveal even to the Chaldeans. 48. Ruler.] Aram. shālit; see r. 10 & 5. 29.—Chief of the governors.] Seqanim; rather, prefects (cp. duke, dux). R.V. to be chief governor over all, &c.; 'chief' is rab (lord), a higher rank than 'ruler'; only metek (= king) is higher (cf. r. 10; Gen. 41. 40). Daniel's title was Rab-Seguin. The word rendered 'governor' is like our 'prince,' when that royal title is given to subjects not of royal birth. 49. Sat in the gate of the king.] R.V. marg. was at the king's court.

2 K. xxiv.—1. In his days ... came up.] In Jehoiakim's 3rd-4th year. As to the two latter years of the second period of Jehoiakim's reign, the historian is silent. 'Nebuchadnezzar for a time seems to have been content with this; but when Phœnicia joined in Jehoiakim's revolt, he took the field in person, and having left part of his army to besiege Tyre, he marched on Jerusalem, and captured it without delay.' Josephus tells us (Ant. x. 6. 3) that Jehoiakim surrendered at once, but that Nebuchadnezzar, breaking faith, put Jehoiakim to death, and ordered his body to be cast unburied outside the city wall.—Bands.] These beginnings, droppings before the great storm, seem well depicted (Jer. 12) by the image of the 'speckled bird' (R.V. of prey) which the other birds attack, as the swallows and other small birds attack the cuckoo, owl, or other bird offensive to them.—The Chaldees.] Or Chaldeans, Heb. Chasdim (probably from an Assyrian word meaning conquerors). ## 245.—Jeremiah Foretells the Humiliation and Desolation of Judah.

JEREMIAH XIII. 1-19.

haps Josiah, ch. 35. 24; 2 Kin. 23. 30, and Abaz, ch. 28. 27; cf. p. 191, note).

<sup>2</sup> K. xxiv.—7. River of Egypt.] Pharaoh Necho never recovered the defeat at Carchemish. He retired within Egypt's ancient border, i.e. the torrent (R.V. brook) of Egypt, the Wady-el-Arish, abandoning his conquests. Now an old man, he was obliged to be content to assume the defensive (see Jer. 25. 2, and v. 18, notes) to Jehoiakim's disappointment (Jos. Ant. x. 6. 2).

<sup>2</sup> K. xxiv.—8. Eighteen.] The terms in which Jeremiah (22. 28) and Ezekiel (19. 6, 7) condemn Jehoiachin imply that he was old enough to be held responsible. Therefore, as the readings of the Septuagint and of the revised Syriac Version (Peshito) in Chronicles agree with the A.V. text of Kings, the true reading is probably 'eighteen'. See Jer. 22. 28, 30, notes.—Nehushta.] i.e. bronzed; perhaps (so Ball) in reference to her complexion (cf. ch. 18. 4); she is elsewhere described as queen-mother, Heb. gebirah; see Jer. 13. 18, note.—Elnathan.] = Theodore. He was one of Jehoiakim's embassy to Egypt which brought back Urijah, and one of those who entreated Jehoiakim not to burn the Roll (Jer. 26 & 36). <sup>9</sup>. Did evil.] He pursued his father's policy, and even in three months (Syr. and Arab. read 110 days in Chr.) showed his character beyond doubt. Jeconiah remained in prison 36 years, till Evil-merodach, succeeding Nebuchadnezzar, freed him and gave him a place of honour at his table (Jer. 52. 31). How long he survived his release is not stated, but he is promised a peaceful death (Jer. 52. 31).

J. xiii.—This chapter belongs either to the last few days of Jehoiakim's reign or to the early days of the reign of Jehoiachin. The description of the queen as queen-mother (Heb. gebirah) in v. 18 is held to connect the chapter rather with the latter.—Jeremiah had disappeared in the 5th year of Jehoiakim (ch. 36. 19, 26). He now reappears, and the voice of prophecy makes itself heard again. See ch. 22. 20, full. 1. Get.] R.V. buy (vs. 2, 4 also), and so Fr., Ital., and Germ. Bochart, Hitzig, and Gratz (Variorum) suppose that Jeremiah took refuge from Jehoiachin at Bethlehem, called by its old name Ephrath, combining an allusion to Euphrates; but the Hebrew word always elsewhere means the Euphrates' (Payne Smith). This symbolic prophecy may therefore have involved two journeys of over 200 miles. It is possible, and Nebuchadnezzar's knowledge of his views, and consequent friendliness

<sup>3</sup> And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, <sup>4</sup> Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock. <sup>5</sup> So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

<sup>6</sup> And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there. <sup>7</sup> Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing.

<sup>12</sup> Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine? <sup>13</sup> Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the

(ch. 39. 12), favours the idea, that Jeremiah was during the time a refugee in the Euphrates valley. Payne Smith believes this acted parable to have been literally true, and that Jeremiah, in 'the last few mournful days of Jehoiakim,' was 'once again seen in the streets of Jerusalem, with his prophetic robe of black camel's hair girt about with this girdle, mildewed and water-stained, as the symbol of the pitiable estate of a nation which had rejected its God.' The many days the girdle was left by the Euphrates represent the 70 years during which Judah should lie hid in Babylonia. The girdle of priestly (Lev. 16. 4) linen fitly represents the whole 'sanctified' nation, which had been formed to cling (v. 11) close to its God. The emblem is imperfect. — Not in water. i.e. refrain from washing it. Why, remains undecided; perhaps (so Lowth) it was to be kept unwashed to figure (cp. Ezek. 16. 4) the unclean condition of the nation, or to figure in its natural hardness (so Jerome) their stubborn unyielding disposition. <sup>4</sup> Note. Variorum, cleft; not so Vulg. or Sept. (which implies that he dug to hide it). 'In Babylonia, on the river Euphrates, God's Chosen People, its national glory gone, was hidden away for a time, as if lost among the heathen, but really secure as in a rock, till after many days God again brought it forth a humbled remnant, yet the more fitted for its high calling.'—*Sp. See chs. 21. 11–24. 10. — Drunkenness. Meaning imbecility, vacillation, bewilderment (ch. 25. 15); 'the impotence of men whose minds are stricken with the wrath of God' (Ps. 60. 3, R.V. the wine of staggering; Isa. 51. 17, R.V. thou hast drunken the bowl of the cup of staggering, and drained it). The prophet supposes them to ask, Why what is thus doubly depicted should befall them? why they cannot avert it by repentance? He answers the one inquiry that it is for the greatness of their iniquity; and the other with a question, 'Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?' and with the assurance that it is no more possible, that they, inhabitants of Jerusalem, <sup>e</sup> with drunkenness. <sup>14</sup> And I will dash them one against another, even the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD: I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, but destroy them.

The valleys running up into these highlands being broad, and level enough to permit of the passage of chariots, were natural approaches to the heart of Judah and to Jerusalem from the S.W. Tristram writes: 'By the cities of the south, Heb. the Negeb, and by the cities of the maritime plain, the hill-country and heart of Judah was protected from invasion. The system of fortified cities established by Rehoboam (2 Chr. 11. 5-10), when examined topographically, shows the military principle of an outer and inner line of defence completely carried out. The approach presenting fewest physical obstacles was that towards Hebron from Beersheba. It was not used because of the scarcity of water on the route. But Ziph guarded the approach to Hebron. Hebron, Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, and Beth-zur were all strong inner positions, which must be reduced or masked before Jerusalem was reached. Soco, or Shocoh (mentioned with Azekah in 1 Sam. 17. 1), Adullam, and Gath were the successive fortresses which defended the approach to Hebron by the S.W., the modern Wady el Feranj; Mareshah was an outpost of this line in the Philistine plain itself. Adoraim is doubtfully identified, but Lachish and Azekah, as well as Libnah, a very strong natural position, protected the western openings from the hills, while the only easy ascent towards Jerusalem from the W., i.e. the Wady Surah, was guarded by Zorah; and Aijalon would arrest an invader intending to advance towards Beth-horon (see 1 Sam. 13. 18, notes and map). Three of these fortresses, Shocoh, Adoraim, and Aijalon, are distinctly named among the conquests of Shishak in the Karnak inscriptions. The closely-associated history of these towns attests this (Josh. 10. 10, 29, 31, 36 (Hebron); 2 Kin. 18. 13 & 19. 8; ch. 34. 7). A

In estimating the probable population of Jerusalem at this period, it should be remembered that the area of modern Jerusalem is considerably less on the south side than that of the ancient city, in which also the population would be much more crowded than now. Ophel and the greater part of mount Zion are outside the modern walls, and the Armenian quarter is very thinly peopled (Tristram).—Mighty men. Might here and in v. 16 means military fitness or renown; might in v. 15 is a different word, meaning rank (R.V. chief men).—Craftsmen and smiths. Rather, carpenters (Jer. 24. 1) and locksmiths; but R.V. as A.V. Both Vulg. (omnem artificem et clusorem) and Sept. (πάν τέκτονα καὶ τὸν συγκλείοντα) convey the idea that the former word is a general one; in fact it is usually (not however invariably, 1 Chr. 29. 5) confined to workers in wood (constantly distinguished from workers in stone and metal, 2 Sam. 5. 11; Isa. 44. 13, &c.); Ital. legnaioli; Germ. Zimmerleute. 'Smith' in Isa. 44. 12 (cp. Ecclus. 38. 28) means worker in iron; 'smith' here (Jer. also) is a different word, meaning one who shuts, closes; Fr. charpentiers de serruriers. arts the workmen of Jerusalem were specially skilled, or those of Babylon specially deficient. For the ruin of Jerusalem all artisans might be exported, for without these cannot a city be inhabited; but for the benefit of Babylon there was need only to export some.—The poorest sort, &c.] After the next deportation, only some of the poor of the land which had nothing were left. Ezekiel (17, 13, 14) explains Nebuchadnezzar's present policy, i.e. to weaken Judah and make it so dependent upon himself that he could suffer the kingdom to continue. So in the time of the Philistine domination, no smiths were allowed (1 Sam. 13. 19). 'Over this wreck of a kingdom, a younger son of Josiah was permitted to enjoy an inglorious and precarious sovereignty of eleven years, during which he abused his powers even worse than his imbecile predecessors.'—Milman.

The policy of Nebuchadnezzar was to strengthen his kingdom, and in particular to beautify his capital by collecting skilled artisans and art treasures from conquered countries; 'Is not this great Babylon that I have built,' &c. (Dan. 4. 30). 'Two inscriptions by Nebuchadnezzar on Lebanon have been recently discovered in the cliffs of the Nahr el Kelb.

a stream near Beyrout, and Prof. Sayce is of opinion that they were made by Nebuchadnezzar on his way towards Jerusalem by the coast-route. Nebuchadnezzar did not return by that route, but by Cæle-Syria, to Riblah. One of the inscriptions praises the quality of the wine the Chaldean king had found in Lebanon (see Ezek. 27. 18). In one occurs this title: 'Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, the illustrious Pastor, the servant of Merodach, the great Lord, his Creator, and of Nebo, his illustrious son, whom his Royalty loves.' An inscription, now in the British Museum, expressly states that 'he employed for the woodwork of the chamber of oracles (i.e. in Bel's temple) the largest of the trees which he had conveyed from Mt. Lebanon.' Note that cedars from Lebanon were granted by Cyrus to Zerubbabel for rebuilding the Temple (Ezra 3. 7), and how the West also, centuries later, prized the glory of Lebanon; rock-inscriptions occur reserving for the use of the Emperor Hadrian the pine, the fir, and the cedar (comp. See Jer. 22. 11, note, ad fin. As to his throne name, Zedekiah, it is most probable that in Jer. 23. 6 (see note there) Jeremiah retorts Mattaniah's new name to emphasize his cardinal prophecy as to the abolition of the existing dynasty of David. Zedekiah means Jehovah is righteousness. But, if that prophecy had been already published, Mattaniah may have himself suggested the title, as if aiming at the blessings promised by Jeremiah to a king thus named. So Rawlinson, who also suggests that Nebuchadnezzar probably decided between rivals to the throne of the new petty kingdom of Judah in favour of Mattaniah's pretensions. In 1 Chr. 3. 16 Zedekiah is called Jehoiakim's son, as if Jehoiachin's brother, and not his uncle; whereas in the preceding verse the name occurs among Josiah's sons; perhaps therefore son there merely means (cp. Matt. 1. 12, 'begat') successor (on the removal of Jehoiachin), but more probably (so Ball) both kings had a son of that name.

2 Kin. xxiv.—'After the captivity of Jehoiachin, a kind of lull followed which deceived many into a belief that the storm of Chaldean conquest was over.' This belief should be observed in connection with the false hopes of Judah and her neighbours. <sup>18</sup> Reigned.] Zedekiah's reign may be divided into three periods: (i) From his enthronement by Nebuchadnezzar to his visit to Babylon in his 4th year (Jer. 51. 59)—a period of agitation throughout Syria against the Chaldean power (see Jer. 27 & 28) which the presence of the foreign embassies in Jerusalem during the 4th year (Jer. 27. 3) illustrates. (ii) From his 5th year to his rebellion, about the end of his 8th year—a period of intrigue with Egypt. The death of the aged and disheartened Pharaoh Necho (see 2 Kin. 24. 7), and succession of his son Psammetichus II. (the Psammis of Herodotus, who reigned 5 years), in Zedekiah's 4th or 5th year, apparently encouraged the agitators. Zedekiah, by sending an embassy to seek an alliance with Egypt (Josephus), broke his oath to Nebuchadnezzar. Ezekiel denounces Zedekiah's perfidy, about the middle of the 6th year (Ezek. 17. 15-18 with 8. 1), and about the same part of the 7th year foreshows its consequences (21. 1-32 with 20. 1). After 8 years' vassalage (Jos. Ant. x. 7. 3), Zedekiah openly rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar. (iii) From his 9th to his 11th year—the period of the Chaldean invasion and of the final siege of Jerusalem, ending with Zedekiah's punishment by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah. The siege was interrupted by a diversion made by the army of Pharaoh Hophra (Jer. 37. 5), the vigorous and aggressive king who succeeded Psammetichus II. in the 9th or 10th year of Zedekiah (about B.C. 590 or 589, Bib. Dict.). But the Chaldeans, having, according to Josephus (l. c.), driven the Egyptians out of all Syria, resumed the siege and pursued it uninterrupted, until the capture of Jerusalem and of its king, in Zedekiah's 11th year. <sup>19</sup> Evil . . . Jehoiakim.] Zedekiah, like Jehoiachin, identified himself, in policy, with Jehoiakim. He added in particular breach of covenant to his general evil doing (Ezek. 22. 12-19); [to which fact perhaps the epithet profane points (Ezek. 21. 25, where Sept. has βέβηλος, as in Heb. 12. 16); but see Var.] Ezekiel (8-19) vividly depicts the hopeless corruption of Zedekiah's subjects. Evidently 'Zedekiah was a man not so much bad at heart as weak in will.' Among his sins of omission, his moral weakness is shown in not enforcing the manumission of the slaves (Jer. 34. 8-11), in rejecting Jeremiah's advice, though in his heart he knew it was of God (Jer. 37. 2, 3), and, like Pilate, in lacking courage to espouse Jeremiah's cause openly against his persecutors (Jer. 38. 5).

J. xxxvii.—1. Whom.] i.e. Zedekiah; cf. 2 Chr. 36. 10, note. 2. Neither . . . did hearken unto . . . Jeremiah.] See notes on 2 Kin. 23. 30, 34 & 24. 1, 'turned.' 'Zedekiah's was evidently an uneasy throne, the people restless, the priests and people eager to revolt, and the Chaldees probably irritated, as the Romans were subsequently, at the determination of the Jews never to submit quietly to a foreign rule. And there was a like ferment ## 248.—Jeremiah's Message to the Exiles in Babylon.

JEREMIAH XXIX. 1-23.

<sup>1</sup> Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon; <sup>2</sup> (after that "Jecouiah the king, and the queen, and the eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem:)" <sup>3</sup> by the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon) saying, at Babylon. This Jeremiah sought to quell (ch. 29), and the exiles believed him, being the elect of the nation (the 'good figs,' ch. 24) —but not without the same kind of resistance on the part of false prophets as that which was carried on too successfully at Jerusalem. But though Jeremiah remained with Zedekiah and tried to influence him for good, his mission was over. Judah's probation was over; her salvation no longer possible; the Jewish Church had gone with Jehoiachin to Babylon.—Sp. Com.

J. xxix.—Chs. 27-29 belong to the first period of Zedekiah's reign (see 2 Kin. 24. 18, note). Jeremiah, resuming his prophecy of the 4th year of Jehoiakim (ch. 25), urges the exiles in Babylonia (ch. 29), and the kings of Judah and of the neighbouring peoples (when apparently concerting an united resistance to Nebuchadnezzar, ch. 27. 3), to acquiesce in the Chaldean supremacy until its overthrow after 70 years' duration, according to his predictions. False prophets both in Babylonia (ch. 29. 15-32) and in Judah (ch. 27. 14 to 28. 17) oppose Jeremiah.—1. Letter.] Sept. and Vulg. book (ch. 51. 63 also).—Sent.] This embassy must have gone to Babylon some considerable time, 'probably two or three years' (Payne Smith), previous to the king's visit to Babylon in his 4th year, but apparently (cp. rs. 17. 18 with ch. 24. 8-10) after the revelation to Jeremiah, through the parable of the Figs, of the destiny of the two divisions of the Hebrew nation respectively. One and the same error pervaded the minds of the exiles and of the relics of the nation at Jerusalem, viz. a belief (calculated entirely to frustrate God's purpose in sending the punishment, and to bring about from natural causes their diminution, v. 6, and not increase, as a nation) that the Captivity would be of short duration.—Such false hopes prepared the ground where false prophets could sow their seed, and both parts of the nation were therefore exposed to be deluded by prophets who prophesied, according to their own wishes or the popular desire (ch. 27. 2-4), the speedy restoration of Jehoiachin, the exiles, and the vessels of the Temple. Jeremiah, on the contrary, solemnly declares that the Captivity shall last as long as the appointed period of the Chaldean supremacy, i.e. 70 years; and that the residue of the sacred vessels shall also be carried away to Babylon. He had proclaimed the forfeiture of David's throne by Jehoiachin (ch. 22. 20-30); —he now proclaims that Zedekiah is not the heir of the promises to David; but that the present visible kingdom of Judah, so far from being the rallying-point of the nation, should shortly be utterly destroyed. The nation shall be restored;—but two generations hence, and by the return from diverse parts of the vast Chaldean empire of 'one of a city and two of a family' (ch. 3. 14), a faithful or converted remnant. To Jeremiah's letter (rs. 4-23) Shemaiah replies by writing to Zephaniah the 'second priest' (rs. 26-28), urging him to silence Jeremiah. Zephaniah acquaints Jeremiah, who writes a second letter, declaring God's curse upon Shemaiah.—Residue of the elders.] Implying that they had suffered more than the other classes from the long caravan-journey, or by the hardships of their change of life. Ezekiel's intercession for the exiles, in the 6th year of the Captivity (Ezek.

<sup>15</sup> Because ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon; <sup>16</sup> know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity; <sup>17</sup> thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will send upon them the <sup>m</sup>sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like <sup>n</sup>vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil. <sup>18</sup> And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and <sup>o</sup>will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be <sup>p</sup>a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them: <sup>19</sup> because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which <sup>q</sup>I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

<sup>20</sup> Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon: <sup>21</sup> Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaijah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name; Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes; <sup>22</sup> *r*and of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, <sup>s</sup>whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire; <sup>23</sup> because <sup>t</sup>they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

The seemingly disinherited 'outcasts' really enjoy God's special Presence ('a little sanctuary'), and of them, and not of Zedekiah and his subjects, will God repeople the Holy Land after the Captivity; they purified and changed by affliction, shall then purge the land of idolatry, and of them God will re-make his chosen people. <sup>15</sup> Because. Variorum, Whereas; R.V. For.—Prophets. They argued against Jeremiah in the spirit of the old Bethel-prophet (1 Kin. 13. 18). <sup>24</sup> Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the Nehelamite, saying, <sup>25</sup> Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, <sup>a</sup> and to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying, <sup>26</sup> The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be <sup>b</sup> officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is <sup>c</sup> mad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldst <sup>d</sup> put him in prison, and in the stocks. <sup>27</sup> Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you? <sup>28</sup> For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: <sup>e</sup> build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

<sup>30</sup> Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, <sup>31</sup> Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite;

The A.V. margin is utterly wrong (Payne Smith), with its sarcastic allusion to halam = dreams (v. 8). In Shemaiah, and the Ahab and Zedekiah of r. 22, we have specimens of the chief false prophets (vs. 8, 15) among the exiles in Babylon. Ezekiel did not begin to prophesy there until the 5th year of Jehoiachin's captivity. Ezekiel's 'call is probably to be connected with Jeremiah's letter' (Currey). 25. Sent letters.] i.e. after Jeremiah's letter was received at Babylon. Message to the nations, Judah's neighbours.

JEREMIAH XXVII.

Make thee bonds and yokes, <sup>b</sup> and put them upon thy neck, <sup>3</sup> and send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah; <sup>4</sup> and command them to say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

<sup>5</sup> <sup>c</sup> I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and <sup>d</sup> have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me. <sup>6</sup> <sup>e</sup> And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchad-

Or, hath caused. 32. Taught rebellion. Var. spoken revolt (ch. 28. 16); so R.V.

J. xxvii.—About this time, Nebuchadnezzar was engaged in a life and death struggle with the Medes, and it would seem that the knowledge that the great king was thus fully occupied elsewhere encouraged the petty princes of Phœnicia-Palestine to meditate revolt, and even to expect the speedy dissolution of his empire. And now, apparently, they had gone so far as to concert with Zedekiah (encouraged doubtless by Egypt, Ezek. 17. 7, 15) an united effort to shake off Nebuchadnezzar's yoke. But Jeremiah, conscious that he is 'the representative of the divine element in the theocracy' of Judah, stands forth to denounce the movement. He appears with a yoke upon his neck (cf. ch. 28. 10), and sends, as a symbolical message, a similar yoke to the five neighbouring kings by their ambassadors.—None of these kings lent any active aid to Judah in her eventual revolt; although Tyre (Ezek. 26-28) and Ammon seem also to have taken up arms (Ezek. 21. 20, note, & 25), and others were so far friendly that the Hebrew refugees from the Chaldeans took refuge in their countries (ch. 40. 11). The fact that these states, which, with the exception of commercial Tyre and Zidon, were always jealous neighbours or inveterate foes of the Hebrews, should court Zedekiah's co-operation vividly suggests the circumstances of the crisis. See 2 Kin. 24. 18, note. 1. Jehoiakim. The Syriac and some Heb. MSS. read, correctly, Zedekiah (see vs. 3, 12, 20 and ch. 28. 1). The verse is omitted in the Septuagint. 2. Bonds and yokes. Variorum, things and poles [together making a yoke]; R.V. bonds and bars. See Lev. 26. 13, 'I have broken the bands (Var. poles; R.V. bars) of your yoke, and made you go upright.' 'Bands' mean 'the wooden lath connecting the ends of the yoke that encircles the neck of the cattle. No leather is used in the ox-yoke of Palestine.'—Tristram. See p. 11.—Yokes. R.V. bars, which is the literal meaning of môtah; another word (v. 8) for yoke, ôl, views it as that which is bound, either by the laths to the neck, or by thongs on to the pole; a third word, tsened, means a pair (1 Sam. 11. 7), or the amount of land a pair could plough in a day (cf. Macaulay, Horatius, 65; 1 Sam. 14. 14). 3. Them. i.e. the other yokes, besides the one worn for a sign on his own neck.—Messengers. i.e. the ambassadors of the states situate between the Arabian deserts, the Euphrates, and the Nile, just named. Possibly Zedekiah's journey to Babylon in this (his 4th) year, was caused by the necessity of explaining away the visit of these embassies to Jerusalem, and rendered the negotiations abortive.—Come. Variorum, are come; Vulg. revertant. 4. Command . . . unto. R.V. give them a charge unto. 5. I have made. i.e. men and things have their existence solely for the carrying out of their Maker's purposes (compare Rom. 9. 21; Dan. 4. 17, 35); to resist Nebuchadnezzar is to resist the 'servant' of the one God (v. 6; Ezek. 29. 18) charged with God's commission; see ch. 25. 9, note.—Ground. Or, face of the earth, and so Vulg.—Have given. R.V. has the present, Sept. the future,

Message to Zedekiah.

<sup>12</sup> I spake also to <sup>m</sup>Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live.

<sup>13 n</sup> Why will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? <sup>14</sup> Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they prophesy <sup>o</sup>a lie unto you. <sup>15</sup> For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they prophesy a lie in my name; that I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you.

JEREMIAH XXVIII.

<sup>1</sup> AND <sup>1</sup> it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying, <sup>2</sup> Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken <sup>2</sup> the yoke of the king of Babylon. <sup>3</sup> Within two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the

See ch. 23. 9-32 and Ezek. 13. <sup>16</sup> Vessels. Solomon made two pillars, a sea or laver of gigantic proportions, ten smaller layers (on bases, v. 19), caldrons, shovels, and bowls, all of bronze ; of gold, the incense-altar, shewbread-tables, 10 candlesticks, trimmers and snuff-dishes, incense-cups and bowls (1 Kin. 7 ; 2 Chr. 4). Probably all these latter were carried away in the reigns of Jehoiakim and Jehoiachin, the more portable at first (2 Chr. 36. 7 ; Dan. 1. 2, note).—Shortly. Within two years, Hananiah ventured to say (ch. 28. 3). <sup>17</sup> Be laid waste. Or, become a desolation. <sup>18</sup> Let, &c. A fair test of their Divine mission—let them pray that there be no further captivity, and see if they prevail.—Intercession. Rather, entreaty ; for intercession has lost this meaning, which it once had (e.g. intercession against, Rom. 11. 2), and means only entreaty on behalf of. <sup>21</sup> Of Jerusalem. R.V. at, as v. 18. period, previous to Zedekiah's journey to Babylon in this year (ch. 51. 59), which seems to form an epoch in these records of the reign.—Prophet. Perhaps priest also, as Jeremiah was, for Gibeon was a priest-city (Josh. 21. 17).—In the presence . . . priests . . . people. Having, apparently, chosen some opportunity of giving special publicity to his prophecy, after the practice of Jeremiah (e.g. ch. 27. 16). <sup>3</sup> Two full years. Marg. wrongly follows Vulg. adhuc duo anni dicuntur, and Sept. ἔτι δύο ἔτη ἡμερῶν, for the Hebrew = two years days ; but the not uncommon phrase may mean precisely two years (Keil) or about two years (Payne Smith). <sup>4</sup> Shortly was the cry (ch. 27. 16) of other prophets ; Hananiah, emboldened perhaps by the progress of the contemplated confederacy, ventures to fix a date.—Bring again. He directly contradicts Jeremiah (ch. 29. 10 & 22. 27). The distinguishing test of true prophecy was the fulfilment of some 'sign' avouched, or of some definite prediction made, by the prophet (Deut. 18. 22 ; cp. 13. 1, 2). Hananiah, to accredit his false prophecy, named a period within which his prediction should LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon: <sup>4</sup> and I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

<sup>5</sup> Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD, <sup>6</sup> even the prophet Jeremiah said, <sup>a</sup> Amen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place. <sup>7</sup> Nevertheless hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people; <sup>8</sup> The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence. <sup>9</sup> <sup>e</sup> The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

<sup>10</sup> Then Hananiah the prophet took the yoke from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it. <sup>11</sup> And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon <sup>g</sup> from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years.

And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

<sup>12</sup> Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

<sup>13</sup> Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast broken the yokes of wood; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron. <sup>14</sup> For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; <sup>h</sup> I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these be fulfilled, 'two years,' and thus meets the definite but remote prediction of Jeremiah, '70 years.'—Jeremiah recognises this, and gives a 'sign' to be fulfilled within the current year.

6. Amen.] Not here simply the particle of assertion (as constantly on Christ's lips), or pious aspiration (Ps. 72. 19), or acquiescence (1 Kin. 1. 36; Deut. 27. 15; ch. 11. 5), or of believing prayer (as commonly in our use). It is a declaration, 'The thing shall be,' i.e. in God's own time. It is the expression of a devout wish, 'Would that it might be as speedily as you say,' combined with the confidence that it certainly shall not be so. Possibly, Jeremiah thought even yet that the doom of 70 years was only conditional, that repentance might even now abridge it, and the prophet would pray for that. — All that is, &c.] Rather, all the captives; R.V. all them of the captivity. 8. Of old.] The argument seems to be—Prophets, until now, have foretold calamity only; it has come, and the fulfilment proved the reality of their mission. J. li.—59. The word, &c.] It is 'essential to the right discharge by Jeremiah of the duties of his office' that he should announce the doom of the Chaldaean empire of Babylon (chs. 50 & 51). 'He had foretold Jerusalem's capture and ruin by Babylon as a necessary act of the Divine justice, and as the one remedy for Judah's sins. He had done this in sorrow, with a heavy heart, as God's messenger; but he was a true patriot nevertheless, and had felt deep shame and indignation at the cruelties inflicted by the Chaldeans on his country. True that he recognised them as Jehovah's ministers; but they practised wanton barbarities, and claimed the glory for themselves and their gods. And thus Jeremiah must complete the cycle of the Divine justice. Babylon must be punished for its cruelty and pride, and for its idolatry. The mighty realm raised so suddenly to be the scourge of God's wrath.

The generally accepted view is, that Zedekiah was summoned, or thought it prudent to go, to Babylon to explain the presence in Jerusalem of the embassies from his neighbours. Among these, the accession of Psammetichus II. (Psammis; see ch. 28. 1 & 21. 1; 2 Kin. 24. 18, notes) about this time would prompt an expectation of support from a more active or aggressive Pharaoh, and a weak and vacillating king like Zedekiah would inevitably become involved in the consequent intrigues. Perhaps a confirmation of his oath of allegiance, referred to in 2 Chr. 36. 13 and Ezek. 17. 13, 18, was now exacted of Zedekiah.—A quiet prince.] Or, quarter-master; lit. commander of the resting-place (see Variation; so R.V. marg.); but R.V. E. i.—EZEKIEL, like Jeremiah, was a priest as well as a prophet. His inclusion in the band of captives deported with king Jehoiachin indicates a certain degree of position or dignity (2 Kin. 24. 14). He survived at least until the 27th year of the Captivity (ch. 29. 17). Ezekiel carries on Jeremiah's mission, viz. to proclaim Israel's forfeiture of Canaan and its national privileges, and the advent of a new Covenant. The scope of the present work admits only of a reference to those prophecies which Ezekiel uttered while a Hebrew monarch was still living, although a prisoner in Babylon, and especially to those more intimately connected with the Hebrew national history.—Until Jerusalem's final overthrow, Ezekiel's general tone is that of 'correction, denunciation, and reproof,' afterwards it is of consolation and promise. For four years, from the 5th to the 9th year of Jehoiachin's captivity (i.e. of Zedekiah's reign in Jerusalem), it was Ezekiel's task to oppose the unbelief of Jehoiachin and the exiles in Jeremiah's message (ch. 29) and prophecies; to warn them against looking for either a speedy restoration or any restoration based on the existence of the present kingdom of Judah. Ezekiel foretold (then apparently a most improbable event) the destruction of the Holy City and the Temple, and the depopulation of the Holy Land. During this period, Jeremiah in Jerusalem and Ezekiel in Chaldaea (chs. 1-24), put forth like 'prophecies, as from one common mouth, like two singers who answer each other in alternate strains;' but while Jeremiah was scorned, persecuted, and imprisoned, Ezekiel, if at first opposed, was at last listened to, if not obeyed. That Jehovah would suffer Solomon's Temple and David's capital and kingdom to be swept away (cp. Jer. 8. 19, 'Is not Jehovah in Zion? is not her king in her?') must have seemed even more incredible to the Hebrews than the predictions of the destruction of the Second Temple and Jerusalem and of the abolition of the Mosaic Law seemed to the hearers of our Lord and of His apostles, especially of St. Paul. But Ezekiel thus prophesied in Babylonia, with a plainness and vigour that would not have been tolerated in Jerusalem (see Jer. 26. 1, note). Jerome says that the prophecies of Ezekiel and Jeremiah were sent to Jerusalem and into Babylonia respectively—for the instruction of both sections of the Hebrew nation, and that both might recognise in the fulfilments were opened, and I saw <sup>c</sup>visions of God. <sup>2</sup> In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of <sup>d</sup>king Jehoiachin's captivity, <sup>3</sup> the word of the LORD came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and <sup>e</sup>the hand of the LORD was there upon him.

of the several prophecies the indisputable results of the overruling will of Jehovah.—During the final siege and the destruction of Jerusalem, Ezekiel was silenced as regards the Hebrews, but was commissioned to foretell that Nebuchadnezzar as God's instrument would punish the nations surrounding Canaan, who had all encroached more or less on the kingdom granted to the Chosen People (i.e. that which David and Solomon once fully possessed), and who, through religious and political antagonism, would rejoice in Judah's fall—and that Nebuchadnezzar would finally punish Egypt, alternately the scourge and false stay of the Chosen People (chs. 25–32). Such prophecies taught the exiles to submit to Nebuchadnezzar and endure patiently the captivity; but, further, assured them of God's justice. Evil should not triumph. About 19 months after the destruction of Jerusalem (12th year, 12th month), Ezekiel is again commissioned to prophesy 'to the children of his people,' and to encourage them to hope for forgiveness and restoration, in terms which apply primarily to the future of the restored nation, but ultimately to the reign of Messiah (chs. 33, 34, & 36–39). In the 25th year of Jehoiachin's captivity, Ezekiel sees in vision a development of the promise given in ch. 37. 27. The closing chapters of Ezekiel deal with the Restoration in a new form of the kingdom of God hitherto represented by the Davidic Monarchy. This is expressed by a vision—clothed in those symbols of the Mosaic ordinances with which he and his countrymen were familiar—of 'a rebuilt Temple, a reformed priesthood, a re-apportioned territory, a renewed people, and of the consequent diffusion of fertility and plenty over the whole earth. The return from Babylon began this work, but was only introductory to the future kingdom of Christ, first upon earth, finally in heaven.'—Dates of Ezekiel's prophecies. These, doubtless originally spoken and afterwards written down, are in groups, to each of which a date is prefixed. Thus chs. 1–7 are assigned to the 5th year of Zedekiah and of Jehoiachin's captivity; chs. 8–19 to the 6th year; chs. 20–23 to the 7th year. No group represents the 8th year, but ch. 24 is dated by its subject, the beginning of the final siege of Jerusalem, the 10th of the 10th month of the 9th year.

E. i. —1. The thirtieth year. i.e. probably he was at his call to the prophetic office (which is described at length in three chapters) thirty years old, the age when a Levite entered on his office, the Baptist also, and our Lord. So Currey; Davidson, however (rejecting equally all other contures), thinks reference to the prophetic age 'extremely unnatural.'—Captives. Heb. captivity (p. 558, note). The king was in prison for many years (cf. 2 Kin. 25. 27) in Babylon. Probably most of the captives were settled successively about the same region, and free, except as regards migration.—Of Chebar. [Omit of (R.V.). This Khabour is probably Nahr Malcha, the 'king's river' of Nebuchadnezzar (Pusey), the greatest (from chaber=great) of the Mesopotamian canals. 'The Khabour (2 Kin. 17. 6), flowing into the Euphrates near Ciresium, is much too far north to meet the requirements of the history.'—Tristram. So Davidson also; but (v. 3) the Chebar is only described as being in 'the land of the Chaldeans,' and Currey, quoting the Syriac interpreter, adopts this latter identification.—Visions. [By a vision of God, so far as it is possible for man to have any such vision, Moses, St. Paul, and Ezekiel (Law, Gospel, and Prophecy) were prepared for their great works. 'The likeness as the appearance of a man' (v. 26) is to be compared with the Being whom St. John describes as 'One like unto the Son of Man.' As a title, Son of Man is in N.T. applied to Christ by Himself only, with the exception only of St. Stephen when he saw the heavens open. It is, however, merely an Eastern periphrasis for man; St. Paul in fact is saying the same thing when he says (1 Tim. 2. 5) ἄνθρωπος Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς. In 1 Cor. 15. 45, for 'the first man' Syr. has 'first son of man.' Ezekiel's commission as 'Son of Man' (a phrase applied especially to him and to Daniel, the prophets of the Captivity) follows in chs. 2, 3. A scroll full of lamentations, mourning, and woe is to be eaten, for words must be put into his mouth by God himself; it is found sweet to the taste, for to be God's messenger is a delightful office; but bitter afterwards, for the speaking to the hard hearted is sorrowful work. Ezekiel first passes seven days (ch. 3. 15) in silence at Tel-abib on the Chebar, the chief settlement of his brother-exiles; then God lightens the load of his responsibility by the assurance that if warning be faithfully given, the speaker has delivered his soul, though the hearer refuse to turn. 3. Expressly. Merely an emphatic Heb. phrase, coming came.—The priest. Heb. (but not Sept. or Vulg.), of Buzi the priest.—Land of the Chaldeans.] Spoken of as Babylon in 2 Kin. 24. 15.—Hand of the Lord.] A Divine impulse, i.e. God's power constraining or upholding (cf. 1 Kin. 18. 46; Rev. 1. 10; Acts 11. 5 & 22. 17; Num. 21. 2; 2 Kin. 12. 2–4).

1 THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem: 2 and lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set battering rams against it round about. 3 Moreover take thou unto thee an iron pan, and set it

In the 5th year of the Captivity, Ezekiel (see ch. 1.1, note) begins his double task of undeceiving and of teaching the exiles. They must be pleaded with, that at least a remnant might be led to repentance, through which the inheritance of the Promises should descend until Messiah's advent. But first their false hopes must be crushed, so that they should learn to base their hopes upon a new state of things, in which the Temple and its services and the other institutions of the Davidic monarchy should be suspended or abolished. Ezekiel is cautioned that at least no one should be able to plead a lack of warning (ch. 2, 5 & 3, 17-21).—In chs. 4 and 5, Ezekiel foreshows by various symbols the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, and the dispersion of the remnant of the nation left by them in Canaan. The details show that some at least of these 'symbolical actions' were not actually performed, but that they represent the impression upon the mind of the prophet, of a vividness equivalent to actual performance, so that by a description of them he was able to impress upon others the truths he was commissioned to deliver. Such descriptions would be more forcible to the mental vision of the audience than metaphorical language would be to the ear. On the completion of the imaginary siege (ch. 4), the fate of the inhabitants is foreshown by a further figure (ch. 5); of Ezekiel's hair, one-third is consumed by fire, one-third slashed with a sword, one-third cast to the winds, typifying (1) the deaths by pestilence and privation, (2) the slaughter, during the blockade; (3) the dispersion of the survivors with vengeance following, and the destruction of most of the few to be left in the land. In chs. 6 & 7, Ezekiel utters the doom of the rest of the kingdom; denouncing the idolatrous shrines and their votaries (ch. 6), and declaring in a dirge (ch. 7) the nearness of the judgment and its completeness; Jehovah will suffer the Chaldeans to enter and profane even the Holy of Holies (vs. 20-23).

E. iv.—1. A tile.] Levenah, rendered everywhere else 'brick.' Ezekiel and the exiles were now familiar with the use of the clay tablets of the land of their captivity. In Assyria and Chaldaea, where stone was absent, and wood extremely scarce, clay in various shapes was used for all records, public or private. The clay was carefully kneaded, and moulded into various forms, flat tiles, cylinders, or octagonal blocks. The wedge-shaped characters, often extremely small, were impressed by a style on the smooth surface. The tile was then burnt, and the record remained imperishable. The use of this material has been the means of preserving for us whole libraries of Assyrian records, and a very small portion of these has yet been studied (Tristram).—Pourtray.] Jerusalem as a besieged city would be an unlikely state of things, for Zedekiah was Nebuchadnezzar's own viceroy, and Egypt was unaggressive and also friendly; but (prius dementat) the event showed that Zedekiah could become so infatuated as to provoke his own ruin and that of his country (2 Kin. 24, 20). Nebuchadnezzar's policy was to leave Judah to itself so long as it remained weak and submissive (ch. 17, 13, 14) and loyal to the covenant with him.—The city.] Rather, a city (Var. and R.V.). 2. Lay siege.] i.e. depict a siege. This passage explains the method of sieges—and is amply illustrated on Assyrian monuments.—Fort . . . cast . . . set.] R.V. forts . . . cast up . . . plant.—Cast up: the earth was carried in baskets (as by the modern Egyptians engaged on public works) and shed on the mound till it rose to the level of the city walls.—Fort: ancient siege lines comprised detached towers of observation (probably meant here) and forts on mounds. For the wooden towers wheeled up to the walls, see 2 Kin. 25, 1, note.—Mount.] From Lat. mons, through Fr. mont; mound, which we should use here, is from Sax. mundian, to defend—a bank of earth. The Hebrew word (cf. Jer. 6, 6 & 32, 24) is rendered bank in Isa. 37, 33. Herodotus (i. 162) says that Harpagus, Cyrus' general, 'took several cities in Ionia by means of earthworks; having heaped up mounds against the walls, he carried the cities by storm.'—Camp.] Rather, camps (Variorum; so R.V.), i.e. the quarters of various portions of the besieging host.—Rams.] Perhaps, rather, engines, for, though the Hebrew means lit. ram (or lamb, Deut. 32, 14), yet the Nimroud monuments show, not the Roman ram's head, but a head as of a mace or spear. 3. Pan.] i.e. an ordinary baking-plate (like a large cymbal) used in the East; R.V. marg. flat

As he is not to depict this among the engines, it is less likely that it figures a screen such as archers used (depicted upon the monuments, Layard's Nineveh, ii. 345), than that it indicates by a fresh image (or second part of the 'sign') the impenetrable barrier betwixt God and the too late prayers of his people; cf. Isa. 59. 2; Prov. 1. 28.—Against,] i.e. toward.—House of Israel,] i.e. to all members of the Hebrew race to whom the sign might become known; certainly to the exiles with Jehoiachin, possibly to other members of the Hebrew stock previously carried captive. After the captivity of the Ten Tribes, Judah, with the associated remnants of other tribes (see 2 Chr. 30. 6 & 34. 6), represented the entire Hebrew nation. 'Thus the prophets of Judah constantly address their countrymen as "the house of Israel" without distinction of tribes.' Except in distinctive cases (as vs. 5, 6) Ezekiel uses 'Israel' and 'Judah' indiscriminately. To this extent 'the Captivity was the time of reñion,' as Jeremiah (3. 18) had foretold, Cf. 2 Chr. 21. 2. <sup>4</sup>Lie, &c.] Having just represented the besiegers of Jerusalem, he next represents the helpless besieged. By the figure of one bound as a prisoner, who cannot turn himself, straitened for food also, lying on his left side 390 days, Ezekiel is to show the years that Israel must bear the punishment of her sin; and similarly 40 days for Judah. The two periods are co-terminions, the larger inclusive of the smaller. At their close Chaldaean supremacy shall cease (cf. ch. 29. 11–14). Davidson seems satisfactorily to show that the Sept. reading (in vs. 5, 9) of 190 for 390 must be correct, whether dating from the fall of Samaria (722 B.C.) or (more probably) from Tiglath's deportation (734 B.C.). After a corrective judgment (of, respectively, 190 and 40 years) the united (Isa. 11. 12; 43. 7; Jer. 3. 18; ch. 37. 16, 17) nations shall be restored. — Bear, &c.] i.e. suffer (the sign of) its penalty. <sup>d</sup> ch. 1. 4.

E. viii.—1.] In this year, Ezekiel (chs. 8–19) reviews the condition of Judah both in Canaan and in Chaldaa, but he sets forth especially the extreme sinfulness of the former to convince the exiles that her impending punishment was just and inevitable. In the vision (chs. 8–11), Ezekiel sees (ch. 8) the image of jealousy (i.e. the idolatry which provokes the anger of the God 'whose name is Jealous,' Ex. 34. 14), sun-worship and other abominations (vs. 3, 16, 10), familiar in the cities and homes of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, actually established within the Temple itself. A few found faithful in the city (ch. 9) sighed and cried in shame for their country; their foreheads are marked by the Angel of the Covenant (cp. Ex. 23. 20–22) with a Tau (the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, which in its old form resembled a cross; cf. 1 Sam. 21. 13, note); the destroying angels following him slaughter all others without pity: judgment begins at the House of God, which the dead bodies pollute. In chs. 10 & 11, the Angel scatters the 'coals' of God's wrath over Jerusalem, and the abandonment by the Covenant God of Israel first of His Temple and then of His City is depicted (ch. 10. 18, 19 & 11. 22, 23). The doom of the scoffing rulers who contradict Jeremiah's message to the exiles (Jer. 29) is emphasised by the sudden death of Pelatiah, and Ezekiel announces that, so far from the exiles being outcasts, as their countrymen in Judah said (ch. 11. 15), the latter were themselves the outcasts. The exiles enjoy God's special Presence instead of the Temple, and of them God will restore the nation after the Captivity.—In ch. 13 (and in ch. 34, both chapters so closely resembling Jer. 23, that 'the author of one must have had the other before him') the false prophets are warned, who pretend in God's name to hold out hopes that the doom of Jerusalem would be averted; this bulwark of hope shall fail, as walls of mud whose instability is concealed by their whited plaster (1 ar.); the prophetesses also, an order suggestive of the lowest depths of heathen superstition, are warned, who deck themselves (some so young, πάσῃς ἡλικίας) in the fantastic guise of sorceresses to beguile people (ψυχάς; cf. 1 Sam. 26. 21, note), and to get a living. God will not long endure that prophet or prophetic sadden the righteous and strengthen the wicked. In ch. 14 Ezekiel exposes the hypocrisy of the exiles who come to consult him, Judah will not be spared (as they seemed to hope) for any righteous therein; a Noah, a Daniel, or a Job should save no life but his own. The nation (ch. 15) had proved worthless for its mission; its guilt is aggravated (ch. 16) by the undeserved and marvellous grace outpoured upon it by God during its whole history. In ch. 17 Ezekiel exposes the perfidy and futility of Zedekiah's intrigues with Egypt, and declares that David's kingdom will be restored after its impending destruction, but in a way known to God only. Ch. 18 is a justification of God's dealings; the saying is untrue, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, the children's teeth are set on edge; the merit or guilt of the ancestor does not affect the judgment of the descendant, but Manasseh's apostasy has entailed on Judah a legacy of moral and religious degradation, which later generations have increased by continuing and exaggerating his idolatries. The nation being as a whole corrupt is condemned as a whole, but individuals are judged individually (cp. ch. 3. 18–21). The man that sinneth he alone dies; there is no individual who may not cast away transgression, renew heart and spirit, and live; God has no pleasure in the death of him that dieth. The dirge of David's dynasty and realm (ch. 19) closes the series. See 2 Kin. 23. 29, note.—[Sixth.] i.e. September; cf. v. 14, note.—[Elders.] 'The community at Tel Abib were probably permitted to have a certain internal government of their own.'—Sat., &c.] See ch. 20. 1, note, p. 614: i.e. to enquire of God. 2. Likeness.] Sept. adds ἀνδρὸς; the same Person appeared to Ezekiel (v. 4) in his vision at the Temple-court gate, and spoke (v. 5).—[Amber.] Heb. chashmal is derived from words meaning brass-gold (Bochart) or smooth brass (Gesenius); Sept. ἤλεκτρον. In times of national distress, the Hebrew kings and people were most tempted to have recourse to idolatrous or oracular superstitions; see Isa. 8. 19. Cp. Smith's Religion of the Semites, p. 338. 5. Earth.] R.V. marg. l. and. 14. Tammuz.] The Phenician Adonis (so Vulg.). After the Captivity, the Jewish 4th month (June-July) was named Tammuz, the names of the months, previously distinguished by numbers, being probably adopted from the Babylonians. June was the month of the almost world-wide solemnity known as the ἀφανισμός 'Adōnidos, i.e. of the lamentation over the supposed departure of Adonis to spend half the year with Persephone; probably it symbolized 'the suspension of the productive powers of nature in summer; in the East, nature seems to wither and die under the heat of the sun.' This particular nature-worship was peculiarly popular with women, and led to unbridled licence and excess. Adonis was fabled to have died, by a wild boar's tusk, in June. A river of Phenicia, 'the spray of whose cataracts has a pink hue in the sunlight against the cliffs' (Tristram), bore his name. See 2 Kin. 23. 7. Cf.—

'Thammuz came next behind,
Whose annual wound to Lebanon allured
The Syrian damsels to lament his fate
In amorous ditties all a summer's day;
While smooth Adonis from his native rock

Of Thammuz yearly wounded. The love-tale

in whose court Ezekiel seemed to stand, representing their order, as the 70 elders the people. Thus the national character of the apostasy is shown. See v. 17, note. Punishment (ch. 9. 6) begins with these 25. — Their backs.] See v. 3, note 'Gate.' A climax of outrage, of which God twice (ref.s) complains, 'they have turned unto me the back and not the face.' Whether under the name Ra, Baal, Apollo, or any other, no form of false worship is of more ancient date than sun-worship, and that moon-worship (Ashtoreth, Ishtar, &c.) with which it was constantly united. Job (31. 26) mentions no other. Cf. ch. 6. 4, marg.; 2 Kin. 23. 11, 12. 17. Returned.] Relapsed after Josiah's reformation; see Jer. 3. 10 & 7. 24. The very guardians of religion (comp. Mal. 2. 7) profaned their office and the holiest part of their place of ministry by the worship of a false god. — Put . . . branch . . . nose.] To what custom allusion is made cannot be determined. Sept. appears to understand a jeering act, ὡς μυκτῆρι (orres the same word is used in 2 Chr. 36. 16 and Gal. 6. 7). The word branch generally means vine-branch; Pool therefore instances the kissing of the thyrsus by Bacchus-worshippers; Germ. weinreben. Jerome appears to find an explanation in the Parsee custom of waving and kissing a bunch of twigs (called barson) when worshipping the sun (so Michaelis also). Newcome adopts a different reading (a Chaldee word), which several MSS. sanction, and renders 'lo, they send forth a scornful noise through their nostrils.'

E. xii.—1.] This prophecy was probably intended to discourage in the exiles any hopes of a release from the Chaldean yoke and of an early restoration based upon the continuance and apparent prosperity of Zedekiah's kingdom. Compare Jer. 27 & 28. According to Josephus (Ant. x. 7. 2), Ezekiel sent his prophecies to Jerusalem, and this revelation in particular was communicated to Zedekiah (see r. 13 and Ezek. 1. 1, notes). Communication between Judah and Babylonia would be not infrequent, if only for commercial purposes, in time of peace (ch. 17. 4, note). And special opportunities would occur, such as the embassy (Jer. 29. 3) of which Jeremiah availed himself. <sup>2.</sup> A rebellious house.] Rather, the . . . house. Its consequence, namely, that Zedekiah could hardly see, would typify either his future blinding by Nebuchadnezzar, or the self-blinding which prevented his finding his true interest in obedience to God's warning through Jeremiah.—A sign.] Or, a portent, and so in r. 11 (Fairbairn); something to provoke enquiry and reflection in those who refused to be enlightened (rs. 3, 9), and to remain in their memory against the fulfilment of the prophecy. The first act denoted the deportation of the people; the second (r. 5), the attempt of the king to escape from his capital. <sup>8-13.</sup> Ezekiel foretells Zedekiah's flight from Jerusalem, his capture, his blinding by Nebuchadnezzar, and his death in Babylon.

E. xvii.—This prophecy belongs to the group of the 6th year. Ezekiel's disclosure of Zedekiah's intrigues with Egypt (probably now in progress) and of their consequences should discourage any hopes of the exiles based on an Egyptian alliance with Judah (ch. 8, 1).—Zedekiah's unfaithfulness to his covenant with Nebuchadnezzar is regarded as an illustration of the inveterate unfaithfulness of the Chosen People to the Covenant of Horeb (ch. 16, 59; Exod. 24, 7). The former will cost Zedekiah his throne, his liberty, and his life; the latter is the cause of the impending abolition of David's kingdom. On the other hand, God's faithfulness to His Covenants, and especially to His Promise of an everlasting kingdom to David (2 Sam. 7, 12-17), will be manifested—not by the preservation of David's throne, capital, and realm (as men expected), but by the establishment of an heir of David's line, a 'Son of David,' in an universal kingdom (a revealed secret which remained unfathomed until explained by Jesus Christ and His apostles).—<sup>2</sup> A riddle . . . a parable. A parable is the Greek parabolē, i.e. a comparison made by putting things side by side; a similitude or likeness. In the Old Testament, the word includes (1) a sort of prophecy intermixed with comparisons, as Balaam's—(2) sententious wisdom, often interred in the form of a comparison, and so nearly equivalent to our proverb—(3) nearly what is now understood by the word riddle (Var. Teacher's Bible, p. 51): as here, a 'dark saying' put forth to excite the hearers to guess its meaning.—<sup>3</sup> Eagle. The emblem of Assyria; Heb. nesher. 'Not our eagle, but the great griffon culture (Gyps fulvus), a most majestic bird, the type of Nisroch, the bird-headed god of the Assyrians; see Ibab 1. 8.—Tris- tram, Var. T. B., p. 74. The 'ravenous bird' of Isa. 46, 11.—Longwinged. R.V. and long pinions; i.e. large and well disciplined armies (Kuy).—Divers colours. i.e. an empire of many diverse peoples, called 'the families,' i.e. tribes, 'of the north' (Jer. 25, 9).—Lebanon. The summit of Canaan: here meaning Jerusalem or its royal palace (Kuy). See Jer. 22, 23, and 1 Kin. 7, 2.—Highest branch. R.V. top. The same Hebrew word as in r. 22, and in ch. 31, 3, 10, 14, A.V. top. The leader or topmost shoot is here Jehoiachin: in r. 22 the Messiah, 'the Branch'; the cedar being the royal house of David, and the 'young twigs' the princes removed with Jehoiachin to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. Zedekiah and the remnant of Judah are likened to a humble vine of the country; they owe everything to Nebuchadnezzar's bounty, and are bound (by solemn covenant) to look to Nebuchadnezzar solely, and to yield him tribute ('fruit'); but so long as they were loyal, he would assure to them peace and such prosperity as was compatible with political dependence, Nebuchadnezzar had also bound Judah (Josephus) not to ally itself with Egypt, of which he meditated the conquest. <sup>4</sup> Top. R.V. topmost, and so in r. 22.—Land . . . traffick; city . . . merchants. Babylon, though not itself a seaport, was the centre of the commerce of the Persian Gulf. Nebuchadnezzar's canal, the Nahr Malcha (see ch. 1, 1, note), had tapped the traffic of the Tigris from the north. Ur of the Chaldees, though now far inland, owing to the rapid deposit of alluvium, was in the time of Nebuchadnezzar still a seaport, and, along with Terebinth and several other harbours, fed the trade of the capital with imports from India and Arabia.—Tristram. Comp. Isa. 47, 15 and 43, 14. <sup>5</sup> Seed.—the

<sup>7</sup> There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers: and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation. <sup>8</sup> It was planted in a good soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

Behold, <sup>k</sup> the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon; <sup>13</sup> <sup>l</sup> and hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, <sup>m</sup> and hath taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land: <sup>14</sup> that the kingdom might be <sup>n</sup> base, that it might not lift itself up, but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

<sup>15</sup> But <sup>o</sup> he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, <sup>n</sup> that they might give him horses and much people. <sup>9</sup> Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered? <sup>16</sup> As I live, saith the Lord God, surely <sup>r</sup> in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose

About this time, the death of Necho and the accession of his son Psammetichus II. would give Judah and her Syrian neighbours (see Jer. 27. 3) new hope of recovering their independence with the support of Egypt. But Psammetichus II. was busy elsewhere. After a reign of six years he was succeeded by Apries (Hophra, cf. p. 619), whom Davidson takes to be the Pharaoh here referred to. The consequences of Zedekiah's intrigues are foretold in the group of prophecies of the 7th year (ch. 21); probably they began in his fourth year, and were carried on until, in his 8th or 9th year (see 2 Kin. 24. 20, ## 258.—God Refuses to be Consulted through Ezekiel.

EZEKIEL XX. 1-3.

<sup>1</sup> AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that <sup>a</sup>certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the LORD, and sat before me.

<sup>2</sup> Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying, <sup>3</sup> Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye come to enquire of me? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, <sup>b</sup>I will not be enquired of by you.

E. xx.—1. Seventh year.] i.e. of Jehoiachin's captivity. The absence of a series of the 8th year to mark the close of this series (chs. 20-23) makes the period of these prophecies uncertain; but they anticipate, and perhaps partially overlap, the preparations of Nebuchadnezzar to reconquer and punish Judah, probably early in the ninth year of the Captivity (see 2 Kin. 24. 20, note). Ezekiel's next prophecy, dated about 50 days from the close of the 9th year, reveals (ch. 24) to the exiles the commencement of the final siege of Jerusalem, after the capture of the last fortified towns of Judah. Ezekiel thereafter ceases to prophesy to the Hebrews for three years (i.e. until chs. 33 & 34).—In ch. 20. 1-31 the prophet, as in the previous year (ch. 14. 1-8), is instructed to refuse to listen to such unrepentant enquirers; when the moral change that the Captivity should bring about has been effected, God's ear will be again open to hear His repentant people (ch. 36. 37). The purpose of either 'enquiry' can only be inferred from the prophecy which follows. Here, Ezekiel is to judge, i.e. arraign, the exiles and also Jerusalem (ch. 22), cause them to know the abominations of their fathers. He accuses them of being still polluted after the manner of their forefathers (v. 30), i.e. although its persistently recurrent apostacies and provocations of Jehovah had brought the nation to the very verge of destruction, at various epochs, since Jacob's family settled in Egypt, it continues to this day the practices which alienate God (Jer. 44. 4; Isa. 59. 2; cp. 'Saul' in 1 Sam. 28. 6), the penalty of which, long declared but long deferred, is the uprooting of the nation. The utter degradation of Jerusalem, social, moral, and religious, has precipitated her end, now close at hand (ch. 22. 4). Judah, preferring the arm of flesh to faith in Jehovah, has continually intrigued (ch. 23) with Egypt, Assyria, and the Babylonians of Chaldaea; but shortly she shall have reason to look to Egypt no more. God will deliver her into the hands of those from whom her mind is alienated, i.e. the Chaldeans (vs. 27, 28), and they, who, by the perfidy of Zedekiah, had now right on their side (the righteous men, v. 45), shall destroy, spoil, and carry her captive.—Ezekiel reads and answers the secret thoughts of these enquirers (ch. 20. 32). They assume that if, as Ezekiel and Jeremiah foretell, Judah and Jerusalem are to perish, the Hebrew nationality, with its distinctive obligations and restrictions as to religion and political life, will disappear by the absorption of the survivors into the peoples of the land of their exile. They will then be free to choose their religion and to manage their affairs like the other nations. But Ezekiel declares that, on the contrary, God will maintain the Hebrew nationality, and will make the Captivity a period of severe probation, like the 40 years of wandering in the wilderness, out of which the nucleus of a new nation shall emerge, so purged of the former evil tendencies, that the heathen should acknowledge the power, wisdom, and justice of Jehovah.—But Ezekiel's plain words are treated as unintelligible parables (ch. 20. 49), and he announces with unmistakable precision (ch. 21. 2) that Jerusalem, the Temple, and all the realm of Zedekiah shall suffer the Fire and Sword of God's Justice about to be committed to the hands of Nebuchadnezzar (ch. 20. 45-21. 32; comp. ch. 14. 17 & 15. 6-8).—Israel.] i.e. the exiles, called 'all the house of Israel wholly' in ch. 11. 14-20, because it is through them that the nation shall be continued.—To enquire.] Perhaps, as Zedekiah of Jeremiah two years later, whether Jehovah would not help Judah against the Chaldeans.—Sat before.] In the attitude of scholars (cf. 2 Kin. 4. 38); as though willing to receive instruction, but in fact self-deceiving or hypocritical (cf. ch. 33. 31-33).

EZEKIEL XXI. 1-27.

<sup>2</sup> a Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and b drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel, <sup>3</sup> and say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee <sup>c</sup> the righteous and the wicked.

<sup>4</sup> Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh <sup>d</sup> from the south to the north: <sup>5</sup> that all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it <sup>e</sup> shall not return any more.

In Jer. 27, 3, embassies from Edom, Moab, Ammon, and Phœnicia (Tyre and Sidon), i.e. the immediate neighbours of the Hebrew kingdom, are found at Jerusalem concerting with Zedekiah resistance to Nebuchadnezzar. In Jer. 40, 11, refugees from Judah are found in Edom, Moab, and Ammon; and in Jer. 41, Ishmael, of the seed royal of Judah, enters Judah from Ammon, and, after murdering the Chaldean viceroy, attempts to place Zedekiah's daughters in safety at the Court of Baalis king of Ammon. It would, therefore, appear that Zedekiah's rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, though probably dependent upon the new aggressiveness of Egypt, was not without support from his neighbours, although the latter do not seem to have assisted him afterwards during the siege of Jerusalem. If so, it seems more natural here to regard Ammon as being now an important ally of Judah, and Nebuchadnezzar as being in doubt whether of the two famous strongholds he should first attack; i.e. whether he should invade Judah from the E. by way of Gilead, or by the more usual route of the sea coast and the W. valleys of Benjamin and Judah. Tristram writes:—'From Riblah, Damascus being in his power, Nebuchadnezzar would find the route through Ammon—the line of the Roman road later, which is still traceable through Rabbah and Heshbon to the Jordan—the easier for an army with chariots. It would present no natural obstacles, and supplies for his horses would be abundant. From Ammon he would follow the track of Joshua across Jordan. The conquest of Ammon would be of importance, because, whereas Moab and Edom would be powerless if Jerusalem were captured, Ammon would not be so, because of its resources in the east and north.' Nebuchadnezzar's present objective was apparently Judah and her neighbours, and not Egypt. His designs on Egypt seem to have been suspended by other wars, at least from his recall from the Egyptian frontier by his father's death in Jehoiakim's 4th year, until after the capture of Jerusalem in the 18th year of his own reign; see Jer. 42, 14, note.—But Kay (S.P.C.K.) interprets this allusion to Ammon enigmatically. He takes Judah, or the house of David, to be allegorically described as 'the children of Ammon';—Judah has long ago been Ammonized, especially by adopting the worship of Ammon's god, Molech. He also regards the Sword as representing the sword which, after David's great sin in the matter of Bathsheba during Joab's siege of Rabbah (2 Sam. 12, 9), was never to depart from David's house, and the 'crown,' now to be 'taken off' (the Hebrew word for which is applied in Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles to the Ammonite crown only), as being the gigantic crown of the god Milcom, i.e. Molech, which was placed on David's head after the capture of Rabbah (2 Sam. 12, 30, notes).

St. Jerome's description of the method of divining by arrows corresponds yet more nearly with this instance: on several arrows (he says) are written the names of nations or cities; they are mixed in a quiver; the drawing of one decides which shall be the first object of attack (Selden, de diis Syris, Syntagm. i. 2). Hosea (4. 12) seems to allude to divining rods as in use in Israel. The historian records emphatically Zedekiah's personal responsibility for the utter ruin which befell Jerusalem and Judah at the hands of the Chaldeans, because he would not adopt Jeremiah's inspired advice. As to the date, Josephus says that Zedekiah broke 'the league of mutual assistance' after 8 years. This statement probably represents a trustworthy tradition, for the vengeance of Nebuchadnezzar was doubtless prompt, and the Chaldean armies are found in Judah in Zedekiah's 9th year. The accession of Pharaoh Hophra, the ambitious and vigorous grandson of Pharaoh Necho, who seems to have attempted, immediately upon his accession, to restore the Egyptian supremacy over Syria as far as the Euphrates that his grandfather won and lost, is fixed by monumental records in Egypt; it so nearly tallies with the date of this crisis (as stated by Josephus) as to suggest that a promise of active support by Egypt (Ezek. 17. 17) determined Zedekiah's 'rebellion.' See Ezek. 21. 20, note.

Jeremiah 21-24 are, in the opinion of the best critics, to be regarded as a continuous document, comprising (1) the immediate answer to Zedekiah's envoys (ch. 21. 1-10); (2) a collection of the chief texts or of summaries of various prophecies (chs. 21. 11-23, 40), to which is appended (3) the Vision of the Figs (ch. 24). The whole seems to form a Roll or volume designed as a final appeal to Zedekiah to abandon his policy of resistance to the Chaldeans, and so to avoid exposing his subjects to the miseries and penalties that would attend efforts predestined to utter failure. Payne Smith suggests that this Roll was sent privately to Zedekiah, and was followed soon after by the personal visit recorded in ch. 34. 1-7.—In this Roll, Jeremiah shows that, especially since Josiah's death, the example and misrule of the kings and the civil rulers (chs. 21. 11-23. 4) and the abuse of their trust by the spiritual leaders of the people, the priesthood and prophethood (ch. 23. 9-40), had wrought a forfeiture of Judah's privileges and precipitated the uprooting of the nation. Finally, as if to undermine the confidence based upon the possession of the Holy Land (and esp. of Jerusalem and the Temple) and upon the presence of a descendant of David sitting upon David's throne, he shows that Zedekiah and his subjects could not expect deliverance, because they were the rejected refuse of the nation

(ch. 24), of which the best had been removed with Jehoiachin 'for its good.' God will cast away (ch. 24. 8-10) Zedekiah and the remnant of Judah. He declares, further, God's purpose to abolish the visible kingdom of David, with all its accessories, and to fulfil in another way the promise to David of an everlasting Kingdom. The heirs of the Promise and the germ of the future Kingdom will be found amongst the exiles in Babylon. Thence a converted remnant shall return, in the fulness of time, and reoccupy the Holy Land (ch. 24. 4-7; comp. Ezek. 20. 1 (note), 32-44).—Some commentators suppose that Jeremiah's reply (vs. 3-14) caused Zedekiah to imprison Jeremiah in the 9th year of his reign (ch. 32. 3).

J. xxi.—1. Pashur and Zephaniah.] Zedekiah's envoys were priests of eminent families, and occupied high official positions. Both were leaders of the party of resistance to the Chaldeans, Pashur 'son (i.e. heir or representative) of Melchiah' must be distinguished from Pashur 'son of Immer' (ch. 20. 1). Melchiah was the ancestor of the 'fathers' house' (a subdivision of the 'family') of the 5th Course of Aaron's 'sons,' Immer of the 16th (1 Chr. 24. 9, 14). This Pashur was one of the 'princes' who, toward the end of the siege, urged Zedekiah to put Jeremiah to death, because his prophecies weakened 'the hands of the men of war,' Zephaniah 'son of Maaseiah' (see ch. 29. 25), the ancestor of the 'fathers' house' of the 24th Course (1 Chr. 24. 18), was the Sagan or deputy high priest ('second priest'). In this capacity, he had been called upon by Shemaiah, a (false) prophet among the exiles in Babylonia, to punish Jeremiah as a false prophet; but he seems then to have acted justly towards Jeremiah. He was again sent to the prophet by Zedekiah (ch. 37. 3), when the Egyptian army of relief was advancing, to entreat Jeremiah's intercession. After the fall of Jerusalem, he was one of the five chiefs of the priesthood selected to pay with their lives the penalty of having been ringleaders in the rebellion and prolonged resistance to

<sup>7</sup> And afterward, saith the LORD, <sup>f</sup> I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; <sup>g</sup> he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

Contrast Ezekiel's (14. 1-5) rebuke of the self-willed and unsubmitive 'elders' who came to enquire of him.—Maketh war.] A comparison of this passage with ch. 34. 7 shows that the Chaldean advance upon Jerusalem was now imminent. The fenced cities of Judah had been gradually falling into Nebuchadnezzar's hands, and preparations for the investment of Jerusalem were in view ('besiege you, vs. 3, 9; comp. ch. 34. 1, fought against Jerusalem and all the cities thereof). The siege of the strong places of S. Judah (see ch. 13. 19, note) was the usual and necessary preliminary to an advance upon Jerusalem itself. But Zedekiah's army still kept the field (v. 4), and, as Azekah and Lachish still held out, his communications with Egypt were still open.—If so be.] R.V. peradventure.—Go up.] Apparently, the envoys were to

But Jeremiah replies that Judah is fighting against God—God will 'turn back,' not the invader (see Isa. 37. 29) but the weapons of the kingdom, so that the army shall be blockaded in the capital, there to perish, together with the inhabitants (compare the parable of the caldron, Ezek. 24). Hear ye the word of the LORD; <sup>12</sup> O house of David, thus saith the LORD; <sup>a</sup> Execute judgment <sup>b</sup> in the morning, and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

J. xxi. 11—xxiv. 8.—In the earlier half of the Book at least, Jeremiah's prophecies, probably delivered rally, have been collected or summarised and republished in groups—sometimes, as here, in a fresh connection. Jeremiah is described as committing prophecies to 'a roll of a book' (ch. 36. 2, 28 & 30. 2 & 51. 60 & 25. 13); comp. Isa. 30. 8, 'note it (R.V. inscribe it) in a book, that it may be for the time to come' (R.V. marg. for a witness for ever).—Here, two general appeals to the Davidic dynasty, to be true to its trust and to the general conditions upon which the promise of its permanence rested (rs. 11—14 and ch. 22. 1—9), introduce prophetic utterances in which the policy and practices of Josiah's successors are described; they illustrate the strong backward current that had set in both in morality and religion. <sup>11</sup>. Say.] Omit. <sup>12</sup>.] Jeremiah, believing that the fate of Judah was sealed in Josiah's reign, and confirmed in this belief by the failure of the final appeal to Jehoiakim in his 5th year, had devoted himself to mitigating the circumstances of the inevitable calamity by preaching whatever conduct would, in his inspired view, have that effect. His warnings to the 'princely order' (cp. Isa. 7. 13) and to the kings are summarised here. In the morning.] Necessarily, the time for public business. During 'the heat of the day' a siesta was customary; cp. 2 Sam. 4. 5 (Ishbosheth) & 11. 2 (David). On the public administration of justice (execute judgment and justice) see ch. 26. 10—19 & 23. 5, note, and cp. 2 Sam. 15. 3, 4.—Oppressor.] Cp. Ps. 35. 10 and ch. 22. 3 (note) & 5. 1—5, 26—28.—Your.] R.V. marg. quotes another reading, their. <sup>13</sup>.] L.] Emphatic; as if Jeremiah used the answer of rs. 4—6 to attack the false confidence of the party of resistance.—Inhabitant.] L.] as marg. (A.V. and R.V.), inhabitant.—Valley, and rock.] R.V. and of the rock; but marg. as A.V. 'The inhabitants of the city are described as occupying the fortress which crowned the height and the valleys enclosed within the walls.'—Tristram.] The ancient inhabitants of Jerusalem similarly vainly its impregnability (2 Sam. 5. 6), and its capture by David was perhaps his greatest exploit (comp. 2 Sam. 12. 28); of late, successive kings had strengthened or added to its fortifications.

J. xxi. 1—1.] This and the next general appeal had probably been delivered at the outset of Jehoiakim's reign, while his policy was yet undecided and open to influence.—Go down.] (Cf. ch. 26. 10, note. <sup>2</sup>.] Gates.] The open space at the city gates, where the kings sat in public to administer justice, 1 Kin. 22. 10 (Tristram and Strane), or perhaps (r. 4) the palace gates. Even in Josiah's time, the corruption of Judah (see ch. 5) exceeded the influence of the reformers. But Josiah's successors, instead of continuing his efforts, either went with the stream or, like Jehoiakim, gave active support to the party opposed hand of the oppressor; and <sup>i</sup>do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

to Jeremiah and the reformers. 3. Violence. R.V. inserts here a comma. Jeremiah was ever protesting against the lawlessness and injustice of the times (ch. 20, 8).—Innocent blood.] Whether martyrs (see r, 17, note) or the victims of judicial murder (see r, 15). 4. [f] Promise overflows from God's lips, but it is conditional; comp. ch. 17, 25. — Upon the throne, &c.] Lit. for David upon his throne. 5. Desolation.] By fire (ch. 17, 27 and 21, 14). 6. Gilead, &c.] R.V. concerning (but marg. as A.V.) the house of the king.—Gilead, &c.] Rather, a Gilead, a summit of Lebanon. The two suggest the chief beauties of the land of Israel. The 'excellency' of these wooded mountains, in a comparatively featureless and treeless land, is the type of earthly glory (Isa. 35, 2). Here it is used to show the dignity of the family of David as that chosen by God to inherit the Promises. See Jer. 8, 22; Cant. 4, 1 & 6, 5; Deut. 32, 14; Ps. 22, 12; Isa. 33, 9 & 2, 13; Nah. 1, 4; Zech. 11, 2; and Jer. 18, 14; Isa. 37, 24; Ps. 72, 16; Cant. 4, 11, 15; Hos. 14, 6, 7. 7. Prepare.] Lit. sanctify, i.e. set apart, appoint; the same word is used of war which is sent by God in ch. 51, 27 and Isa. 13, 3, 9. Because.] So the cause of the rejection of the Ten Tribes by God was their own rejection of God.—Have forsaken.] R.V. forsook. 10. Weep . . . him.] Lamentation for Josiah, slain at Megiddo, had become a custom (2 Chr. 35, 25; see Judg. 11, 39, 40). This mourning Jeremiah himself had led. But, like every true patriot, he would have chosen for Jehoahaz even the tragic end of Josiah rather than the degradation of captivity and a death in the 'house of bondage' far from the tombs of his ancestors (Cheyne). And both Josiah and Jehoahaz, so far as they had the same foreign policy, would have Jeremiah's pity; for Jeremiah's mission involved opposition to the Egypt-party in Judah.—But a brief reign of three months sufficed to condemn Jehoahaz, as Jehoichim afterwards. Both are said in Kings and Chron. to have followed the 'evil' example of their predecessors, and Ezekiel (19, 3-7) describes both their reigns in like terms, as characterised by violence and idolatry.—Weep sore.] This sentence, to this day, forms part of the wailing of the Jews over one dying childless, who cannot 'return' to life 'in a posterity,' nor possibly become father of their Messiah.—Goeth.] Rather, is gone. The prophecy concerning Jehoahaz was probably first delivered soon after his deportation, or when Jehoichim's rule had quickened the desire for the restoration of Jehoahaz. Evidently Jehoahaz survived, in captivity in Egypt, during a portion of Jehoichim's reign.—Native country.] This is as the first note of those strains which the 'mourner of exile' made peculiarly his own. The yearning to return (v. 27) must have been stronger in Jews than in any other nation. Father-land, mother-country, are heart-touching words; but the thought of being shut out from the 'heritage of the Lord' could not but awaken keener feeling still. So David, when driven to seek refuge from Sini beyond the pale of the kingdom, speaks of his exclusion from God's land as a temptation to apostasy and

<sup>16</sup> He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then <sup>it</sup> was well with him: Was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

idolatry (2 Sam. 26. 19; comp. Ps. 84). Vulg. terram nativitatis sue is literal; comp. in terram alienam in qua nati non estis (v. 26). <sup>11</sup> Shallum.] Either the Johanan, who may also have been named Shallum (Payne Smith), or the Shallum, Josiah's 'fourth' son (Hervy), of 1 Chr. 3. 15; otherwise nothing is known of either of these sons of Josiah. The difficulties which arise from a comparison of the histories and of the genealogies are variously but not satisfactorily explained. It is recorded that Eliakim was two years older (2 Chr. 36. 11 with 2 Kin. 23. 36) and Zedekiah about 14 years younger (2 Kin. 23. 31 with 24. 18) than Jehoahaz; Zedekiah and Jehoahaz being both the sons of Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah (not the prophet).—King.] See 2 Kin. 23. 30. Jehoahaz succeeded his father by the people's choice. The word 'king' does not belong to Josiah, here or in v. 18 (Vulg. plum Josie regem). <sup>13-19</sup> Another prophecy, against Jehoiakim, probably first delivered shortly after the destruction of Baruch's roll (ch. 36. 33), while Jeremiah was 'hid' from the vengeance of the tyrant. <sup>13</sup> That buildeth, &c.] Descriptive of Jehoiakim's luxurious and oppressive ways; forced labour had been a part of Solomon's heavy yoke. —Wrong.] Or, injustice. — For his work.] R.V. his hire. The root-verb means to work, i.e. do real, meritorious work, and so a noun only slightly differing from that used here means the wages which such work merits (Lev. 19. 13). <sup>14</sup> Large.] Lit. through-aired, i.e. spacious (so R.V.); the root-verb means to breathe.—

[J. xxii. 11—17.]

Cutteth him out.] Rather, widens; the word is used (ch. 4. 30) of the broadening effect of painting the eyelids (cf. 2 Kin. 9. 30, note). —Vermilion.] 'Red lead, oxide of lead. Both lead and copper mines were worked by the Egyptians for centuries in Arabia Petraea and elsewhere. Vermilion is the predominant colour in the decorative art both of Egypt and Assyria.'—Tristram. <sup>15</sup> Closest.] The verb means rival (rendered contend in ch. 12. 5); Sept. A. vies with Ahab (Sept. B. Ahaz); Vulg. quoniam confers te cedro; R.V. strives to excel in cedar (i.e. cedar-work); marg. vies with the cedar. There is no direct connection with v. 14, which is a digression or parenthetical illustration (Cheyne). But if Jehoiakim's love of building be still the subject (cp. 1 Kin. 22. 39), the charge is that the king not only indulged in through forced labour, but at the expense of owners expropriated by forfeitures on false charges (v. 17), thus imitating Ahab's treatment of Naboth. —Eat and drink.] Frequently used for prosperity and enjoyment of life; with Josiah neither desires nor practices went beyond what became a royal lot. 'Josiah's model was David' (2 Kin. 22. 2). Jeremiah contrasts mentally throughout this section the good government of Josiah with the misrule of his successors. —Justice, and then . . . him? R.V. justice? then . . . him. <sup>16</sup> Then . . . him: was.] R.V. then it was well. Was, &c.—Know me.] i.e. show true acquaintance with, admiration for. My character by aiming to imitate it; cf. 1 John 4. 20. <sup>17</sup> Thy covetousness.] R.V. marg. dishonest gain.—Shed innocent blood

Sister. He is speaking generally of funeral wailings, and especially of the lamentation of near relatives, of subjects ('lord'), of friends ('glory'). 19. Burial. We have no record of this twice-fold burial. The phrase slept with his fathers (2 Kin. 24. 6) merely means died, being used of Ahab's death in battle, of David's in his bed. See 2 Kin. 24. 2, 6, notes. Cheyne thinks that the LXX. statement (see 2 Chr. 36. 8, note) 'must be founded on tradition,' because it runs directly counter to the prophecies here and in ch. 36. 30, and he regards this view, viz. that Jehoiakim died in peace, as 'at any rate much the easier.' 20. Go up. A third example of a throne which could not stand; see the note on the reign of Jehoahaz (r. 10). This prophecy must have been first delivered when the Chaldeans were advancing on Judah, about nine years before, Jehoiachin then surrendered Jerusalem to Nebuchadnezzar, thus saving it from the fate which Zedekiah was now about to bring upon it by resisting Jeremiah's inspired advice, Jehoiachin, though deposed and imprisoned 37 years, was Judah's last (legitimate) king of the house of David. His uncle Zedekiah would have long predeceased him.—Jeremiah bids the inhabitants of the valleys (fem. as at ch. 21. 13) ascend those heights, whence a foe approaching from the Euphrates valley by the north and east might be discerned; i.e. the far Lebanon, the nearer Bashan, and Abarim visible from Jerusalem.—The passages.]

'Pastor' in the O.T. is always the translation of the Heb. רֹעֵה, one who feeds, and means civil rulers (ch. 23. 1, 4, notes). Shepherd is a primalval conception of a ruler; the title occurs in the oldest cuneiform inscriptions. 23. Compare Ezek. 17. 3, 22, 23. Here Jeremiah addresses Jerusalem, the 'Lebanon' (i.e. the glory) of the land, a title which her cedar palaces made specially appropriate.—Inhabitant. Marg. inhabitress, with Sept., Vulg.; so R.V. marg.—Gracious. Sept. The allusions to her indicate that her's was 'probably the master-mind of the policy of the Court.'—There shall ye die. In many cases this was the captives' chief distress after the horrors of the siege and the hardships of the journey were over; occasionally princes were subjected to torture, to imprisonment, to great indignities, but the nobility and commonalty in general were placed in positions where they were free to prosper, free to rise, only not free to return. If 'eunuchs' in 2 Kin. 20. 18 is to be taken literally, this infliction would befall only a few, chiefly those of high family. <sup>27</sup> Desire. Lit. lift up their mind; R.V. their soul longeth. <sup>28-30</sup> These three verses may not be part of the preceding prophecy. <sup>28</sup> Idol. Lit. piece of workmanship (so Var.), here of potter's work. R.V. vessel, marg. pot (which is preferable, as marking a difference between it and the word that follows); Vulg. vas fictile atque contritum; Sept. ὡς σκεῦος οὐ οὐκ ἔστι χεῖρα αὐτοῦ; Fr. vase . . meuble.—Seed. This may, or may not, imply (for there is no certainty either way; see v. 30, note) that Jehoiachin had children before his captivity. But childless in v. 30 means without issue to succeed him and sit on David's throne; and it is a fact that no descendant of his ever sat on the throne. Indeed, none of David's family ever became in any way eminent, after Zerubbabel. From a humble carpenter's home in the despised Galilean borderland came forth the spiritual King, 'the Son of David,' the unacknowledged, rejected Messiah. In Domitian's day two simple peasants alone represented the royal family of David (Euseb. Ec. Hist. iii. 20).—A land. Or, the land. <sup>29</sup> Earth. R.V. marg. land; i.e. David's kingdom, the land of Promise and Possession. 'The ancient promise made to David in 2 Sam. 7. 12-16 is revoked' (according to the conditions there, ss. 14. 15), as to its secular development, in these two last verses. <sup>30</sup> Write. i.e. ye record keepers. 'This cardinal passage, however obscure and uncertain in detail, is clear and definite in its results. (1) Whether Jehoiachin, when placed on the throne by Nebuchadrezzar, was eight (2 Chr. 36. 9) or eighteen (2 Kin. 24. 8) years of age, the anti-Chaldean policy of his father Jehoiakim was clearly maintained. (2 Kin. 24. 9), and caused his deposition after a reign of 100 days. (2) Whether Jehoiachin was even married, and actually or virtually (Isa. 39. 7) childless—or whether he had 8 sons, 1 Chr. 3. 17 (or seven, if Assir be, as it may be, translated and the name stand Jecooniah the Captive; so R.V.; comp. Matt. 1. 12)—it is clear that his deportation to Babylon with all the best of his people (the good figs of ch. 24. 1, 2) put a final end to the temporal kingdom of David. (3) Whether Zerubbabel (Gk. Zorobabel) the son of Shealtiel (Salathiel, 1 Chr. 3. 17 only, O.T.) was Jecooniah's grandson or his 16th or 17th cousin—i.e. whether the line of Solomon absolutely died out with Jecooniah, and the heirship reverted to the line of Nathan, Solomon's own brother, at his death or somewhat later—it is clear that the "sure mercies" of David held good as regards the continuity of his line of which by promise the Redeemer, the Seed of the woman, should come. But the line of Nathan (cp. Zech. 12. 13) seems to have taken the place of the line of Solomon, and its genealogy, after Zerubbabel, splits into two branches, the one (St. Luke's) carried down to Heli, Joseph's actual father; the other (St. Matthew's) to Jacob, whose son Joseph became by adoption, perhaps by marriage. According to both N.T. genealogies Zerubbabel was our Lord's paternal ancestor, and Haggai (2. 23) announced his choice by God—when head of the house of Judah and viceroy of Cyrus in restored Judah—"to be a signet," as if choosing the words of this curse in which to reconfirm the promise.—The Queen's Printers' Commentary.

J. xxiii.—The reign of Zedekiah is passed over in contemptuous silence, and—as if to give a final blow to the delusive expectations connected with Zedekiah's elevation, eg. Lam. 4. 20 (see 2 Kin. 24. 17, note 'Mattaniah')—in his place we have Jehovah tsidkênû, i.e. the Lord our righteousness. Now, in general language, Jeremiah, like Ezekiel (margin, refs.), lays the ruin and exile of the nation at the door of its leaders—the civil rulers (chs. 21. 11–23. 4; comp. Ezek. 34. 1–10) and the spiritual teachers and guides (rs. 9–40). 'All the old evils had, under their utterly selfish rule, suddenly gathered to a head.'—<sup>1</sup> Pastors.] Or, shepherds (so in v. 2). The leading men of the state, all in civil authority, the ruling class, are here distinguished from the ecclesiastics, the priests and prophets (see rs. 9–14), as in ch. 2. 8. They too, 'accessory institutions' of David's monarchy, shall be abolished (see r. 4) as faithless to their trust by neglect and abuse of their power and influence. Ezekiel's prophecies (especially Ezek. 34, dated about the end of the 12th year) serve as a commentary here. The 'shepherds' Ezekiel says, had lived upon the flock, and yet had ruled it with force and with cruelty (or rigour, Variorum, quoting Lev. 25. 43), i.e. the rulers had sought their own advantage only (Ezek. 33. 31; comp. Isa. 56. 10–12), and had oppressed the weak, doubtless in order to indulge in personal luxury and in display, after the example of the kings. Both Jeremiah and Ezekiel show, under the same figure of selfish and wicked shepherds, 'what the rulers should have been, what they have been, and what in the coming times they shall be when the True King shall reign in the True Kingdom;' and so both prophets are led to contrast Messiah's work, describing it according to the light of inspiration vouchsafed to them as the rule of a 'perfect' king over Israel (see on r. 5). Thus the revelation is made that the general promise to David of 'an everlasting kingdom' involved also the specific promise that the Great Deliverer should be a personal king of David's lineage. Comp. Acts 2. 30. —My.] Emphatic. —Posture. i.e. my flock. Heb. mar'ith (Ezek. 34. 31) — the sheep who are fed; mar'ich (Ezek. 34. 14, 18) — that whereon they feed; both from radh, to feed. 2. Against. Rather, as regards; Sept. êmi, e. acc.; Vulg. ad. 'Behold, I am against the shepherds' (Ezek. 34. 10). —Scattered. i.e. dispersed, (1) literally by misrule of every kind, and especially by the foreign invasions which their policy had brought upon Judah; doubtless also (ch. 26. 21 & 36. 26) (2) spiritually as well, by persecution, by beguiling or even coercing Judah into idolatry. See 2 Chr. 29. 30, note, 'princes.' —Driven away.] Instrumentally; have been the cause of my (e. 3) driving them away into captivity. —Visited.] i.e. given heed to (Pariorum); comp. Ezek. 34. 4–8. The play on the word visit is in the Hebrew, for pâqad, lit. to strike upon, light upon, has the double meaning, to visit for good or for evil, in sympathy or in judgment (Luke 19. 44; ch. 46. 21). 3. I.] Ezek. 34. 11, Behold, I, even I, Jehovah Himself will interpose, and will be the Good Shepherd of the faithful. —The remnant.] To be gathered after a period of probation, i.e. the Captivity; see Ezek. 20. 33, 34. Ezekiel (34. 16) writes, I will destroy the fat and the strong, I will feed them (the flock) with judgment; i.e. God will discern and reject the proud, He will purge out the rebels and them that transgress (Ezek. 20. 38), but He will accept and give grace to the humble and contrite (cp. Ezek. 36. 20–36). Forgiveness will follow upon repentance (ch. 31. 19, 34), and the penitents shall pass under the rod of the shepherd and be reckoned among the flock (Ezek. 20. 37) in and through which these promises shall be fulfilled. —The permission to return accorded to all Hebrews (2 Chr. 36. 32) by Cyrus operated as a test of faith. Notwithstanding all the recorded prophecies of comfort and encouragement, and this marvellous realization of the first stage in their fulfilment, which was a foretaste and pledge of the fulfilment of the further mysterious stages also, only a small proportion of the exiles and their descendants availed themselves of the permission. The mass of the Hebrews shrank from the hardships and uncertainty attending the resettlement of Canaan, and preferred such prosperity as had fallen to their lot in the land of their exile to a share in the rebuilding of the Temple and in the re-establishment of the worship of Jehovah in Jerusalem, although accompanied by the inheritance of the Promises that was prophetically connected with the re-establishment of the Covenant-Nation within the borders of the Holy Land. —

Men should be raised up to give the blessings of good government to a restored and reunited nation. But these interpositions would be but types of and steps towards the more glorious Messianic deliverance of the future. Jeremiah's prophecy was partly verified in the days of Zerubbabel and Jeshua, of Ezra and Nehemiah, and of the Maccabees; it is completely fulfilled in the Christian church. See ch. 30. 21 and Ezek. 34. 23, I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David. . . I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; where the reunion of the two kingdoms after the Return prefigures the union of all mankind in 'one fold' under 'one shepherd,' the 'Lord' and also 'Son' of David.—They.] i.e. any.—Lacking.] i.e. missing. 5. The days come.] See v. 29, note on 'in the latter days,' and compare ch. 33. 6–26. 'The national restoration after the Captivity is here connected with undefined Messianic hopes. Even with the temporal kingship abolished, David's mercies are still sure.'—The light of the Gospel reveals what the prophets vainly sought to understand (1 Pet. 1. 10–12; Matt. 13. 17). 'David's family is to be dethroned (temporarily) that it may reign gloriously (spiritually). A shoot of it which shall sprout and grow up shall reign and prosper (Isa. 52. 13). It was of an uncrowned lineage that Christ came; from a family become utterly insignificant—from so dead a stump, in such dry ground, came forth the spiritual King, Jehovah our righteousness.'—Sp. Com.—Raise.] The Hebrew word used when Moses foretold his greater Successor in mediation, 'a prophet from among their brethren' in whom the order of prophets should culminate (Deut. 18. 15–18; comp. John 5. 45–47), and used of the deliverers in the times of the Judges. Primarily such a 'saviour' of the Hebrews, ultimately the Saviour, Redeemer of mankind, is meant.—Righteous.] In ch. 33. 15 of righteousness, [J. xxiii. 4, 5.]

which is identical in meaning; cf. pp. 10 and 435, notes.—Branch.] Heb. tsemach = germ or sprout; R.V. marg. shoot or bud; Vulg. germen justum; Sept. ἀνατολή (= an upspringing); cp. Isa. 61. 11, 'the earth bringeth forth her bud' (Variorum, sprouting). As distinguished from netzer (Isa. 11. 1) it denotes, not the branch, but the sucker, drawing its life direct from the root, and in its turn maintaining life in the root. 'The sprout is that in which the root springs up and grows, and which if it be destroyed makes the root perish also.' The primary application of Zech. 3. 8, my servant the Branch, & 6. 12, the man whose name is the Branch (tsemach), may be to Zerubbabel and Jeshua (comp. the allusion to the royal and priestly offices in ch. 33. 17, 18), the ultimate can only be to Christ. The Hebrew word mattá in Ezek. 34. 29, A.V. 'plant of renown,' is a different word, elsewhere rendered planting, and more probably refers to a land (lit. plantation) than, as A.V. and the marg. refs. suggest, to 'the Branch.' See Ezek. 17. 1, 22, notes. Jeremiah adopts Isaiah's imagery and language (esp. Isa. 4. 2 (tsemach) & 11. 1 & 53. 2) to foretell, like Isaiah, the birth of the Messiah from the stock of 'Jesse's son' (see 1 Kin. 12. 16), and to indicate that the inheritance of the Promises would be maintained in David's family in spite of all appearances to the contrary. —A King, &c.] It is more literal, and accords better with what follows, to render, as Sept. and Vulg., he (the germ) shall reign as king and deal wisely (and so R.V.); sákhad is opposed to 'become brutish' in ch. 10. 21. Royalty is to be 'the organ of God's future government of His people.' But this ideal King will serve the Covenant God of the Hebrews 'with a perfect heart'; so did Christ (Matt. 3. 15; John 4. 34 & 5. 30 & 6. 38). —Execute, &c.] Compare 'David executed judgment and justice unto all' (2 Sam. 8. 15). 'The highest duty of kings is the administration of justice, and as this was performed of old time in person, the weal of the people depended in a great degree upon the personal qualities of the king.' Compare Solomon's prayer for a discerning mind (1 Kin. 3. 7–9); the recorded illustration of Solomon's God-given wisdom is his decision in a very difficult case brought justice in the earth. <sup>6</sup> In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel <sup>a</sup> shall dwell safely: and <sup>b</sup> this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. <sup>7</sup> Therefore, behold, <sup>c</sup> the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt: <sup>d</sup> but, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, <sup>e</sup> and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land.

The promise to Judah through David is extended to the tribes of the ten tribes of the N. kingdom, which, in renouncing David (1 Kin. 12, 16), had renounced also whatever promises were assured to his heir. The circumstances of the Restoration involved a reunion of all the other tribes under Judah. Compare also Ezek. 37. 22.—His name . . . shall be called.] Equivalent to he shall be; comp. the Greek κέκλημαι, I am called = I am. This name is one of an instructive series. From the beginning the knowledge of God has been progressive. His changing names indicate this. 7. Therefore, &c.] This declaration (omitted here in Sept.) occurs also in ch. 16. 14, 15, in a different connexion. A greater deliverance in the future shall so eclipse the memory of the great deliverance of the past that the title of God of the Exodus, which had to some extent come into use in solemn asseverations and oaths in lieu of 'God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,' should itself give place to a new one, recording new tokens of favour. 8. But, &c.] The restoration of a Jewish nation 'with its feelings of nationality and patriotism deepened, although the armies of Nineveh and Babylon ground other nations into a confused mass—much more so the advent of the Messiah—would involve a greater manifestation of the power of God than the Exodus.'—The Lord liveth.] i.e. As the, &c. (so v. 7); a solemn oath and appeal to God (Deut. 6. 13).

J. xxiii.—The priesthood and prophethood are denounced in even stronger terms by Ezekiel (22. 25, 26, 28). 'Jeremiah lived at that age at which both of those great institutions seemed to have reached the utmost point of degradation and corruption.'—Stanley. But the uninspired or 'false' prophets were ever Jeremiah's great trial; they were believed, and he was not; cp. ch. 20. 7. Here, Jeremiah, overpowered by his feelings, dwells upon the influence of the prophethood, which, after largely promoting the national degeneracy, was now bringing destruction upon Judah by opposing the truth and misleading Zedekiah. Thy prophets have seen ruin and foolish things for thee: and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment (Lam. 2. 14). 9. Because of.] Rather, 'Of (i.e. concerning) the Prophets.' The heading to be prefixed (as in the Hebrew) to the next prophecy (rs. 9-40), Var. The text follows as in A.V., 'Mine . . . is broken, all, &c.—The . . . holiness.' i.e. his holy words. The prophet is staggered at the contrast between Jehovah and the two classes of His ministers—between the true and the false oracles. 'Prophet and priest' supported each the other (ch. 5. 31), both indulged in the crying sins of the age, which they should have denounced, and even confirmed the people in evil by encouraging all their agreeable illusions (ch. 6. 13, 14). The prophethood—always a fairly lucrative profession (cp. 1 Sam. 9. 7-9; Amos 7. 12)—laid, in the luxuriousness of the latter regal period, more and more laid itself out for gain apart from conscience (cp. Mic. 3. 11).

'Course' (lit. running)=way of living; the alternative of A.V. marg. is incorrect. 11. Prophet and priest are profane.] i.e. desecrated. The priests had desecrated the Temple, either literally, as Eli's sons profaned the Tabernacle at Shiloh, or by spiritual adultery, i.e. idolatrous unfaithfulness, which included unchaste ceremonies of the religions of their Syrian neighbours, e.g. those of the Phœnician Tammuz (Ezek. 8. 14, as explained by classical writers). 12. Even . . . visitation.] Or, (R.V. marg.), in the year, &c. i.e. the time in which God would visit them with those consequences of their conduct ('course', v. 10) of which they were now as heedless as was Jerusalem in the time of our Lord (Luke 19. 44). tion of Jerusalem is the catastrophe referred to at both epochs. 13. In Baal.] Rather, through, or by, Baal. They preferred their prophets of Baal to those of Jehovah (cp. 1 Kin. 18. 19 & 22. 6, 7). But the prophets of Judah are worse than Ahab's Baal-prophets; both led their countrymen astray, and estranged them from Jehovah; yet the former were at any rate avowed idolaters, while the latter, though professing the true religion, have encouraged the evildoers to whom they should have preached repentance; nay, they have even corrupted the whole people by their personal example (v. 15). 14. I . . . also.] Or, But I have seen (Var.).—Are all, &c.] R.V. are all . . . become; 'they', i.e. the whole population of Jerusalem ('thereof'). 15. The water of gall.] Rather, poisonous water (Var.); poison. [J. xliii. 19-29.]

<sup>30</sup> Therefore, behold, <sup>f</sup>I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that steal my words every one from his neighbour. <sup>31</sup> Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that use their tongues, and say, He saith. <sup>32</sup> Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by <sup>g</sup>their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

<sup>33</sup> And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is <sup>h</sup>the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? <sup>i</sup>I will even forsake you, saith the LORD. <sup>34</sup> And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD, I will even punish that man and his house.

<sup>38</sup> But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD; Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD; <sup>39</sup> therefore, behold, I, even I, <sup>k</sup>will utterly forget you, and <sup>l</sup>I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, and cast you out of my presence: <sup>40</sup> and I will bring <sup>m</sup>an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

found the true message irrepressible (ch. 20, 9), and the word of Jehovah in his mouth was to be a fire to consume his countrymen (ch. 5. 14; see 1 Cor. 3. 12, 13; 2 Cor. 10. 4). 30. Steal.] Having no message from God, some uttered what was popular, or, possibly, even adopted and perverted utterances of previous true prophets, eg. Isaiah's promises of help to Hezekiah in a like crisis. 31. Say, He saith.] Rather, oracle oracles, i.e. say oracularly, This is an oracle. Having no message, others supported their schemes by inventions to which they prefixed the sacred formula, 'Thus saith the LORD.' 32. False . . . lightness . . . therefore.] R.V. lying . . . vain boasting . . . neither. A third class had recourse to the vagueness and attractiveness of alleged dreams. 33. The prophet.] Rather, some prophet (Var.). 'The prophets have sunk to so low a level that the word of Jehovah has become the object of their ridicule.'—Burden. Or, utterance; Heb. massâ. There is a play upon the word, which means both load or burden and utterance, throughout the remainder of the chapter (Variorum). The prophetic term for a message from Jehovah, 'a burden,' is desecrated by the scoffers who pretend to enquire of the prophet. Comp. ch. 20. 7-11. Jeremiah replies that the nation is a burden of which Jehovah is about to disburden himself.—Say . . . burden. Or, tell them what the burden is, i.e. I will, &c. The Sept. and Vulg. have Ye are the burden (Var.; so R.V. marg.).—I will even forsake you.] Rather, I will cast you off (so in v. 39), Var.; so R.V. This is the utterance, and Israel, which Jehovah had carried as on eagle's wings (Ex. 19. 4; Isa. 63. 9-14), is to be cast off as a burden. 34. Say, &c.] The word massâ or 'burden' seems to have been a word identified with the prophet Isaiah (who uses it most frequently) and to have been adopted by these pretenders, as if they were attempting now to play the part of Isaiah in the time of Sennacherib's invasion.—The practice of so perverting the word 'burden' shall be punished, and the terms 'answer' or 'word' alone are to be used when men enquire of the prophet or receive an inspired message unasked. 36. Every man's word . . . burden.] i.e. the misuse of the term massâ shall be a 'burden' of guilt (Variorum) to crush the speaker; R.V. every man's own word (R.V. marg. continues) is his burden, and ye pervert the words, &c.—For ye have perverted.] Rather, neither pervert ye (Variorum). 38. But since.] Or, But if. 39. Utterly forget you.] Or, take you up; so Sept., Vulg., &c. (Var.).—Forsake . . . and cast you . . . presence.] Rather, cast you off . . . from . . . before me (Var.).

264.—The True Nature of Zedekiah's Kingdom.

Parable of the two baskets of figs.—The captives removed in kindness.—Zedekiah and the residue left to its fate.

JEREMIAH XXIV.

<sup>1</sup> THE "LORD shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadrezzar <sup>b</sup> king of Babylon had carried away captive <sup>c</sup> Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon. <sup>2</sup> One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, they were so bad.

<sup>3</sup> Then said the LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

J. xxiv.—As if to show that there is no prospect of any interposition on behalf of Zedekiah and his subjects, Jeremiah adds here the parable which conveys the lesson that the portion of the nation left in Judah and Jerusalem is not the portion destined to be preserved. All that was best and worthiest had gone with Jehoiachin; there was no wisdom and no strength left, and no moral principle among the governors or governed. This vision may or may not have been published before; it had been previously in Jeremiah's mind (comp. the allusions in ch. 29. 10, 17, 18, with rs. 6, 2, 8, 9); but probably it is here delivered to the king for the first time. No monarch would endure the repetition of such a parable. 1. Two baskets . . . set. Omit were. By a vision of 'a basket of summer fruit,' i.e. fruit of the end of the agricultural year, the end of the N. kingdom was foretold to Amos (8. 1-3), and Isaiah described its rapid fall by the eager consumption of the first ripe fig; see r. 2, note.—These baskets stood 'in the appointed place for offerings of firstfruits in the forecourt of the Temple.' One held selected fruit, the other the decaying refuse of fruit. Compare the parallel revelation to Ezekiel (11. 15-21) in the 6th year of the Captivity, whence we learn that the remnant left in Jerusalem, in the superstitious confidence engendered by the possession of the Holy Land, and esp. of David's capital, Solomon's Temple and its services, was ready to pass judgment on those gone into captivity (although a Daniel and an Ezekiel were among them) as being outcasts from the land of Jehovah (Ezek. 11. 15), and therefore 'sinners above all men that dwell in Jerusalem' (Luke 13. 4). This symbol is to show that the truth was exactly otherwise; indeed their case was worse than that of the self-righteous ones who addressed Christ; for it was now too late to say to them 'except ye repent;' their growing, maturing, time was past; the future should show that they were the true outcasts, they the 'bastards, not sons' (Heb. 12. 8). 'The new life of the Hebrew nation is to be the work only of the exiles in Babylonia.'—Sp. Com.—Figs. Cf. 1 Sam. 25. 18, note.—Carpenters.] Var. and R.V. craftsmen; but see 2 Kin. 24. 14, note. 2. Figs . . . first ripe. The scanty and precious first crop of three (see Mic. 7. 1, reading fig for fruit with R.V.). Comp. Isa. 28. 4, 'as the hasty fruit' (R.V. the first ripe fig) 'before the summer.'—Naughty. Or, bad (for 'evil' also in rs. 3, 8; 'naughty' has now ceased to mean good-for-nothing; cf. 2 Kin. 2. 19. 4. Again.) Or, And.

5-7.] A summary of the revelations connected with the Restoration (see marg. refs.). In r. 6, the vision at Jeremiah's call is referred to, and the commencement of the constructive part of Jeremiah's mission is announced. 5. Acknowledge. Rather, own, by distinguishing marks of favour, as explained in rs. 6, 7. Others render, look upon, i.e. with pleasure, as upon good fruit; R.V. regard. Variorum, placing a comma after Chaldeans, connects this verb with for good (so Fr., Ital., Germ., and R.V.). The A.V. contrasts the past removal of these exiles for their good with the future removal of the remnant of Judah for their hurt (r. 9); the purpose of their banishment was the bringing of a remnant of the Chosen People back to Jehovah and the blessing them with a repentant heart (r. 7). Ezekiel had further revealed, to the exiles, that during the prescribed period of the Captivity God would be present with them spiritually, although they now seemed to be outcasts, and although shortly the Temple, the seat of His visible Presence upon earth, should be ruined and desolate: Yet will I be to them a sanctuary for a little while in the countries where they are come, &c. Both Daniel and captives of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. <sup>6</sup> For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and <sup>d</sup> I will bring them again to this land: and <sup>e</sup> I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up. <sup>7</sup> And I will give them <sup>f</sup> an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be <sup>g</sup> my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me <sup>h</sup> with their whole heart.

<sup>8</sup> And as the evil <sup>i</sup> figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and <sup>k</sup> them that dwell in the land of Egypt: <sup>9</sup> and I will deliver them to <sup>l</sup> be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, <sup>m</sup> to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt <sup>n</sup> and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them. <sup>10</sup> And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

Ezekiel were missionaries, by example, by precept, and by revelations, to their countrymen in exile.—Them . . . captive.] Lit. the captivity, as marg.; gālūth sometimes means 'captive state,' but usually 'captive-band'; it is frequently rendered αἰχμαλωσία, which always in Sept. means captive-band; cf. Num. 21. 1; Judg. 5. 12; 2 Chr. 28. 17; Ps. 68. 18; Eph. 4. 8. <sup>6</sup> Set . . . good.] Compare Amos 9. 4; ch. 21. 10. Vs. 6, 7 are explained by Ezekiel's prophecies of the 6th and 7th years (Ezek. 11. 17-20 & 20. 33-44) to these exiles. The Captivity is to be a probation; in it God will purge out the rebels and prepare a converted remnant for restoration to Canaan. The full revelation is recorded later (chs. 30-33). <sup>7</sup> With . . . heart.] Idolatry, their 'besetting sin,' was eradicated by the Captivity. <sup>8</sup> Give.] Var. make; R.V. give up.—Dwell . . . Egypt.] Specially those who, notwithstanding Jeremiah's warnings, had taken refuge in Egypt from Nebuchadnezzar; Jehoiachaz and his companions in exile (2 Kin. 23. 34) would have formed the nucleus of a Jewish colony there. Egypt was included in the area of Nebuchadnezzar's conquests; ch. 25. 19; compare ch. 43. 10-13 & 46. 13-26 and Ezek. 30-32. <sup>9</sup> Deliver . . . into.] Or, make them a shuddering unto (Variorum, comparing ch. 15. 4, and omitting to be below); R.V. give them up to be tossed [J. xxiv. 6—10 & xxxiv. 1.]

to and fro among. Deut. 28. 25, 37 must have been in the prophet's mind; see ch. 34. 17.—For their hurt.] Sept. omits, and so Ewald; R.V. for evil.

J. xxxiv.—Jeremiah seems to have followed up the delivery of the roll contained in chs. 21-24 by a personal visit to Zedekiah shortly afterwards, while the assembled hosts of Nebuchadnezzar's empire were reducing the last cities of Judah (see on c. 7) and were closing upon Jerusalem.—Probably the promise of vs. 4, 5 is conditional, a promise that if Zedekiah listened to the prophet and made submission to Nebuchadnezzar, he should finish his reign without forfeiting the respect of his subjects by any great national catastrophe, and should die, as Nebuchadnezzar's vassal, in peace and honour. Compare ch. 38. 17-23. There was yet time for submission, such as Hezekiah had made (2 Kin. 18. 14); Nebuchadnezzar's army was still detained besieging Lachish and Azekah, strongholds of Judah which no doubt were stoutly defended in order to keep open the communication with Egypt; when they fell, the siege of Jerusalem would not be delayed.—Or, perhaps, Zedekiah is promised his life and a peaceful death, with honour from his fellow-exiles; this seems unlikely, for though some of them might still own him as king, they would regard him (ch. 38. 23, note 'thou') as the cause all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, saying,

Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD; Behold,

<sup>1</sup> AND it came to pass <sup>a</sup> in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.

of the greatest calamity that had befallen their nation. Josephus says that Nebuchadnezzar buried Zedekiah magnificently; but this too seems unlikely, for Zedekiah had been a perjured and rebellious vassal.—1. Earth. [Rather, land (Variante).—Of his dominion.] i.e. owning his sovereignty; lit. ruled by his hand; so Vulg. Compare Ezek. 26. 7, 'Nebuchadnezzar . . . a king of kings . . . with horses . . . chariots . . . horsemen, and companies, and much people,' and the description of the siege of Tyre following.—Fought. [Apparently the main army had not yet approached Jerusalem.—Peoples.] Rather, peoples (Var.); i.e. vassal nations; so an inscription describes Sargon's as an 'empire of nations.' 3. Eyes, &c. [Repeated in ch. 32. 4. This occurred at Riblah (ch. 52. 10) when Nebuchadnezzar gave judgment upon him, and then blinded Zedekiah; so Ezek. 12. 13 is reconcilable with this prophecy. 4. Yet hear.] This appeal seems to imply that Zedekiah might yet, by obeying the voice of the Lord, modify or avert the doom just pronounced on Jerusalem and on himself. Comp. chs. 21. 8, 9 & 38. 2, where Jeremiah promises their lives to those who surrender to the Chaldeans, and ch. 38. 17, 18, where, towards the end of the siege, Jeremiah assures Zedekiah that by surrendering the city he shall save his life and the city from burning. 5. Burn odours. [Or (as Heb.), make a burning, i.e. of aromatic woods and spices. Asa received special honour in this way, Jehoram none (2 Chr. 16. 14 & 21. 19). The custom may have had some connection with that deification of the honoured dead which has prevailed widely (cp. G. Smith, Assyr. Discover., p. 394, and Dan. 2. 46).—Lament.] A complete contrast to the doom on Jehoiaquin (ch. 22. 18). 7. Lachish . . . Azekah. [In the S.W. lowlands of Judah, fortified towns commanding valleys by which Jerusalem was approached, and flanking or even commanding the road to Egypt along the plain of the sea coast.—These, &c.] i.e. these outworks, so to speak, of Jerusalem still held out.—Although Sennacherib captured Lachish, and, as he boasts, shut up the king of Judah in Jerusalem 'like a bird in a cage,' after capturing 46 fenced cities of Judah—he was not permitted to capture the Holy City. The similarity of Zedekiah's present situation to that of Hezekiah would give false prophets an opportunity to encourage the king and people with delusive hopes, and this they doubtless used to the full, as Josephus intimates.

2 K. xxv.—1. Tenth month.] Tebeth, mid-winter, corresponding to our Dec.-Jan. The siege lasted till the 9th day of the 4th month 635 [J. xxxiv. 2—7 & xxxix. 1; 2 K. xxv. 1.]

EZEKIEL XXIV.

(Tammuz = June-July; cf. Matt. 24. 20) In the next year but one, i.e. a year and a half all but one day.—Tenth day.] The investment of Jerusalem was an event worthy of commemoration by a solemn fast-day after the Return (Zech. 8. 19).—Pitched.] R.V. encamped (so Jer.); lit. = straitened.—Fort.] Either 'siege-lines,' i.e. blockading works with forts at intervals and a tower or towers to overlook the walls; or (so Currey, quoting Gosse's Assyria, pp. 301, 304) wooden towers for wheeling up to the walls, whence soldiers, themselves in safety, might discharge missiles into the city, or might batter the walls, or even scale them (but this last was rather the object of the 'mounts,' Jer. 32. 24). Cp. Jer. 6. 6 and Ezek. 4. 2 & 26. 7-14.

E. xxiv.—1. Again.] After an interval of uncertain length. On the very day of Jerusalem's investment (vs. 2 with 18), Ezekiel, about 400 miles away, is inspired to announce that the sentence pronounced on Jerusalem in one of his prophecies of the 7th year (ch. 22. 19-22) is actually put in execution—I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem . . . and I will leave you there, and melt you . . . in the fire of my wrath. He is charged to foreshow, by parable and by acted sign, the burning of the Holy City with all its most precious contents, the Temple included.—Micah's (3. 12) prophecy, 'Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the House as the high places of the forest,' the extreme penalties foretold by Moses in Lev. 26 and Deut. 28 & 29—begin to be accomplished (see especially Lev. 26. 27-39; Deut. 28. 47-57, 62-68 & 29. 22-28). 2. Same day.] Or, self/same day. It was a signal authentication of Ezekiel's inspiration. He records the day (cp. Isa. 30. 8) for evidence hereafter.—Set, &c.] Rather, pressed hard upon; Heb. leaned upon; R.V. drew close unto. The completion of the blockading works seems to be meant. 3. Parable.] The caldron, for boiling or soaking food (seethe = boil), is the familiar metal vessel of Oriental life. It is used for the daily meals of every family, crew, &c. Cp. 1 Sam. 2. 14; 2 Kin. 4. 38; 18.

60. 8. In Jeremiah's vision (1. 13), the caldron had represented local struggles destined to end in an outpouring of conquerors from the north over Judah and her neighbours. The opponents of Jeremiah at Jerusalem had quoted the figure, but interpreted it as an emblem of the security of Jerusalem—war might rage around the Holy City as flames surround a caldron, but they, the Chosen People, should be protected by the walls as the meat by the pot. Cp. ch. 11. 3, and v. 7, where Ezekiel retorts their saying—here, he adopts it, and founds a parable upon it to foreshow the issue of the siege. The Chaldean armies have surrounded Jerusalem; but they are God's executioners, the all-consuming unquenchable flames foretold in ch. 20. 45-48. The relics of Judah gathered within the walls for security (cp. Jer. 35. 11) shall all be removed piecemeal or perish therein—nay, the walls themselves in which they trusted shall be destroyed (fulfilled 2 Kin. 25. 10). Previous punishments of Judah have been partial, tempered by mercy (e.g. the captivities under Jehoiakim and Jehoiachin), some being taken, others left, as if by lot (v. 6), but all in vain (v. 13). This shall be complete.—The rebellious house.] The exiles clung to the hope of an early restoration, and so long as Jerusalem and the Temple stood, they, obdurate and influenced by false prophets (ch. 13), would not believe Ezekiel, nor begin to learn the lesson of their captivity.

—A pot.] Rather, the pot, Variorum, i.e. that of which you speak, or the caldron, as in ch. 11. 3 (Heb. sir). 4. Thereof.] i.e. the pieces and bones usually cooked. 5. The choice of the flock.] Ironical. The superstitious feelings associated with the possession of Jerusalem and 'the holy places' (i.e. the sanctuaries, the Temple and its various parts, ch. 21. 2 & 11. 15) were so powerful that the refuse-signs with Zedekiah had come to regard themselves, and, by a strange inversion of the fact, to be regarded by the exiles, as the elect of the nation.—Burn.] Rather, heap, as marg.; Vulg. strues; Sept. ὑπόκαει; R.V. pile. The rest of the bones (as is usual

Woe to <sup>6</sup>the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no <sup>7</sup>lot fall upon it. <sup>7</sup> For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; <sup>8</sup> she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust; <sup>8</sup> that it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; <sup>8</sup> I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

<sup>9</sup> Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great. <sup>10</sup> Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burned. <sup>11</sup> Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and <sup>12</sup> that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, <sup>12</sup> that the scum of it may be consumed.

The sides of the caldron—if corroded by rust, would represent Jerusalem as eaten out by wickedness—if hopelessly covered with verdigris, 'scum,' after repeated cleansings, they would represent Jerusalem as an inveterate source of moral poison. Ezekiel's conduct on the next day (like that of Jeremiah in Josiah's reign, marg. refs.) typifies the engrossing sufferings of the siege and the extraordinary sorrows of its issue. Death should soon be busy in Jerusalem ; all objects of the heart's devotion should be taken thence ; but the besieged, in their extremity, would neglect funeral ceremonies and even forget to mourn. <sup>16</sup> Desire of thine eyes.] This phrase, repeated twice (rs. 21, 25), is the burden of the 'sign.' <sup>17</sup> Forbear to cry.] Vulg. ingenisce tacens, which is literal ; so R.V. Sigh, but not aloud. Cf. Jer. 22. 18, 'Ah my brother,' &c. — Mourning.] Three different expressions for it are used ; here 'bet' = wailing ; rs. 16, 23 (1st) sāphad = beating on the breast ; v. 23 (2nd) nāham = groaning. Other outward signs of mourning follow — covering the head (Jer. 14. 3) with some covering beyond the ordinary turban (2 Sam. 19. 4 ; Esth. 6. 12 ; the turban would be first removed or even dashed on the ground, ashes being sprinkled or a veil worn on the head) ; walking barefoot (2 Sam. 15. 30) ; covering the face from chin to nose (Mic. 3. 7). — Lips.] Var. upper lip (Lev. 13. 45), and so R.V. marg., also in v. 22. — Eat . . . men.] See Jer 16. 5-7 ; Hos. 9. 4.

Bread of men means funeral meats, viz. either bread of mourners (so Vulg. luctantium), or bread of other men (so Fr. des autres) i.e. contributed by other men 'to comfort them (the mourners) for the dead,' the origin of funeral feasts. Tobit (4. 17) mentions a distribution of bread at funerals, and Jeremiah (16. 7 ; cf. Prov. 31. 6) the 'cup of consolation' then passed round. <sup>19</sup> The people said.] Again (see ch. 12. 9) the curiosity of these outwardly respectful but inwardly incredulous exiles prevails over their pertinacious resistance of the truth (Acts 7. 51). And they recognise that in some way the prophet's abstention is a message to them ('to us'). <sup>21</sup> The Temple, Judah's talisman and pride (Amos 6. 8), Judah's children, including probably relatives and friends of the exiles, shall perish ; but the agony and despair of the time shall be too great for tears and mourning : it will be crushing. — Profane.] By the entry of the Chaldeans even into the Holy of Holies (marg. refs. ; ch. 7. 22, 24 ; Lam. 1. 10). — Excellency, &c.] Lit. increase, height ; Variorum, pomp (ch. 30. 18) ; Sept. φούργμα (= snorting, hauteur) ; Vulg. superbiam imperii vestri ; R.V. pride of your power (from Lev. 26. 19 ; see Ps. 47. 4). — Pitieth.] Vulg. super quo paret ; Sept. φειδονται ; there seems to be a play on the words machmal = object of pity, and so of sympathy, love, delight, and machmad = object of desire. — Left.] R.V. left behind. <sup>23</sup> Mourn . . . mourn.] Vulg., rightly, plangetis . . . gemetis, shall not mourn nor weep; but <sup>a</sup> ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another. <sup>24</sup> Thus <sup>b</sup> Ezekiel is unto you a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do: <sup>c</sup> and when this cometh, <sup>d</sup> ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

<sup>25</sup> Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them <sup>e</sup> their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and that whereupon they set their minds, their sons and their daughters, <sup>26</sup> *that f*he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

<sup>27</sup> <sup>g</sup> In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb: and <sup>h</sup> thou shalt be a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

beat upon your breasts. . . groan (Var. mourn; so R.V.).—Pine away.] A strong expression; lit. putrefy; cf. ch. 33. 10. This had been long foretold (Lev. 26. 39). The grief that is beyond relief by outward expression is the most consuming inwardly. 'Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow' is the language which Jeremiah puts into the mouth of his people (Lam. 1. 12) when reflecting on their loss of country and of the Divine favour, and its cause, their own sin. <sup>24</sup> Is . . . sign.] Vulg., rightly, erit vobis in portentum; mopheth, 'the prodigy,' is distinguished from 'oth,' 'the sign,' in that it is not a mere witness or token, but (whatever its object) a something that arrests the attention. Variorum, shall be to you a portent (ch. 12. 6). <sup>25</sup> Also.] Or, And.—Whereupon . . . minds.] Var. wherunto they lift up their soul, or heart.—Strength . . . glory.] Or, R.V. marg., stronghold . . . beauty. <sup>26</sup> He that, &c.] Rather, in that day he that escapeth (so Sept., Vulg., and R.V.). Exactly fulfilled; a fugitive brought the news to Ezekiel (33. 21) in the 5th day of the 10th month of the 12th year. <sup>27</sup> Dumb.] As regards his nation; in the interval he prophesies as to its neighbours and enemies. The utterances of chs. 25-32 not only repeat and enforce Jeremiah's revelation of the scope of Nebuchadnezzar's conquests uttered about seventeen years before (see Jer. 37. 17, note 'secretly'), but they form a suitable transition from the declaration of God's wrath to that of His mercy towards His people, because the punishment of their enemies is a part of their deliverance.—And.] i.e. And so. The cessation of Ezekiel's prophcies to his countrymen during the progress of the siege, like the judicial blindness of Isa. 6. 9 (comp. Matt. 13. 14), is a retributive punishment on them, because they remained uninfluenced by his words and signs (ch. 3. 25, 26).—When the final blow had fallen, his humbled countrymen would be more disposed to listen, and Ezekiel's utterances assume a consolatory tone. Meanwhile, Ezekiel's silence signifies the finality of the doom just pronounced, and the abandonment of Jerusalem and Judah to their fate.

J. xxxiv.—8.] It appears that the national danger had incited Zedekiah and his subjects early in the siege to some national recognition of the law, and to solemnly covenant, before Jehovah in the Temple (v. 15), to emancipate those Hebrews who had become the bondmen of their brethren, probably through abuse of the law of debt. (For a similar abuse and covenant during Nehemiah's governorship, after the Return, see Neh. 5. 1-13.) This national action may have seemed to the actors to resemble one of the historical reformations, e.g. Asa's or Hezekiah's, and likely to propitiate Jehovah and enlist His support; but policy probably, as often in history, had more to do with this covenant than conscience ('to increase their fighting strength,' Ewald). On Pharaoh's advance, they repented of their penitence, and broke their covenant (v. 11). God proclaims (v. 17) that he will soon set them, the covenant breakers, free, in no happy sense, free from His Covenant, abandoned to sword, pestilence, and famine, and to captivity. They had refused the obedience that was freedom; they should have the liberty which proclaim <sup>a</sup>liberty unto them; <sup>9</sup> <sup>b</sup>that every man should let his manservant, and every man his maidservant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; <sup>c</sup>that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

<sup>10</sup> Now when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his manservant, and every one his maidservant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go.

<sup>11</sup> But <sup>d</sup>afterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

<sup>12</sup> Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, <sup>13</sup> Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel;

I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying, <sup>14</sup> At the end of <sup>e</sup>seven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which hath been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

they desired and which led to national effacement.—This episode illustrates forcibly the demoralization of Zedekiah and his subjects, and the oppression of the poor in Judah which prophets and psalmists had so long and so constantly rebuked. This heartless, shameless, and profane breach of covenant, so soon as the peril of Jerusalem was lessened, is consistent with the sanguine and presumptuous expectations of success, either by the aid of Egypt or even through a miraculous interposition in their favour, in which the party of resistance to Nebuchadnezzar indulged. —All . . . Jerusalem.] The city would be now full of refugees, especially the wealthier, who had brought their households within the walls of the well-nigh impregnable capital. —Proclaim liberty.] This expression is used of the jubile year (Lev. 25. 10), and being prominent in connection with the law broken is here used with 'indignant irony.' A Hebrew might become a slave, either to a resident alien (subject to the right of redemption by relatives at an earlier period or of freedom at the jubile, Lev. 25. 47, 54), or to a Hebrew (with right to liberty and a bounty at the end of six years, Deut. 15. 12, 13, or at the jubile if it occurred during the six years), for two causes—debt (Lev. 25. 39) and theft (Ex. 22. 3). Some think that the 7th-year freedom was the right of domestic slaves only, and the 50th-year freedom of agricultural. The law of Ex. 21. 2, Deut. 15. 12–18 was extended (but under the form of serfage rather than of slavery) in the later regulations of Lev. 25. 39, 40 to the interval (if any) between the [J. xxiv. 9–16.]

Comp. the parable, Matt. 18. 23–35. —Bondmen.] Sept. and Fulg. have slavery (Deut. 7. 8 also).—The house of bondmen is no mere generalization. It means the miserable prison-house in which the hard-worked slaves were locked up at night (Payne Smith). The memory should have been a touching and effectual one, a motive not only for yielding ready service to God, but for mere sympathy (Deut. 5. 6, 15). The prophet quotes the broken law (Ex. 21. 2). <sup>14</sup> End of seven.] Hebraic (Lev. 25. 10); Sept. when six years have been fulfilled.—Been sold.] Rather, sold himself (as marg., so Germ. and R.V. marg.); cf. v. 8, note. —Hearkened.] Better, obeyed me not, as v. 10. <sup>15</sup> Turned.] Same word as vs. 11, 16; when coupled with another verb, its

Gern. gives a better sense, so machen wie das kalb.—The custom of ratifying a covenant by such a ceremony was 'a survival of one of the oldest rites of Patriarchal times.' See Gen. 15. 10-17, where Abram halves the animals of the sacrifice, and places the several halves opposite each other so that the fire which represented the Lord God, as one of the two parties to the covenant, could 'pass between the pieces.' Plumptre explains that 'the implied thought' (based on the old association of exact retribution with strict justice, e.g. Matt. 5. 38) 'was that the parties to the contract prayed, as in the analogous case of 1 Sam. 11. 7, that they might be torn limb from limb, like the victims, if they broke the covenant.' pealed to Jeremiah, before the siege began. See his history in ch. 21. 1. note.—Pray. Probably hoping that an appeal through Jeremiah (cp. Gen. 20. 7) would either win over the prophet (Plumptre), or procure such a prophetic announcement that God would save Jerusalem as had been vouchsafed through Isaiah in the case of Sennacherib under somewhat similar circumstances (Isa. 37. 4-7). But Jeremiah quenches hope. The army of Pharaoh-Hophra will retire; but even if Zedekiah should, with Egypt's aid, defeat the Chaldean army, so that only a handful of wounded were left, yet even they should suffice to destroy Jerusalem, because such was God's will.

Jeremiah would have a right to a share in the produce of the priests' lands at Anathoth. He would naturally seize the opportunity, which he had declared to be transitory, either to escape (fearing the effects of his answer to the king), or to go and transact any necessary business in connection with those lands, perhaps to seek in company with others (if people may mean other priests) to obtain his share as provision against the renewal of the siege. <sup>13</sup> *Gate of Benjamin.] i.e. the N. gate. knew that he urged submission to Nebuchadnezzar. Last year, he had even (by the word of the Lord) advised desertion as the only 'way of life' (ch. 21. 9).—Took. Rather, seized (v 14 also); Vulg. apprehendit, comprehendit; Sept. συνέλαβε; i.e. put under arrest.—Fullest away. This can have no meaning, as used in Jer. and 2 Kin. 25. 11, except desert or surrender. Compare fall into in ch. 21. 9; 1 Sam. 29. 3; 2 Kin. 7. 4; 1 Chr. 12. 19 for go over to (the same Hebrew), and Shakespeare's fall over to my foes.—It was assumed that the prophet was going to the Chaldeans' encampment to incite them to return, and so work out the fulfilment of his own prediction (Phantom). <sup>15</sup> Wherefore. Rather, And (so Sept.).—The princes. The body mentioned in ch. 26. 16 & 36. 19; but Jeremiah's supporters had probably gone into captivity with Jehoiachin. The party of resistance was paramount, and the king did its bidding; it would not forgive Jeremiah's parable of the figs (ch. 24. 8). Jeremiah's present act was not the real ground of his imprisonment (v. 18; ch. 32. 3-5), but Zedekiah's disappointment at his utterances, coupled with fear of the clamour of the princes. After 'many days,' Zedekiah reported his harshness (vs. 17, 21), albeit that Jeremiah had in no wise (cp. 1 Kin. 22. 14) changed the tenor of his utterances.—Smote. Jeremiah's second scourging for righteousness' sake; see ch. 20. 2.—Scribe. This Secretary of State probably 'exercised functions like those of a minister of police; his official residence, being perhaps built to serve for a prison, had now been fixed upon as the prison for political offenders.' Jeremiah's sufferings in this prison made him fear for his life (v. 20); his enemies were probably not unwilling to let him perish slowly by confinement and neglect, though they as yet feared to seek his life openly.

E. xxix.—Ezekiel's prophecies against Egypt probably began during the first year of Pharaoh-Hophra (Apries, Idit). The earlier prophecies of the group are associated by their dates and allusions with the last stages of the siege of Jerusalem, and they contradict those false hopes, based upon the renewed aggressiveness of Egypt and the seeming revival of its power, with which the exiles in Babylon as well as Zedekiah and the anti-Chaldean party in Jerusalem had encouraged themselves (for at least 3½ years past, ch. 17. 15) to believe that the progress of Nebuchadnezzar's conquests could be successfully resisted. The first prophecy perhaps closely followed the receipt of news that Pharaoh was advancing to the relief of Jerusalem.—The period was one of a temporary revival of Egypt amid its general course of decadence. Hophra seems to have attempted, immediately after his accession, to recover the supremacy in Syria which his grandfather Necho had won and lost. And evidently, at first, he disputed energetically and, to human sight, hopefully the control of Syria with Nebuchadnezzar. But Ezekiel declares the hollowness of this display of military power.—1. Tenth. A year and two days after the siege began (Jer. 39. 1), and six months less three days before its end. 3. Dragon. i.e. the crocodile, the emblem of Egypt (and so even on Roman coins). See Isa. 51. 9 (where Rahab means 'Egypt') and Isa. 30. 7. note, and ep. Job 41.—Lith. . . . rivers. The capital of the present, the 26th, dynasty, was 'Sais' in the very midst of the various branches and streams of the Nile; and its kings from Psammetichus onwards had encouraged commerce, especially by sea with Greece, and the midst of his rivers, <sup>6</sup> which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself. <sup>4</sup> But I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales, and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales. <sup>5</sup> And I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the open fields; <sup>9</sup> thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: <sup>8</sup> I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field and to the fowls of the heaven.

Compare Ex. 7. 17–19, where ‘river’ should be ‘Nile’ throughout (as here in vs. 3, 9), and ‘rivers’ in v. 19 should be ‘canals’ (Variorum), and so in vs. 4, 5, 10.—My river . . . I have made it.] Herodotus says, ‘Egypt is the gift of the Nile.’ Egypt consists (1) of a rock-bound valley overspread by the alluvial deposits of the Nile, and (2) of a great Delta beyond; the annual inundation maintains the fertility of both, supplemented by irrigation as the Nile falls; rain is almost unknown. Pharaoh boasts as if he were the creator of the Nile, God Himself.—Hath said.] Herodotus (ii. 169) records a corresponding boast of Apries (Hophra), viz. that he commonly boasted that not even a god could dispossess him of power. Pusey points out that both boasts imply strength in defence only, and that in Ezekiel a strength against attack, derived from the situation of Egypt. Psammitichus (Hdt. ii. 30) had protected the three approaches to Egypt by land by three permanent camps, at Pelusian Daphne, Syene, and Marea. Herodotus (ii. 163) adds that under Apries, the Greek mercenaries reached 30,000. But a foreign mercenary army is always a sure sign of national weakness and of decay. <sup>4</sup> Fish of thy rivers.] Egypt’s allies and dependents.—And . . . shall.] R.V. with . . . which. <sup>6</sup> Staff of reed.] i.e. the cane of warm countries, plentiful in Egypt. But see next note.—To be at a stand.] Or, according to another reading, totter (Variorum); shake (R.V. marg., referring to Ps. 69. 23). <sup>10</sup> The tower of Syene.] Rather, Migdol to Syene, Variorum; so A.V. marg. (quoting Ex. 14. 2; Jer. 44. 1); and ch. 30. 6, marg.; and so R.V. marg. The Septuagint translation, which was made in Egypt, renders from Magdolum and Syene. In the Hebrew, ‘tower’ is Migdol and ‘Syene’ is Sereneh (A.V. marg.). The A.V. follows the Vulgate. The R.V. renders from the tower of Sereneh. But the ancient notoriety of Syene (as a place within the tropics on the S. border of Egypt) seems to be fatal to this translation, and the LXX. identification of Syene should be conclusive. The ‘Magdolum’ of the LXX. is the Migdol of Ex. 14. 2, a well known place on the E. frontier of Egypt (see Jer. 44. 1, note ‘Migdol’); from Migdol to Syene would therefore be a perfect description of the land of Egypt as regarded by a native of Canaan. According to this view, Sereneh should be rendered to or towards Seven (i.e. the Greek Syene; comp. Assuan, the old Egyptian name which survives in the modern Assouan), the eh being the Hebrew affix which usually has such a meaning. The tower of Sereneh would describe some place, otherwise unknown, denoting the northern boundary of Egypt.—The border of Ethiopia.] Herodotus (ii. 29), who visited Egypt and wrote of it about a century later than the date of this prophecy, describes the boundary between Egypt and Ethiopia as passing through the middle of the Island of Tachompo (Phile), just above the first cataract. The modern Assouan, at the foot of the first cataract, is a little S.W. of the ancient Syene. Ethiopia here represents the southern border of Egypt. 11. Forty years.] Probably a general statement that Egypt will for a long time be in 'a state of collapse.' But some interpret the passage as a reference to Israel's forty years' wandering (comp. ch. 4, 6), i.e. the people of Egypt will pass into a condition like Israel's then. Pusey, however, interprets the 'forty years' literally; he points out (Daniel, p. 275) that the difficulty of fixing the period arises from the fact that the systematic accounts of Egypt at that time, those in Herodotus, are from Egyptian priests, who are known (then and at other times) to have cast a veil over the dishonour of their country. They tell us of Necho's fleets and of his circumnavigation of Africa; they tell us of his victory at Megiddo and his capture of Cadytis; but they say nothing of his defeat at Carchemish, and they make no mention whatever of Nebuchadnezzar. Indeed, Egyptian history is remarkably silent as to the reigns of Necho, Psamunis, and Apries; and Pusey, referring to these and other indications of weakness from the foundation of the dynasty, argues that it is not improbable that Egypt was tributary to the Chaldeans even before the reign of Necho, and that either Hophra was deposed by Nebuchadnezzar, or Amasis, his conqueror, was confirmed on the throne as a tributary of Nebuchadnezzar, who had taken advantage of the civil war. Pusey concludes that thus there would be 'ample room' for the forty years of subjection of Egypt before the death of Hophra. (<sup>f</sup> p. ch. 30, 21 and note. 12. Desolate.] In the sense of being plundered and deprived of independence by a conqueror. 13. Yet . . . people.] Rather, For . . . peoples, Pariorum; so R.V. 14. Bring again.] So Jer. 46, 26.—The land of Pathros.] Upper Egypt, of which No, i.e. Thebes (No-Ammon, Nahm 3, 8, Heb.), sitsuate on the Nile in an exceptionally wide plain, was the capital. See Isa. 11, 11 and ch. 30, 14-16.—Habitation.] Marg. birth; so R.V., but marg. origin. There is ground for believing that the Thebaid was the original seat of Egyptian power.—Base kingdom.] Marg. low (so R.V. marg.). In enfetled vassalage, like Zedekiah's Kingdom (ch. 17, 14). The later insignificance of Egypt forms a strong contrast with its ancient glory, dignity, and power. But the internal energy of its people was not exhausted, nor could the natural advantages of the country be neutralized by the loss of its military power or even of independence. The material prosperity of Egypt under Amasis is contrasted by Herodotus (ii. 177) with its condition under Hophra; the historian, says Pusey, records 'a restoration of internal prosperity without any restoration of external power, just as Ezekiel had foretold.' Nebuchadnezzar's occupation of Egypt must have been of no long duration, and his ravages, though severe, must have been partial; but this was destined to be the beginning of the end, and Cambyses so ravaged the country that when the Ptolemies established the Græco-Egyptian kingdom (Dan. 2, 32, note) 'old Egypt had become a riddle for the antiquary.' Even under the Ptolemies Egypt did not recover her ancient eminence.

15. Iniquity to remembrance.] Egypt indirectly brought into notice Israel's unfaithfulness to God and man; (1) generally, by tempting God's people to trust in foreign alliances and aid, and (2) recently, by concurring to Zedekiah's perjury (ch. 17, 15).—When . . . look.] Rather (Pariorum), in that they do turn.—A prophecy of the 27th year (Ezekiel's last prophecy) follows, as if to supplement the preceding (vs. 17-21). It reveals that Nebuchadnezzar will be permitted to conquer Egypt as his reward for doing God's work, and (v. 21) that the overthrow of this tempter of God's people is a step towards the establishment of Messiah's kingdom, because the temporal revival of the Covenant-people should coincide with the destruction of its trust in earthly aid, and because Egypt's fall is part of the general overthrow of whatever exalts itself and opposes itself to God.

[E. xxx. 20-26.] No date is given for the resumption of the siege by the Chaldeans; the period of its suspension remains unknown. But this prophecy (esp. v. 22) suggests not only the failure of Hophra's diversion, but that the Chaldeans inflicted on the Egyptians a crushing defeat, and perhaps—Josephus says (Ant. x. 7. 3), 'beat . . . pursued them, and drove them out of all Syria'—that the siege was suspended during a somewhat prolonged campaign against Hophra. <sup>21</sup> I have broken . . . Pharaoh. i.e. Necho and Hophra, by means of Nebuchadnezzar.—To be healed. R.V. to apply healing medicines.—A roller. A bandage. So Jeremiah (46. 11) foretold, twenty years before, that Egypt's defeat at Carchemish would be irremediable. <sup>22</sup> The strong . . . broken. Such military power as Egypt still retained, and the supremacy in Syria broken aforetime in the case of Necho. <sup>25</sup> Strengthen. Hitzig renders hold up, which R.V. adopts.

A further prophecy, dated a month and eight days before the fall of Jerusalem, in the form of a parable of Assyria (ch. 31) enforces the lessons of the two preceding prophecies. The example of Assyria, the instrument in God's hand for the punishment of the N. kingdom, as Nebuchadnezzar was now for the punishment of Judah (compare Jer. 50. 17, 18), is used to convey a special warning. Assyria's greatness could not save it; its arrogant self-exaltation only brought about its humiliation. Egypt, overweeningly self-reliant and infatuated by her internal prosperity, shall experience, like Assyria, the overruling power and judgments of the true God. And God's people shall experience yet once more the folly of trust in Egypt.

J. xxxvii.—16. The dungeon . . . cabins. Or, the dungeon-house (lit. house of the pit) . . . cells (so A.V. marg.); perhaps vaults (Var.). The prison was apparently an excavation ('pit') under the house of Jonathan the secretary (v. 15). 'It had not only the subterranean dungeon and pit common to all Eastern prisons, but separate "cabins" or cells (Hebrew here only) for individual prisoners.'—Pump-tre.—Many days. Probably several months. The siege had been resumed during Jeremiah's imprisonment (see Ezek. 30. 20, note); and the diminishing stock of 'bread' (v. 21) indicates an advanced stage in the resumed blockade. <sup>17</sup> Sent. The verification of the prophecy (v. 19), with despair added, would induce Zedekiah to send for Jeremiah to the palace to consult him.—Secretly. Through lack of him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

<sup>18</sup> Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? <sup>19</sup> Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

<sup>20</sup> Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there. <sup>21</sup> Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah <sup>b</sup> into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, <sup>c</sup> until all the bread in the city were spent.

Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

moral courage, and fear of the princes; the no-surrender party retained its influence and virulence to the last, with a stubbornness that may have seemed to be patriotism, but was really the reckless or superstitious fanaticism of unbelievers. If the undivided nation under Jehoiakim could not resist Nebuchadnezzar, nothing less than a miraculous interposition could enable the remnant under Zedekiah to save Jerusalem (but this, it seems, Zedekiah hoped for to the very last, ch. 38. 14). And yet the repeated enquiries through Jeremiah had elicited but one message, throughout Nebuchadnezzar's reign, confirming his prophecy of 17 years ago (4th Jehoiakim, ch. 25. 9).—

There is.] Note the unflinching courage of the prophet. His only 'offence' was his faithfulness to his message and his true patriotism.

—Thou.] Jeremiah begins his special appeals to Zedekiah personally, appealing to his fears as a man and to his responsibility as king. He repeats (see ch. 21. 7; Ezek. 17. 20) more emphatically his prophecy as to Zedekiah's capture. <sup>18</sup> What.] Jeremiah complains that he was imprisoned unconvinced; comp. St. Paul's defence (Acts 25. 8). <sup>19</sup> Where.] No more seeking prominence; convicted by events. Or, the prophet asks, What of those prophecies contradicting mine (e.g. ch. 28. 3), with which you were so willingly deluded? Does not their failure discredit my message now? discredit like prophecies, like encouragements, now? Josephus states that whilst the siege was raised, Zedekiah was completely under the influence of the false prophets (Ant. x. 7. 3). <sup>20</sup> Be accepted.]

Three were reckoned a meal (Luke 11. 5); one would be barely sufficient to sustain life, the 'morsel' of 1 Sam. 2. 36, the 'bread of affliction' of 1 Kin. 22. 27 (Bevan). It seems to have been the soldier's ration at this time, and Jeremiah's receipt of it seems to have depended on his being in the custody of the guard (ch. 38. 9, 13, 28).—Street.] Rather, quarter (lying probably on the W. side; cf. Neh. 3. 11, where 'furnaces' = ovens). Each trade commonly has in Eastern cities its separate bazaar. Cp. Bread-st., Milk-st., Wood-st., &c., in the City of London.—Bread.] Rather, cakes, or loaves; a collect. noun in Heb.; pl. in Sept. and Vulg.—Spent.] Scarcity had therefore begun (see v. 16, note).—Remained.] In custody (with the brief intermission of ch. 38. 6-13). Somewhat like the custody of St. Paul at Rome (Acts 28. 16; A.V. 'palace,' Phil. 1. 13). Jeremiah could not leave the palace, but he could go and speak to Ebedmelech (ch. 39. 16); his friends could visit him, and he could repeat his prophecies practically in public (ch. 38. 1, 4, 'all the people'). It seems (see ch. 30. 4, note) that while the prophet was thus a prisoner, he collected and dictated to Baruch the chapters (30-33) which have been sometimes called the Roll of Israel's hope, and include 'the great utterance' (ch. 31. 31-37) of the promise of a New Covenant, which, from one point of view, makes Jeremiah more the prophet of the Gospel even than Isaiah.

271.—Jeremiah Collects his Prophecies of the Restoration.

"For I know the thoughts that I think toward you . . . thoughts of peace . . . to give you an expected end."—Jer. xxix. 11.

"The house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers."—Jer. iii. 18.

JEREMIAH XXX. &amp; XXXI.

Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. <sup>3</sup> For, lo,

J. xxx.—xxxlii.—The siege, after its resumption, was vigorously pressed. Josephus states that the Chaldeans erected towers upon great banks of earth ('mounts,' ch. 32. 24), and from these attacked with missiles the defenders of the walls; and that they raised also a great number of such banks round about the whole city, whose height was equal to the walls. The garrison, undismayed, contrived still different engines to oppose those of the Chaldeans, persevering in such inventions until the contest seemed to be one of sagacity and skill (see Jos. Ant. x. 8. 1, compare 2 Chr. 26. 15).—But the end was in view unless the Chaldeans abandoned the siege. It appears that, up to the very last, the military commanders at least clung to the hope of aid from Egypt (Lam. 4. 17); yet all reasonable expectation of relief must have ended with the retreat of Pharaoh's army. Little could have been done to revictual the city during the suspension of the siege, for the surrounding country was a waste, and soon (ch. 32. 24), as described in the Lamentations, famine and disease prevailed among the crowded and hopeless inhabitants (comp. e.g. Lam. 1. 19, 20, at home there is as death, & 4. 8, 9, &c.). Although, according to Josephus, the multitude believed Jeremiah, and would have taken his advice to surrender the city, the fanatic and superstitious leaders of the party of resistance prevailed with the king, and Zedekiah apparently hoped to the very last for a miraculous deliverance.—It is now Jeremiah's task to provide for the revulsion of feeling and the despair that would follow the destruction of Jerusalem. The shock of change would be the greatest that had befallen the adopted people of God. The extinction of the kingdom of Samaria must be set aside in the comparison; because whilst David's kingdom survived the Hebrew nationality was still maintained (Lam. 4. 20) with its inheritance of the Promises and the Covenant. But when David's throne and Dynasty (with which that inheritance was bound up, Isa. 9. 7) should have been overthrown, when the Temple, the one place of God's presence and worship upon earth, should have been pillaged and burnt (2 Chr. 36. 18, 19), when David's city and realm should have become utterly desolate and waste, and when the children of Israel should no longer be reckoned among the nations because dispersed to the four winds in heathen lands, there would seem to be an end of all. Where were God's promises? where the hopes of His People? Would not the Divine purpose of blessing all nations by means of the Chosen Nation have visibly failed? would not the one lamp of Divine truth have been quenched in the darkness of heathenism? will not impiety reign over the whole world, and the empire of evil have been finally consolidated?—Now, during the death-agony of Jerusalem, God in his mercy provides against this despair of the continuance of God's election of the children of Israel, and 'commits their hopes to the custody of prophecy' (see Ezek. 37. 11).

J. xxx.—2. Write . . . book.] See ch. 21. 11, intro. note. The connexion of chs. 30 and 31 (the two well termed 'The triumphal hymn of Israel's salvation') with chs. 32 & 33, by their subject as well as by their place in the Book, suggests that the two former chapters also, at whatever time the several revelations may have been vouchsafed, were compiled during Jeremiah's confinement in the royal guard-house (so Deane on Jer. 37. 21, S.P.C.K.), and that the two revelations undoubtedly vouchsafed to him there (chs. 32, 33) were appended to complete the Roll of 'Israel's Hope' (see v. 4, note). The instruction to collect the prophecies of the Restoration in a Roll ('book') supports this view, for the object of Jeremiah's imprisonment was that he should be silenced, or at least be prevented from uttering in public (ch. 32. 3) any more prophecies which foretold or assumed the destruction of Jerusalem and the removal of the nation from Canaan by the Chaldeans. It is possible, however, that the contents of chs. 30 and the days come, saith the LORD, that <sup>a</sup>I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: <sup>b</sup>and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

<sup>c</sup>And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

<sup>5</sup> For thus saith the LORD; We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace. <sup>6</sup> Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, <sup>c</sup>as a woman in travail, and all faces

31, and of ch. 33, were uttered, or dictated to the Scribe, in the hearing of other prisoners, or of visitors (or even of 'a congregation of disciples,' Plumptre), and, if so, that these utterances, as well as the semi-public proceedings recorded in ch. 32, may have contributed to the renewed attempt on Jeremiah's life recorded in ch. 38. 4.—All the words.] i.e. as to the Restoration (v. 3); some of these revelations seem to have been vouchsafed as early as the reign of Josiah (comp. ch. 3. 12-22).—As regards the effect of such prophecies upon the Exiles and the restored Jews, the post-Captivity Psalms, the greater part of the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, and the writings of the post-Captivity prophets, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, show that the Deliverance from Babylon and the restoration of the Temple and city of Jerusalem had, in the minds of the faithful, become blended with a far more blessed Deliverance and Restoration, which indeed they but vaguely comprehended, for they could not foresee that it would be inaugurated and accomplished by Christ's advent into the world, by His life there, by His sending of the Holy Ghost, and by the foundation of the Church Universal (Wordsworth). Jeremiah's prediction of a Restoration after 70 years became gradually the hope and comfort of the faithful in Babylon, many of whom had been already influenced by his long ministry. They dwelt upon and gradually accepted the revelation that Jehovah had chosen them, even before the fall of Jerusalem, to be the nucleus of the future nation, and that the inheritance of the Promises was no longer bound up with places and things, but rather with true and believing hearts. Thus gradually the great change began which our Lord and His apostles developed; the seed of the Universal Church was already being scattered by means of Jeremiah. 3. Bring again.] R.V. turn again; but R.V. marg. return to; and so in v. 18.—Israel and Judah.] A summary of the prophecies following, in which both divisions of the Hebrew nation are contemplated; the promise of ch. 29. 10-14 to repentant Exiles being expressly extended to exiles of the N. kingdom, as the promise of Isa. 11. 11-16 and of ch. 23. 6 had indicated. 4. And these, &c.] i.e. what follows, to ch.

31, 40 at least, or to the end of ch. 33, if according to the almost unanimous opinion of critics, the four chapters form one Roll of prophecy. So regarded, they place on record, for the instruction and encouragement of the exiles during the Captivity, a summary of the revelations made through Jeremiah (1) as to the future of religion when the Temple and its services should be no more, and (2) as to the character of the Restoration and the future of the restored nation—combined with some of those germinant and ever-developing prophetic promises which, having partial though real accomplishments from age to age, formed, in fuller and fuller degree, from the very first, the hope of the future, awaiting in the Messiah their crowning fulfilment. 5-7.] These verses and vs. 23, 24, seem to introduce the prophecies which follow them by an intimation that a great political or military crisis will precede the deliverance of which they speak, the crisis being regarded in the former case historically, and, in the latter, rather from a religious and moral point of view (see note on vs. 23, 24). 5. For.] Rather, Surely (Var.).—Trembling.] The Exiles, notwithstanding the prophecies, would be very apprehensive of the consequences to them of the siege of Babylon (comp. ch. 51. 28, 29). They needed to recall such assurances as Isaiah's (44. 1-8 & 2. 12). Payne Smith interprets the phrase of 'the war cry of the advancing host of Cyrus' (comp. 'the alarm of war,' ch. 4. 19).—Of fear . . . peace.] Or, A.V. marg., 'There is fear, and not peace;' the words may be those of the panic-stricken.—Probably the contemporary state of feeling in Jerusalem (vs. 5-7; comp. Lam. 2. 19-22, thou hast called . . . my [predicted] terrors round about) serves to illustrate poetically the panic in Babylon before its capture by Cyrus, the preliminary to the Restoration. Cp. Isa. 21. 3, which foretells the panic in Babylon when the Persians and Medes enter it. 6.] Strong men are giving way to their anguish (ch. 6. 24) like a woman in her pangs (marg. refs.); but their's too is pain which precedes deliverance (v. 7). The Captivity, contrary to the judgment of the nations around and of the Hebrews themselves, was to be but the travail pangs of the restoration which was to follow (Pusey).

7. That day.] It is also the day of God's judgment on Babylon for its cruelty and pride.—None like it.] A superlative. See v. 5, note. Man's extremity is God's opportunity. The day of deliverance shall dawn amid 'great tribulation,' amid the shock of empires.—Jacob's. i.e. of Israel, in its widest sense. See v. 3, note.—Trouble. i.e. anxiety.—Saved.] Note the repetition of the word 'save' in rs. 10, 11. Comp. ch. 14. 8, 9. 8. That day. i.e. of the fall of the Chaldean empire, to which Jeremiah would direct the eyes of the faithful (ch. 29. 10).—His. i.e. Nebuchadnezzar's yoke, whether the pronoun refer to the king of Babylon or to Jacob; in the latter case, 'his' would be but one more instance of the sudden changes of person so common in Jeremiah, and of which vs. 8, 9 are a notable example.—Yoke.] See chs. 27 & 28.—Serve themselves.] See ch. 25. 14.—Him.] Jacob is meant. 9. They. i.e. Jacob. The Restoration shall bring about the political and religious reunion of all the Tribes under Judah. Cp. ch. 33. 7. Jeremiah seems to quote Hosea 3. 5 (cp. Isa. 55. 3, 4).—Serve the Lord their God.] After the Restoration, the Ten Tribes also shall worship Jehovah in pureness and simplicity at His one authorised sanctuary. See ch. 31. 6, 12.—David their king.] There is to be a second David for the tribes who had rejected the first (1 Kin. 12. 16), i.e. the royal heir of David predicted in ch. 23. 6. Compare ch. 33. 15-17 and Ezek. 37. 24, 25. Perhaps, primarily, a prince of Judah to be born in Babylon is contemplated, under whom the Return should take place, viz. Sheshbazzar or Zerubbabel, who was the ancestor of Jesus the Messiah (see Hag. 2. 21-23, & ch. 22. 24, note 'signet'); i.e. all returning exiles shall accept the supremacy of Judah and the leadership of the house of David. But ultimately the Scion of David foretold in ch. 23. 5-8 & 33. 14-17 is meant, who should realize the ideal of a King of all Israel, and rule everlastingly over all nations; 'Christ in respect of His kingdom is often called David,' e.g. Ezek. 34. 23, 24 & 37. 24. The Messianic fulfilment of these prophecies has been made manifest by the Gospel; it is probable that even Jeremiah himself either associated the promises of the great Deliverer with the promised Restoration or saw only as through a glass darkly the spiritual intention of the reign of the ideal King of whom he prophesied.—Raise up.] See ch. 23. 5 & v. 21, notes. Cp. Luke 1. 69 (hath raised up salvation . . . in the house of his servant David), 70, and marg. refs. 10, 11.] An apparent repetition of ch. 46. 27, 28, and by some (see Variorum) regarded as an interpolation in one of the two places. Yet this passage, being an appropriate conclusion to either context, might have been used twice by the prophet (who often repeats himself).

10. From afar.] See ch. 31. 3, note.—Rest . . . quiet.] The 'rest' of David's reign and the 'peace' of Solomon's shall return. 11.] This verse, which expands the promise of rs. 7, he shall be saved out of it, is explained in rs. 12-17.—Though I make, &c. i.e. for I will make . . . but I will not.—A full end, &c.] This contrast is frequently dwelt upon by Jeremiah; and Ezekiel, in his contemporary prophecies against 'the nations' (chs. 25-32), also reveals that of all the nations which pass under Nebuchadnezzar's 'yoke' the Hebrew nation alone shall have a national restoration; see ch. 23. 8, note. The punishment of Israel is remedial, and will be effectual.—In measure, and will not, &c.] Rather (Varr.), according to justice, for I cannot—(or, as R.V., with judgment, and will in no wise)—leave thee unpunished (R.V. marg. hold thee guiltless). 'In measure' is (in the Heb.) the 'with judgment' of ch. 10. 24, where also mere avenging punishment is distinguished from reformatory: the prophet praying that God's punishment may fall 'not in anger,' which would mean annihilation, but according to the demands of justice, and yet for the reformation of the criminal. unpunished would be the most terrible of all punishments.—God's judicial visitations will be tempered with mercy, and will be made ministerial to the clearer manifestation of the glory of the Lord God of Israel and to the final overthrow of His enemies and to the spiritual edification of all who turn to Him with faith and repentance.—Wordsworth. <sup>12-17</sup> Judah's present condition—her land overrun by 'strangers' and her capital left to its fate, to the sword, to famine, and to pestilence, without any prospect of relief from neighbour or ally—is next described under the figure of a warrior desperately wounded and bleeding to death for want of a friend (vs. 12-14). The prophet urges that her condition is the natural consequence of her own deeds, and that her abject state is the measure of her sins. The lesson must be learned by the whole nation (indeed, some apply the pronouns throughout to all Israel). Jehovah has not forsaken His people; but He ever suffers the way of the wicked to bring about its own punishment. And, in the fulness of time and upon the repentance of the faithful (see ch. 29. 12-14), He who is now permitting Israel and Judah to be trodden under foot by heathen nations will interpose to save and to restore His Chosen Nation, after the overthrow of its adversaries and the retributive punishment of its oppressors. He Himself will be to it the Good Physician, and will show that 'Zion,' now scorned as 'outcast,' whom none 'seeketh after' (or careth for, R.V. marg.), is not abandoned by her national God. Comp. Isa. 62. 12, thou shalt be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken. <sup>12</sup> Thy.] The pronouns, being feminine in the Hebrew, refer to the nation (Streane).—Bruise.] Or, hurt. Compare Lam. 2. 13.—Incurable.] The Hebrew word, thus rendered also in v. 15, is translated desperately wicked in ch. 17. 9. <sup>13</sup> Plead thy cause.] An additional metaphor: Judah being pictured as a criminal who can find no advocate to defend her.—That . . . medicines.] These two clauses should be read together. Graf renders, thou hast no medicines for (thy) sore (Hebrew for closing up, or pressing to, i.e. together, the sides of the wound) nor any plaster (Var.).

The Hebrew rendered in A.V. 'medicines' means, literally, that which goes up, i.e. on the wound, a plaster. <sup>14</sup> Lovers.] i.e. allies and vassals. 'The fault is in thyself, and the remedy is in thine own hands. Turn to Me by repentance, and thou shalt be healed.'—Wordsworth. Comp. ch. 24. 7, for they shall return unto me with their whole heart.—Sorrow.] Rather, hurt, or pain, i.e. of body (see preceding note). <sup>16</sup> Therefore.] Because the Chosen Nation is in the hand of its God, the Almighty Jehovah, who purposes to make its chastisement the means of its preservation—He it is who hath torn, and he it is who will heal; hath smitten, and will bind up (comp. Hos. 6. 1, 2 and Lam. 4. 22. The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion; he will no more carry thee away into captivity). And also, because Jehovah will manifest His justice, which Judah is now experiencing, by the overthrow of the wicked, Judah's adversaries and oppressors, and especially by the overthrow of Nebuchadnezzar's supremacy (ch. 25. 12-14, 29-31); 'in accepting the law of retribution, as seen in her own sufferings, she might find hope for the future. Her oppressors also would come under that law' (Plumptre).—All, &c.] Compare ch. 25. 14 (the prophecy of Nebuchadnezzar's 'first year'). For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them (i.e. the inhabitants of Judah) . . . and I will recompense them (i.e. the nations, &c.) according to their deeds. <sup>17</sup> Restore health.] Rather, apply a bandage (Variorum); the word rendered 'cure' in ch. 33. 6. But the promise is usually referred to the most noble One of v. 21. — Who is this.] The oracles appeal to the curiosity of posterity; compare Isa. 63. 1. — Engaged his heart . . . me?] Hitzig renders, pledgeth his courage to (so R.V. marg., hath been surety for his heart to) — R.V. hath had boldness to; Streane (with Payne Smith), hath staked his life to — approach unto me? If any one not of the Aaronic priesthood approached the Presence of God, the penalty was death (Num. 18. 7, comp. 8. 19). This then (compare the fate of king Uzziah, 2 Chr. 26. 16-21), would be no ordinary Davidic king. This 'prince' shall be no successor of the degenerate heirs of Josiah (reviewed in ch. 22), but one who would pledge himself, heart and soul, to the service of Jehovah. He shall, in consequence, enjoy, like a second Moses, a special privilege of access to Jehovah and of intimacy with Him. — Jeremiah's readers, no doubt, understood this oracle of the Messiah, even if vaguely; and it may have become associated in their minds with the mediation of Moses, when he was the means of saving the people from annihilation and of procuring a renewal of the Covenant forfeited by the worship of the Golden Calf at Horeb (Exod. 32. 11, 32 & 33. 9, 10, 17). But Christians can see that the words 'to approach unto me' contained the germ of the thought, that the true King would also be a priest, and would enter as a greater Moses (but as, under the covenant of Horeb, others could not enter, except the High Priest once a year, into the Holy Place) into the very Presence of Jehovah, to be an unceasing mediator between all mankind and God; — 'a priest such as Ps. 110. 4 had spoken of, "after the order of Melchisedek"' (Plumptre); 'a priest of humanity, and not of a chosen race only' (Westcott); one by whom, as holding untransmittible office (Heb. 7. 24;

4. 16), access is ever open. <sup>22</sup>] This verse is wanting in Sept. This sentence or formula summarises the Covenant-relation between Jehovah and the children of Israel. The former clause (I will be their God) is the promise attached unconditionally to the everlasting covenant with Abraham and all his seed (Gen. 17. 4-8); the latter clause (ye shall be my people) is the promise attached conditionally to the covenant with Israel only (at Sinai, Lev. 26. 3-12), Kay. In the advent of such a King this relation (Hos. 1. 10; ch. 24. 7) should be re-established. For the Christian application, see preceding note. <sup>23</sup> <sup>24</sup>] Some critics (Var.) regard these verses (& v. 22 also) as an interpolation; and rs. 23, 24 occur in a more original form in ch. 23. 19, 20, in another connexion; but see note on rs. 10, 11. Others (see note on rs. 5-7) regard rs. 23, 24 as a transition from the climax of rs. 21, 22, and an introduction to ch. 31,—for (1) the overthrow of the enemies of God and of His people, especially of Babylon (see ch. 25. 12-29, 32, and compare v. 16, note), was to be a means to the Restoration, and (2) the punishment of the Hebrews, with a view to their reformation and to the thorough sifting and purging of the remnant that should return (see v. 11 and Ezek. 20. 33-43), must precede the Restoration. 'The wicked' (v. 23) includes both the Gentile nations and the Hebrews; cp. ch. 25. 29. <sup>23</sup> The whirlwind. [Rather, a storm (Variorum).—Goeth forth with.] Or, is gone forth, even his fury. Lit. in the end of the days (Gen. 49. 1; see ch. 23. 20, note). Under the Messianic teaching of the prophets, the phrases in those days and in the latter days had become a formula for the time when all the nation's hopes should be fulfilled.—Consider. [Rather, understand; so R.V. J. xxxi.—1. At the same time. [Rather, At that time, i.e. in 'the latter days' of the preceding verse, God will renew His Covenant relation with the whole nation.—In this chapter, the promise of ch. 30. 3 is developed, (1) as to the Ten Tribes (rs. 2-22), (2) as to Judah (rs. 23-26), and (3) as to both kingdoms reunited (rs. 27-40); some part is a vision of the prophet (v. 26).—All.] Cyrus' proclamation was also without exception; see Ezra 1. 3, Who is there among you (all Cyrus' kingdom) of all his people? But the invitation to return to Canaan was a trial of faith; comparatively few accepted it, of these few, however, members of the Ten Tribes doubtless formed a considerable proportion. 'More than one-fourth of the Exiles who came back with Zernbabel did not belong to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and must have been members of the other tribes' (see Wright's Bampton Lectures, p. 279), viz. about 12,000 out of a gross total of 42,360. <sup>2-14</sup>] The political restoration of the Ten Tribes reunited to Judah (rs. 6, 12). <sup>2</sup>] According to the A.V. rendering (which R.V. adopts), the deliverance of Israel from Egypt and its settlement in Canaan is referred to as an assurance of the promised Restoration; i.e. As all Israel was led safely through the Wilderness of the Wanderings to its 'rest' (Heb. settlement; comp. Heb. 4. 8, 9) in Canaan, so shall a great company of assembled Exiles of the Ten Tribes be delivered from the lands of their captivity, and be safeguarded on their way back to their own land across the intervening wildernesses. But Hitzig and Graf render, The people left of the sword shall certainly find grace in the wilderness; I will go to cause him to rest, even Israel; i.e. a simple and direct promise of a Restoration to Canaan. See Var. and R.V. marg. 'Left of the sword' would mean, in the former case, escaped from Pharaoh's pursuing army or oppression; in the latter, survivors

But in ch. 51. 49, 50 the phrase is actually applied to the Jews delivered from captivity by Babylon's overthrow. 3. Of old. Or, as A.V. marg., from afar (the Hebrew adverb referring more commonly to distance than to time) as in ch. 30. 10; so R.V. marg.; comp. ch. 51. 50. The exiles speak of Jehovah (comp. Isa. 65. 24) as if He, dwelling in Zion, has heard their cry of repentance from the distant lands of their captivity, and has 'appeared' to them by the prophet, who is charged to assure them of God's unchangeable and inexhaustible love. Cp. chs. 3. 12-4. 2. Jeremiah seems in ch. 31, as in ch. 3, to be influenced by the prophecies of Hosea, in his revelation of God's love for the Ten Tribes and His yearning to have mercy upon them.—Me. Israel speaks.—With . . . thee. Or, I have continued lovingkindness unto thee, Variorum, Heb. as in Ps. 36. 10 & 109. 12 (so R.V. marg., but R.V. as A.V.). Compare Hos. 11, especially v. 4, I drew them (all Israel at the Exodus) with cords of a man, with bands of love; i.e. 'mightily indeed, but yet as a man, as a father draweth.' See also Hos. 2. 14-23 & 14. 4. O virgin of Israel. Israel is addressed as if pardoned, as a 'virgin' ('=as at the first'); the past being blotted out of remembrance (ch. 2. 23; Ezek. 16. 60), a new term of prosperity in her own land is promised to her.—Tabrets. Or, timbrels (A.V. marg.). According to Lev. 19. 23-25, the planter of a vineyard did not enter into the enjoyment of the fruit until the fifth year, the crop of the fourth year being holy to Jehovah, and the fruit of the first three years being accounted 'uncircumcised' and not eaten. The ecclesiastical schism which kept the two kingdoms apart shall be replaced by the old 'unity of worship, at once the ground and symbol of national unity.'—Watchmen. Probably those who watched for the new moon's appearance, which was signalled on from watchmen posted on heights about Jerusalem, to proclaim the commencement of the Feasts to be kept at the Holy City.—The mount. Rather, the mountains of (Par).—Let us go up to Zion. Comp. Ps. 122. 4, Whither the tribes go up . . . to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. With the exception of Hezekiah's invitation (2 Chr. 30. 1-11), no such summons had probably been heard in the N. Kingdom since Jeroboam founded it upon the basis of the rejection of 'the house of David' and of the authorised Sanctuary and priesthood. 7. Sing, &c. See v. 10. Man-kind, which is to be blessed through the nation of Abraham, is to rejoice and magnify the God of Israel and to triumph in the unparalleled event of its Restoration, for it is a pledge of and a necessary stage in the fulfilment of the promise of Gen. 12. 3 & 22. 18.—Jacob. Israel in its largest sense, i.e. the whole nation, which is to be reunited by the Restoration of a remnant of the Ten Tribes to Canaan; and so in v. 11.—Among. Rather, for, Par. (so R.V., but marg. at the head of). The Hebrew nation was called to be the first of nations (Deut. 26. 19), and Amos 6. 1 suggests that the chief, i.e. first, of the nations had been a title arrogated to itself by the kingdom of Jeroboam.—Publish . . . praise. i.e. praise aloud.—O Lord, save. Equivalent to Hosanna (Matt. 21. 9). The word is more of a thanksgiving than a prayer; Streane calls it 'the expression of a joyful wish or congratulation.'—The remnant of Israel. During two centuries of Exile, the Ten Tribes doubtless dwindled; the semi-idolatrous religion of Jeroboam had predisposed them to adopt the religions of the heathen amongst whom they dwelt, and so to become absorbed into other nationalities; indeed, the present exiles of Judah regarded this as the natural consequence of removal

Lit. hither; indication that these prophecies were written in Canaan. 9. With.] Weeping and praying as they go.—[Weeping.] Tears of joy, such as accompany repentance and a sense of God's great and undeserved goodness. Cp. Ezra 3, 12, 13. See on vs. 15-22.—[By the.] Or, unto (Variorum).—[Ephraim . . . firstborn.] i.e. the object of My special favour; see v. 20.—The allusion is to the birthright 'which was Joseph's' (1 Chr. 5, 1, 2), in respect of which Ephraim, prophetically preferred by Jacob to the elder Manasseh (Gen. 48, 9-20), as the chief of the Ten Tribes, represented the N. kingdom. The meaning is, that in the Restoration the Ten Tribes shall have the fullest recognition; may become, if they will, as though Jehovah had not cast them off (Zech. 10, 6). Upon their repentance, they shall again enter Canaan: the place of their rejection shall see their restoration to favour (Hos. 1, 10). The promise is of the widest scope, but it was fulfilled in the remnant only which accepted the conditions of the promise (see v. 1, note 'all'). 10-14.] The Restoration shall amaze the Gentiles, near and far, and they shall recognise the hand of Israel's God both in her dispersion and restoration (vs. 10, 11). Mankind should learn to know the True God through the history of the Hebrew nation, as that nation had failed to impart that knowledge by its example. A picture follows of the future progress of the restored tribes. 10. Isles.] Or, sea coasts (Variorum). The Hebrew word is here (as in the later chapters of Isaiah, e.g. 40, 15) parallel to 'nations,' and means distant countries, especially of the West (beyond the sea, ch. 25, 22). The two words sum up the Gentiles. Compare Deut. 32, 43. 11.] In the Hebrew the words rendered 'redeem' and 'ransom' mean respectively to liberate and to avenge (as the goel or next of kin). 12. Together.] If this word be omitted (so P. Smith, &c.) the worshippers are depicted as returning, streaming back, to abundant harvests at home. The A.V. refers the passage to the religious festival and the abundance of the thank offerings (v. 14); for a first fulfilment under Joshua the High Priest and Zerubbabel, see Ezra 3, 1-6.—[Goodness.] Rather, good things (Variorum), and so in v. 14, as explained by the words following. The bread and the water, wool and flax, oil and wine, are God's gifts (Hos. 2, 8).—[For . . . for . . . for the.] Rather, to the, in all four places (Variorum).—[Wheat.] Rather (P. Smith), corn; not wheat only.—[A watered garden.] Elsewhere, in Isa. 58, 11 only. The irrigated garden 'of herbs' (like the irrigated delta of Egypt, wateredst with thy foot, Deut. 11, 10; cp. Gen. 13, 10) is a type of unfailing vigour; see Isa. 44, 3, 4.—[Sorrow.] Rather, pine (Var.); languish (P. Smith). Streane refers to v. 25, and understands the listlessness and want of heart of an exile to be meant. Both.] Rather, and (Variorum), the words 'shall rejoice' being understood before 'together.' 14. shall almost exceed what they can consume. (p. 2 Chr. 31. 4-12. <sup>15-22</sup>.) The religious aspect of the restoration and its cause—Chastisement will bring about repentance. Ephraim will turn to his God, and Jehovah, who delighteth in mercy, will forgive and restore him. The repentant exiles are encouraged to undertake the journey homewards by a 'sign' (v. 22), a Messianic promise of God's tender care, which refers also to a new relation between God and man, the new Dispensation of v. 31. <sup>15-17</sup>.] A contrast is drawn, as in ch. 30. 5-7. Israel's sorrow shall be turned into joy; her desolate condition shall be reversed by a restoration to Canaan. <sup>15</sup> Was . . . refused . . . were.] Rather, is . . . refuseth . . . are (Variorum). R.V. places a comma after 'weeping,' a semicolon after 'children,' and adds she before 'refuseth.'—In Ramah.] Or, perhaps, on a mountain-height (so Vulg.), the article which always accompanies the proper name Ramah being absent; compare ch. 3. 21, A voice was heard upon the high places, weeping, and ch. 7. 29. For the custom of making public lamentation on some high place, compare Judg. 11. 37 (Jephthah's daughter) and Isa. 15. 2. Otherwise, Samuel's home in the highlands of Ephraim (1 Sam. 1. 1), not far from Rachel's sepulchre (1 Sam. 10. 2), the border-fortress of the N. kingdom, is meant, as in ch. 40. 1 (where see note); it is conjectured that this Ramah was associated in some special way with the Assyrian invasions.—Rachel.] Rather, Rachel. The ancestress of the house of Joseph<sup>h</sup> here represents the kingdom of the Ten tribes (see v. 9, note 'Ephraim'), and her inconsolable sorrow represents the desolate condition of that kingdom when depopulated by the Assyrians (and perhaps also its present condition; see ch. 33. 10, 12). But some regard Rachel as representing the S. kingdom also, because she was the mother of Benjamin.—Children.] Compare Jeremiah's address to the king and queen-mother of Judah in ch. 13. 18-21, 'where is thy beautiful flock?'—Were not.] i.e. are dead, nationally; or, simply, are slaughtered. The language of the whole passage being figurative is susceptible of other applications, as in Matt. 2. 18, to describe the grief caused by Herod's massacre. <sup>16</sup> Thy work . . . rewarded.] Apparently a quotation from the message of [J. xxxi. 15-19.]

the prophet Azariah to king Asa (2 Chr. 15. 2), urging Judah to repentance and reformation upon the ground that Jehovah is always found when sought, and that He has always proved to be a rewarder of them that seek after him (Heb. 11. 6). If so, the 'work' is probably the efforts towards amendment to which the exiles of the Ten Tribes are invited, that God may pardon and restore them with Judah. See v. 18, note.—Some understand by 'work' Rachel's apparently fruitless labour in bearing and bringing up her children, and explain that it is eventually to be recompensed by the restoration of descendants of hers to their own land. There would be an appropriateness in representing Rachel, the wife of Jacob who had most ardently longed for children (Gen. 30. 1), as publicly lamenting the overthrow of the children of Israel. <sup>17</sup> In thine end . . . that.] Rather, for thy time to come . . . and (Variorum). The notable phrase of ch. 29. 11 is here applied to the return of members of the Ten Tribes. <sup>18-20</sup>.] How the Restoration is to be brought about; compare the promise of Lev. 26. 41, 42, 44, 45, . . . if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity: then will I remember my covenant . . . and . . . the land, &c. Compare the invitation to the Ten Tribes in chs. 3. 12-4. 2, Solomon's prayer (1 Kin. 8. 47-49), and the prophecy of Hosea (3. 4, 5, viz. after the blank of exile, shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear (or, come with fear unto) the Lord . . . in the latter days). <sup>18</sup> I have surely heard.] Jehovah is represented as listening for a remorseful cry from the exiles.—Thou . . . shalt be turned.] Or, Thou didst correct me, and I received correction as a bullock . . . will return (Var.). Members of the Ten Tribes are represented as repenting; they 'acknowledge' (ch. 3. 13, 14: comp. ch. 2. 30) that they had resisted God's sympathetic leading (Hos. 11. 4), as an unbroken or a favoured calf resents the imposition of the yoke. As to the wantonness, wilfulness, and self-pleasing of Ephraim, see Hos. 10. 10, 11, where the consequent severity of God's discipline is foretold.—Turn thou me, &c.] i.e. towards Thyself; so Lam. 5. 21.  the return to God.'—Instructed, i.e. by punish-

 Hebrew is that of 'taught' (i.e. scourged) in Judg. 8. 16. To this reformation Jeremiah had been inspired to look forward early in his ministry (ch. 3. 21–25).—Smote, i.e. thigh.
 See Ezek. 21. 12, note, and Luke 18. 13.—*Reundisciplined state since the Exodus. The exiles of Judah begin to exhibit this germ of repentance two years after Jerusalem fell they admit that their sufferings are the consequence of their transgressions. <sup>20</sup> My dear son? Or, a dear son unto me? (Variorum). Jehovah is represented as moved by Ephraim's lamentation.—A pleasant child? Lit. a son of caresses? (Variorum), i.e. a favourite son, as Joseph to Jacob (Gen.

 37. 3). Nay (see r. 9), 'the house of Joseph' is more, is as 'the firstborn' also; compare Hos. 11. 3, 4.—The reborn reasserts the 'everlasting love' of Jehovah (r. 3). All the transgressions of the Ten Tribes could not exhaust that love. Even their banishment was the chastisement of love, a discipline of affliction, that they might repent and be saved.—

 'Divine compassion pleads with Divine justice.'—I . . . mercy. As Jeremiah had foretold in ch. 3. 19–22, God will treat repentant Israel as his child. He will lead Israel to trust Him as a father. When he calls them, Return, ye backsliding children, they will reply, Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art the Lord our God. <sup>21, 22</sup>. The Exiles are by which also routes are sometimes marked rience (compare Num. 16. 30 and the sign of Isa. 7. 13, 14), to encourage them to repent and turn to God.—*Thou backsliding daugh-

 (e.g. Hos. 4. 16 & 11. 7 & 14. 4) is adopted by Je-i.e. reluctant, describes an animal going backward when drawn forward (r. 18).—*Com-

 Hitzig renders the Hebrew of 'compass' *be-showing that it is really the rendering of the A.V., because 'compass' means 'woo and

P. Smith and Keil render lovingly cherish, i.e. the weaker the stronger; Ewald renders turn into, i.e. metaphorically. All these renderings imply an inversion of the natural order of things. The obscurity is perhaps due to a characteristic play upon words in the original (as if Jeremiah had chosen the Hebrew of 'compass' because of its striking similarity in sound to 'backsliding'); if so, the meaning should not be closely pressed. R.V.
encompass. Pumptre explains the passage thus: 'Israel, the erring but repentant wife shall woo her divine husband.' Payne Smith adopts Keil's explanation, viz. 'The weaker self to it that it can lovingly embrace Him. This is the Messianic substance and kernel of these words.' Plumptre adds that the view that the mystery of the Incarnation is contemplated here is excluded by the Hebrew word translated 'woman,' and that this view is unsupported even by a reference in the N.T.; it can only be regarded as the outgrowth of a devout but uncritical imagination. <sup>34</sup> Streane, arguing that the Hebrew verb (as found also in Deut. 32. 10; Ps. 32. 10) means primarily to surround, interprets the A.V. compass of cherishing and protecting, in the sense that 'such is the Lord's condescension towards Israel, that He will for her glory allow the natural order to be reversed, and deign to accept protection (of His Temple, services, honour, &c.) at her hands.' 23-25.] After the severe discipline of the Captivity, as foretold by Isaiah (1. 24-31), Judah shall be restored, purged and reformed, and Jerusalem shall once more be revered as the home of justice and of the true faith. marised the views and reflected the temper of those of his contemporaries who recognised the fact that the long-suspended punishment of the nation was now taking place. They knew by the utterances of the prophets (2 Kin. 23. 26, 27; cp. 21. 10-15) that it was for the sins of king Manasseh and his generation that all these calamities were coming to pass before their eyes, and they had persuaded themselves that they were suffering for the sins of their forefathers and not also for like sins of their own. Therefore they disputed the justice of God as though He was punishing the innocent for the sins of the guilty, and further argued that they could do nothing to modify their fate—they were the helpless victims of the law whereby God visits the sins of the fathers upon the children, even to the third and fourth generation (Ex. 20. 5).—A sour grape. Rather, sour grapes. Variorum (so R.V.).

<sup>30</sup> But.] Supply, they shall say.—Every one . . . iniquity.] So Ezekiel (18. 4), the soul that sinneth, it shall die. Ezekiel refutes the proverb by an emphatic declaration of the law of personal responsibility, illustrating its operation by a series of examples, to show that God judges every man according to his individual conduct and in particular (ibid. v. 14), that the son of a guilty father, if he turn away from his father's sins, shall not bear the iniquity of the father. And upon this principle he founds an earnest appeal to his fellow-exiles to repent, and turn from all their transgressions, so iniquity shall not be their ruin.—His.] Emphatic. <sup>31</sup> The second promise, personal, spiritual: an expansion of ch. 23. 7.—Pumptre thus states the sequence of thought: The proverb had set the prophet thinking on the laws of God's dealings with men. He felt that something more was needed to restrain men from evil than the risk of transmitting evil to their posterity, more even than the thought of direct personal responsibility and of a perfectly righteous retribution. And that something was to be found in the idea of a law not written on tablets of stone, not threatening and condemning from without and denouncing punishment on the transgressors and their descendants, but written on heart and spirit (2 Cor. 3. 3-6).—So Ezekiel associates the promise of the new heart and new spirit with his protest against the proverb of

v. 29.—Behold, &c.] The exceeding boldness of this new teaching, it has been well said, is too little observed because of the familiarity of the words. The Old Covenant is antiquated by the mere promise of the New. But, indeed, its supersession by the New (the subject of Heb. 8-10) is actually foretold.—The promise contains 'the germ of the future of the spiritual history of mankind.' Thus, and by the prophecy of the Branch (ch. 33. 15), was Jeremiah commissioned (ch. 1. 5) to unfold the wider scope of the Promises, and to foreshadow how in Abraham's seed all families of the earth should be blessed. 'The prophecy was fulfilled when those Jews who accepted Jesus of Nazareth as the Messiah, expanded the Jewish into the Christian Church' (Speak, Com.)—A new covenant.] This Covenant is a spiritual one. But it is both the continuation and the designed fulfilment of the Old Covenant, its transfigured glorified development. That covenant was a covenant of Works, under which no man could attain salvation; this New Covenant can alone perfectly fulfil God's gracious designs for mankind, although the way must necessarily have been prepared by the less perfect Covenant of old. <sup>32</sup> Not, . . . Egypt.] The Old Covenant, which by unfaithfulness the children of Israel had forfeited, is to be merged in a new and better covenant.—Which . . . brake.] Or, forasmuch as they brake my covenant (R.V. marg.). They should not break the New Covenant because their renewed nature would make the keeping of it a pleasure instead of a duty.—An husband.] Lit. a lord (cp. Hos. 2. 16), i.e. over them. The Covenant with the children of Israel at Sinai is from the first likened to a covenant of marriage (Jealous God, Exod. 20. 5); the figure is illustrated by Hosea (1-3) in an actual history which is also a parable, and it is developed by Ezekiel (16). Jehovah and the children of Israel had agreed to walk together, and at first Israel followed her God as a wife follows her husband, but she had broken the covenant by running after other gods; and yet God had long forbore to act upon the forfeiture. This faithfulness, long-suffering, and unfailing kindness should have commanded her allegiance. <sup>33</sup> His.] The new Covenant shall be one of pardon and of religious illumination.—Shall be.] The R.V. renders it, and the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; <sup>b</sup>and will be their God, and they shall be my people. <sup>34</sup> And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for <sup>c</sup>they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for <sup>d</sup>I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more. <sup>35</sup> Thus saith the LORD, <sup>e</sup>which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth <sup>f</sup>the sea when the waves thereof roar; <sup>g</sup>The LORD of hosts is his name: <sup>36</sup> <sup>h</sup>if those ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. <sup>37</sup> Thus saith the LORD; <sup>i</sup>If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the LORD.

adds 'after those days' to this clause.—Put.] Under this Covenant, God will confer internal righteousness after the forgiveness of the sinner. The moral change is to be the work and the gift of God, as a pure act of grace. But the spiritual renovation as well as the temporal restoration of the children of Israel is to take place only in a remnant, which—during the Captivity, after reflection, producing conviction of sin, personal and national, and remorse—shall repent, and entreat for pardon and enlightenment. See marg. refs.—Law.] i.e. teaching (Var.).—Hearts.] Ezekiel (36. 25–28) prophesying after Jerusalem's fall, expands this: Then ... from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you ... I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh, and I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk (that they may walk, Ezek. 11. 20) in my statutes ... and ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers. <sup>34</sup> Teach no more ... Know the Lord.]

Neither the Law nor the Prophets had succeeded in making the Hebrew nation, the sole depository of religious truth, 'know the Lord.' The time-honoured and stately ritual of the Temple, now about to cease, the teaching of priest, Levite, and prophet, had failed (comp. Isa. 6. 9, 10) to make the nation understand the nature and the ways of its God, even sufficiently for it to avert by repentance and amendment the long-foretold catastrophe (see Lam. 2. 14 & 4. 12, 13).—But the meaning is, not that the office of teaching shall cease, after the Restoration, or ever, but that the work of teaching and learning is to be God's work, the human intelligence being absorbed as it were into God's inspiration.—All know me.] 'To know Him, as indeed he is, required nothing less than a special revelation of His presence to each man's heart and spirit, and that revelation was now promised, for all willing to receive it, as the special gift of the near or distant future which opened to Jeremiah's view in his vision of a restored Israel.'

Plumptre. We can now see that the prophecy looked forward to the Messianic age, when, as Joel (2. 28, 29) and Isaiah (44. 3) had foretold, by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit (Isa. 11. 9), the earth should be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Jeremiah's words echo Isa. 54. 13, and find their fulfilment in those of Christ (John 6. 45). The restoration of the Jews to their native soil was a step towards, a preparation as well as a type of, the establishment of the kingdom of Christ.—For I will forgive.] The barrier of iniquity being removed by God's free pardon, a renewal of the covenant-relation and of communion between God and His nation shall be again possible, and shall take place. The 'kingdom of heaven,' was based on the forgiveness of sins, and was entered by repentance (Matt. 1. 21).

<sup>35–37.</sup>] The confirmation of the foregoing promises.—As in ch. 33. 19–22, 25, 26, God confirms His promises by an oath, and couples this 'prophetic preaching of the Gospel' with temporal promises. As God of the Universe, He avouches (1) the permanence of its ordinances, such as the succession of day and night, as a guarantee that the children of Israel shall never 'cease from being a nation' in His presence (for the Christian application, see Matt. 28. 20), and (2) its unsearchableness, as a guarantee that they shall never be wholly 'cast off' notwithstanding all their transgressions. See 2 Sam. 7. 16 & 23. 5. <sup>35.</sup> Divideth the sea when.] Or, stirreth up the sea so that (P. Smith). <sup>38–40.</sup>] The third Promise. The rebuilding of Jerusalem both literally and spiritually, and on an enlarged site; compare ch. 3. 16, 17, where Jeremiah foretells that Jerusalem, and not the Ark only, shall be 'the throne of the Lord.' Jeremiah's prophecy makes no mention of the Temple, nor, indeed, of the East side of the city at all. But the restoration of the Temple is depicted by Ezekiel (40-48), in his vision of the fourteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem, the like promise of an everlasting covenant of peace (Ezek. 37. 26) being specially associated with the establishment of an everlasting Sanctuary in the midst of God's people. The promise, or group of promises, here vouchsafed through Jeremiah refers to the city only; but a spiritual meaning is conveyed in the promise of its enlargement to include and consecrate places now outside the walls, and even some that are unclean by usage or that have been made so during the siege (Lam. 2. 21 & 4. 9). The new city will make even the unclean holy. <sup>38.</sup> The restoration of Jerusalem.—Built to the Lord. Jerusalem, now battered and partly in ruins (v. 40, plucked up . . . thrown down) through the operations of the siege (see ch. 33. 4, note), shall be rebuilt to the honour of Jehovah. The rebuilding of the walls actually took place under Nehemiah (3. 1 & 12. 43); but see Isa. 65. 17-25.—From. The North side is first described, which, being the most assailable, had probably suffered most.—The tower of Hananeel. Apparently at the N.E. angle of the city. See marginal refs. and Neh. 12. 39.—The gate of the corner. Apparently at the N.W. angle. See 2 Kin. 14. 13; 2 Chron. 26. 9; Zech. 14. 10; Neh. 3. 24, 32. <sup>39.</sup> The measuring line. Compare 'the measuring reed' of Ezek. 40. 3, and its use in the hands of the restorer, ibid. vs. 6-13, &c. The West side is apparently next described; but Gareb and Goath, if actual localities at all, are localities not mentioned elsewhere and unknown. Wordsworth regards the names as purely symbolical and as intended to direct attention to the spirit rather than to the letter of the oracle.—Over . . . upon. Rather, straight forward unto (Variorum).—Compass. i.e. make a circuit (see 2 Sam. 5. 23, &c.), to include the upper part of the Valley of Hinnom.—

Goath. Or, according to other readings, Gi-beah or Goah. <sup>40.</sup> The South side is next described, viz. the lower part of the Valley of Hinnom ('of the dead bodies'; see ch. 19. 11, note) as far as the Brook Kidron (to which the idolatrous abominations had been carried during Josiah's reformation, 2 Kin. 23. 4-6). The East side of the city, of which the Temple was the chief feature, and the upper ravine of the Kidron or the Valley of Jehoshaphat, which flanked this side of the city, are not mentioned.—Of . . . and of. Rather, even . . . and (Variorum); i.e. Even the dead bodies and ashes (see next note) shall be purified. The ravines into which the besieged would look from the walls were now probably dotted with unburied corpses, besides the usual refuse-heaps of the Temple and of the city.—Ashes. The Hebrew word 'denotes properly fat and ashes mixed, such as would be left from a sacrifice' (Streane); if the refuse of the Temple be meant, this would be a clean spot (see Lev. 6. 11), and, if so, the meaning would be that both clean and unclean spots should be included in the extended site of the new Jerusalem. Others understand the ashes from the idolatrous sanctuaries in the valley to be meant, which would pollute the sites (see ch. 19. 4-6 & 32. 35, marg. refs.).—Fields. Or, Sademoth, from Sept. of 2 Kin. 23. 4, which Graf renders quarries.—Brook. Rather, torrent-valley (Var.).—The horse gate. Near the king's palace; see marg. refs. and 2 Kin. 11. 16.—Holy unto the Lord. The words upon the mitre of the High Priest (Exod. 28. 36). So Ezekiel (48. 35), but having specially in view the restoration of the Temple and its spiritual meaning, says, 'the name of the city shall be, The Lord is there' (Heb. Jehovah Shammah).—For ever. The promise of the indestructibility of this future holy city, as part of the everlasting Covenant, shows that the prophecy refers ultimately to the Messianic age, i.e. to the Christian dispensation and to the Church of Christ.

present woe.'—Wordsworth. The capture of the city, as v. 24 shows, could not now be long delayed. The works ('mounts') of the besiegers were so far advanced, notwithstanding all the efforts of the garrison, that a direct assault was imminent. And the sword, famine, and pestilence had already so done their work within the walls that Jeremiah and others (v. 36) had little doubt that the assault would be successful.—Now, by purchasing Hanameel's field—as the Roman senator bought, also at its full value, the very site of Hannibal's camp (Livy 26. 11)—Jeremiah gives a public proof, in face of the impending catastrophe, of his conviction that the Restoration would indeed take place. 'This confidence in the faithfulness of God and in the eventual restoration of the undying theocracy is more remarkable in one the habit and predilection of whose soul seemed to be towards the gloomy and disastrous' (Milman).—Tenth. Apparently towards the very end of the 10th year; see vs. 24, 36, notes. The city was taken on the 9th day of the 4th month of Zedekiah's 11th year (ch. 52. 5, 12). <sup>2</sup> For then. i.e. Now at that time. Vs. 2-5 seem to be an historical introduction, or an annotation, added to the original document.—Prison. Rather (vs. 8, 12 also), guard, or watch (cf. ch. 37. 21, note). See ch. 30. 2. <sup>3</sup> Wherefore. For the similar attempt of Jeremiah's fellowtownsmen, even in Josiah's reign, to silence the prophet by death, and, their conspiracy being discovered, by threats, see ch. 11. 19, 21-23; they were now suffering at the hands of the Chaldeans their 'year of visitation.'—Prophecy. The repetition during the siege of Jeremiah's familiar prophecies (marg. refs.) is the cause assigned for his imprisonment; he undoubtedly thus discouraged the garrison (ch. 38. 4).—Observe that both of these new revelations (chs. 32 & 33) are attached to distinct assurances that Jerusalem will fall into the hands of the Chaldeans. <sup>4</sup> Zedekiah. It was the princes that had imprisoned Jeremiah (ch. 37. 15), but Zedekiah endorsed their action when instead of releasing the prophet he only lightened the severity of his imprisonment (ib. v. 21) by committing him to the guard-house of the palace; the king therefore is held responsible. <sup>5</sup> Visit. The A.V. is as enigmatical as the Hebrew. Zedekiah's fate would largely depend on his repentance. Compare Solomon's prayer, 1 Kin. 8. 47-50. <sup>6</sup> And Jeremiah said. The prophet evidently dictated what follows; doubtless to Baruch. <sup>7</sup> In Anathoth. Anathoth was a priests-city (Josh. 21. 18), and the family of Jeremiah was a priestly family of Anathoth (ch. 1. 1). Hanameel's 'field,' therefore, would seem to have been part of the 'suburbs,' or pasture-grounds (Variorum), assigned to each priestly city for 1,000 cubits, i.e. about  $\frac{1}{2}$  of a mile, outwards from the walls (Nun. 35. 4). But such lands were inalienable by law (Lev. 25. 34); yet this field seems to have been dealt with as ordinary property. We can only conjecture that the law had been relaxed by custom or modified, or that the field, by some special descent (e.g. compare Num. 27. 8) or otherwise, was exempt from the restriction.—Anathoth was, according to Josephus, 20 (Roman) furlongs, i.e. about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  miles, from Jerusalem.—Right of redemption. Under the law Lev. 25. 23-28, in which Jehovah asserted that the land allotted among the children of Israel remained His own, an estate could not be alienated in perpetuity from the family of the original allottee. A right of redemption attached to each allotment (compare Ruth 4. 4), so that if offered for sale it could be purchased (or repurchased, if bought by a stranger) by the next of kin, to keep it in the family; and to exercise this right was a sacred obliga-

<sup>8</sup> So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself.

Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD. <sup>9</sup> And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and <sup>h</sup> weighed him the money, even seventeen shekels of silver. <sup>10</sup> And I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

<sup>11</sup> So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open: <sup>12</sup> and I gave the evidence of the purchase unto <sup>i</sup> Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the <sup>k</sup> witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison. <sup>13</sup> And I charged Baruch before them, saying, <sup>14</sup> Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days. <sup>15</sup> For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards <sup>l</sup> shall be possessed again in this land.

tion. And by the law of the jubile (ib. rs. 8-17) each original allotment reverted to the heirs of the original owner at the next jubile. Jeremiah, therefore, could only purchase the field up to the next jubile, unless he, failing Hanameel and his heirs, were the legal representative of the original allottee. 8. Right of inheritance. Apparently Hanameel was childless, and Jeremiah the next heir.—[Kuen., &c.] Jeremiah regarded the fulfilment of the 'word' as a sign from God that it was His will that the purchase should be carried out. Yet Jeremiah was nearly 60 years of age, and according to his own prophecy the Captivity had still over 50 years to run, so that a year of jubile must occur, if not within Jeremiah's lifetime, at least before the promised Restoration. Therefore the field, now actually in the possession of the Chaldeans, could never benefit Jeremiah himself. Nor could it benefit wife or child of his, for he was forbidden to marry. Nevertheless he decided to fulfil his personal obligation, and he gave for the field money which, in the growing urgency of the siege (and in view of the imminent capture of the city and of the exile to follow), might have been very serviceable to himself. Yet he was sorely perplexed (r. 25). 9. That was. i.e. the field.—[The money.] The price named throws no light on the value of land; the size of the field, though probably very small (r. 7, note) is unknown. The sum is about 2*l.* 1*s.* Obviously the prophet paid the full value. 10. Charged Baruch. Baruch was evidently the prophet's minister as well as his secretary. See ch. 43. 3 & 45. 5, notes. 14. Which. i.e. this which.—[Earthen vessel.] Probably of glazed earthenware, which could be buried and, imperishable itself, would preserve the deeds indefinitely.—[Such] would probably be 'the "safe" of a Jewish household'; comp. 2 Cor. 4. 7 (Piumpire). 15. For. It was an earnest that, when the Captivity had run its appointed course, the land of Judah should be inhabited as before (r. 43), and in its entirety (r. 44).—[Possessed.] Rather, bought, as in rs. 7, 8. 9, 25. 43, [J. xxxii. 8-15.]

<sup>16</sup> Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

JEREMIAH XXXIII.

J. xxxiii.—While the Chaldean works and engines were overthrowing houses and even palaces, or were obliging the garrison to sacrifice them to supplement the fortifications, a second revelation is vouchsafed to Jeremiah, in which the promises of the Restoration are repeated and are expressly associated with the great Messianic promise of ch. 23, in terms adapted to the circumstances of the crisis. It would seem as if the imminence of the final catastrophe were a reason for another declaration by Jehovah of His merciful purposes to His People. It is revealed to Jeremiah that although God was against the present defenders of Jerusalem (ch. 21. 5, 6, 10; comp. Lam. 2. 4, 5), and would suffer the city to be destroyed by the Chaldeans, He (v. 6) will hereafter reverse the picture. He will restore the city and the nation; He will cause the exiles, of both kingdoms (v. 7), to return, with a free yarden, i.e. upon their repentance. He will fill the land, whose desolation is now on the eve of completion, with all the evidences of peace and plenty. And the nation, which now, together with all its national institutions for the maintenance of the One True Faith and of the worship of the Only God, seemed about to disappear for ever (v. 23), shall be restored, reunited; and in the land of Judah, under the rule of a blameless king of David's lineage and under the ministry of the Levitical priesthood, it shall attain its former prosperity and peace; for Jehovah's covenant with David and with the priesthood of the sons of Levi (Num. 25. 11–13) is as steadfast as His covenant of day and night (Gen. 8. 22). — 1. Prison. Rather, guard (ch. 32. 2, note). 2. The maker thereof... Rather, that doeth it... formeth it; i.e. whatsoever He wills. See ch. 31. 33, note 'put.' Jerusalem is here the Church, because it is her business mediately to work on earth that righteousness which Christ works absolutely (Payne Smith).—Wherewith.] Or, whereby, as A.V. in ch. 23. 6.—The Lord our righteousness.] Rather, The Lord is our righteousness (Var.), as in ch. 23. 6, 'the title implies that—here through the future Jerusalem, there through the Davidic King—in the Messianic times, Jehovah is to bestow righteousness with all its attendant blessings.' The characteristics of the New Covenant are the forgiveness of sins and the gift of righteousness (Thielwyl). 17, 18.] The 'everlasting covenant' with David (which included the perpetuity of his kingship over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, v. 26) and the promise to Phinehas, Aaron's grandson, and his seed (Num. 25. 13), were indefeasible, but they were to be fulfilled otherwise than the words seemed to imply and than was probably Jeremiah's expectation. Even a prophet could only receive the oracles of God in the language and ideas of his time (cp. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11), although, through his faith, he was probably much more far-sighted than his contemporaries.—<sup>1</sup> Read literally, the permanent restoration of the Davidic throne and of the Levitical priesthood is promised here, but Jeremiah had foretold the failure of both (ch. 22. 30 & 30. 21 & 3. 16 & 31. 33). Probably both are symbols designed to convey a meaning (neither writer nor reader need know the whole meaning) to the people at the time, and in some degree to the writer. They represented to the Hebrew all that was most dear to his heart in the state of things under which he lived; their restoration would be the restoration of his national and spiritual life. Neither was so restored as to exist permanently' (P. Smith).—Instead of an unbroken succession of sovereigns of David's line, a higher fulfilment took place in the continuous sovereignty of the Christ as the true Son of David; the Levitical priesthood was superseded by that of Christ and of His Church (Heb. 7. 11 & 10. 19-22), and the Levitical sacrifices were superseded by spiritual sacrifices, i.e. the personal dedication of the individual members of that Church, 1 Pet. 2. 5; Rom. 12. 1. 17. David . . . want.] Or (A.V. marg.), There shall not be cut off from David. The oracle was solved (Luke 2. 11) by the revelation to the shepherds in the fields near Bethlehem.—The throne of the house of Israel.] i.e. over all the heirs of the Promises (v. 26). 18. The priests, the Levites.] Vulg. petuity of the kingly and priestly offices is here confirmed by a promise similar to that of ch. 31. 35-37. David . . . the Levites.* In the same sense that the promise to the seed of Abraham is shown to be fulfilled in those who are spiritually the children of the faith of Abraham (Rom. 9. 7, 8). Abraham's seed were to be the medium of a world-wide blessing, and it is to this part of the cardinal Promises that prophecy is now directing the attention of the faithful. The apparent 'casting away' of the 'great nation' which had been made of Abraham according to the first part of those Promises is to become 'the riches of the world.' True religion and the worship of the True God had hitherto been national and local; they were to begin to become catholic and independent of place through the destruction of Jerusalem and of its Temple and through the dispersion of the nation of Jehovah. <sup>24</sup> This people. Not the Gentiles, but the relics of Judah under Zedekiah.—'This people' is contrasted with 'my people' disparagingly; it is no longer My people; it is estranged, rebellious, rejected. And when this people says that its destruction would complete the casting off of God's people, it treats with contempt the Promises, which are bound up with the existence of the children of Israel as a separate nation. Jeremiah is inspired to reply by associating the promise of the Restoration with the promises to the three Patriarchs and with their specific development, the Covenant with David.—Hath chosen. i.e. the nation of His choice.—Have despised. Or, do despise.—That . . . be. Rather, so that they are (Variorum). In their despair at seeing the capture of the city inevitable, they say that the whole Chosen Nation is doomed to extinction. Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying, <sup>2</sup> Thus saith the LORD, <sup>4</sup> He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the 'Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live. <sup>3</sup> Thus saith the LORD, <sup>6</sup> This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

<sup>4</sup> Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, <sup>7</sup> let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt.

<sup>5</sup> Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

second commission (ch. 37. 3).—Pashur.] The Pashur of Zedekiah's first commission (ch. 21. 1).—Had spoken.] Rather, as Sept. and Vulg., was speaking (Variorum), i.e. in 'the court of the prison' (see ch. 37. 21, note); or, was constantly speaking. We have apparently, in rs. 2, 3, a summary of Jeremiah's prophecies since his answer to Zedekiah's first commission (it nearly repeats the message of ch. 21. 8, 9); these he doubtless would have continued to utter as opportunity offered itself to him and as his sense of duty might dictate (comp. ch. 20. 9). And now, as the end of the siege was at hand, Jeremiah—apart from the special messages of chs. 32 and 33, which presumed the fall of the city into the hands of the Chaldeans—would surely have used the opportunity of his comparative freedom in the guard-house of the palace (see ch. 37. 21, note, 'remained') to influence the survivors of Judah for their real welfare and in the interest of the truth. He evidently hoped that a surrender would not only prevent further carnage and further suffering and mortality, but that it would even induce Nebuchadnezzar to spare the Holy City itself (v. 17). <sup>2</sup> Goeth forth.] i.e. to surrender himself, as others had already done (v. 19).—Prey.] See below, ch. 39. 18, note. <sup>3</sup> Which.] Rather, and he. <sup>4</sup> For thus.] Rather, since (Variorum); Sept. ἔτι; Vulg. de industria enim.—Weakeneth.] From a military point of view, the charge was reasonable; the quarters of the royal body-guard were to some extent a place of public resort, and utterances like Jeremiah's would dishearten the non-combatant people within the city as well as its defenders, even if Jeremiah had not been reputed a real prophet. But the fulfilments of Jeremiah's predictions which all had witnessed, and the too obvious probability that his predictions as to the issue of the siege would also be verified shortly must have induced, even in the supporters of 'the princes,' a growing conviction of Jeremiah's inspiration. And the prophet's influence would be more galling to the leaders of the party of resistance in proportion as their difficulties increased.—That remain.] An indication of the advanced state of the siege: the 'men of war' were now few in number; the word 'remain' may also suggest that the desertions had become numerous. <sup>5</sup> The king, &c.] Vulg. nec enim fas est regem vobis quidquam negare; Ger. denn der könig kann nichts wider euch. Zedekiah, like Pilate, knew his duty and evaded it with reluctance; and yet even Pilate did not abandon the accused to his enemies without a word of protest or of intercession. True, the king was in the hands of his generals, as the civil power must always be at such a crisis, more or less. But the force which Zedekiah detailed later to execute his order for Jeremiah's release (v. 10, and his stipulations after the secret interview with the prophet (v. 24) indicate moral cowardice: the king's powerlessness was really due to his own moral weakness. Even Jeremiah durst not trust the king afterwards (v. 15).—Zedekiah must have realized that he was practically condemning the prophet to death, if only because he must have known that the meagre ration of bread which he himself had assigned to Jeremiah so long as there was bread in the city (ch. 37. 21, note, 'piece') was only assured to him while he was under the king's personal protection; whereas, so long as the prophet remained with the body-guard, he could, by royal command, share with the soldiers the last contents of the magazines. <sup>6</sup> Dungeon.] Rather (as Sept. and Vulg.), cistern, or tank; lit. pit; so throughout; cf. ch. 37. 16, note; Zech. 9. 11; Gen. 37. 24. The word (bôr) indicates that the cistern was subterranean; it occurs in Isa. 24. 22, 'as prisoners are gathered in the pit.' The use of ropes to imprison and to release the prophet indicates its depth. It was not 'the dungeon' of ch. 37. 16. The prophet's with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

<sup>10</sup> Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die. <sup>11</sup> So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah. <sup>12</sup> And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said enemies left him to perish miserably in this exhausted or neglected cistern—as if fearing to execute him publicly (cp. Herod and John the Baptist, Matt. 14. 5) as a traitor or enemy of the public weal, 'because the multitude counted him as a prophet,' and as if hoping (cp. Gen. 37. 22) to avoid the guilt of murder if they laid 'no hand on him.'—Malchiah.] Cf. v. 1 and ch. 21. 1.—Of Hammelech.] So Vulg., but Sept. of the king (so A.V. marg. and R.V., but marg. as A.V.). Some scholars render a royal prince (see Variorum here and on ch. 36. 26), but 'the king's son' seems (see 1 Kin. 22. 26; 2 Chr. 28. 7) to have been a high official not necessarily of royal blood. Payne Smith thinks that the A.V. translation here is probably as correct as any of the above.—Prison.] Rather, guard (and so in vs. 13. 28); see ch. 37. 21, note; Vulg. in vestibulo carceris; Sept. ἐν τῇ ἀντὶ τῆς φυλακῆς. The dungeon was within the precincts of the guard-house; 'the nearest cistern' (P. Smith). The rocky site of Jerusalem is honeycombed with excavations for storehouses or cisterns; this recent discovery explains the fact that Jerusalem could sustain such long sieges, and that we never read of a failure in the water-supply. The 'dungeon' of ch. 38. 6 was evidently an old neglected cistern. On the Moabite Stone, Mesha king of Moab records that he ordered every householder in Kir to make 'a cistern in his house.'—Mire.] Some have fancied that Ps. 69, 'I sink in the deep mire,' &c., was written by Jeremiah at this time; but 'deep waters' are specially mentioned there, and the style is altogether David's. Compare Lam. 3. 53-57, which may refer to Jeremiah's sufferings in the cistern and record that he attributed his rescue to his prayers to God. <sup>7</sup> Ebed-melech.] i.e. 'king's slave'; Deane, or 'servant of the king,' i.e. of God (?), Cheyne (*Var. But some understand it of 'the princes, who would resent Ebed-melech's interference. <sup>18</sup> A prey.] Ebed-melech receives the same promise as Baruch (ch. 45. 5, note; comp. Ezek. 14. 14, 16, 20; see also ch. 21. 9, note), and probably shared his fate after the fall of Jerusalem. He was probably one of the 'eunuchs' (ch. 41. 16) committed to Zedekiah's charge by Nebuzar-adan, carried off by Ishmael, rescued by Johanan and removed by him, with other relics of the royal harem, into Egypt (ch. 43. 6, 7).

J. xxxviii.—14. The third entry.] Mentioned here only. The king's anxiety for secrecy suggests that this was not (as A.V. marg.) the principal entry, nor yet either of the approaches to the Temple from the palace mentioned in 2 Kin. 16. 8 (the innermost part of such an approach, Wordsworth), but some entrance to the Temple, whether from the lower city (Plumptre) or from the palace, comparatively withdrawn from observation. The precincts of the Temple comprised a variety of buildings, some attached to the Sanctuary itself (except to the front), including chambers suitable for conferences (1 Kin. 6. 6; 2 Kin. 23. 11; ch. 26. 10 & 36. 10). The former secret interview had been held in the palace. Zedekiah thought further precautions necessary now. <sup>15</sup> If . . . death.] Jeremiah knew that he could only repeat the utterances for which he had just been condemned to a lingering death.—Wilt thou, &c.] Rather, thou wilt not hearken; with Sept., Vulg., Var.; so R.V. The interrogation is not in the Hebrew. Zedekiah seems to assure Jeremiah's life by calling God to witness as the Author and Preserver of life—as if he would say, Let my life be forfeited if I either take thy life or imperil it by surrendering thee, as lately, to thy foes. But this twofold assurance is given, characteristically, under pledge of secrecy. 17. Go forth.] i.e. surrender; comp. Isa. 36. 16, 17. He says 'princes,' i.e. chief officials (ch. 39. 3), because Nebuchadnezzar himself was at Riblah (ch. 39. 5). — Thy soul.] Equivalent to thou; so in v. 20. 19. Mock.] If the Chaldeans handed the king over to the deserters, they might taunt him with the half-hearted conduct which had led him (needlessly, if he had contemplated surrender as an alternative) to involve the city and its people in all the risks of a siege and the consequences of failure, and yet, after all, to do only as they had done long before.—Zedekiah may have also feared personal outrage, death, mutilation, such as Saul feared (1 Sam. 31. 4). But Jeremiah points out that yet greater mortification and disgrace must inevitably befall him if he perseveres in resisting the Chaldeans and fails at last. 20. They . . . thee.] Jeremiah assures the king, speaking as God's prophet, that the Chaldeans will not hand him over to the deserters, and that, if only he will surrender, he shall escape the treat-

Upon the capture of the city, the royal harem, i.e. the surviving wives and concubines of Zedekiah's predecessors ('left . . . house,' v. 22) as well as his own ('wives and children,' v. 23), would be the spoil of the victor, and would suffer the indignities then customary or inseparable from their fallen condition. In fact, we find 'Zedekiah's daughters,' notwithstanding the merciful policy of Nebuchadnezzar after the condign punishment of their father and brothers (ch. 41. 10), the 'sport of fortune' (ch. 41. 10 & 43. 6). Jeremiah suggests to the king the yet bitterer reproaches and remorse that he would suffer when these victims of his weakness should turn upon him as the author of their woes and upbraid him for yielding to bad advisers, who could do nothing in the time of his trouble to repair the consequences of the fatal policy of resistance to Nebuchadnezzar which they had all along, but especially of late, pressed upon him. — Friends.] R.V. familiar friends (the men of thy peace), i.e. the acquaintances who used to salute thee with the customary 'Peace be with thee.'—Have set thee on.] R.V. marg. deceived thee. captured; for Nebuzaradan, by whose order Jeremiah was released from 'the court of the prison' (ch. 39. 11-14; cp. ch. 52. 12), did not reach Jerusalem until a month after the Chaldeans entered the city.

<sup>2</sup> K. xxv.—2. Besieged.] The commencement and end of the siege, which lasted a year and a half, less one day, were each commemorated by a fast (Zech. 8. 19). The words day and fourth, which are not found in the Hebrew text here, are supplied from the parallel text of Jeremiah. <sup>3</sup> Prevailed.] Rather, as in Jer. 52. 6, was sore (Variorum). Provisions (probably even for the soldiers, Jer. 37. 21) were at length exhausted; the city had held out to the last extremity. The sufferings of the besieged are outlined by Jeremiah in the Lamentations, which he doubtless wrote while the scenes were fresh in his memory. The women lost their maternal instinct, they let their children die of hunger and of thirst, and even ate them (Lam. 4. 3, 4 & 2. 20); the formerly wealthy and luxurious searched the refuse-heaps for food; the men's faces were livid with starvation, their skin was shrunk and withered 'like a stick.' Doubtless famine and diseases contingent to a long blockade had destroyed their third of the besieged and the sword its third also, as Ezekiel (5. 12) had foretold.

came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

The number of these Chaldean officials is uncertain, whether five, four, or three, because no meaning can as yet be assigned to Sarsechim to determine whether it is a proper name or an official title, and Samgar-nebo is interpreted either as the one or the other. Samgar-nebo, or Samgar—for the Hebrew consonants might be divided, as in Sept., to attach Nebo to Sarsechim—may mean cupbearer of Nebo, or cupbearer (i.e. the king's, Nehemiah's office, Neh. 1. 11); if so, three high officials would be named, each by his proper name and official title. But the Syrian and Chaldean Versions and the Latin Version or Vulgate support the Hebrew text; and, upon the whole, it seems better to regard Samgar-nebo as a proper name (so Cheyne, comparing Abed-nego = probably nebo). Thus we should have four great officials, including the Rab-saris, i.e. the chief eunuch or chamberlain, and the Rab-mag, i.e. the chief magician or learned man. We miss here the Rab-shakeh (see 2 Kin. 18. 17 and Isa. 20. 1, notes). The Rab-tabbachim, i.e. chief of the (royal) bodyguard, is mentioned with them a month later. At this time, Nergal-sharezer being Rab-mag, Daniel was Rab-khartummim, or master magician, and Rab-signin, or chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon.—Samgar-nebo.] Regarded as a proper name, Samgar-nebo is translated Be gracious, O Nebo (Cheyne, Var. T. B. s. v.); or (Samgar being connected with the Sanscrit Sāgara) Warrior of Nebo. Another name compounded with Nebo is 'Nebuzar-adan,' p. 679, note.—Sarsechim.] Those who attach Nebo (see note above) to this word (with Sept.) assume some corruption of the text, and identify Nebo-sarsechim with Nebu-shashban, the Rab-saris of v. 13.—Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag.] Chief of the Chaldeans, an order which (see Dan. 1. 4, note) comprised 'not only priests and philosophers, but also statesmen and generals. They commanded armies and held the chief offices of State.' The Rab-mag or 'Archimagus' was, next to the king, the first person in the realm; he accompanied the sovereign to wars, and advised military operations in accordance with sacerdotal presage'—as perhaps in the case depicted by Ezekiel (21. 21-23). 'During any vacancy in the succession he administered the government, and, as in the case of Nebuchadnezzar himself, handed it over to the lawful heir; sometimes he himself became king.' Nergal-sharezer Rab-mag was perhaps the most distinguished of all, being identified with the king Nergal-shar-uzur Rubu-ema of the Inscriptions, the Neriglissar of Berosus (Joseph. C. Ap. 1. 20), who married Nebuchadnezzar's daughter. He probably was regent during Nebuchadnezzar's seven years of madness. Having murdered Nebuchadnezzar's son and successor Evil-Merodach (ch. 52, 31), he seized the throne, reigned about four years, and, being killed in battle with Cyrus when disputing with him the crown of Media, left the Chaldean throne to his infant and short-lived son Laborsorachod, about 17 years before Cyrus captured Babylon.

2 K. xxv.—4. Broken up.] Rather, broken into (Var.), i.e. the city was taken by assault; or, a breach was made. 'Break up' means in the A.V. 'break open' or 'through.' See Var. Tea. B. Glossary, s. v.—The diminished and enfeebled garrison could no longer withstand the vigorous assaults and the multiplied engines of the Chaldeans (see Jer. 30-33, intro. note), and one midnight (Josephus) a breach was effected in the northern wall (Manasseh's, 2 Chr. 33. 14—as foreshadowed in Ezek. 9. 2), and through it (Jer.) the victorious Chaldeans poured into the outer and lower quarter of the city (see ch. 22, 14, note). Nebuchadnezzar's chief officials advancing to 'the middle gate'—a gate not mentioned elsewhere, but probably situate in an inner wall which, crossing the city from west to east, connected Mt. Zion with Mt. Moriah, i.e. the upper city or citadel with its fortified palace, &c., on the west with the fortifications of the Temple on the east,—established their headquarters in a central position in the heart of the city between its two great strongholds, thus dividing the city and its garrison into two isolated sections.—Fled.] This word, apparently omitted by the scribe, is supplied from the parallel text of Jeremiah. Cp. Ezekiel's (12. 3-16) prophetic description of the king's flight, and Jeremiah's description of his capture in Lam. 4. 19, 20 (quoted v. 5, note).—Night.] As foretold by Ezekiel (12. 12).—Two walls.] Rather, the two walls (Var.; as in Jer.). The Chaldeans being now close to the palace, Zedekiah's only chance of escaping the vengeance of his justly offended suzerain lay in instant flight; and it seems that as the Chaldeans entered Jerusalem from the north the king escaped at the opposite end of the city, where the Tyropæon valley, descending S.E. between Mts. Zion and Moriah, led to a gateway. By this exit, Zedekiah could apparently leave the city unobserved and gain directly 'the way of the wilderness,' by which he might hope to escape across Jordan (his only refuge, as the rest of Palestine was in the hands of the Chaldeans) by the fords of Jericho. Whether 'the two walls' were those of Zion on the W. and of Ophel on the E., or a cross-fortification connecting these two, is not clear; in the former case, the gateway was itself the fortification, in the latter, it was a passage through a double wall, of which Hezekiah had repaired and strengthened the inner when he added the outer wall as part of his preparations for a siege by the Assyrians (2 Chr. 32. 5; cp. Isa. 22. 11; ch. 20, 20). This gate is probably 'the gate of the fountain' (Neh. 3. 15); see next note.—The king's garden.] On which side of the gateway the royal garden lay is doubtful. According to Josephus and St. Jerome (see Jer. 19. 5, notes), it would be outside the fortifications, and above the junction of the valleys of Hinnom and Jehoshaphat whence the brook Kedron flows to the Dead Sea. If so, the gateway would open upon planted ground affording concealment. It was near the pool of Siloah (Neh. 3. 15), which is connected with 'the two walls' in the account of Hezekiah's new reservoir which was made between them, i.e. to divert within the fortifications the waters of 'the old pool,' i.e. Siloah (Isa. 22. 11). Siloah, the N.T. Siloam, lay at the foot of the Temple hill at the mouth of the Tyropæon and outside the walls of the city, though possibly enclosed in a fortification of its own. The pool survives and preserves its name. This garden was probably the garden of Uzza, in which kings Manasseh and Amon had their tombs (ch. 21. 18-26).—The way toward the plain.] Or, the way of the Arabah. (See next note.) Compare David's flight by the same 'way of the wilderness' (2 Sam. 15. 23). Both kings sought to put the Jordan between them and their pursuers; but Zedekiah had no Hushai in Jerusalem to delay the pursuit until he could cross the fords (cp. Judg. 3. 28). Zedekiah had only the darkness and knowledge of the wilderness in his favour. He was accompanied by 'all the men of war,' i.e. at least by his bodyguard. If the king purposed taking refuge at the court of the king of Ammon (see Ezek. 21. 20, note; comp. 2 Sam. 10. 5) his route would lie through Jericho.—The plain.] Heb. Arabah, the distinctive name of the depression of the Jordan and of the Dead Sea. So in v. 5, 'the plains of Jericho' is in Hebrew the Arābah of Jericho, or 'the parts of the Arābah about Jericho' (Variorum). The root is the verb to be dry. The word is very variously rendered in the A.V.: (1) as a proper name; (2) by 'the plain,' or 'the desert,' or 'the wilderness,' or the 'champaign;' and similarly in the Sept. Ἀραβα: ἡ Ἀραβα: ἐπὶ δυσμαῖς: πρὸς δυσμῶν: καθ' ἐσπέραν: τῷ πέραν Ἱεριχώ: ἔρημος: γῆ ἀνυδρὸς, ἄπειρος, ἄβατος; and in modern use as in Deut. 1. 1 & 2. 8. It comprises also the continuation of the depression beyond the system of the Jordan, i.e., speaking roughly, from the Dead Sea to the Gulf of Akabah. (See Variorum Teacher's Bible, for a general description of the region.) 5. Pursued.] Josephus (Ant. 8. 10. 2) records the vigour with which they pursued the king and his armed followers, and Jeremiah illustrates it. Cp. Lam. 4. 19, 20, 'Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles of the heaven: they pursued us upon the mountains, they laid wait for us in the wilderness; the breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, was taken in their pits; of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen.' From Ezek. 12. 13, 'My net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare,' it is inferred that a body of the Chaldeans reached Jericho or the fords of Jordan in advance of the king, so that he was entrapped between his pursuers and those who awaited his coming. 6. Took.] i.e. took him prisoner, captured him; the Hebrew of 'Take them alive' (ch. 10. 14).—Riblah.] Situated on the upper waters of the river Orontes where the range of Anti-Lebanon subsides into rolling downs extending from the plain. <sup>5</sup> But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and <sup>6</sup> overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho:

[J. lii.] <sup>9</sup> <sup>d</sup> Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

<sup>11</sup> Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in chains, and put him in prison till the day of his death.

the Orontes to the Euphrates, and so affords an easy thoroughfare for caravans between the sea coast of Phœnicia, the Mid-Lebanon Valley (the natural route to Palestine and Egypt), and the Valley of the Euphrates. Its commanding position and abundance of forage and water made Riblah the regular headquarters of Egyptian or of Babylonian armies during the whole of this period (e.g. ch. 23. 33).—They gave judgment.] He (Jer., i.e. the king, Zedekiah was probably tried by a court-martial or by a commission for his gross perjury (2 Chr. 36. 13; Ezek. 17. 15-20) and rebellion; Nebuchadnezzar either passing sentence or confirming the sentence of the court. 'Gave judgment,' rather, held session (involving a change of vowel points, Variorum); or as A.V. marg. spake judgment with him; i.e. spake with him of judgment: a scene possibly described prophetically in Jer. 1. 16 ('throne' = of judgment). 7. Put out the eyes.] Leaving on Zedekiah's memory, as his last sight upon earth, the execution of his own sons—and rendering him for ever incapable of giving any more trouble.—Thus the two apparently contradictory prophecies were both fulfilled: Zedekiah was 'carried to Babylon' (Jer. 32. 5 & 34. 3), yet did not 'see Babylon' (Ezek. 12. 13).—Fetters of brass.] Two pair, one for the hands, one for the feet, as in most monumental representations. 11. With the double brass (so Jer.; marg. 'fettters'; cf. 2 Chr. 33. 11).

J. lii.—10. Princes of Judah.] 'Nobles' in the parallel chapter (39. 6; a different Hebrew word, used in ch. 27. 20). 11. Prison.] Sept. reads, but improbably, εἰς οἰκίαν μύλωνος, recalling Judg. 16. 21, Samson 'did grind (i.e. work the mill) in the prison house.'

2 K. xxv.—8. Fifth month.] i.e. Ab (= July–August); a few days less than a month after the Chaldeans broke into the city (v. 3); cf. Zech. 7. 3. And some think that the Temple and citadel ('city,' v. 19, and Jer. v. 25; 'midst of the city,' cp. Jer. 41. 7) had obstinately held out till now, and so explain Nebuzaradan's coming and the severity of his measures. But the more probable view is that Nebuzaradan was sent from Riblah, then the headquarters of the Chaldean king, after the report of his great officials as to the capture, &c., of Jerusalem had been received, to carry out the instructions of Nebuchadnezzar, viz. (1) to arrange for the evacuation and destruction of Jerusalem; (2) to select from among the prisoners the ringleaders in the late rebellion for punishment by himself, and such other Hebrews as it was prudent or desirable to remove to Babylon; and (3) to arrange for the future government of the country, and an impotent remnant of the agricultural population to be left in it under a native viceroy. See v. 22, note.—Seventh.] So also Baruch 1. 2. But tenth in Jer. 52. 12, and so Josephus, B. J. vi. 4. 5, and, if so, the very day on which the Romans burned the later Temple: 'a day tragical as the 10th of August in European history.' The discrepancy being in the text cannot be cleared up. 'The Jews' commemorative fast has always been kept on the ninth day, a date given in the Syriac version of Kings.—'Perhaps this is another instance of the miscopying of similar letters used for numerals; e.g. Jer. r. 28, note 'seventh.'—Nineteenth.] i.e. Zedekiah's 11th (Jer. 32. 1).—Nebuzar-adan.] i.e. Nebo gare a seed.—The captain of the guard.] i.e. of the royal bodyguard; lit. chief of the slaughtermen or executioners (Heb. rabtabbâchim; see Jer. 39. 3, note). The execution of Adonijah and Joab 'by the hand' of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the captain of the Cherethites and Pelethites (1 Kin. 2. 25, 34, 46; cp. 2 Sam. 8. 18), shows that to execute the capital sentences of a king was originally one of the duties of a royal bodyguard, as now of the Ottoman captain-pasha. Nebuzar-adan's was evidently a confidential office of the highest order. The Hebrew word is frequent in Genesis (see A.V. marg. Gen. 37. 36), and recurs only in these chapters of Jeremiah and in connection with the Chaldeans; thus it is applied in the Bible to the royal body-guards of Egypt and of (Dan. 2. 14) Babylon only. The râtsin of 1 Sam. 22. 17; 2 Kin. 11. 25; &c. were a different body.—A servant.] The expression in Jer. v. 12 is literally (as marg.) stood before, implying personal service (Prov. 22. 29; 1 Kin. 10. 8; ch. 5. 25). See Jer. 35. 19, note.—Unto.] Jer. into; but in Jer. the Hebrew might mean (as Vulg. and Syr.) in Jerusalem, and 'which served' might mean representative of (1 Kin. 18. 15; ch. 3. 14). Wordsworth adopts the A.V. rendering, and explains that Nebuzar-adan reached Jerusalem ('unto') on the 7th and entered the city ('into') on the 10th day, 9. Burnt.] In fulfilment of the prophecies of Ezekiel (10. 2) and of Jeremiah (7. 14, 15 & 21. 10 & 34. 2, 22 & 38. 18, esp. v. 23), which had seemed so incredible.—The king's house. The palace, in the guardhouse of which Jeremiah was confined when the city was taken. On the evacuation of the city, the prisoners would be removed, prior to the burning of the chief buildings.—And every.] Meaning, that is to say every (omit man's), and qualifying the preceding 'all'; only the larger houses were burnt; comp. 10. With.] This word is found in the text of Jer. v. 14. <sup>11</sup> Rest.] Rather, residue, as A.V. in Jer. v. 15.—Fugitives . . . away.] R.V. adopts here the A.V. rendering of the parallel passage, the Hebrew being the same, but in Jer. 39. 9 renders deserters. The deserters saved but their own lives, as Jeremiah had foretold; they did not escape captivity.—Remnant, &c.] Rather, residue, i.e. of the inhabitants of the country, as distinguished from the survivors of the inhabitants of Jerusalem and of the refugees captured therein.—As to the additional words in Jer. (v. 15), viz. certain of the poor of the people, see note there. Three classes are otherwise mentioned in both narratives: (1) the captured, (2) the deserters, (3) the inhabitants of the country still remaining landowners and cultivators (less the few poorest of v. 12, &c.). <sup>12</sup> The poor.] Rather, poorest; as in Samaria's case, according to Amos (3. 12); 'the poor of the people, which had nothing' (Jer. 39. 10).—Husbandmen.] Rather (more exactly), ploughmen (or even spade-men). Husbandman, the man that is master (Runic, bondar) of the house, is a larger personage, a goodman, a farmer (the Heb. gabim occurs here only, and the kindred gô'ibim in Jer. v. 16 only). We learn from Jer. 39. 10 that 'vineyards and fields' were 'given' them. Canaan was no longer 'their own land'; they were as colonists settled by the conqueror to hold the country for him; a remnant too poor and too feeble to give trouble, but capable of continuing the cultivation of the land so that it should yield some revenue to him.

In 2 Mace. 2. 5 (a book probably written to meet a demand for the marvellous, Plumptre) we read: 'Jeremy found a hollow cave, wherein he laid the tabernacle, and the ark, and the altar of incense.' Cp. 2 Esdras 10. 21, 'Thou seest that our sanctuary is laid waste, our altar broken down, our temple destroyed, our psalmry is laid on the ground . . . the light of our candlestick is put out, the ark of our covenant is spoiled.' &c.

J. lii.—<sup>15</sup>. Certain of the poor.] Rather, of the poorest sort. Some think that this phrase has crept into the text from v. 16. But Wordsworth points out that it is reasonable that some even of 'the poorest' should be removed, though some were left.—Remained.] The A.V. in Kin., were left, should be adopted here.—Rest.] Rather, residue, as above, or remnant, as Kin. v. 11.—Multitude.] So all the Versions and the parallel passages. The Heb. 'amôn may have this meaning, if akin to hâmâh (= to hum); or (R.V. marg. artificers) it may (Cant. 7. 1) mean workman, if akin to 'âmen (= to prop), which is probably its meaning in Prov. 8. 30 (so Sept., Vulg.); sometimes (Ch. 46. 25) it should be rendered Amon (the god of Thebes). <sup>16</sup>. Certain . . . poor . . . for.] Rather, of the poorest . . . to be. <sup>17</sup>. Also . . . brake.] Rather, And did break in pieces (as in Kin.).

hollow inside 5 ft. 1 in., for the metal was about 4 in. thick.—[Brass.] Rather, bronze (cf. 2 Sam. 8, 10). Little else had escaped former spoliations, and this was of the famous Phœnician make. But Var. renders copper throughout.—[Bases.] Rather, pedestals. (Omit the comma after 'bases,' reading were for 'was' (and in Jer.); both 'bases' and 'sea' were within the inner court of the Temple. As to under the bases in Jer. v. 20, see note there; the bases were under the lavers, the bulls under the sea. The bases for the ten lavers were on wheels and were highly ornamented. The lavers were designed for washing the material of the burnt offering (2 Chr. 4. 6); apparently they were constructed to suit the altar of burnt offering, which was elevated so that the offerer at least was visible to the assembled congregation. <sup>15</sup> Firepans.] The word might mean a pan of coals, on which incense was burnt; but its use in Ex. 25. 38 indicates rather snuff-dishes (p. 225) connected with the lamp. As to all these vessels, see notes on 1 Kin. 7. A few golden utensils seem to have survived previous spoliations; those of silver, Zedekiah had made (Baruch 1. 8). Thus the residue of the sacred vessels, the fate of which the false prophets had so furiously contested with Jeremiah (28. 3, 6), was removed as Jeremiah (27. 18-22) had foretold.—[Bowls.] Rather, basons, 'such . . . silver.' The A.V. rendering from Jer. should be adopted here. <sup>16</sup> One sea.] Rather (as marg.), the one sea. It was unique, a marvellous casting, its ornaments being cast with it: for description of dimensions and symbolism, see 1 Kin. 7. 23, note, p. 221. It stood originally (p. 222), until removed by Abaz (p. 464), on 12 oxen, and was called 'a sea' because of its capacity (Jos. Ant. 8. 3. 5). It was designed for the priests to wash in (2 Chr. 4. 6).—[The . . . weight.] Apparently a reference to the record of 1 Kin. 7. 47, as if the compiler contrasted in thought the lavish zeal and generosity to which these masterpieces of art owed their existence with their fate, i.e. to be broken up and carried away by the conqueror for the mere value of the metal. <sup>17</sup>] The compiler (especially in Jer.) dwells upon the details of the massiveness and beauty of the bronze work as if in loving regret, or perhaps to record that these were the very masterpieces that Hiram had made for King Solomon. The particulars given here (and in Jer.) agree with the record in 1 Kin., except as to the height of the capital, which is three cubits here and five elsewhere (probably three is one of the frequent copyist's errors in letter-numbers, as below).—[The one pillar.] The pillars were evidently a pair (1 Kin. 7. 15, A.V. 'eighteen cubits apiece').—[The chapter, &c.] Rather, a chapter (Lat. capitalis = belonging to the head, p. 220) of brass was upon it; i.e. it was of bronze also, and the pillars were intact.

This Zephaniah [2 K. xxv. 18, 19; J. lii. 21–25.]

was a member of both commissions sent by Zedekiah to enquire of Jeremiah (Jer. 21. 1 & 37. 3). The 'second priest' was the High Priest's deputy (Heb. pakid), and seems to have had the functions of Passur in Jer. 20. 1, i.e. chief officer and inspector of the police of the Temple.—The three keepers of the door.] Lit. of the threshold (A.V. marg.), i.e. the gate of the Temple. There were 24 gate-keepers, including four chief gate-keepers, one for each gate, who had charge also of the 'chambers and treasuries' containing the sacred vessels, instruments, and stores (1 Chr. 9. 17, 19, 26–29). These three ecclesiastics were probably selected because they ranked next after the 'second priest,' and with him and the High Priest were executed as the representatives of the religious orders, whose influence in promoting and in sustaining the rebellion marked them out for exemplary punishment. They would probably defend the Temple to the very last, and do not seem to have escaped with the king and 'all the men of war.' See Jer. 35. 4, the chamber of Maaseiah (apparently Zephaniah's father, Jer. 29. 25) the keeper of the door. Perhaps Zephaniah was himself the chief 'keeper of the door,' and therefore only the three others are specified here. 19.] The selection from the other prisoners follows; the chief military commanders ('all the men of war,' Jer. 52. 7; cp. Jer. 40. 7) had apparently escaped with Zedekiah.—Out of the city.] Apparently, the five ecclesiastical chiefs had been captured in the Temple, which was practically a fortress defended by armed Levites (cp. 2 Chr. 23. 7).—Officer.] Jer. an eunuch, and so A.V. marg. here; but Vulgarium a courtier. <sup>29</sup> In the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two persons :

<sup>30</sup> In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadnezzar Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons :

All the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

278.—Nebuchadnezzar's Care of Jeremiah.

Nebuchadnezzar's instructions to Nebuzar-adan.

JEREMIAH XXXIX. 11-14.

<sup>11</sup> Now Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, <sup>12</sup> Take him, and look well to him, and do him no harm ; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

that number.—Seventh. Rather, seventeen. Yod, the smallest Hebrew letter (jot), which stands for 10, might easily be omitted by the scribe. With this correction, the two first deportations mentioned here would belong to Nebuchadnezzar's final war against Zedekiah; the former being probably a deportation, during the siege, of the people of the country. <sup>29</sup> Persons. Lit. souls; cf. Gen. 14. 21, and p. 64. note. <sup>30</sup> Three and twentieth year. This deportation, five years after the fall of Jerusalem, is mentioned here only. It may be inferred from this passage, and from ch. 25. 9, 20, 21 & 27. 3, 8 & 46. 14-19. 33, that Nebuchadnezzar, after the fall of Jerusalem, made an expedition against Ammon, Moab, Edom, and the other neighbours of Judah, and, having conquered them, invaded and conquered Egypt (see Ezek. 30. intro. note.)—Jews. Probably from Moab, Ammon, Edom, and Egypt.—All. The smallness of the numbers shows that these deportations belong to the very end of the history.—The Babylonian captivities of Judah, which began in Jehoiakim's 4th year, are thus completed after 23 years. The fate of Israel, as foretold by Jeremiah (3. 8-11; comp. 2 Kin. 23. 27), had overtaken Judah also. The kingdom, promised to David, reduced to one-sixth by Solomon's sins (1 Kin. 11. 32-36), was now at an end.

J. xxxix.—<sup>11</sup> Gave charge. Jeremiah's policy was probably well known to Nebuchadnezzar; and, if so, the conqueror would recognise in him the leader of his supporters in Judah. He may also have had a superstitious reverence for a prophet of such notoriety. See ch. 40. 2, note 'said.'—To. Heb.

by the hand of (marg.). <sup>12</sup> Look, &c. Heb. set thine eyes upon him (marg.). So in ch. 40. 4; i.e. have an eye to him, do not lose sight of him. <sup>13</sup> So. Observe, the siege and capture of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans were the cause of the liberation of Jeremiah (Wordsworth). His countrymen imprisoned the prophet and threatened his life; strangers like Ebed-melech and alien and pagan conquerors like Nebuchadnezzar give him liberty and life. The rejected of the Jews is the honoured of the Gentiles.—All . . . princes. See notes on v. 3.—Princes. Rather, chief officers, or officials; see v. 3. note. <sup>14</sup> Eren. Or, and, or omit.—Prison. Rather, guard or watch, as elsewhere.—Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan. Gedaliah was the representative of a noble family which for at least three generations had been true to the prophets of Jehovah (e.g. Shaphan, Josiah's Secretary of State, 2 Kin. 22. 14; 2 Chr. 34. 8, 20) and especially to Jeremiah himself (Ahikam, marg. ref.). Gedaliah's selection to be the Chaldean viceroy implies that this distinguished family had throughout shared Jeremiah's political policy, i.e. of submission to Nebuchadnezzar; some even attribute his appointment to Jeremiah's influence.—Home. Evidently Jeremiah's release from the royal guardhouse and restoration to liberty ('among the people') is described. But whether the prophet was taken to Gedaliah's private or official residence, or was suffered to return to his own home, cannot be determined. Some render to his home (compare John 19. 27); others, to the house, i.e. the palace (the house par excellence).

'Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion? . . . Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake.'—Jer. xiv. 19, 21.

'It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed . . . Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord.'—Lam. iii. 22, 40.

The Book of Lamentations is not only a Dirge, an outpouring of the overwrought feelings of a religious patriot when contemplating the ruin of his country with all its inheritance of privilege and of hope, it is also a commentary upon the past history of the nation (ch. 2, 17 with ch. 4, 11, 13) and, in particular, upon the circumstances of its fall just related. Incidentally, by allusions and descriptive details, it supplements the brief record of the histories; but probably the immediate purpose of the writer was a moral one, namely, to awaken and cherish a spirit of true religion in the relics of his nation during the Captivity, and so to promote the reformation which must precede the restoration of the Hebrews to God's favour and their Return to their own land. The Book, says Bishop Chr. Wordsworth, is 'a national expression of woe, a national confession of sin, and a national prayer for pardon and grace;' such, as a matter of fact, it became to the Hebrews later, e.g. Zechariah (1, 6) quotes Lam. 1, 13 & 2, 17.—The Book is anonymous in the Hebrew, but trustworthy tradition, especially the preface in the Septuagint Version, and its own style and contents justify its ascription to Jeremiah. It belongs unmistakably to the last days of the Kingdom or the commencement of the Exile. And though Ewald thinks it may not have been written until after the Flight into Egypt of Jer. 43, Payne Smith holds that it was certainly written immediately after the capture of Jerusalem, i.e. in the month which intervened between the capture of Jerusalem and its destruction, while Jeremiah was living in Jerusalem under the protection of Gedaliah (Jer. 39, 14). It is with the vivid recollection of an eye-witness that the prophet recapitulates the sufferings of the besieged during the last stages of the siege.

and the sufferings of the captives after the city's fall. But he contemplates all these memories as the punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of my people (ch. 4, 6), and the harrowing catalogue is apparently intended to bring home to the Exiles the greatness of their guilt by means of the greatness of their punishment, which, as God is just and merciful, must be the measure of their guilt and far less than its equivalent. The prophet mourns over the calamities of Judah and Jerusalem as the consequence of their sins, and prays that Jehovah will cause the relics of his nation to repent. His own faith and hope is all but overwhelmed (characteristically, see Jer. 4, 10 & 12, 1-4 & 15, 15-18) under the flood of anguish and despondency, but, as the last four verses of the book intimate, he has 'the certainty that finally there must be the redeeming of life for God's people, and vengeance for His enemies,' and he 'prays that Zion's reproach may be taken away, and that Jehovah will grant repentance unto His people and renew their days as of old' (P. Smith). Compare Jer. 14, 17-22, which may be looked upon as the germ of these elegies.—The Book consists of five separate poems, each complete in itself with a distinct subject, yet brought under a plan which includes them all. The structure of the five poems is alphabetic and most elaborate. Each elegy or dirge (Heb. kinoth, the word used in Jer. 7, 29 & 9, 10, 20; 2 Chr. 35, 25; 2 Sam. 1, 17) is arranged symmetrically in 22 verses or stanzas, according to the number of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet; and, except in the fifth elegy, each verse begins with its own letter in alphabetical order (a transposition of two letters occurs in chs. 2, 3, 4). Further, in the first three elegies, two of the three lines also commence with the letter appropriated to the verse. This highly artificial method may have been adopted as an aid to memory (compare the didactic Song of Moses, which Israel was to commit to memory, Deut. 31. 19), or as a restriction imposed upon himself by the poet to concentrate his overflowing emotion, or as a mental effort which was in itself a relief to his feelings (see note on ch. 5). The third elegy is the most, and the fifth the least, elaborate of the five. Nagelsbach has pointed out that ch. 3. 22-42 forms an unit, and is the centre of the whole book; and it should be observed that here Jeremiah suspends awhile the strong passionate language of his lament, and, with entire submission to Jehovah and trust in His righteousness and mercy, sets forth 'the riches of God's grace in the brightest colours,' as if making the mercies of Jehovah the central idea of the whole poem.

L. 1-1. How . . . How . . . How. The triple 'how' marks the form of the stanza—each verse of chs. 1-3 has, in the Hebrew, three members;—but Payne Smith's rendering of the second and third lines is more forcible: She is become a widow that was great among the nations: A princess among provinces, she is become a vassal (Variorum). The marvel of the change is illustrated in ch. 4. 12, The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy should have entered (or did not believe that . . . would enter) into the gates of Jerusalem.—Sit solitary. i.e. sit upon the ground (the attitude of mourning) alone. So Isaiah (3. 26) had foretold, And she being desolate (or emptied, A.V. marg., so R.V. marg.) shall sit upon the ground. Contrast Isa. 52. 2, Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down (on a throne, i.e. seat). . . . O captive daughter of Zion. The unpeopled metropolis represents the nation, and is described as a mother left alone and mourning for her lost children. See Isa. 47. 9, where loss of children (i.e. a teeming population) is coupled with widowhood in the doom of Babylon, and contrast the promises in Jer. 31. 15-17 & 33. 10-13.—As a widow. i.e. deserted. Cp. Isa. 47. 8 and Jer. 30. 17. Cheyne regards the figure as one taken from polyandry, i.e. she is abandoned by all her former 'lovers,' comparing v. 2; Isa. 23. 16 & 47. 8 and Rev. 18. 7, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow (or mourning). Other commentators, comparing Jer. 2. 2 & S. 14; Isa. 54. 4, 5, and like passages, understand the loss of a husband to be meant, and interpret that Judah is abandoned by her God, who had condescended to speak of Himself as her Husband.—Provinces. A word used to describe subject countries and vassal kingdoms (1 Kin. 20. 17; Esth. 1. 1, 22, &c.); the neighbours of Judah, her subjects during her prosperity, are probably meant here.—Tributary. Subjected to 'a tribute of bond-service' of personal labour (Josh. 16. 10; 1 Kin. 9. 21). In these days, the conquered became slaves (see ch. 5. 13), and the proud Israelite was now subjected even to other slaves (ib. v. 8). Money payment in lieu of personal servitude belongs to later times, eg. Esth. 10. 1. 2. In the night. The idea of solitariness is thus increased. She realizes her situation more deeply when the world is silent and the undistracted heart is abandoned to self-communion.—Lovers . . . comfort. i.e. none of her allies strengthened ('comfort') her; with especial reference perhaps to her disappointment of help from Egypt (Jer. 2. 36). Our eyes failed . . . in our watching . . . for a nation that could not save us (ch. 4. 17). See on v. 19.—Friends . . . treacherously . . . enemies. Perhaps with especial reference to the contrast between the attempt of Judah's neighbours to form a league with her against Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. 27. 3) and their subsequent inaction or active hostility and their exultation at her downfall. Cp. Ezek. 25. 3, 6 (Ammon, cp. Jer. 40. 14), 8 (Moab and Seir), 12 (Edom, cp. ch. 4. 21), 15 (Philistines), and 26. 2 (Tyre). 3. Captivity because of. The interpretation of this line depends on the rendering of the Hebrew of these words—for 'captivity' may also be rendered by exile (voluntary) and 'because of' by out of. The A.V. rendering 'because of' means by reason of, i.e. to escape from 'affliction . . . servitude,' and by 'captivity' voluntary exile is meant; therefore 'Judah' means the fugitives generally who had taken refuge in foreign lands from the Chaldaean invasion and its consequences (see Jer. 40. 11). But according to the rendering 'captivity out of affliction,' &c., 'Judah' would mean the captives selected by Nebuchadnezzar, and they would be described as forcibly removed out of 'misery at home to a yet worse misery in Babylonia;' but, to judge by the fate of former deportations (Jer. 29. 4-7; cp. 2 Kin. 18. 32) this would hardly be the case.—Findeth no rest. As foretold

Or, perhaps, in the recesses, to which she had fled for refuge. 4. Ways of Zion. i.e. roads leading thereto, formerly thronged, but now almost utterly (Jer. 41. 5) void of pilgrims. See vs. 12—22, note. 10. Pleasant things. i.e. treasured possessions, works of art, vessels of silver and gold, and furniture. The Gentile spoiler's touch had profaned also the treasures of the Temple.—Entered. Or, are entered.—Sanctuary. The Holy of Holies, which even a Jew might not enter, unless he were the High Priest.—Whom. Rather, concerning whom (Variorum). The Temple has been profaned by the entry, as part of the Chaldaean army, of even the Ammonite and Moabite, proscribed as nations (see Deut. 23. 3). Contrast Isa. 52. 1, henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. 11. Sigh...seek. Rather, have been sighing, have been seeking bread (Variorum), as A.V. in the next clause; R.V. as A.V. The extreme scarcity probably continued for some time after the capture of the city.—Pleasant things. See 1 Kin. 20. 6; 2 Chr. 32. 27, treasuries for pleasant jewels, and compare Prov. 24. 4. The precious boards of the royal and chief families have been bartered for food; they are exhausted, and now starvation stares the survivors in the face.—Relieve. Rather, revive (Variorum); R.V. refresh; and so in vs. 16, 19. Or, A.V. marg. to make the soul to come again, i.e. to bring back the ebbing life; compare the revival by food of the Egyptian in 1 Sam. 30. 12.—Consider. Or, behold, as in v. 12.

12-22.] In the second half of the dirge, the city speaks and refers to her sins as the cause of her sufferings (cs. 14, 18, 20, 22), a confession which forms the leading thought of ch. 2. 12. Is it . . . pass by? Jerusalem's 'unparalleled sufferings were met with an unparalleled indifference.'—The A.V. marg. has an alternative: It is nothing . . . (Heb.) pass by the way; but the A.V. is generally approved.

13. From above. Rather, From on high (Variorum), i.e. as by fire from heaven; compare the reference in ch. 4. 6 to the fate of Sodom.—Bones. Compare Heb. 4. 12.—A net. For the nets of the hunter which entangled the game, compare Isa. 61. 20, Thy sons have fainted, they lie at the head (i.e. top) of all the streets, as a wild bull (an antelope, Variorum) in a net; they are full of the fury of the Lord, the rebuke of thy God. Contrast Ps. 57. 6. — Turned me back. From every outlet successively, proving escape to be hopeless. 14. Wreathed, and. The exact word occurs here only; Job 40. 17 suggests inseparably bound; perhaps Fr. is right, il est fortement lié. Elles s'appesantissent sur mon cou. R.V. knit together. As a yoke, irremovable because the cords are knotted, the punishment of the sins of Jerusalem is bound upon her neck; so that she is unable to look up or even to bear up under the weight (cp. Ps. 38. 4 & 40. 12).—Fall. Heb. stumble; R.V. fall.—Ile. Rather, it, i.e. the yoke; so the Heb.

—The Lord. Heb. Adonai, not followed by Jehovah, 'the LORD,' the covenant title of the God of Israel. This title is frequently dropped in Lamentations, as the A.V. shows. Adonai never occurs thus alone in Jeremiah's prophecies, but it so occurs fourteen times in these poems, as if the prophet would intimate that, in her humiliation, Jerusalem felt the lordship of Jehovah the God of Israel, but by reason of her sins, no longer felt that lordship to be exercised by Him as JEHOVAH, i.e. as the God of his covenant-people, to protect them' (Wordsworth).—Hath delivered, &c. This is the punishment, the yoke.—From whom . . . rise up. R.V. against whom . . . stand; but marg. as A.V. 15. Trodden under foot. Rather, lightly regarded, set at nought. Var. R.V. a solemn assembly. A gathering, not of Israel for her religious festivals (Lev. 23. 2); here the young warriors of Jerusalem are trampled on as in a winepress.—The assembly called is one of her enemies to crush her; cp. Jer. 15. 8.—Trodden the . . . winepress. A standing equivalent for the carnage of battle (see Isa. 63. 3; Joel 3. 13; Rev. 14. 18-20) viewed as a Divine punishment. Lam. v.—In this poem (see intro. note to ch. 1) the alphabetical arrangement is not found, although it has 22 verses. Some regard this difference as a sign of want of finish, and therefore refer the elegy, or indeed all the elegies, to Jeremiah's sojourn in Egypt, and suppose that the poet's work was interrupted by his death. Others regard this elegy as very highly finished after a fashion of its own, and attempt in various ways to account for the differences between it and the other four.—1. Consider, and behold. Rather, behold, and see (as in ch. 1. 11, 12).—Reproach. i.e. national disgrace. 2. Our inheritance. i.e. Canaan (Lev. 20. 24).—Turned. i.e. turned over to.—Houses. i.e. homes. The 'great' houses (2 Kin. 25. 9; Jer. 52. 13) had been burned, but many houses and even towns must have survived the ravages of the invaders; see Jer. 40. 10. 3. As widows. The husbands being captives in exile. Or, the whole verse may be regarded as metaphorical, meaning, We are utterly desolate. 4. Is sold. Heb. cometh for price (A.V. marg., R.V. marg.). 'Our' is emphatic. We have to pay for our own wood and water. 5. Our . . . persecution . . . labour. Rather, upon our necks we are (so A.V. marg.) pursued; we are wearied (Var.); R.V. Our pursuers are upon our necks; we are weary. So vigorous is the pursuit of the fugitives of Judah that the pursuers are described as ever upon the point of overtaking them—hanging, as it were, over the pursued; it is also incessant. 6. Given the hand. i.e. 'submitted to,' 1 Chr. 29. 24 (marg. gave the hand). To hold out the hand was a sign of surrender. (In Ezek. 17. 18, the action is connected with the making of an agreement.)—To . . . Assyrians. Rather, to Egypt and to Assyria (Variorum). Payne Smith regards the passage as metaphorical; i.e. we are ready to submit to any one who will give us food; all feelings of patriotism are crushed, and our sole remaining care is the selfish desire for personal preservation. Others take it literally, and understand it of the Hebrews, now captives or subjects of Nebuchadnezzar, and of those who had already taken or purposed taking refuge in Egypt; i.e. to escape starvation we must submit to the sway of one or the other. In the latter case, 'Assyria' is interpreted to mean Babylon (as by some in Jer. 2. 18); in the former, to mean the northern of the two great powers of antiquity. 7. Are not. i.e. are dead. The accumulated penalty of sin has fallen upon this generation. 8. Servants. i.e. slaves, who frequently rose to high office; it may be gathered from Prov. 30. 22 & 19. 10 how intolerable such rule would be to the Hebrew. — Ruled . . . that doth. Rather, rule. 9. Gat. Rather, get (Variorum; so R.V.). An indication of the state of the country generally; the Bedouin ('wilderness') Arabs, always active in unsettled times, made it unsafe. Stanley understands this passage of some sorties of the garrison, attempts to obtain provisions during the siege, which had been usually repulsed by the wild Arab tribes who hung upon the outskirts of the Chaldaean camp; but this seems unlikely. 10. Was black. Rather, glowed (Var.); R.V. is black, but marg. is hot.—Terrible. Rather, burning heat of, Variorum (so R.V.); A.V. marg. terrors or storms. A rare and obscure word rendered horrible tempest in Ps. 11. 6, and horror in Ps. 119. 53, and here by Payne Smith fever-blast; Ewald and Hitzig understand it to mean a fiery blast. 'The words paint the hot fever of hunger rather than the livid paleness of exhaustion'

(Plumptre). 11. Ravished.] Rather, have ravished (Far.). 12. Were.] Rather, are (Far.), as in the previous clause; so R.V. Neither rank nor age protected the chief Hebrews from public indignities. As to the exposure of corpses (or their impalement, which the monuments show to have been not uncommon) the fate of the bodies of Saul and Jonathan illustrates the practice, and the feeling of the Hebrews about it (1 Sam. 31. 10-13). 13. They took... to grind.] Rather, The young men have borne the mill. The flower of the nation had to carry the millstones, and probably, like Samson, to grind the corn of their conquerors, the work of a slave and usually of females. Cp. Isa. 47. 2. Take the millstones, and grind meal. Allusion may be made here also to the march of the captives towards Babylon. — The children fell.] Rather, the youths have stumbled (Variorum). Here lads below the age for military service are meant (P. Smith, but R.V. children), who were made to do the most menial work of slaves, either to hew and bring home wood (cp. Josh. 9. 27), or, less probably, to carry it for fuel (dung chiefly serving for fuel in the desert and throughout the East; see Ezek. 4. 12) on the long journey to Babylon. 14. The public life of the city is no more; the seat of judgment, the hum of business and of converse are silent, and so are the stringed instruments (Hebrew). Sept. ψαλμοί. Cp. Jer. 7. 34; Matt. 11. 16, 17. 16. That.] Rather, for, as in the next verse. The confession of personal sinfulness contrasts with the half-complaining tone of v. 7. 17. For this.] i.e. for our national degradation (v. 16). — For these things.] i.e. the catalogue of vs. 8-15. 18. Because of.] Rather, for, as in the two preceding members of the stanza. — The foxes.] Rather, jackals, which inhabit ruins. So Far. and R.V. marg. (retaining 'the'); R.V. as A.V. 19. Remainest.] Rather, sittest enthroned (Far.); [L. v. 11-22.]

so R.V. marg. sittest as king; but R.V. abidest. God's unchangeableness (Ps. 102. 26, 27) is contrasted with the catastrophe which has befallen His people: in particular, therefore, the unchangeableness of His promises is, even in the apparent hopelessness of Judah's situation, a ground for faith and for hope and therefore for prayer. 20. So long.] Numerous passages in the Psalms are suggested by this verse; e.g. Ps. 90. 13, Return, O Lord, how long? Ps. 77. 9, Hath God forgotten to be gracious? ... And I said, This is my infirmity (and cp. Jer. 10. 19). 21. Turn... turned.] Apparently a quotation from Jer. 31. 18, where see note. Jeremiah says that only God can commence the work of reformation; it is He that must turn the heart of Israel towards Himself and cherish the germs of repentance and of reformation, upon which Israel's restoration to His favour and to Canaan must depend. 22. But, &c.] Ewald and Theinüs render, Thou canst not have (lit. Except thou hast) utterly rejected us, And be exceeding wroth against us! So R.V. marg. Unless thou hast ... And art, &c.; A.V. marg. For wilt thou utterly reject us? Thou art, &c. The hope latent in these words is so veiled, that in the synagogue lectionary v. 21 is repeated at the close, to remove the depression occasioned by v. 22 in the minds of the undiscerning. Plumptre holds that the hypothesis of utter rejection is just stated as the only obstacle to renewal and restoration, and stated as an impossibility;—God has not rejected, and therefore He will renew.—The central part of the Lamentation (ch. 3. 22-42) should be read with vs. 19-22. There the prophet puts the sufferings of Judah in their true light. Judah must not complain, but search and try its ways, and turn again to the Lord; it must lift up its heart with its hands ... for the Lord will not cast off for ever ... the Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

280.—The Remnant under Gedaliah.—A Gleam of Hope.

2 KINGS xxv. 22-24.

JEREMIAH xl.

<sup>22</sup> AND as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

<sup>1</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, "after that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 K. xxv.—22-26.] The narrative in Kings is a brief extract from that in Jeremiah (chs. 40-43). 22. Remained.] Rather, were left. — Ruler.] Rather, governor, as in Jer. Nebuchadnezzar's vengeance was coupled with wise policy. He would induce this last remnant of the nation, as the larger remnant left under Zedekiah eleven years before (cp. Ezek. 17. 13, 14), to settle down in Judah under his protection (Jer. v. 11). To Gedaliah, who as a disciple of Jeremiah would regard the Chaldaean supremacy as God's ordinance, it would seem true patriotism to accept the governorship under Nebuchadnezzar with its opportunities to benefit his countrymen.

J. xl.—Chapters 40-43 give the sequel of the final Chaldaean conquest of Judah, and show how God's merciful intentions were defeated by the degeneracy of David's heirs, and by the obstinacy and infatuation of the remnant of Judah.—By the catastrophe just completed, the truth and justice of Jehovah had been vindicated. But it was not His purpose to utterly unpeople Judah. See ch. 42. 9-11. And Nebuchadnezzar's policy (see rs. 9-11, and 2 Kin. 25. 22, note) gave the last remnant of the nation an opportunity to reorganize itself in its own land under a native governor, supported by the prophet whose inspiration had been overwhelmingly substantiated by the recent catastrophe, and protected by the Chaldaean power, which had no rival between the Persian Gulf and the frontier of Egypt. But once more a leading member of the 'seed royal' brings greater evil upon his countrymen and country than even their conqueror desired. As Zedekiah had caused the destruction of Jerusalem, so Ishmael, now the chief or only representative of David in Judah, causes the remnant of Judah to perish (v. 15). Otherwise, the exiles on their return after the Babylonish captivity might have found a humble but established community to which to attach themselves, instead of a land deserted and waste and cities in ruins and without inhabitant in the midst of hostile aliens.—1. The word that came to Jeremiah.] The phrase next occurs at the opening of ch. 41, and it is probable that chs. 40-43 inclusive formed an unit of prophetic record, or a separate Roll. As regards the prophetic character here ascribed to historical narrative, it should be remembered that all the writings of the prophets were regarded by the Hebrews as written under inspiration; hence their title for the historical Books of the Bible, viz. the Earlier Prophets. (Compare St. Paul's words, πᾶσα γραφὴ Θεόπνευστος, 2 Tim. 3. 16, and 2 Pet. 1. 21.) But the phrase 'the word from the Lord' is only applied to history where (as here, from ch. 42. 7-43. 13) it is mingled with actual prophecy. Members of the Schools of the prophets were the national annalists, and their writings, usually the annals of particular monarchs (e.g. 2 Chr. 26. 22), are the actual or ultimate sources of the general histories quoted by the writers of the Books of Kings and Chronicles (e.g. 2 Chr. 9. 29), the prophetic spirit and religious drift of which is to be thus explained.—Let . . . Ramah.] The Ramah, i.e. the height, and the Mizpah, i.e. the watch-tower, mentioned here, are the well known rival fortresses, one on each side of the boundary between the two Hebrew kingdoms (1 Kin. 15. 22). On 'Mizpah,' see v. 6, note. Apparently the bulk of the prisoners were assembled at Nebuzar-adan's headquarters at Ramah, about six miles from Jerusalem, chained together in gangs for safe custody. There Nebuzar-adan would determine their fate—such as are for the sword (of the executioner), to the sword; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity (ch. 15. 2; comp. ch. 43. 10, 11). Jeremiah arrives manacled like the rest, probably because Gedaliah, who doubtless would have protected the prophet from the indignity (ch. 39. 14), had previously left Jerusalem for Mizpah (v. 6), the seat of his new

But Nebuzar-adan immediately releases the prophet from his bonds, and, as if formulating Nebuchadnezzar's instructions (ch. 39. 12), gives him free choice as to his future home.—Chains.] On the hands (v. 4). Said.</sup>] His words sound like the echo of Jeremiah's own language; compare ch. 50. 7, where the Chaldeans are quoted as though they acknowledged themselves to be the instruments of the God of the Hebrews. But compare also the Rabshakeh's impious assertion in Isa. 36. 10, and Dan. 2. 46, note. This may perhaps be the end of a conversation between Nebuzar-adan and the prophet. The Chaldeans had sufficient acquaintance with Jeremiah's policy and prophetic gift to feel great respect (ch. 39. 11) for him; and the fame and influence of Daniel and his friends at Nebuchadnezzar's Court must not be overlooked. —'This recognition of Jehovah and of His prophet did not imply more than the belief of the polytheist that each nation had its guardian deity.'—Plumptre.—Hath.] Omit (and in v. 3). <sup>4. thinks that, after Jeremiah had decided to remain in Judah, Nebuzar-adan, who was responsible for the prophet's safety, 'on second thoughts' advises him to rejoin Gedaliah, as being the newly appointed viceroy of Judah. Wordsworth regards Jeremiah as hesitating because of the misery or insecurity of his country: whereupon Nebuzar-adan reassures him by mentioning Gedaliah's appointment. <sup>10</sup> As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

<sup>11</sup> Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; <sup>12</sup> even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

Gedaliah says that he will remain at his post to receive and attend to the Chaldeans who are to be expected from time to time, and incidentally to take the part of the captains, &c., in their absence. But he bids the new comers to leave him and secure the grapes, olives, and other uncultivated fruits, which would now (September) be ripening, unowned, and would serve for food during the ensuing winter. Compare the cakes of figs in 1 Sam. 25. 18, and of raisins (A.V. figsons of wine) in 2 Sam. 6. 19, probably corresponding to the familiar masses of dates. Agriculture would have been almost wholly suspended during the Chaldean invasion (hence the value of the 'stores' in ch. 41. 8), and the season for ploughing the land for next year's crop was now come. The present tense would imply that some at least had occupied and fortified more or less country towns. The Hebrew implies violence. [11.] Gedaliah's policy is to reconstruct the state as quickly as possible, and his conciliatory conduct has the effect of inducing the refugees to hasten, even from the other side of Jordan and of the Dead Sea, to take advantage of it. [14. Baalis.] Gedaliah's pro-Chaldean policy would be hateful to the nations, Judah's neighbours, who, in addition to the obvious risk of attack by Nebuchadnezzar, knew that they were included in Jeremiah's prophecies of the Chaldean supremacy (ch. 27. 3), which had now proved to be true in the case of Judah. Ammon had apparently been in league with Zedekiah against Nebuchadnezzar (Ezek. 21. 20, note); and she could not tolerate the establishment of a Chaldean province of Judah on her flank. On the other hand, Judah, if restored under Ishmael, a native prince of the blood, might serve as a defence, and help Ammon to maintain her independence. Or Baalis may have desired to conquer Judah for himself, which seems rather to have been Johanan's view of the conspiracy (v. 15). [15. In.] i.e. of.—Perish.] By dispersion consequent on the overthrow of Gedaliah and his government. Johanan confesses that Gedaliah was indispensable. 2 KINGS XXV. 25.

JEREMIAH XLI.

<sup>25</sup> BUT it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah.

<sup>1</sup> Now it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

<sup>2</sup> Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

<sup>3</sup> Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

nor, or, it may be, when Baalis as conqueror should deal with them with Ammonite cruelty and undying enmity (Amos 1. 13; Judith 5. 20, 24; 1 Mace. 5. 6, 30-43). 6. Speakest falsely. 'Charity thinketh no evil.' Gedaliah, guileless himself, resents all suspiciousness. His magnanimity and statesmanship stand in strong contrast to the jealousy and selfishness of Ishmael, who did by Gedaliah what Gedaliah refused to do by him.

2 K. xxv.—25. Seventh month. Sept.-Oct.; the 2nd month of Gedaliah's government. The 10th day of this month was the Great Fast or Day of national Atonement, and from the 15th to the 21st day was the Feast of Ingathering or of Tabernacles (Var. T. B., Bible Calendar) which had been hitherto observed for generations as the national harvest-home. But now there was no harvest in Judah for which to rejoice 'before the Lord' (Isa. 9. 3); see Jer. 40. 10, note, and v. 8. (cp. Lam. 2. 6, 9, The Lord hath caused the solemn feasts . . . to be forgotten in Zion . . . the law (i.e. the legal ritual) is no more. For the state of the country, see Lam. 1. 4, note, & 5. 9; Jer. 40. 10, note, & v. 8.—Royal.) Lit. of the kingdom (marc.). The Hebrew is the same in the parallel passage.—See Jer. v. 11, note. Ishmael had recognised Gedaliah's viceroyalty (ch. 40. 8).—Smote. 'When drowned in his cups to the degree of insensibility and fallen asleep' (Josephus).—Chaldees. i.e. soldiers (Jer. v. 3, note).

J. xli.—1. And the princes of the king. Sept. omits; Vulg. has optimates regis; i.e. nobles that had been in the service of Zedekiah; if so, there would be ten chiefs, each with his retinue. But no such personages are named again (nor by Josephus), and the arrival of such a body could scarcely fail to put Gedaliah on his guard. Or, insert one of, i.e. and one of the chief officers of the king, as a description of Ishmael come alone with his retinue of ten men. The secrecy kept as to Gedaliah's murder during two days supports this view. A few resolute men, aided by circumstances which they had themselves partly controlled, might have accomplished both massacres. If 'the king' were Baalis, Ishmael would be an officer in the Ammonite service according to the one rendering, and according to the other rendering the ten would be Ammonite chiefs.—Eren. Rather, and (so Sept., Vulg.), as in Kim. (Variorum).—Eat bread. An entertainment, whereby in an Eastern mind all suspicion of treachery would be lulled, was later a not infrequent means for assassination (1 Mace. 9. 39 & 16. 16, &c.; compare 2 Sam. 13. 28, 30 and 1 Kin. 16. 9, 10). Besides, the governor had confidence in Ishmael (ch. 40. 16). Gedaliah had sent the captains of the forces away (ch. 40. 10, 12), and the number of his household and body-guard of Chaldeans (v. 3) would be small. 3. And. Omit, or insert even; 'the men of war' are 'the Chaldeans,' i.e. Gedaliah's body-guard. 4. No man knew. We gather that 'on the summit of the hill of Mizpah was Asa's fortress, with a deep well within a high enclosed court-yard dug by Asa for the garrison.' Gedaliah's body was thrown into this cistern (cf. v. 9, note 'because'). Gedaliah probably resided in the citadel (v. 7), Jeremiah and his numerous other charges being quartered in the partially-deserted town. None escaped knew it,<sup>5</sup> that there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men,<sup>6</sup> having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the LORD. <sup>6</sup> And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam. <sup>7</sup> And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him. <sup>8</sup> But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren. <sup>9</sup> Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of Gedaliah, was it<sup>d</sup> which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

Whether these were Samaritans, or Jews who had adopted (a too common practice, ch. 16. 6) a heathen sign of mourning, we cannot tell, but the latter is the more probable. Both feared the Lord after their fashion; the Samaritans even claimed, on this ground, to take part in the restoration of the Temple (Ezra 4. 2).—Shaven . . . rent . . . cut. Signs of mourning for the destruction of the Temple, to the desolate site of which they were probably making a pilgrimage of mourning. But as they must have been journeying about the time of the Day of Atonement or of the Feast of Tabernacles, their purposed visit may have had some connection with one of these anniversaries (see Kin. r. 25, note 'seventh month.' See r. 4, note. Entrapped without a chance of escape, like the Mamelukes at Cairo, A.D. 1811.—Slew. The motive of this seemingly wanton massacre can only be conjectured. Ishmael's object may have been plunder (r. 8), or hostility against willing partisans of Gedaliah (r. 6, 'come,' &c.), or Ishmael may have desired to be rid of observers of his proceedings until he could effect his retreat into Ammon with Gedaliah's charges. Payne Smith suggests that Ishmael aimed at undoing Gedaliah's work by substituting unsettlement and insecurity for the confidence and peace for which Gedaliah had laboured, and that such a policy would accord with the interests of king Baalis (see ch. 40. 14, note 'Baalis').—Pit. Rather, cistern (r. 9 also; Vulg. lacus; Sept. φρέαρ; presumably excavated by Asa (cf. 1 Kin. 15. 22) to supply his garrison in case of a protracted siege.—Men . . . with him. See r. 1, note 'princes.' <sup>8</sup> Treasures. Lit. hidden things; R.V. stores hidden, i.e. in caverns, or wells and cisterns, in the open country, or in holes lined with straw: a practice still adopted in dry countries' (Thomson). These terrible tragedies are doubtless thus detailed to vindicate God's justice in punishing David's royal house, and to show that there was no hope left for it except in the discipline of punishment.—When it had been purified in the furnace of affliction at Babylon, then God brought it back to favour in Zerubbabel and raised it up again to glory in Christ (Wordsworth). 12. Waters. There is still at Gibeon a pool or tank, and a large underground reservoir fed by a spring. See 2 Sam. 2. 13.—Gibeon. Only about two miles N. of Mizpah (cf. p. 16; 2 Sam. 2. 13). Payne Smith thinks that Ishmael delayed at Gibeon to see if the captains, his old companions in arms, would recognise him as king, now that Gedaliah, the usurper and friend of the Chaldeans, was dead. 13. All . . . all. They promptly joined Johanan, yet Ishmael and eight of his coadjutors (two having apparently lost their lives) escaped. 14. Cast about. i.e. turned round; so Amer., not R.V.; Fr. tourna visage; It. si rivoltò; Germ. wandte sich um. But some understand the English word to mean reflected a moment (especially the 'men of war' named in v. 16) what they should do. Cf. 'Contrive and cast about to bring such events to pass' (Bentley); 'Cast about how to draw out of them things of use' (Bacon); cp. 'Casting with himself what loss he had had,' 2 Macc. 11. 13. The Heb. si'ar, as an intransitive verb, more commonly has the meaning to turn oneself (1 Sam. 15. 27) than to revolve, reflect. 16. Mighty men of war. Either some prisoners were made at the time of Gedaliah's assassination, or some soldiers must have joined Ishmael who were not in Mizpah at the moment. As possible leader of a war party, possible king, they might not be unready to join him.—Eunuchs. Or (Var.), courtiers, attendants on the royal harem. Ebed-melech (ch. 39. 18) may have been one of them. 17. Dwelt. Fearing that Nebuchadnezzar in his anger at the murder of his governor might not discriminate between innocent and guilty, they began to flee into Egypt; comp. ch. 40. 15. They first balt awhile at a caravanserai, to prepare for the journey. And wishing to know what course events might take, they persuaded them-to go to enter into Egypt,<sup>15</sup> because of the Chaldeans; for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, <sup>1</sup>whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

Vulg.* also have simply the name of a place; but R.V. marg. has the lodging place of Chimham. Geruth occurs here only; its root is the verb to turn aside; compare Lat. diversorium. It is conjectured (on 2 Sam. 19. 37, 38) that David gave Chimham part of his personal (not royal) estate near Bethlehem, upon which Chimham erected, out of gratitude, one of those large caravanserais in which merchants and travellers in the East pass the night, stable their animals, and store their goods.

J. xlii. —1. Jezaniah. Called Azariah (Jehovah helps) in ch. 43. 2 (and so Sept. here; in one MS. Zechariah). If there is an error, it is probably here. —All . . . greatest. This description recurs in v. 8 and ch. 44. 12, and even in the brief summary of 2 Kin. 25. 26. Here it draws attention to the unanimity of the appeal, of the rejection of the answer, and of the subsequent action taken; the hopeless corruption of the nation is thus illustrated. Even God's wondrous offer of mercy (rs. 10-12) could not awaken in the spared remnant a responsive chord. 2. Jeremiah. The prophet has not been mentioned since ch. 40. 6. He had adopted Mizpah as his home, and was probably residing in the town at the time of Ishmael's murders. Chs. 40-43. 7, read like the contemporary narrative of an eye-witness, and we may fairly assume that the prophet and his secretary Baruch were among 'the people' of ch. 41. 10, 13, 16. —Be accepted. Heb. fall (so marg.), as a suppliant bows, prostrates himself, before him who has the power to grant the request; but the phrase (P. Smith) seems to involve the idea of the acceptance of the petition; see v. 9, note 'present.'—They profess great reverence for Jeremiah as for God, but, perhaps unconsciously, they do not mean to give up their own way for either. They may have anticipated a reply confirming what they believed it to be their interest to do. —Pray for us. Compare the like appeals to Samuel, Isaiah (marg. refs.), and to the prophet himself (ch. 37. 3). As an intercessor, Abraham is called 'a prophet' (Gen. 20. 7. 17). 4. I have heard. Literally, obeyed. Compare the Oriental phrase, 'I hear and obey,' the two being identical in the language of Oriental courtesy. —Keep nothing back. See marg. refs., and ep. Num. 22. 38. 5. Witness. Pos-

Jeremiah could have had no doubt as to the answer; it was contrary to the tenor of all his prophecies that his countrymen should rely on Egypt, or find protection there from Nebuchadnezzar's vengeance; but he patiently awaits 'the word from Jehovah.' A false prophet would have answered the enquirers promptly according to their wishes (comp. ch. 23. 14-17); see marg. refs. and notes there.—It may have been intended, in this instance, that time should be allowed for the panic as to Gedaliah's murder (ch. 41. 18) to subside.—Observe that God does not refuse a revelation, as in the case of the hypocritical exiles who would enquire of Him through Ezekiel (14. 3 & 20. 3); but He tells the fugitives what to do, and adds a most gracious promise (rs. 10-12) to induce them to remain in Judah. Jeremiah's mission had been twofold: to prophecy first Destruction, and afterwards Restoration, and this feeble remnant is apparently offered a share in the restoration. raob to remain on the defensive within his border. Egypt's prosperity was proverbial (see e.g. ch. 46. 20, 21), and it appeared to be indefeasible. See ch. 43. 10, note. Canaan, on the contrary, had been frequently overrun since Nebuchadnezzar's victorious career began at Carchemish. Yet, really, the troubles of Syria and of Judah were now over, and Egypt's were just about to begin, as Jeremiah and Ezekiel had foretold; the fugitives, therefore, would be going of their own accord to meet in Egypt the very evils which they were seeking to escape and would avoid if they remained in Judah as faithful subjects of God's servant, the Chaldean conqueror. 15. J. xliii.—2. Azariah.] Probably the Jeze-niah of ch. 42. 1 (see note there). He here takes precedence of Johanan, as if the chief spokesman of 'the proud men.'—The proud men.] These are apparently distinguished from Jeremiah and those who sided with him. The Hebrew word means to boil over, to swell, and describes here self-will asserted against God's will as revealed through His prophet. The same word occurs in Ps. 19. 13, presumptuous sins; Ps. 119. 21; Isa. 13. 11. For zedim some read zerim ('aliens'), as if (Plumptre) fugitives of other nations, looking to Egypt as their one refuge from the Chaldeans, had joined the Hebrew refugees (cf. Ex. 12. 38), and now formed part of the caravan.—Falsely.] They deny that Jeremiah speaks by inspiration. With false prophets the later days of the monarchy had been, unhappily, only too familiar; see ch. 5. 31 & 23. 9-10 and notes. 3. But Baruch.] They cannot charge Jeremiah with treachery: his very presence with them, after Nebuzar-adan's invitation to Babylon, is proof of his patriotism. But Baruch had shared Jeremiah's policy of submission to the Chaldeans, and he might therefore, to ingratiate himself with Nebuchadnezzar, be influencing Jeremiah to detain the remnant in Judah until the Chaldeans could arrive to avenge the murder of Gedaliah and the overthrow of their settlement of Judah.—Into Babylon.] Yet captivity in Babylon was the appointed means of the preservation of their nation; see ch. 24. 5-7, &c., a prophecy which, by the headstrong unbelief of this remnant, was now receiving its full accomplishment.

7. So ... thus.] Rather, with Sept. and Vulg., And ... and. — Tahpanhes.] Identified in 1886, by Mr. Petrie of the Egypt Exploration Fund, with the ruins of Defenneh (pronounced Def'neh), on the northern caravan route from Syria and Arabia, which has evidently, from physical causes, been the chief route into Egypt from the dawn of history. It is therefore the Taphne of the Septuagint, and the Daphnai of the Greeks, a large body of whose countrymen (cp. ch. 46. 21, her hired men) had been settled there as mercenary troops in two camps, one on either side of the Pelusian Nile, nine miles from Pelusium and a little seaward of Bubastis, by Psammitichus (Hdt. ii. 30. 154); see Ezek. 29. 3, note 'hath said.' The plain of Daphne being bounded by water, except on the south where it faces the Syrian road, was selected for a frontier fort at least as early as the time of Ramesses II. (see Herod. ii. 107). On arriving, the Hebrew 'captains' must halt to obtain permission to enter Egypt, and would probably be eventually enrolled amongst Pharaoh's mercenaries (P. Smith). 'The refugees would find at Tahpanhes a mixed and mainly foreign population (comprising former refugees of their own nation) among which their presence would not be resented as it would be by the still strictly protectionist Egyptians further in the country. Naturally, they would largely or perhaps mainly settle there. They would find a constant communication with their own countrymen, and would be as near to Judah as they could in safety remain, while they awaited a chance of returning.'—Petrie. [For the Hanes of Isa. 30. 4, see p. 490, note.] 9. Hide, &c.] The prophet's mysterious act would excite curiosity and collect an audience; it would also create a memorial of the prophecy.—The clay.] Rather, mortar (Var.).—Brickkiln.] Probably, pavement of brick (P. Smith in Var.). This rendering has been verified by Mr. Petrie's discoveries; see next note.—At the entry of Pharaoh's house.] At Defenneh, Mr. Petrie discovered a ruin within the circumscribed site of the ancient cantonment, and heard to his surprise that it was called Kasr el Bint el Yehudi, or 'The Palace of the daughter of Judah,' a name unparalleled elsewhere in Egypt, and one which suggests that Pharaoh Hophra assigned this palace-fort (which, as the foundation deposits prove, was undoubtedly founded by his great-grandfather Psammitichus) as an asylum for the daughters of his dethroned ally Zedekiah. Mr. Petrie discovered further, at the far end of a high causeway leading to the entrance into the building, 'a great open-air platform of brickwork.' Such a platform is now seen outside all great houses and most small ones in Egypt, and is called a mastaba; but it is generally of mud, beaten hard, edged with bricks, and kept swept clean. On this platform, the inhabitants seat themselves for converse, or, in the case of a great man, to receive friends and drink coffee, and here the multifarious open-air business of such a climate is done. This brick platform therefore would be a public place of assembly, for mustering soldiers, for large levees, to receive tribute and stores, to unload goods, &c., and a place to meet persons who would not be admitted to the palace or fort. It would be the obvious place for Jeremiah's symbolic ceremony and declaration in the presence of the assembled chiefs of the caravan, and for Nebuchadnezzar to sit in state or for judgment. Plumptre compares the Gabbatha or Pavement (John 19. 13) on which Pilate's judgment seat was placed. Nebuchadnezzar is depicted as a judge executing justice for Jehovah. 10.] At once, and in the very stronghold on which Pharaoh relied to bar the progress of an invader from the N. and E., Jeremiah is inspired to foretell the occupation of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, and the ease with which he will conquer and execute the judgment of Jehovah upon the gods of Egypt, by burning their temples and by destroying their images, &c., or by carrying them to Babylon, so demonstrating their impotence. Comp. ch. 46. 13-28.—My servant.] Comp. Ezek. 29. 19, 20, 'because they wrought for me, saith the Lord God.'—Set his throne upon these stones.] The Assyrian and Babylonian monuments depict kings so seated in front of their palaces. The capture of Tahpanhes is foretold also by Ezekiel (30. 18), At Tehaphnehes also the day shall be darkened when I shall break there the yokes of (i.e. imposed by) Egypt: and the pomp of her strength (or, pride of her power) shall cease in her.—Royal.] Or, glittering (R.V. marg.).—Pavilion.] The meaning is obscure (Var.). The word may mean the tapestry (Keil) forming a royal canopy (Streane, or (Payne Smith), more probably, the sunshade, which, or a fen, when hunting) is the invariable accompaniment of shall spread his royal pavilion over them. <sup>11</sup> And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver <sup>9</sup> such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword. <sup>12</sup> And I will kindle a fire in the houses of <sup>4</sup> the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace. <sup>13</sup> He shall break also the images of Bethshemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

Assyrian kings in Assyrian representations; cf. Rawlinson, Anc. Mon. i. 496. 11. And . . . cometh.] The certainty of his coming is the subject of ch. 46. 13, 18.—He shall smite . . . Egypt. The conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, foretold by Jeremiah and even more fully by Ezekiel, doubtless took place, although Egyptian history is silent on the subject; see Ezek. 29. 11, note. Josephus, who had access to histories now lost, relates (Ant. x. 9. 7) that Nebuchadnezzar invaded Coele-Syria five years after the destruction of Jerusalem, i.e. about the 16th year of the Captivity and the 23rd year of his reign, conquered it (i.e. the territory of Tyre and Sidon) and Ammon and Moab successively, and then invading Egypt slew its king and appointed a vassal king. The date, Nebuchadnezzar's 23rd year, occurs in the Bible in Jer. 52. 30 only (see note there) as the date of Nebuzaradan's second deportation of Hebrew captives. Such an invasion of the countries adjacent to Judah, or lately confederate with her (ch. 27. 3), would be natural, so soon as Nebuchadnezzar's circumstances permitted it. Ezekiel, however, places the conquest of all Egypt later than the 27th year of the Captivity, for he speaks of it in a prophecy of that year as a future event and as God's reward to Nebuchadnezzar for his labour in fulfilling His judgments upon Tyre. Currey argues from the date of Hophra's deposition, and from the probabilities of the case, that Nebuchadnezzar's siege of Tyre, which lasted 13 years (Jos. Ant. x. 11 and C. Ap. i. 21), began three years after the fall of Jerusalem, and that the Chaldean king invaded Egypt immediately after the fall of Tyre, i.e. in the 27th or 28th year of the Captivity and the 34th or 35th of his reign. The deposition of Hophra he fixes, by the indirect testimony of Egyptian monuments, in the 28th year of the Captivity.—Perhaps, two invasions may be indicated in the prophecies: an earlier and partial invasion resulting in Hophra's submission, and a later and more complete conquest of Egypt. Pusey is of opinion that the deposition of Hophra by Amasis, which the Egyptian priests represented to Herodotus as the result of an internal revolution, was probably the act of Nebuchadnezzar, and that the intense unpopularity of Hophra which, according to Herodotus, brought upon him civil war, deposition, and finally a violent death at the hands of his former subjects may be attributed partly to the success of a Chaldean invasion.—Such as are. i.e. by the destiny of God; compare the fuller expression in ch. 15. 2. 12. I will kindle. The work is God's, though it seems to be Nebuchadnezzar's. Cp. Ezek. 30. 13 and ch. 46. 25, I will punish Amon, i.e. Amen, an Egyptian solar deity (Var., A.V. 'the multitude'), of No (Thebes), and Pharaoh, and Egypt, with their gods, and their kings. On the trust of the Hebrews in idolatries practised in Egypt, see ch. 44. 15.—Captives. That Nebuchadnezzar took the best images of the Egyptian gods, as he took the best vessels of the Temple at Jerusalem, to Babylon is most probable. The treasures of ancient temples were full of the idols of conquered nations, and of spoil dedicated by conquerors, in the precious metals.—Array . . . putteth on. Rather, wrap . . . wrappeth himself in (Var.), the Hebrew being the same; R.V. as A.V. A magnificent metaphor. As lightly and easily as a shepherd throws his cloak about him, so shall Nebuchadnezzar take possession of all the wealth and glory of Egypt, and depart at his pleasure.—Hitzig suggests, that, as a shepherd would turn the fleece of his cloak outwards, the meaning may be that Nebuchadnezzar shall turn Egypt inside out, upside down (pellibus inversis, Juv. Sat. 14. 136). Sept. has the remarkable rendering φθειρίσει = pick the lice out of, i.e. plunder, pick clean. Ezekiel's prophecy (29. 10) makes Nebuchadnezzar's invasion affect the whole of Egypt.—In peace. i.e. unhindered by any. 13. Images. Rather, pillars (Varietum), as in Isa. 19. 19; or obelisks; the matséah of 2 Kin. 10. 26, not the tezem of 2 Kin. 11. 18, nor the amud of 2 Kin. 11. 14. Obelisks are associated with the worship of the Sun, and stood in front of the entrance porches of most Egyptian temples.—Beth-shemesh. i.e. House of the Sun, as marg.; probably the Greek Heliopolis, i.e. city of the Sun; the Egyptian On, the 'Aven' of Ezek. 30. 17, and the home of Joseph's wife, noted for obelisks. The oldest obelisk in the world stands there still. On was situated at the apex of the Delta, about 20 miles from Memphis (Noph, ch. 44. 1), and upon the main route into Egypt from Pelusium to Memphis.—The Egyptians. R.V. of Egypt.

JEREMIAH XLIV.

Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are <sup>a</sup> a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein, <sup>3</sup> because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went <sup>e</sup> to burn incense, and to <sup>f</sup> serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers. <sup>4</sup> Howbeit <sup>g</sup> I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate. <sup>5</sup> But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods. <sup>6</sup> Wherefore <sup>h</sup> my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

<sup>7</sup> Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel;

J. XLIV.—1. The word.] The following appears to be Jeremiah's last recorded prophecy (chs. 45–51 being of earlier date, and ch. 52 an appendix by a later hand); but some eminent critics assign ch. 46. 13–28 also, and even the Book of Lamentations, to Jeremiah's sojourn in Egypt. Evidence as to the date of this prophecy is wanting, and therefore, although it may have been delivered later than Ezekiel's prophecies of the 12th year, it is here treated in its place as part of a record comprising chs. 40–44. It reiterates the doom pronounced in ch. 42. 13–18 upon all Hebrews who sought by flight into Egypt to escape Nebuchadnezzar; but it discloses a further cause for that doom, viz. their idolatry in the land of their refuge. And the doom is accompanied by a precise sign that should precede its fulfilment, viz. the capture of Pharaoh Hophra by 'his enemies.'—Came.] The date and occasion can only be inferred generally. Whether the prophecy be referred to the later part of Hophra's reign, or to the short interval between the destruction of Jerusalem and that Chaldean invasion of Egypt of which Josephus speaks (ch. 43. 11, note), will depend upon the explanation of v. 30 that is adopted.—The occasion was evidently some great festival of the Moon as worshipped in Egypt (see v. 17, note 'queen of heaven').—All the Jews . . . Egypt.] Probably all Hebrews are included who, from whatever cause, had settled in Egypt, but the refugees of ch. 43 are especially meant. And they would seem to have had time to disperse themselves in Egypt.—Dwelt . . . dwelt.] Rather, were dwelling; Vulg. habitabant [J. XLIV. 1–7.]

Cp. ch. 46. 14. Migdol is a common name in Palestine, and in Egypt also, though not an Egyptian word (Zephon has a similar meaning, Ex. 14. 2). Magdolo, in the Itinerary of Antoninus, is placed 12 Roman miles S. of Pelusium, and therefore near Tahpanhes, on the E. border of Egypt. Migdol would probably be a place of strategic importance upon that very narrow land-frontier.—Tahpanhes.] Cf. ch. 43. 7, note.—Noph.] i.e. Memphis, the ancient capital of Lower Egypt, on the W. bank of the Nile, a little south of the apex of the Delta. In the Hebrew of Hos. 9. 6 it is called Moph (Variorum), which, like Noph, is a contraction of the Egyptian Mennuf = the abode of the good, i.e. of Osiris, whose sacred bull Apis was worshipped here.—Pathros.] The Thebaid in Upper Egypt; see Ezek. 29. 14, note. But some critics take Pathros here to be (v. 15) the name of some district of the Delta near the towns named. 2. A desolation . . . no man.] A few agriculturists remained in the country after the residue of the responsible inhabitants who were capable of forming a government had fled with Johanan, &c. Cp. Ezek. 33. 24–29 and ch. 52. 30. 4. Howbeit.] Rather (with Heb., Sept., Vulg.). R.V. as A.V. The queens referred to were probably mostly foreigners who introduced their national religions into Judah. The alien wives of Solomon; Maachab, the favourite wife of Rehoboam (2 Chr. 11. 21 & 15. 16); and Athaliah, who brought the religion of Jezebel into David's dynasty with the fatal 'affinity,' are prominent examples. In the general description of the persistent idolatry which was the chief cause of the ruin of Judah and Jerusalem, Jeremiah has especially before his eyes (v. 15) those sensual forms of Syrian idolatry that the women practised (see e.g. 2 Kin. 9. 22).—Your wives . . . land . . . streets.] See v. 17, notes.—Land of Judah . . . streets of Jerusalem.] e.g. Ahaz; see 2 Chr. 28. 24, 25. 10. They.] By this change from 'ye,' Jeremiah associates past generations with the present; he recognises that this is no new feature; or (Deane) he seems to turn his face from his audience.—Humbléd.] Lit. crushed (Lam.

Jeremiah in Egypt, as Ezekiel in Babylonia (Ezek. 23. 24-29), must crush out all hope that any of the remnant, whether in Egypt or in Canaan, shall have a part in the promised restoration. 12. Take.] Rather, take away, as at ch. 15. 15 (Var.).—Consumed . . . fall . . . die.] The poetical superlative produced by the accumulation of similar words assures the hearers of the certainty of their fate.—The least . . . greatest.] See ch. 42. 1, note. As regards the latest refugees, the doom is as uniform as their disobedience. 13. I will . . . Egypt.] In ch. 43. 11 he says, the land of Egypt, Egypt as a whole is meant. Whenever Nebuchadnezzar's invasion took place, he would find the remnant of the Hebrews whom he had so often spared formed into small communities in Tapanahis and other cities of the Delta near the frontier, and to a less extent, probably, in the more inland cities. As these were fugitives and rebellious subjects of Nebuchadnezzar's own kingdom, it is most probable that he would avenge their last rebellion and flight from Judah by taking them captive to Babylon, as Josephus (Ant. x. 9. 7) says that he did the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: <sup>14</sup> so that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there: for <sup>7</sup> none shall return but such as shall escape.

<sup>15</sup> Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

<sup>16</sup> As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, <sup>a</sup> we will not hearken unto thee. <sup>17</sup> But we will certainly do <sup>a</sup> whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the "queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our

in his 23rd year; see ch. 43. 11, note.—This remnant probably contributed little, if anything, to the later colonies of Jews in Egypt, who were chiefly attracted or brought thither in the days of the Ptolemies, more than two centuries after the fulfilment of this prophecy. 14. Gone.] But Vulg. qui vadunt ut peregrinentur, i.e. are going to become sojourners; according to this reading the remnant of chs. 41–43 only is contemplated.—Escape.] The Hebrew word is used of one who saves his life by a stealthy flight (Gen. 14. 13; cp. 2 Sam. 19. 3, 'steal away'). See Ezek. 7. 16 for the like phrase.—Remain.] Rather, survive; i.e. to tell the tale.—Have a desire.] A.V. marg. lift up their soul; the same Hebrew phrase by which the intense longing of the exiles with Jehoiachim for their lost home is conveyed in ch. 22. 27.—To return to dwell.] Hence it appears that some at least of these refugees sought only a temporary asylum in Egypt, intending to return into Judah as soon as they safely could. They did not believe Jeremiah's prophecies that their land was to be desolate seventy years.—But.] i.e. except. 15. Had burned.] Rather, burned (Variorum); Vulg. sacrificarent, i.e. were burning. The A.V. refers to their practices in Judah (v. 9), the other rendering to a general practice of which the present festival was an example.—Multitude.] Rather, congregation, or, assembly; the Hebrew word is used in ch. 26. 9, where see note. It must have been an assembly for religious purposes; otherwise Jewish manners would not have allowed the women to be abroad in crowds. As the women advance in regular procession to worship the Moon-goddess (in accordance as it seems with a vow, v. 17), Jeremiah stops the procession (P. Smith).—Even all . . . in Pathros.] i.e. the attendance at the festival was very numerous and representative. Herodotus (ii. 59–60) records that the natives reckoned that 70 myriads (700,000) of men and women, not reckoning children, attended the festival at Bubastis, this being the fullest and most popular of the frequent general gatherings characteristic of the Egyptian religious practice. Bubastis (Pi-beseth, Ezek. 30. 17, the Pa-Bast of the [J. xlv. 14–17.] monuments) was on the Pelusian Nile, about half-way between Pelusium and Memphis. On 'Pathros,' see v. 1, note. 16. As for the word, &c.] Payne Smith points out that in the Hebrew this is no mere profession of general wilfulness. But for the vow, they would have listened to the prophet; as it is, they will not be deterred from the special object which had brought them together. 17. Do.] Rather, perform, i.e. our vow.—Whatsoever thing goeth.] Rather, the whole word which hath gone (Variorum); Sept. πάντα τὸν λόγον; Germ. alle dem wort. It is the regular phrase for a vow. They seem to plead the Law which condemned all idolatry (Num. 30. 2, 7; Deut. 23. 23) in support of the particular idolatrous vow that they were fulfilling, and they even allege an obligation of conscience! A marvellous exhibition of the deceitfulness and infatuation of false religion.—Queen of heaven.] i.e. the Moon, which was worshipped under the title of Artemis by the Greeks (and of Bubastis by the Egyptians, Hdt. ii. 137, 156). A Persian and Assyrian deity, supposed to symbolise a quality attributed to moonlight of giving to nature its receptive power, as the Sun (Baal) represented its quickening power. By the union of these two influences the blossoms were supposed to fructify and the fruits to mature. The Moon thus became generally the symbol of female productiveness. The impurity of the Babylonian cult of Mylitta, the Babylonian Aphrodite (Hdt. i. 199), probably illustrates the rites of such idolatries as here provoked the burning indignation of the prophet.—The attributes of Astarte or Ashtoreth, i.e. a star, meaning the planet Venus, were constantly confused by the ancients with this goddess (P. Smith); as to star-worship among the Hebrews, see ch. 19. 13, &c. The A.V. marg. 'frame of heaven' is another and ill-supported reading, followed in ch. 7. 18 by the Syriac and Septuagint Versions. Here the Sept. is as A.V.—As we have done.] They admit the practice of this idolatry, and even allege an old custom, adopting Jeremiah's own words (v. 9). Compare his former denunciation of this worship early in Jehoiachim's reign (ch. 7. 17–19), Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil. <sup>18</sup> But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine. <sup>19</sup> <sup>2</sup> And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, without our men?

<sup>20</sup> Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying, <sup>21</sup> The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind? <sup>22</sup> So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land <sup>2</sup> a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, <sup>2</sup> as at this day. <sup>23</sup> Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; <sup>a</sup> therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

Do they provoke me to anger? saith the Lord: do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces.—For then.]* They quote their prosperity before Josiah's reformation, and their adversity since (r. 18). Forgetting that the successes of the Chaldean conqueror began about the date of Josiah's death, they associate their prosperity with the practice of the worship of the queen of heaven and their adversity with its suppression. The worship, they say, is an old established one, and their own experience, so far from agreeing with the allegations of Jeremiah, went to show that their national prosperity had coincided with its maintenance.—Victuals.] Heb. bread (so A.V. marg. with Sept., Vulg.). <sup>19</sup> Burned, &c.] Render by present tense throughout the verse, burn . . . pour . . . do (Var.).—Worship.] The sense is doubtful; Rashi, Graf, and Payne Smith render, to make her image; so R.V. marg. to pourtray her. The 'cakes' were no doubt symbolical, whether shaped like the full moon, or having the form of the moon stamped upon them. The Athenians offered to Artemis, at the full moon in the middle of the month Munychion, cakes shaped like the full moon; these were covered with lights, and were finally burnt on her altar, with a libation of wine added. Plumptre compares the Minchah or meal-offering of the Mosaic ritual and the Neideh in the Egyptian worship of the goddess Neith. The word for 'cakes' in the Hebrew text 'has a foreign appearance' (Streane), and is evidently a technical term, for it is only found in connection with this worship.—Men.] Rather, husbands; so marg. A woman's vow was not binding if her father, she being unmarried, or her husband, if she were married, disallowed it (Nunn. 30. 5, 8). The acquiescence of their husbands, they say, bars Jeremiah's right to interfere, and makes the vow a binding obligation. <sup>20</sup> And.] i.e. even. <sup>21</sup> Them.] i.e. the repeated acts of idolatry (Var.).—Mind.] Lit. heart (so Sept., Vulg.); i.e. the seat of the intelligence. Jeremiah asks, Did not God take cognizance of it? <sup>22</sup> No longer bear.] Jeremiah replies by pointing to the long vista of Judah's idolatrous transgressions and to the parallel long-suffering of Jehovah. The alleged coincidence was a fallacy; God was not unobservant or indifferent during the period quoted, or aforesaid, but, when His justice outweighed his long-suffering, the long-foretold punishment of such practices came to pass, of which they themselves had been witnesses. <sup>23</sup> Therefore.] Referring to 'because' above. It was not the anger of the queen of heaven at the suspension of her worship, but their own want of response to the long forbearance of Jehovah, sorely tried and long despaired, that had caused the recent catastrophe. <sup>24</sup> Moreover.] As if after an interval of silence, Jeremiah foretells once more the extinction of Judah in Egypt.

<sup>c</sup> Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

<sup>26</sup> Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt:

Behold, <sup>d</sup> I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that <sup>e</sup> my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth. <sup>27</sup> Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good: and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt <sup>28</sup> shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them. <sup>28</sup> Yet <sup>f</sup> a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose <sup>g</sup> words shall stand, mine, or their's.

The sign—the fall of Pharaoh Hophra.

<sup>29</sup> And this shall be a sign unto you, saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall <sup>h</sup> surely stand against you for evil: <sup>30</sup> Thus saith the LORD;

Behold, <sup>i</sup> I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life: as I gave <sup>m</sup> Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

Or, both verbs may be rendered by the imperative, omitting surely: establish then . . . perform your vows. The prophet speaks in sad and indignant irony. So say ye? Hear God's vow (v. 26). 26. My name shall no more be named.] i.e. I now solemnly disown all Judah in Egypt, and I cease to be their God: they have forfeited their inheritance in My covenant with their ancestors. As Jehovah liveth was the distinctive oath of the Covenant People; the Hebrews swore 'by the life of Jehovah,' the Self-existent (Deut. 10. 20; Hos. 4. 15), and to use this oath was a confession of faith, an assertion of participation in the Covenant. — The.] Rather, As the. 27. Watch over.] Heb. as in ch. 5. 6, 'A leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces: because . . . thy children have forsaken me, and sworn by them that are no gods' (ib. v. 7). 28. Yet a small, &c.] Or, And they that escape the sword shall return . . . An unlikely one then, for Hophra was in the zenith of his pride and security. See Ezek. 29. 3, note. 30. As I gave Ze- dekiah.] The fulfilment of Jeremiah's prophecy as to Zedekiah's fate is used to accredit his prophecy as to Hophra's. And a parallel seems to be suggested also, as if Pharaoh was destined to fall into the hands of the Chaldeans, and even to be brought before Nebuchadrezzar at Tahpanhes (ch. 43. 10, 11) as Zedekiah was brought before his conqueror at Riblah. But if by his enemies the Egyptians be intended, the prophecy would seem to contemplate the close of Hophra's life, and the circumstances of it as recorded by Herodotus must be taken into account. He writes that Hophra had so alienated the Egyptians—their intense hatred is recorded by Hophra's title, the hated, upon the monuments—that after Amasis, his former servant, had conquered him and his Greek mercenaries in battle, but after deposing the king had spared and protected him, the discontent of the Egyptians obliged Amasis to surrender that 'bitterest of enemies to them and to himself' to their vengeance. They strangled Hophra, but buried him in the sepulchre of his fathers.

Jeremiah now disappears from view. He had been prophesying for over 40 years, and had seen all his words come to pass, so far as the destruction of his nation was concerned; his sorrow and his hope are embalmed in his 'Lamentations.' About this time Ezekiel resumes his prophetic activity, and takes up the strain of hope and comfort to which the elder prophet had latterly given utterance. Of Jeremiah's end nothing is known; Josephus is silent, and the confu-

EZEKIEL XXXVII.

<sup>1</sup>THE "hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out <sup>b</sup>in the spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones, <sup>2</sup> and caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. <sup>3</sup> And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? sion of the book which bears his name implies that Jeremiah, through his premature death or otherwise, was unable to finally arrange or edit his prophecies. According to Christian traditions, his courageous truthfulness provoked the Jews to stone him at Tahpanhes (cf. Heb. 11. 37); and this is likely enough. Jewish tradition, which would naturally seek to hide this national crime, makes him, when Nebuchadnezzar conquered Egypt, escape with Baruch to Babylon, and there die in peace. 'But Jeremiah did not need a death by violence to make him a true martyr. To die, with none to record the time or manner of his death, was the right end for one who had spoken all along, not to win the praise of men, but because the word of the Lord was in him as a "burning fire" (ch. 20. 9).—Plumptre.

E. xxxvii.—The prophecies of this chapter are referred to the 12th year or to some year between the 12th and 25th years of the Captivity.—They closely correspond in subject with Jeremiah's prophecies of the Restoration, and show how both prophets, each in his sphere, taught the same lessons and sought to exercise the same influence upon the remnant of their countrymen in exile.—'The last step in the reconstruction of the new Israel is the resurrection of the people' (Davidson). The heading of the A.V. runs: 'By the resurrection of dry bones, the dead hope of Israel is revived. By the uniting of two sticks is shewn the incorporation of Israel into Judah. The promises of Christ's kingdom.'

1. Out. From his house (ch. 33. 21; see ch. 3. 24, and compare Jer. 15. 19).—The valley. The scene of the revelation of ch. 3. 22, A.V. plain (or the broad valley, Kay). The Hebrew word in both places is that used in Gen. 11. 2 of the plain of Babylon.—Which. i.e. and it.—Bones. Perhaps a vision of some ghastly memorial of the Chaldean invasions ('slain,' v. 9; 'army,' v. 10) of the Holy Land,

2. Open. Or, marg. champaign; Heb. upon the face of the valley.—Very dry. Parched and bleached by long exposure. 'Revival is apparently hopeless' (Davidson).

3. Can these bones live? The immediate lesson to the exiles was probably limited to a contrast between the apparent impossibility and the omnipotence of Jehovah. Compare Jer. 33. 2, 3. But the use of this parable for the instruction of the exiles implies that the idea of a resurrection of the body was familiar to the Hebrews of the time; for, as Jerome (following Tertullian) says, No one confirms uncertainties by means of nonentities. The knowledge, however, of the Old Testament writers as to the sequel of death seems to have been very limited (see 1 Sam. 2. 6; Job 19. 25-27; Ps. 16. 10, 11; Isa. 26. 19; Hos. 13. 14), so much so that we find the Sadducees entirely denying the doctrine of a resurrection even in the time of our Lord and of His apostles (Matt. 22. 23; Acts 23. 6-9, &c.). Perhaps this vision was a step in the gradual development of the revelation (comp. Dan. 12) as to 'the resurrection of the body and everlasting life after death' which it was reserved to Christ and His apostles to fully unfold (2 Tim. 1. 10).—Thou knowest. The answer of unquestioning faith (cp. Gen. 18. 14 and Jer. 32. 17. 'hard,' i.e. wonderful), or, as Davidson suggests, 'of reverence' (Rev. 7. 14), since even a Paul might have difficulty in uttering a simple Yea, yet an Abraham would be unwilling to say No (Phil. 3. 11; Rom. 4. 17-21; Heb. 11. 19).

4. Prophecy. This word, throughout the vision, has its primary, but not ordinary, meaning, i.e. to speak for another; cp. Ex. 4. 16 & 7. 1, where Aaron is appointed 'spokesman' for Moses and called his 'prophet.' See notes, pp. 4, 39, 43.—Upon. i.e. over. 5. Breath. Or, spirit. The Hebrew word is the same as in vs. 1. 6, 8-10, 14 ('spirit,' A.V. 'wind'); Sept. and Vulg. render it by one word; but in English sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live <sup>e</sup> and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>7</sup> So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. <sup>8</sup> And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

<sup>9</sup> Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto the wind, prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind. Thus saith the Lord GOD; Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. <sup>10</sup> So I prophesied as he commanded me, <sup>9</sup> and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

<sup>11</sup> Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, <sup>h</sup> Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts. <sup>12</sup> Therefore prophecy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD;

Behold, <sup>i</sup> O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and <sup>k</sup> bring you into the land of Israel. <sup>13</sup> And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your Wind.] Marg. breath.—Breath.] See v. 5, note.—Upon.] Or into (Davidson). 10. Breath came.] The creation of Adam is also depicted in two stages (Gen. 2. 7). The bodies now become 'living creatures,' Heb. (the phrase of Gen. 1. 20, &c.). 11. These are, &c.] The 'slain' army aptly represents the Hebrew nation smitten, as foretold, by the sword of the vengeance of Jehovah (e.g. ch. 21. 11).—The whole house.] i.e. both Hebrew kingdoms, the 'Judah' and 'Joseph' of the symbolic action that follows (rs. 15-20), 'the two families' of Jer. 33. 24.—Our hope is lost.] Beyond the ordinary constituents of nationality, the Hebrew nation had a peculiar bond in the inheritance of the Promises. By a process of Divine election, this inheritance had now for nearly five centuries been closely bound up with the Davidic monarchy and its accessories which had just been swept away. To the exiles, therefore, the Promises of Jehovah, which were 'the hope of Israel,' seemed to have come utterly to an end for evermore. But Ezekiel is inspired to combat their despair; he announces—thus echoing the earlier revelations of Jeremiah—that the Davidic monarchy (cf. 2 Sam. 7. 16, note) would be revived and continued, as regards the inheritance of the Promises, by the kingdom of the Messiah ('David my servant'), which should arise out of its ruins, and, unlike its predecessor and type, should never be destroyed. Probably this revelation, so far as it was accepted, was understood by the exiles in a temporal sense, i.e. of a restoration of the nation under an actual monarch of David's lineage: for even the disciples of our Lord failed to understand similar revelations of His (Luke 9. 45 & 18. 34, &c.).—Cut off.] Cp. Isa. 53. 8. Such dispersion as the Hebrews had suffered amounted to national dissolution. The exiles regarded their national existence as ended, just as the hearers of Jeremiah had said it would be extinguished if Jerusalem fell (Jer. 33. 24). But, once more, a prophetic message is vouchsafed to the contrary effect, and one of the most definite and startling character. Ezekiel declares that although the promised Return from Captivity should be as great a miracle as that represented in the vision, the God of Israel would accomplish it (cp. Rom. 11. 15, life from the dead).—For our parts.] The plural of the phrase for my part; i.e. As for us, we, &c. R.V. clean, i.e. utterly. 12. Open your graves.] In the explanation of the vision, the ordinary emblem of the resurrection is adopted.—God 'opened' the 'graves' when He overthrew the mighty empire of Nebuchadnezzar by the arms of Cyrus; and the edict proclaimed by Cyrus to all the provinces of his kingdom permitting the Return of the Jews, was like the breath of God quickening them and calling them forth from their tomb. See 2 Chr. 36. 22 (Wordsworth). 13. Brought.] Rather, as in v. 12, caused you

The Return, when accomplished—and indeed each successive fulfilment of parts of the prophecy—will authenticate the unfulfilled remainder.—Spirit.] Or, breath, R.V. marg.; but R.V. as A.V. See v. 5, note 'breath.' At the Return, as Jeremiah had revealed, the beginning of a new spiritual life would be associated with the beginning of the renewed national life of the Hebrews. It was a converted remnant that availed itself of Cyrus' permission to go up and restore the Temple (see v. 23, note 'clause'). The edict operated as a trial of faith (compare Ezra 1. 1-6, all them whose spirit God had raised, or, stirred up, the Hebrew being the same word as is used of Cyrus in v. 1). This small colony, in which the continuity of the nation was preserved, became the nucleus of a great religious commonwealth in Palestine, and the channel of the richer blessings of the New Covenant to all mankind. The Return was therefore like a resurrection, spiritually as well as politically, to the Hebrew nation. 16. Stick.] The Hebrew word is not that rendered 'rod' in Num. 17. 6-9, but another word meaning only a piece of wood. two. 'This promise runs throughout all prophecy. The one God, the husband of the community, required that the community should also be one, with a single affection and service' (Davidson). Cp. Isa. 11. 13; Jer. 31. 6. Dispersion produced union. The claims of Judah and of the House of David to be the heirs of the Promises were never again questioned, but the hope of the House of David became once more and for ever the hope of all Israel. <sup>23</sup> Neither . . . defile. After the Captivity, no more is heard of idolatry either in Palestine or amongst the Jews of the Dispersion. Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, describes the detilement of Canaan by the inveterate idolatry of the Hebrews as the cause of their removal from it (ch. 36. 17-19; compare Isa. 65. 3, 4).—Idols. Idol-blocks, or doll images (giltulim, pp. 293, 494, notes).—Out . . . dwellingplaces. A reference to the local temptations to idolatry which, from the Conquest onward, had beset and mastered the Hebrews in Canaan. But some read with Sept. from all their backslidings (so Davidson).—Cleanse. Cp. ch. 36. 25, 31. By mingled severity and goodness—by the discipline of the Exile, which should separate the faithful from 'the rebels' (ch. 20. 38), and by the merciful opportunity of the Return, which should further sift out from the faithful the most earnest in their zeal for the home and religion of their fathers. See v. 14, note 'spirit.'—So Jehovah would restore a purified remnant, and through it remake the Chosen People in its own land.—They, &c. The formula which describes the Covenant-relation between the children of Israel and their God (see Jer. 30. 22, note) is used as a sort of refrain (see v. 27). It was now for forfeited in part. <sup>24-27.</sup> The promises now become more far-reaching and distinctly Messianic ('meaning neither Davidic house nor line of kings.'—Davidson); the prophecies of chs. 34 & 36 are in effect summarised. The familiar features and pledges of the former Covenant—the Davidic monarchy, the possession of the Holy Land, and a dwelling-place of Jehovah among His people—are used as types or vehicles whereby the more spiritual revelations of a New Covenant may be introduced into the minds of the exiles. Meanwhile, they are assured, under a perpetual guarantee, of the restoration of all these pledges of the continuance of the nation. Their inheritance of the Promises still survived, and would be realized hereafter in a kingdom which should have no end.—The proximate and material part of these promises were all that Ezekiel's hearers could receive, and even the first fulfilment of them, the Restoration to Canaan, came upon the Jews almost as a miracle (Ps. 136. 1-3). <sup>24</sup> David my servant . . . king. A confirmation for ever of the Promises to David (cp. Isa. 55. 3). The future king of the reunited and reformed nation shall be of David's house and lineage. The words 'my servant' imply that this 'David'—understood doubtless even at the time to mean the personal King, Messiah—was to be the founder of a new order of things, and to be the viceroy of Jehovah on earth for the special purpose of the specific revelation; see Hos. 3. 4, 5 & p. 101, note, and compare Deut. 18. 15, 18; Acts 3. 22 & 7. 37. —One shepherd. i.e. one king (see v. 22, note). They were now kingless and dispersed as sheep deprived of their shepherd (cp. 1 Kin. 22. 17). For the promise, see Jer. 23. 1-8 (and notes) and Ezekiel's fuller prophecy in ch. 34. 11-31. The deeper meaning of such prophecies was disclosed by the 'Prophet and more than a prophet,' Compare (John 10. 16) There shall be one fold (rather, flock) and one shepherd, with the subsequent enquiry of the Jews, How long dost thou make us to doubt (marg. hold us in suspense)? If thou be the Christ (i.e. Messiah), tell us plainly (ibid. v. 24). Observe also the fulfilment in Jesus the Christ—as 'the Good Shepherd,' as David the king (Luke 1. 32, 33, &c.), and as God's servant (Phil. 2. 7). <sup>24, 25.</sup> Shall . . . do them . . . and . . . dwell. By obedience they shall fulfil their part of the covenant, and so shall possess the Holy Land (comp. ch. 33. 23-26). The Restoration of a repentant and reformed (v. 23) remnant to Canaan was a partial fulfilment of this promise, and an earnest of its eventual but spiritual fulfilment. <sup>25</sup> Jacob my servant. The Chosen People is entitled the Servant of Jehovah in virtue of the covenant with Abraham, who responded to the call of God. See Isa. 41. 8; Jer. 30. 10 & 46. 27, 28; Ps. 136. 22. Therefore, to represent God upon earth became its mission.—Dwelt. Now, and their children, and their children's children <sup>e</sup>for ever: and <sup>f</sup>my servant David shall be their prince for ever.

alas! a matter of the past.—Children's children for ever.] A perpetual inheritance. Fulfilled, as St. Paul has shown, in the inheritance of 'the kingdom of heaven,' which the death of Christ opened to all believers, for by faith all such are 'children unto Abraham' (Matt. 3. 9; Gal. 3. 7-9).—For ever.] This phrase and similar words in the remainder of the prophecy give the strongest possible assurance to the exiles that Israel's 'hope is' not 'lost' (v. 11). <sup>26. Moreover.</sup> The exiles thought that their nation was utterly cast away by its Covenant-God. (It was temporarily cast off, but not cast away; see Jer. 23. 33, note, & 33. 23-26.) They are assured that, on the contrary, Jehovah will enter into a covenant of peace with His people, i.e. that He will rejoice over them to do them good and will never turn away from them, and that this covenant will be everlasting because Jehovah will by His grace prevent them from forsaking Him. Compare the earlier prophecy in Jer. 32. 37-42, and ch. 36. 26-28.—Place them, and.] The Peshito omits these words; the Targum has bless them and (see Vari-orum); R.V. marg. give it them, but R.V. as A.V.—Multiply.] Compare ch. 36. 8-15, 11, 29, 30, 37, 38. Increase is a sign of the special blessing of God (see Gen. 12. 2 & 24. 35, &c.; cp. 1 Kin. 4. 20). As a matter of fact, the Jews after the Return greatly multiplied in Palestine, so that it became agriculturally and commercially one of the most prosperous countries in Asia.—Set my sanctuary . . . for evermore.] Repeated as a sort of refrain in v. 28. Jehovah had permitted once more, as in the case of Shiloh (Jer. 7. 14), the destruction of the one place which He had chosen upon earth to place his name there, and even of the Holy of Holies that had been His accepted and His visible dwelling-place; moreover, His abandonment of this sanctuary had been foreshown to the exiles by Ezekiel (9. 3, &c.) about five years before its destruction. The exiles therefore thought that the Presence of Jehovah had been removed from amongst His people for ever; but the prophet assures them that, on the contrary, the Covenant-God of the Hebrews will be with Israel for ever, and so unmistakably that even the heathen nations shall recognise the fact.—Whether or not the promise may refer to the prophecy of the 6th year of the Captivity, in which, whilst Solomon's Temple and its services were yet in existence, Ezekiel assured his fellow-exiles that although they were cut off from the House of Jehovah, He would be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come, that prophecy and the present contained the germ from which is developed the picture of the Kingdom in its new form, the Messianic, which is comprised in chs. 40-48; and these prophecies contain the revelation, that God's Presence among men would hereafter be independent of place and of a sanctuary (cp. John 4. 20-26).—The restoration of the Temple by Zerubbabel would be the partial fulfilment, an earnest, of this promise; but the comparative inferiority of the second Temple (Hag. 2. 3) and the vicissitudes of its history (especially its desolation by Antiochus Epiphanes and desecration by Pompeius) doubtless drew the attention of faithful Jews at successive epochs towards the larger and spiritual meaning of the promise. <sup>27. Tabernacle.</sup> Rather, dwelling-place (as in Ex. 26 throughout), (so Davidson); the reference being to the tent in which, as in Solomon's Temple afterward, the visible 'glory' of Jehovah within the Holy of Holies had symbolised the dwelling of God amongst men. So St. John (1. 14) writes, that Christ, by His incarnation, tabernacled (Gk.) among us, and St. Paul terms the body and soul of a believer the sanctuary or temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 3. 16 & 6. 19). But the full meaning (cf. Jehorah-shammah, ch. 48. 35, and note on 'Jehovah' in Appendix) relates to that future of which St. John speaks in the Revelation (21. 3-23)—after the restored Temple, Capital, and national existence of the Hebrews had also been destroyed because of their inveterate spiritual blindness.—With.] Sept. ἐν αὐτοῖς; Vulg. in eis; Var. and R.V. marg. over, a rendering which Davidson names as, possibly but not probably, meaning a protection, or referring to the Temple's elevated position (ch. 40. 2);—it rather = by or beside (cf. ch. 2. 6). <sup>28. The historian seems to have regarded the promotion of Jehoiachin to honour, notwithstanding the terrible sentence pronounced upon him by Jeremiah (22. 24-30), 'as a message of mercy and comfort from God Himself, and as a prelude and a pledge of the liberation and restoration of the Hebrew nation, when it had been purified and humbled by the discipline of suffering' (Wordsworth).—27. Seven and thirtieth.] Ten years later than the latest of Ezekiel's dated prophecies, and not less than 25 years after the destruction of Jerusalem. ### DANIEL IX.

D. ix.—1. Darius.] To be distinguished from Darius I. of Persia (= Hytaspis; Ezra 4. 24). This deputy-king under Cyrus cannot be certainly identified, nor does his father Ahasuerus seem to be known to history. There is good reason for the view that Darius is a title meaning 'governor,' and an inscription records that Cyrus appointed Gobyras, his principal general, governor in Babylon.—[Medes.] The policy of placing a vice-king at Babylon was in accordance with the previous history of Babylon for a long time under the Assyrian Empire, and with the actual relation of the Medes to the Persians. Medes, alone of all conquered nations, were employed in offices of confidence in the Persian Empire.—Pusey.—[Made king.] Comp. ch. 5. 31: 'Darius . . . took the kingdom,' where 'took' should be rendered received, as in ch. 2. 6, i.e. received from a superior authority. Darius, as king, divided the kingdom into 120 provinces under princes or satraps (cp. Isa. 10. 8), over whom he placed three presidents, Daniel being chief (ch. 6. 1, 2), to see that, esp. in financial matters, the king's interest should not suffer. Daniel had, doubtless, as first minister in the first of the world monarchies, been the stay and human protector of his people during their exile. 2. Books.] Rather (as Sept. Fr. Germ. It.) the books, i.e. the prophetic records and (v. 11) the Pentateuch.—[That . . . in.] R.V. for the accomplishment of the desolations of Jerusalem, even seventy years. Daniel had been now nearly seventy years in captivity himself (Dan. 1. 1-7). He had before him Jer. 25. 11, 12 and 29. 10, he had seen God's sentence upon Babylon fulfilled with the suddenness and completeness foretold by Jeremiah (31. 63, 64), and had seen the mysterious Cyrus, of whom Isaiah had prophesied (Isa. 44. 28, & 45. 1), appear and conquer a position in which he could say to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built, and to the Temple, Thy foundation shall be laid. He believed that the time of the promised deliverance must be at hand, and in faith set himself to intercede with Jehovah for its speedy accomplishment (v. 19).—Seventy.] Modern commentators point out that during three such periods events occurred immensely affecting the welfare of the children of the captivity of Judah. The earliest, and probably the one indicated, is that from B.C. 606, the 4th year of Jehoiakim, when Nebuchadnezzar first carried away captives (including Daniel) from Jerusalem, to the edict of Cyrus for the restoration of the Temple at Jerusalem in B.C. 536; the second is from the captivity of king Jehoiachin in B.C. 598, to the period of Ezra 4. 6, i.e. B.C. 528, in the reign of Cambyses, when the returned exiles seem to have prospered in Judah (Ezra 5. 8); and the third from the destruction of the Temple in B.C. 588 to the edict of Darius

But the words seem to reflect the narrative of Daniel (chs. 1 to 6), which records the manifestation of the supreme power of the true God to both Babylonians and to Israel, the histories being selected to show how the true God was glorified amid the captivity of His people in a heathen empire. God had <sup>a</sup> pale the reputation of the wisdom of the Babylonian Magi by His Spirit which he placed in the captive Daniel, and through Daniel He had revealed to the heathen world the succession of empires ending with that Kingdom which was hereafter to supersede and absorb the kingdoms of the world, part of which revelation had already been fulfilled. Moreover, thrice already during the seventy years of the Captivity, human power had put itself forth against the faith, and thrice the faith had been triumphant in the face of all the power of Israel and intelligence of the Chaldaean Empire; each miracle had resulted in a decree in favour of Israel and in recognition of the greatness of the God of Israel. 16. For Israel's deliverance from Babylon was to be the earnest of the redemption of all mankind. Of the forms while as, when as, whereas, only the last remains now in use. 21. At the beginning. [i.e. as related in ch. 8. 16.—Being, &c.] Sept. ταχὺ φερόμενος; marg. with weariness or flight; R.V. marg., being sore wearied. As 'rising early' (Jer. 7. 13) indicates God's earnestness, so by a like figure Gabriel's 'weariness' indicates his speed. — Touched. [Rather, came nigh to, Var. (so R.V. marg.).—Oblation.] Rather, meal-offering, Var. (and so in v. 27); the hour of prayer of Acts 3. 6. 22. The commandment.] Rather (as A.V. marg.), a word, Var., i.e. the prophetic revelation or oracle of vs. 24-27. But the A.V. refers it to the commandment of an earthly sovereign, i.e. probably to the decree of the 7th year of Artaxerxes, B.C. 457 (Ezra 7. 11), under which Ezra began the rebuilding of the city and reorganisation of the people which Nehemiah perfected.—Shew thee.] Rather, declare it, Var.; R.V. tell thee.—Greatly beloved. [Heb. a man of desires, marg.; R.V. marg., very precious (Heb. precious things), but R.V. as A.V. monem.—Consider.] Or, give heed to, lit. discern (v. 25, R.V.). Thus a vision of royalty to come was set ever before Israel's mind during that interregnum which was to end only when it could be said 'no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.' This word of promise shed on Daniel's tears (Ps. 137. 1) the rainbow of Hope; and what might be taken as the beginning of Accomplishment (i.e. Cyrus' decree for the rebuilding of the royal city and the palace of the King of kings) was not long delayed. Never did 'while they are yet speaking I will hear' receive more distinct verification. 24. Seventy weeks. Generally understood to mean weeks of years. Compensation for 70 years of desolation (the punishment for 70 years of sin, p. 562, note) shall be seven times 70 years (a reversal of God's method in Num. 14. 34) of forgiveness, years of hope, dating from (1) the 20th year of Artaxerxes I. (Longimanus, Ezra 7. 1), i.e. B.C. 445 (so Hengstenberg, Reinke, Hävernick, and Wordsworth); or (2) his 7th year, i.e. B.C. 457 (so Pusey), when the second body of exiles returned under Ezra; or (3) the date of Cyrus' Decree, i.e., B.C. 536 (cf. v. 25); or (4) the year before Carehemish, i.e., B.C. 606, when Nebuchadnezzar made Judah tributary. The ending of this period has certain distinct marks, viz., reconciliation made, an Anointed Prince's advent and death (a Messiah Nagid, human or divine), yet it is not so definitely marked as to produce unanimity among commentators. Some give as the end of the 69 weeks (= 483 years) the commencement of Christ's ministry (John 1. 26; Lu. 3. 1); others the martyrdom of Stephen (A.D. 33); others (comparing Sept. to anoint a Holy of holies with 1 Macc. 4. 52-54) the age of Antiochus Epiphanes (B.C. 175-164). Christ's ministry, including that of His Apostles in Israel, lasted seven years. In the midst of that period He, the Anointed One, was 'cut off,' i.e. rejected by His nation and rooted out of the land of the living, so that 'He had nothing'—not even His own people belonged

Jer. 23. 6 and Isa. 9. 7, where 'justice' should be rendered righteousness. The Messianic kingdom is everlasting and characterised by righteousness. Righteousness had been promised before as the gift of the times of the Messiah, but Daniel first adds the time of the gift.—Seal up. Rather, Seal (i.e. ratify, confirm) vision and prophet (R.V. as A.V. omitting, however, 'the'; but R.V. marg. prophet, as A.V. marg.). The Babylon-bred Daniel would be familiar with those seals, for example, which kings were representing the slaughter of the evil principle (cp. ch. 6. 17, and Rev. 20. 3, and G. Smith's 'Assyrian Discoveries', p. 434).—Anoint. 'A figurative expression for imparting the gifts of the Holy Spirit' (Hengstenberg).—The most Holy. R.V. marg. a most holy place. If understood of a person (cp. 1 Chr. 23. 13), the phrase means a successor to 'prophet,' who shall present Messianic truth in a yet higher and holier form, as did John the Baptist (Luke 16. 16) and Jesus the Christ. If understood of a place, it means 'the altar of offering of the New Covenant, and a Messianic congregation which is to replace that which is now despoiled and profaned.' The Sept. has no article here, but always has when it means the Most Holy Place; 1 Chr. 23. 13 is literally to consecrate him (Aaron) as a Holy of Holies; and other Greek versions understand a Person here. <sup>25</sup> Understand. R.V. discern.—Commandment. Rather, word; see r. 23.—Build, &c. Marg. build again Jerusalem; as 2 Sam. 15. 25; Ps. 71. 26.—The Messiah the Prince. Heb. Messiah-Nagid (without the def. art.). Rather, the anointed one, the prince, Var. (so R.V.); lit. one anointed, a prince (for ruler, as in 1 Sam. 10. 1, A.V. captain, see p. 479). The personage designated was to be 'the Anointed of Jehovah,' and 'the Captain over the inheritance of Jehovah,' i.e. the successor to David foretold by the prophets (esp. by Isaiah and Jeremiah, cp. Isa. 9. 6, 7; Jer. 23. 5-8) in prophecies destined to be understood only by the light of their fulfilment in the person of Jesus Christ; the Lord's anointed, the High Priest, in a sense in which neither Cyrus (Isa. 45. 1) nor Joshua (Hag. 2. 4) could claim those titles. These words probably fixed the use of the proper name Messiah or the Messiah, Christ or the Christ, as that of the long-expected Deliverer; in our Lord's time, the name was already in the mouth of all Samaritans as well as Jews.—Pusey.—Weeks. Some editors place a semicolon (R.V. a colon) after 'weeks'; see Var. As punctuated in A.V., sixty-nine weeks represent the time of the advent of the Desire of Israel (cp. 1 Sam. 9. 20), an Anointed Prince of whom all other anointed ones were types and figures.—The street. 'Singular and unauthorised to designate the object according to its widest extent' (Hengstenberg). The large square before the Temple (Ezra 10. 9) seems to be meant, R.V. it shall be built again with street and moat: Var. with public place and moat (or perhaps aqueduct). The restoration of Jerusalem was constantly interrupted by the jealousy of the neighbours of the returned exiles ('in troublous times'). Compare Hag. 1. 4, and Zech. 2. 8, 9; Ezra 4; Neh. 1. 3; and note the efforts by which Xerxes eventually completed the walls in the 20th year of Artaxerxes, B.C. 445. <sup>26</sup> After. = at the end of the threescore and two which follow the seven, i.e. of the 69th from the 'decree' of God.—Messiah. Rather, the anointed one, Var. (so R.V.). The Heb. has not the def. art. Not, apparently, the Nagid 'that shall come'; who, again, need not be the Nagid of r. 25. Hengstenberg makes this Christ; but Auberlen, Titus; and others, Antiochus or Antichrist.—But . . . himself. Lit. shall have nought or none; marg. and shall have nothing (so R.V.). But R.V. marg. has and there shall be none belonging to him [i.e. no people (so the Vulgate, &c.), or, no helper, or no successor] (so [Dan. ix. 25, 26.]

Hengstenberg renders, 'over the summit of the abomination (i.e. the desecrated Temple) comes the destroyer' (Matt. 24. 28). In Matt. 24. 15 Jesus Himself applies the words of Daniel to the coming desolation by the armies of Rome, without, however, limiting them to that event. There can be little doubt that the phrase 'the abomination of desolation' found its first explanation when the altar of Zeus Olympius was set up by Antiochus Epiphanes on the brazen altar at Jerusalem (cp. chs. 11. 31; 12. 11; 1 Macc. 1. 54; 2 Macc. 6. 2); its second in the pollution of the Temple by the Zealots (Jos. B. J. iv. 3. 6-8; iv. 5. 2; iv. 6. 3); whether, as with so many prophecies, yet a third awaits it, who shall say? Wordsworth takes the phrase to mean, 'that which caused the true worshippers to abominate the place where it was, and so made it desolate'; Mancel, 'an abomination to be punished (2 Kin. 21. 7-15) by desolation.'—Until, &c.] R.V. Unto the consummation (finis, completion, not, however, 'the end' of Matt. 24. 14), and that (which is) determined (decreed) shall (wrath) be poured out upon the desolator (marg. desolate).

2 Chr. xxxvi.—22. First year.] As king of Babylon.—Cyrus.] Heb. Coresb, as in Ezra 1. 1.—Stirred up.] The same Heb. as in Ezra 1. 1, and as 'raised' in Ezra 1. 5. We can trace here also the influence of Daniel, as an intermediary, with king and exiles. Daniel had been President over all the Colleges of the Chaldeans or Magi and ruler over the province of Babylon under Nebuchadnezzar and his successors since [Dan. ix. 27; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22.]

made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, <sup>23</sup> Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. tion throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, <sup>2</sup> Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath <sup>3</sup> charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah. <sup>3</sup> Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD

God of Israel, (<sup>4</sup> he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup> And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside the freewill offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

<sup>5</sup> Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit <sup>6</sup> God had raised, to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem. <sup>6</sup> And all they that were about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was willingly offered.

Dan. 2. 48 (cp. Dan. 1. 21). He had been also actually or practically third in the kingdom since Dan. 5. 29, and when the Perso-Median had succeeded the Chaldean empire Darius even thought to set him over the whole realm, i.e. to promote him to be associate-king with himself (Dan. 6. 3); comp. Dan. 6. 28. The restoration of the Temple was therefore, under God, almost certainly the fruit of Daniel's influence with Darius and Cyrus. As regards the exiles, the faithful at least must have recognised in Daniel one raised up by God to protect and to encourage them during their captivity. But it needed the influence of a Daniel to persuade the exiles to give up their comfortable homes and to face the losses and discomforts of removal and the uncertainty of making a successful settlement in their native land.—[Proclamation.] This fulfilment was a sign confirmatory of the prophecy of the Seventy Weeks (Dan. 9. 25). But the edict was limited to a permission to rebuild the Temple of the Lord God of heaven at Jerusalem. Its terms, as quoted in Ezra 6. 2-5, included a royal grant of the expenses and prescribed the construction and dimensions of the Temple. Two years afterwards, Cyrus allowed this edict to be largely neutralized and his policy towards restored Judah to be changed through the influence of counsellors who accepted bribes (Ezra 4. 4, 5). The decree, however, of the 7th year of Artaxerxes implies some permission to restore the city (Ezra 7. 8-28). <sup>23</sup> See the fuller language of Ezra 1. 3-5. An inscription of Cyrus found in 1879, although imperfect, suffices to show that this edict was due to political and not solely to religious motives. Cyrus' policy was to allow perfect freedom to all religions and even to abolish the custom of deportation of conquered peoples begun under the Assyrian Empire and continued by the Chaldean.—[Charged.] We need not ignore inward conviction because we admit the probability of his having been shown Isa. 44. 28 & 45. 1-6 by Daniel, who had been recently accredited with the new king by his deliverance from the lions (Dan. 6. 22). Xenophon calls Cyrus 'God's Shepherd'; and there is scarcely a word of praise which ancient writers have not applied to his character—the gracious, the unselfish, the wise, the magnanimous, the virtuous. 'There is no doubt that he was opposed to idolatry and a worshipper of one God' (Kay).

Ezra 1.—2. God. <sup>1</sup> Rather, the God (and so in Chr.). The Greek mythology seems to recognise a Power, a Providence, above the individual deities, even Zeus (cp. Jon. 1. 6, p. 404). 'The Persian notion of a single supreme being, Ormazd, did in fact approach nearly to the Jewish conception of Jehovah.'—Rassellson. Such an identification by Cyrus would not be wonderful if his attention had been drawn by Daniel to the prophecies of Isaiah (Jos. Ant. xi. 1. 2). Compare the politic syncretism which was the settled practice of the Roman Empire later. It may be, however, that the Hebrew scribe has substituted Jehorah for Ormazd throughout the proclamation, or quotes a Hebrew copy which accompanied the Persian.—3. He, &c. <sup>1</sup> Rather, omit the brackets and the comma within them (Sept. Var. R.V. marg.).

The decree of Darius in Dan. 6. 26, went beyond that of Nebuchadnezzar (Dan. 3. 29) in commanding universal veneration of the God of Daniel; the effect upon the heathen of the manifestation of His supreme power recorded in Daniel is summarised in Dan. 6. 26, 4. Remaineth.] R.V. is left; Sept. left behind. The wealthier Israelites, having profited by the advice of Jeremiah (Jer. 29. 4-7), decided to remain in the lands of their captivity, and formed the Jews of the Dispersion, who played afterwards so important a part in the history of the cities of Western Asia under Alexander and his successors, the Ptolemies and the Antiochi, and under the Romans, and in the history of the Early Christian Church (Jas. 1. 1). — Men of his place.] Heathens, but sharing the royal sentiments, or seeking the royal favour. These (v. 6) were to give freewill offerings in addition to Cyrus's gift 'for building expenses out of his revenues' (Jos. Ant. xi. 1. 3). 'My officers' (Pool). 5. Chief . . . fathers.] Rather, heads of fathers' houses (so R.V.). Only 42,300 persons returned (ch. 2. 64), and those for the most part of Judah and Benjamin, with 4289 priests of the 'house of Jeshua' the high priest (ch. 2. 36-39; Neh. 7. 39-42), and their poverty seems to have been extreme. The Return was an act of faith. A mere fraction of the exiles availed itself of the edict. 'Yet did many of them stay at Babylon as not willing to leave their possessions.' (Jos. Ant. xi. 1. 3). — With.] R.V. even. — All.] Members of the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh were included, and the new government was organised as if all the twelve tribes were represented (Neh. 8. 1. & 4. 2), or as if the new community was the lawful successor of the ancient nation. They are called 'the children of the province (of Judah) that went up out of the captivity' (ch. 2. 1). — Raised.] Rather, stirred (see 2 Chr. 36. 22, note). 6. Strengthened their hands.] i.e. helped them as the Decree suggested (v. 4). 7. The vessels. . . Lord.] See Jer. 27. 16 & 28. 3. Gods.] Sept. Vulg. god, i.e. Bel-Merodach (Dan. 1. 2). 8. Sheshbazzar.] Probably Zerubbabel, which means one born in Babylon. See Hag. 2. 21, 23, and Jer. 22. 24. He was prince, i.e. head of the tribe of Judah. A Babylonish title would be a badge of servitude, but would indicate official position; Zerubbabel is called 'governor of Judah' (Hag. 1. 1), and Tirshatha (Ezra 2. 63). He was the son (= nephew, 1 Chr. 3. 19) of Shealtiel (Salathiel), and, by the failure of Jehoiachin's line, became the direct ancestor of Jesus (Matt. 1. 12, 13; Luke 3. 27). 9. Number.] Much fewer than had been carried away (marg. ref.). 10. Basons.] Or, bowls. 11. With, &c.] Rather, when the captives were. — Jerusalem.] Only the neighbourhood of Jerusalem was at first occupied, comprising eighteen towns at least, of which Bethlehem was the southernmost. This small 'province' alone represented the once powerful kingdom of Judah. Other caravans followed, esp. under Ezra, and doubtless smaller companies at longer or shorter intervals. But it should be observed that after the Return no attempt was made to re-establish the monarchy, although the 'house of David' was directly represented by Zerubbabel, and the promises were confirmed to him (Hag. 2. 23). Moreover, the post-exilic prophets, Haggai and Malachi, do not dwell—as even Jeremiah and Ezekiel had dwelt—on the promises to David and to his family, but on the advent of 'the Desire of all Nations' (Hag. 2. 7), of a King who should come, not as a mighty king to restore the kingdom to Israel, but as a lowly one (Zech. 9. 9), and of a great prophet like Elijah, who should herald the coming of the Anointed One (Mal. 4. 5), a coming which was postponed to a distant period by the prophecy of the Seventy Weeks (Dan. 9. 24-27). As a temporal sovereignty the Davidic Monarchy, in fact, died with Jehoiachin, and after the restoration of the exiles was regarded as a thing of the past, or rather as a monarchy in abeyance; for though time-serving 'chief priests' might, for their own ends, cry 'We have no King but Caesar,' the nation still continued to cherish Hos. 3. 5 and Mic. 4. 8 in their hearts (Lu. 19. 11; Acts 1. 6).

'YET have I set MY KING upon my holy hill of ZION.'

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

ON MSS. &c.—The Massora (p. 427, note) alone is a certain index for determining the age and goodness of Hebrew MSS. No Hebrew MS., possessing an indubitably accurate register of its antiquity, goes further back than the 12th century (Tychsen's 'Tentamen de variis Codicum Hebraicorum Vet. Test. MSS. generibus,' &c.; Rostock). That known as No. 154 of Kennicott dates 1106 A.D. The 'Synagogue Rolls' are in the Chaldee, or square Hebrew character, without vowels and accents. The parchments are from the skin of clean animals only. The 'Private MSS.' called pesulim, or profane, are of much more recent date. None are more than 500 years old. The oldest MS. of the Septuagint is the Vatican (B), 4th century, at Rome. The Alexandrine (A), 5th century, in the British Museum, appears to have been considerably altered to make it match that of the Massoretes. The Sinaitic (8), 4th century, at St. Petersburg, has no Samuel. The Targum is the Chaldee (Aramæic) Version. The Talmuds (= teaching) are Jewish commentaries. That of Jerusalem consists of Mishna (= repetition) and Gemara (= completion), 2nd and 3rd centuries. That of Babylon was completed in the 4th century. Those of Onkelos and Jonathan are paraphrases. The C'thul is the written, the K'ri the traditional, Hebrew text. The Peshito is the revised Syriac Version.

The following extract from the Babylonian Gemara is of great interest:—Who wrote the books of the Bible? . . . Samuel wrote his own Book, the Books of Judges and Ruth. David wrote the Book of Psalms, of which some were composed by the ten venerable elders, Adam the first man, Melchizedek, Abraham, Moses, Haman, Jeduthun, Asaph, and the three sons of Korah. Jeremiah wrote his own Book, the Books of Kings, and Lamentations. Hezekiah and his friends wrote the books included in the memorial book Jamsiak, i.e., Isaiah, Proverbs, Canticles, and Ecclesiastes. The men of the Great Synagogue, the books included in the memorial word Kandag, i.e., Ezekiel, the twelve, Daniel, and Esther. Ezra wrote his own Book and continued the genealogies of the Books of Chronicles down to his own times. But who completed them? Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah.

CHRONICLES.—(i.) Our data for fixing the TIME when the Books of Chronicles were compiled are mainly these; (1) 1 Chr. 9. 1 (R.V.), 'And Judah was carried away captive to Babylon.' It was subsequent therefore to 586 B.C. (2) Also to 535 B.C., when (in Cyrus' 1st year) the first batch of captives returned under Zerubbabel (Salathiel's nephew and heir); for the remainder of the chapter describes their settlement. (3) 2 Chr. 36. 22, 23 and Ezra 1. 1, 2 speak in identical words of the return in that year. These two books are by the same author, as all Hebrew authorities agree. A generation in the East may be roughly estimated at 20 years. 1 Chr. 3. 19-24 gives Zerubbabel's line to six (three, Hervey) generations. Hattush (of the 4th generation) returned with the second batch under Ezra (ch. 8. 2) in 457 B.C., the 7th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus. Ezra died (probably) about 435 B.C. If the six generations ran through 120 years, down to 416 B.C., Ezra might very well see the commencement of the last life, Hodaiah's; and have written the books just at the close of his own life. (4) Their appearance at that period would be calculated to revive Jewish interest in all that was national, to awaken past historical memories, and to shame those, who, forgetful that they were a 'peculiar people,' had been forming heathen alliances. (5) A writer at that period would be likely to give a briefer account of the last three reigns than one, like Jeremiah, living in Judæa at the time; and the account in Chronicles is much less full than that in 2 Kings. (ii.) The SOURCES from which the Chronicler drew were ancient and various, in some cases outside the national records. An interesting instance of this last is noted by Hervey ('The Higher Criticism,' 1892, S.P.C.K.). The list of (eight) Edomite kings given in 1 Chr. 1. 43-51 is manifestly the same as that given in Gen. 36. 31-39; it is headed in both cases by 'These are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom before there reigned any king over the children of Israel.' If these are the words of Moses, they mean that eight kings of Edom reigned betwixt Esau's day and his (a period of about 350 years), though Jacob's were as yet only (Gen. 35. 11) kings of the future (so Harold Browne). Hervey, however, takes the words to be those of the Chronicler, added to Genesis by a later hand. He estimates the duration of the eight reigns at 240 years, and connecting the first king, Bela, son of Beor, with Balaam, son of Beor, and taking the last to be the Hadad who was Solomon's 'adversary' (1 Kin. 11, 14), finds the same number of generations between the two as between Phinehas, Balaam's contemporary, and Ahitub, Zadok's father. Either way it is an Edomite record that is quoted. Other (Jewish) sources are indicated at p. 76. That other documents, unknown to us, were also made use of, we gather from the great similarity of parallel accounts. They are manifestly quotations from the same record (e.g., p. 73; p. 85; p. 87; p. 90, &c.), the differences being due to the Chronicler's love of statistics, and desire to point the moral of his narrative and stimulate patriotic and ecclesiastical feeling; the differences being moreover sufficient to prove that the Chronicler is not merely copying Samuel or Kings direct. Each account abounds with undesigned incidental confirmation of the accuracy of the other. Differences in numerals, or (as some think) their incredible magnitude, will present no difficulty if we remember how Hebrew numerals were written. Letters almost identical in form denote very different figures, e.g., beth ב denote 2 and 20, daleth ד and resh ר 4 and 200; and sometimes the multiples of 10 were denoted by the same letter with simply added dashes; thus 4, 40, 400, might be represented by daleth, mem, thau, which are quite dissimilar; but might also be represented by daleth, daleth with one dash, daleth with two dashes, &c. Error, therefore, is not only possible, but highly probable, with either notation.

1 SAM. 9. 7 (p. 4).—'A present' is by some (Cheyne, &c.) understood to be a fee, and they charge Samuel with PROPHESYING FOR HIRE. They ground this on the charge that the Bethel-priest brought against Amos (7. 12), misjudging (as the worldly ever do misjudge) an honesty or a spirituality they cannot understand Amos' outspokenness. 'Visionary!' (he says) better begone; and get your living (which may mean simply live, Ezek. 12. 18, 19) elsewhere!—as though he would say, 'Your fees are all you care about.' But the priest's charge would seem rather to be, that Amos was bribed by Judah to foretell evil for Israel—certainly a false charge against him; in fact no true prophet could be liable to the accusation. 'He that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him; they teach for hire; they divine (a word used only of false prophets—Pusey) for money' (Mic. 3, 5, 11), for 'handfuls of barley' (Ezek. 13, 19). Manifestly the accusation has only the false in view. No provision appears to have been made for prophet-maintenance, as for priest, Levite, and Gospel minister (1 Cor. 9, 14). That Saul's 'present' was 'prophet-hire' is not the view taken by those most familiar with Oriental customs; cp. 1 Kin. 14, 3; 2 Kin. 5, 15; 8, 8.

THE SPIRIT ON SAUL (1 Sam. 10. 6, p. 8).—If we contrast Saul and David, we must conclude that not all which David asks for in Ps. 51 was bestowed on Saul—*v. 10, a stedfast spirit, a mind stayed on the Lord, and therefore free from anxiety and doubt; v. 11, a holy spirit, a consecrating spirit, separating him for his office, and enduing him with the useful gifts; v. 12, a free spirit, a spirit that flows towards goodness as spontaneously as a river to the sea. The blessing, however, of 1 John 2, 20 was his (Sam., v. 7); detailed instructions were needless; together with his calling came qualifying knowledge. Nevertheless, he remained the king of the people's choice, not God's. They shouted (v. 24) when their petition was granted, because they did not recognize that, as when leave was given to Balaam to go to Moab, as when quails were sent in the wilderness, God was granting in displeasure. 'Not as I will, but as Thou wilt' had formed no part of their petition.*

THE WRITTEN CONSTITUTION (p. 10).—Samuel's wisdom in 'writing in a book' the Hebrew constitution is illustrated by what occurred in France when (A.D. 1788) the magistrates, threatened by the Court party, in vain appealed to an unwritten law. 'Ils invoquent les lois fondamentales du royaume, dont le code dependant n'était écrit nulle part.'—Bonnechose ii. 165.

THE LORD'S ANOINTED (1 Sam. 12. 3; p. 12). = The Messiah of Jehovah.—This title (I.XX., χριστός κυρίου, cp. Luke 2, 26, 'the Lord's Christ; or Messiah'), as a standing designation of the theocratic King as the Vicergerent of Jehovah (1 Sam. 16. 6 & 24. 6, 10; Ps. 20. 6), is characteristic of the Books of Samuel and the Psalms; it never occurs in the Books of Kings, the true idea of the kingdom having then been lost. It is here for the first time actually applied to the King, though it had been employed before in prophecy (1 Sam. 2, 10, 35). The Heb. Māshīach means 'Anointed One,' and the familiar term MESSIAH is derived thence through the Greek form Messias. It could be applied to any one specially commissioned by God, e.g. Ps. 18, 50 is in the Hebrew 'to His Messiah, to David.' But from its application to the theocratic King it became, in the form 'the King Messiah,' the designation of the future ideal ruler of the prophets, i.e. of that ideal King who should realize the highest possibilities of earthly monarchy, governing Israel with perfect justice and perfect wisdom, and securing for his subjects perfect peace. The foundation of the character of the ideal prince is the Spirit of Jehovah resting upon him (cp. 1 Sam. 10, 6 & 11. 6 & 16, 13); this displays itself in (1) wisdom and understanding, i.e. the faculty of clear perception leading him aright in matters whether of intellectual or moral interest (1 Kin. 10, 8; Job 28, 28), (2) counsel and might, i.e. sagacity in conceiving a course of action, and firmness and courage in carrying it out, (3) the know- ledge and fear of Jehorah, i.e. a full apprehension of what Jehovah demands, and the inclination to act accordingly (Isa. 11. 2).—Kirkpatrick, Stanton, Driver.

MOONED ASHITAROTH (pp. 13, 252, 273).—Only for a short period in Israel's history was the nation free from this idolatry. Its attractiveness lay no doubt in part in the licentiousness of the revelries connected with it, and the desire to do as other nations round about were doing, but perhaps yet more in that natural inclination to a feeling of awe in her presence which Macaulay (Evening, 101) has noted as universally prevalent—

'What marvel then if man, when heaven denied
A hope to cheer him and a law to guide,
Thou pure and radiant orb, adored in thee
The source of radiance and purity!' &c.

It may be that tent-life and the Oriental practice of sleeping on the housetop, specially tended to this. It is recorded of a little English tramp, used to sleeping under hedges, that the moon, which she had so often waked up to see calmly shining down on her, was her one sole idea of Deity, the only object for which she had the slightest reverence. It has been noted that 'David's Psalms contain two references only to idolatry' (Ps. 16. 4 & 18. 31). In his time there was no struggle with idolatry. Canaanite superstitions may have lingered on in secret, but there was no great party in the state openly worshipping images or other gods than Jehovah. The movement begun by Samel for the restoration of the sole worship of Jehovah and the abolition of idolatry, had not spent its force in David's day. But after the public recognition of idols by Solomon the struggle began afresh.—Sharpe ('Student's Handbook to the Psalms', p. 320).*

HEBREWS (p. 17).—The Caribs called themselves Banari, i.e. come from over sea. 'Their dialect was the same as that once spoken by the Indians of Florida.'—Froude. Cp. Josh. 24. 2, 3, 14, 15.

CIRCUMCISION (p. 21).—'The language associated with circumcision in the Bible distinguishes the use made of this rite in the Jewish religion from that found amongst certain heathen nations. Circumcision was practised by those nations (the Phœnicians, for example), and as a religious rite; but not by any, the Egyptians probably excepted, at all in the Jewish sense and meaning. The grounds on which circumcision was imposed as essential by the Law are the same as those on which Baptism is required in the Gospel. The latter in N.T. is strictly analogous to the former in O.T. Cf. Col. 2. 11, 12.'—Speaker's Commentary on Deut. 10. 16. With some nations, doubtless, the motive was cleanliness, with others (as with South Sea Islanders) lust ('The Earl and the Doctor,'—Pembroke).

AMALEKITE WAR (1 Sam. 15. 3, p. 26).—With Bedawin hordes it must necessarily be a war of utter extermination; hence the inclusion of flocks and herds in the general ban. 'The only sure method of repressing the atrocities of Bedawin tribes in the present day is found to be the depriving them of all their flocks and herds, a process which strikes at the very root of their existence, quâ Bedawin' (E. H. Palmer).

JEHOVAH (p. 35).—The meaning here assigned to the Sacred Name receives confirmation from Lias' remarks in Principles of Biblical Criticism (pp. 223, 254),* which the student is recommended to consult. He shows that the other suggested derivation, a verb meaning 'to cast down,' is in the highest degree improbable. Jehovah is no mere Jupiter tonans (on which Gesenius says, 'they only waste their time and labour,' who endeavour to establish any such relation). He considers it established beyond reasonable doubt that the root is the verb 'to exist' (Ex. 3. 14; Hos. 12. 6), of which 'it is the 3rd person singular imperfect, so that, while the verb signifies existence, the tense implies that this existence is from everlasting to everlasting.' An inscription in the Saitic temple of Isis runs thus, Εγώ είμαι τὸ γεγονός και ὄν και ἔσθαιον. The Hebrew alphabet consisted of consonants only, vowel sounds being supplied by the reader's knowledge. When the language ceased to be commonly spoken such knowledge became insufficient. The Massorettes (see p. 427) supplied the deficiency by a system of points (—: = ā; —: = a, &c.). God's great name, 'I AM,' through reverence, they objected to point. They wrote 'Lord' (Heb. adonai) beneath, thus:—יהוה adonai, out of which, being mixed the two together, sprang our Yahovâh, or Jehovah. In names such as Jehu and Hezekiah (Jah is He, is strength) Assyrian inscriptions have Yahu; and Yhu, in old Phœnician letters, appears over the figure of Baal on a coin (Gaza, 4th century B.C.) now in the British Museum. That God's covenant-name appears thus on the Moabitic Stone and elsewhere shows that the objection to the common use of it was not of ancient date. 'The way of pronouncing that Name is lost' (Pusey).

1 SAM. 17. 37 (p. 36).—THE LORD THAT DELIVERED ME. 'The recollection of dangers bravely faced and surmounted fortifies the mind against similar perils.' Ulysses, in anticipation of a conflict with the suitors, calls to mind his narrow escape from the Cyclops; τέτλαθα δὲ, κραδίη' και κύντερον ἄλλο πᾶρ' ἐτλης (Hom. Od. 20. 18); but David's ground of confidence is yet higher; he ever 'encouraged himself in the Lord' (1 Sam. 30. 6), who 'redeemed his soul out of all adversity' (2 Sam. 4. 9; 1 Kin. 1. 29). Cf. Ps. 3. 6, 7.

TO TELL (p. 40).—The double use of the Saxon tellan (to count, and recount, i.e., narrate, Germ. zählen, erzählen) may be further illustrated by 'telling beads, 'tellers,' a 'tally.' 'Here hold they no tale, i.e., take no account,—Piers Plowman, l. 9.

'And once she takes the tale of all my lambs,' —Druiden, Virg. Buc. iii. 33.

'When the shepherds from the fold
All their bleating charges told,'

—Surrey, 'Sonnet on Spring,'

'Then lovers walk and tell their tale,
Both of their bliss and of their bale.'

MIGHTAM (p. 42).—Michtam means worthy to be emblazoned, or (so Taylor, in 'The Gospel in the Law') inscribed on a monument. There are six; viz., Pss. 16, 56–60.
—J. J. Scott.

PSALM 34 (p. 49).—Beautiful as are many of Augustine's Expositions of the Psalms, we cannot always say with Petrarch, when he thanked Boccaccio for sending him a copy, 'Jam Davidicum pelagus securior navigabo, vitabo scopulos.' He supposes Abimelech to be substituted for Achish here, that we might be led 'ad querendum sacramentum,' David is Christ; and the wording of 1 Sam. 21. 13 must be framed to suit this fancy. 'He changed his countenance' means 'assumed humanity.' Affectabat, means 'He had affection,' i.e., compassion. 'Tympanizabat, at the doors' means 'He was stretched on the cross as the vellum of a drum is stretched': the 'doors' being 'men's hearts,' 'In their hands' means 'feriebatur in manibus suis,' which words Archdeacon Wilberforce quoted, in proof that the Church held the views, which he advanced in his book, and which Dr. Pusey put forth in his condemned sermon at Oxford, that Christ literally gave His body to His disciples.

THRESHING-FLOORS (p. 53).—At Geogshaz seven threshing-floors were in the full tide of winnowing with the fan; and so complete is the process that nothing but wheat is left on the firm hardened gypsum floor.—Bishop's 'Persia,' Cp. diacabapici, Matt. 3. 12. Gideon was obliged to content himself with the soft ground of the 'valley,' inaccessible to the wind though it was, 'for fear of the Midianites.'

THE NEGBE (p. 71).—'The low country north and west of Beersheba is the Negeb of the Cherethites. South of Hebron, on the verge of the hills of Judah is the Negeb of Judah. Tel Zif, Main, Kurmul, ruined cities, are the Negeb of Caleb. Tel Arad is the Negeb of the Kenites, up to the south-western end of the Dead Sea. Between Wady Rukh-meh in the north and Wady El Abyadh in the south is the Negeb of Jerahmeel.'—Besant.

THE BOW (2 Sam. 1. 21, p. 77).—Bishop

Lowth's metrical version gives the sense of this elegy; e.g. :—

'Triste solum, Gilboa! Tuis ne in montibus unquam

Vel ros, vel pluvie decidat imber aque;
Nulla ferat primos aris tua messis honores,
De grege lecta tuo victima nulla cadat!' &c.

Jonathan was 'happy in the timeliness of his death' (Tac. Agr. 44); for probably Newman's prognostication is correct :—

'Ah! had he lived before thy throne to stand,
Thy spirit keen and high
Surely had snapped in twain love's slender band,

So dear in memory.'

It is noble in David to unite Saul with Jonathan in his Lament; but if we set Saul beside two grand descriptions of men worthy to be mourned, he falls sadly short. Virg. Æn. vi. 660 :—

'Hic manus ob patriam pugnando vulnera passi;
Quique sacerdotes casti, dum vita manebat;
Quique pii vates, et Phœbo digna locuti;
Inventas aut qui vitam excoluere per artes;
Quique sui memores alios fecere merendo;
Omnibus hic nivea cinguntur tempora vitta.'

Sir W. Temple's Essay on Heroic Virtue :—
'Though it be easier to describe heroic virtue by the effects and examples than by causes or definitions, yet it may be said to arise from some great and native excellency of temper and genius, transcending the common race of mankind in wisdom, goodness, and fortitude. These ingredients, advantaged by birth, improved by education, and assisted by fortune, seem to make that noble composition which gives such a lustre to those which have possessed it, as made them appear to common eyes something more than mortals, and to have been of some mixture between divine and human race, to have been honoured and obeyed in their lives, and after their deaths bewailed and adored.

This display of noble sentiment, and its profound pathos, have paved for this elegy a way to the hearts of all ages and all lands. On the tomb of the Cid, near Burgos, is inscribed Quomodo ceciderunt robusti, et perierunt arma bellica; and for ever, by the 'Dead March' in Handel's Saul, will feelings akin to those of David that day be awakened in mourners for departed heroes. It is perhaps uncertain whether by his expression 'lovely and pleasant' (or rather, 'loving and generous') David means to point to the mutual feelings of Saul and Jonathan, or to their feelings towards himself; but certain it is that he purposes to speak truth and not flattery, to adopt that spirit of charitable hopefulness which has made De mortuis nil nisi bonum (to the credit of humanity) a household word, that spirit, which one of the most powerful writers of this century has thus put before us :— 'We may dwell upon the bright and hallowed moments of lives that have been darkened by many shadows, polluted by many sins; those moments may be welcomed as revelations to us of that which God intended His creatures to be; we may feel that there has been a loveliness in them which God gave them, and which their own evil could not take away. We may think of this loveliness as if it expressed the inner purpose of their existence; the rest may be for us as though it were not. As Nature, with her old mosses and her new spring foliage, hides the ruins which man has made, and gives to the fallen tower and broken cloister a beauty scarcely less than that which belonged to them in their prime, so human love may be at work too, Softening and concealing, And busy with her hand in healing the rents which have been made in God's nobler temple, the habitation of His own spirit.—Maurice.

The hostility of Ish-bosheth was, it may be, less marked, still he had kept David 7 years out of his inheritance. Towards him David's conduct was equally noble. He speaks of him as 'a righteous person.' His indignation at Ish-bosheth's murder may be compared with Alexander's rebuke of the assassin of Darius: 'With what rage of a wild beast wast thou possessed, that thou durst first bind and then murder a sovereign to whom thou wast under the highest obligation.' He ordered him to death, as Cæsar did the murderers of Pompey. How different was Mark Antony's conduct! With exultant laughter he greeted Cicerio's head and right hand, when, by his order, they were set before him.

HATED OF DAVID'S SOUL (2 Sam. 5, 8, p. 88).—If this reading be correct the reason of David's abhorrence remains unexplained. The proverb which follows throws no light upon it. It may have arisen from indignation at the friendly terms on which Israelites had been living there mixed up with Jebusites. Jewish writers take the blind and the lame to be an expression, like the abomination, meaning the idols, the tutelary gods, set on the walls by the Jebusites, declaring that till David removed these he could not enter, i.e., never; and that they would never restore them to their temples so long as Israel remained before their city. Following these, some translate Let him cast down into the gutter, and explain the proverb as springing from the people's love for everything David did or said, and meaning 'Never shall idol come into house of mine; did not David call them lame and blind?'—

A GOING (2 Sam. 5, 24, p. 90).—Sept. renders a banging noise as of closing doors, and in Chronicles a noise as of a whirlwind; but the Hebrew ts'ārāh means a sound as of a marching army; and such passages as Judg. 5, 4; Ps. 68, 7; Heb. 3, 12, connect it with the approach of God Himself. During the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans, the excited fancy of the Jews kept hearing this token of God's wrath (as Isa. 28, 21 led them to consider it):—

'Noise, hurried and tumultuous,
Was heard, as when a king with all his host Doth quit his palace.'—

MILMAN'S Fall of Jerusalem.

PSALM CXXXII. (2 Sam. 6, p. 91).—Whether David himself wrote this Psalm, or whether (as is more probable) it was written by a post-Exilic psalmist for use at the restoration of the Temple, it confirms the statement that there was little question in the mind of David or of the nation that God's chosen place was Jerusalem, not Shiloh. That rr. 1-5 express David's yearnings most commentators are agreed; also that rr. 6-8 are the voice of the nation alluding to the Ark's wanderings, and rejoicing in the recollection that on that day God, as represented by the Sacred Ark, entered into His 'rest.' Bunsen interprets 'We heard it' (r. 6), i.e., the joyful resolve of r. 7. Hengstenberg argues that Ephrāthāh must mean Bethlehem; and that, as the Ark was never there, the reference must be to David's limited acquaintance with it (that of hearsay merely) in his early youth. The general consensus, however, founded on the fact that Ephrāti means Ephraimite as well as Bethlehemite (Judg. 12, 5; 1 Sam. 1, 1; 1 Kin. 11, 26), accepts Shiloh in the tribe of Ephraim as the most probable interpretation.

UZZAH (2 Sam. 5, 6, p. 92).—The 'breach,' i.e., outbreak of God's wrath, on Uzzah teaches that no goodness of intention can justify a wrong action. If ever the record of Uzzah's touch, of the backward look of Lot's wife, of Eve's tasting the fruit, or of the fear of the children of Beth-el, suggest the thought 'Surely the punishment is out of all proportion to the offence, many worse sins have passed unnoticed by God,' it may be dismissed by reference to these two general principles; (1) Divine interference is not to be looked for because a crime is enormous (for the future is the season of punishment), but because there are certain ends of God's moral government to be subserved, (2) Whenever God does interfere, He may punish up to any degree, seeing that by no degree can the guilt of the least sin be exceeded. Moreover, if it be thought hard that one should suffer to point God's moral for the many, it should be remembered, that in none of those cases is the punishment necessarily eternal. Cf. 1 Cor. 5, 5; Heb. 10, 29.

1 CHRON. 16, 8 (p. 97).—'The ode is a cento from Ps. 105, 96, 107, 106, all most certainly of later date, inserted as a thanksgiving suitable for the occasion, though not necessarily the one used. Some think it a later insertion in the book.'—Kirkpatrick.

SURE MERCIES.—2 Sam. 7, 16 (pp. 101, 102). 'In any temporal sense the prophecy is an utter failure. But in a spiritual sense it has been fulfilled to the letter. Christ is the descendant of David, and He is acknowledged as King by hundreds of millions of men, nor is there any sign that His kingdom is drawing to a close.'—Lias ('Principles of Biblical Criticism,' p. 136).

PSALM 60. 4 (p. 106).—'Thou gavest us indeed a banner, when we took the field for the true religion, but what a banner! Far from being a rallying point for God's warriors, it seemed as if it was intended to scatter us in flight.'—Cheyne, R.V. marg., 'That they may flee before the bow.'

CHIEF RULERS (p. 107).—The statement here is scarcely sufficient ground for Wellhausen's inference, 'David exercised unfettered control over the appointment of the priests who were merely his officials.' Much misunderstanding regarding the uses of the word 'priest' may be removed by reference to Girdlestone's Synonyms of the Old Testament, p. 383. 'The original meaning of the word kohen (rendered priest, chief ruler, principal officer, prince, αὐλάρχης) is lost in obscurity. The French, and other nations which have translated the word 'Sacrificer,' have made a mistake, because it is not the business of the priest to sacrifice. The people are the sacrificers, i.e. slayers of the victim, whilst the priests, according to the Levitical system, sprinkled the blood of atonement on the altar and turned the pieces into fragrant smoke: and this they did as representatives of the mercy of God.' Many modern scholars hold that 'the Hebrew word has nothing essentially sacerdotal about it, and is apparently not restricted to those who held the sacerdotal office' (F. Watson, D.D., 1892).

MILCOM'S CROWN (p. 118).—Jewish tradition says, that Ittai, as a Gittite, could, and did, touch the idol and remove its crown.

2 SAM. 15. 12 (p. 125).—'Sent for,' lit. 'sent,' as Sept. B. and R.V. marg.; Vulg. accessivus; Sept. (some MSS.) ἀπέστειλε καὶ ἐκάλεσε.

KIDRON (pp. 130, 182).—'Nearly in the centre of the line along which stretches the village of Siloam, there exists a rocky plateau, with steps cut in the rocks' side leading from the valley to the village. By this road, troublesome and even dangerous, pass habitually the women of Siloam to fill their vessels at the 'Virgin's Fount' (Ain Sitti Mariam). The fellahin divide the Kedron valley into three sections, Wady Sitti Mariam, Feraun, and Eynul (S.), Feraun, or Pharaoh's, means simply anything ancient or royal, as in France 'Cæsar's' means anything Roman. This 'valley of the king' occupies precisely the site of the king's gardens named in the Bible.'—Ganneau.

PSALM 42. 1 (p. 137).—'Panteth after the Waterbrooks': The marginal rendering 'brayeth' finds no place in text or margin of R.V.; yet it is admissible, and, if Neil's rendering of āphee (= aqueducts) be correct, preferable. If of Arab derivation, āragh may mean ascend, look up, long for. The Rabbins, however, take it to be onomatopoeic (cp. ōronā = a howling, roaring) here and in Joel 1. 20 (A.V. cry, R.V. pant)—the mournful cry of the stag on finding the channel dry, or that the water is within a closed aqueduct (in Palestine usually earthen pipes inclosed in cement: one of bored stone exists at Jerusalem). The verb āphee signifies contain, hold firmly, restrain (cp. 1 Sam. 13. 12; Gen. 45. 1; Isa. 63. 15). Aphee has seven different renderings in A.V., of which the commonest, river, seems the least in accordance with this derivation. David, in Gilead, scents (so to speak) the inaccessible water, 'brays for thirst' within sight almost of Jerusalem's means of grace.

GIRDLES (p. 139).—'The Bakhtiaris wear woollen girdles with a Kashmir pattern. The girdle supplies the place of pockets, and in it are deposited knives, the pipe, the tobacco-pouch, the flint and steel, and various etceteras.'—Bishop's Persia.

REPHAIM (p. 151).—Neubauer writes, 'Rephaim meant first shades of the dead (lit. the quiet, the shadow; Job 26. 5; Isa. 26. 19; Ps. 88. 10), then prehistoric people'; cf. Gen. 14. 5. Whether these as a nation were gigantic, or (so P. Smith) only individuals among them, is uncertain; as also whether Rapha, in 1 Chr. 20. 4, is the name of the founder of a gigantic family, or (so Ball) a collective designation for a people. Comp.—

Men call me Ha-rapha, of stock renowned As Og, or Anak, and the Emims old.'

—MILTON, Sam. Agon.

TEMPLE WORSHIP (pp. 163, 242, &c.).—If we would understand aright the purpose of the worship, whether of the Tabernacle, or (which was modelled carefully after it) the Temple, we must set beside the O.T. account of either the name which St. Paul (Heb. 9. 1) gives to each alike (for he views them as identical)—a worldly sanctuary' (τὸ τε ἅγιον κοσμητικόν, i.e., in no sense πνευματικόν); we must note how he describes the observances therewith connected as 'weak and beggarly elements' (Gal. 4. 9, ἀσθενὴ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα)—'beggarly,' because they are στοιχεῖα τοῦ κόσμου, and add nothing to our spiritual treasure; we must note, further, what he indicates as the duration intended for such worship 'until the time of reformation' (Heb. 9. 10), μέχρ' καιροῦ διορθώσεως, the time of rectification, the days for higher and better things. What days? The days of the Gospel, of the Church's fuller growth; when the Church, become a man, may put away childhood's things; when form and ceremony and symbol, material and sensuous splendour, a visible bright cloud to enable them to realize God's Presence, incense to show them that prayer ascends and is acceptable, are enjoined on them no more. Between the worship of the New Covenant and of the Old there is rather contrast than similitude. The Christian sanctuary corresponds not to the temple, but to the synagogue (lit. synagoga). Two canons of worship remain—(1) 'God is spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth'; and (2) 'Let all things be done decently (εὐχρηδώς, decorously, in a seemly, reverent manner) and in order (κατὰ ταῦτα, with uniform regularity).' Whatsoever is included in these belongs to the time of reformation'; τὸ δὲ περισσὸν τούτων ἐκ τοῦ ποιητοῦ ἔστιν.

ALAMOTH (p. 167).—An inscription (Phœnician) lately deciphered in Cyprus gives the expenses of a new-moon festival. Among other items occurs, 'For the alamoth and the 22 alamoth.' This is the very word used for 'Virgin' in Isa. 7, 14, and for the 'damsels playing with timbrels' in Ps. 68, 25 (see Ps. 46, title). It would seem to mean the prima donna and 22 sopranos of their choir.

THE SWEET PSALMIST OF ISRAEL (p. 171).—There is no Psalm which we can assign to David with absolute certainty, and use to throw light on his character, or any special event of his life' (Robertson Smith). 'No Psalm can be proved to be of pre-exilic origin' (Cheyne). In the face of such statements it might seem presumptions in any one, not himself 'an authority,' to have made precisely that use of some of them. The support of authority, however, is not wanting; it may be found in one or other (often in several) of these great names, Bleek, Delitzsch, Ewald, Hitzig, Perowne, Jennings. Still, in this work, it has never been intended to make any positive statement about any Psalm, merely to assign a possible, suitable, perhaps probable, date. Lias' remarks may be fitly quoted here:—We might as well expect to find a Wesleyan Hymn Book with no hymns by Wesley in it as a national collection of the Psalms of David, of which David wrote none. . . . If Psalm 51 were not written by David, but by some later writer in his name, that writer must have been (to use the expression of Bishop Westcott in relation to the Gospel of St. John) "an unknown Shakespeare" though living in days when the drama was as yet undeveloped.* Compare with it the dramatic language of 2 Sam. 12, 22. Nor are Gladstone's words (The Impregnable Rock, ch. iv.) less weighty. 'The Psalms come to us through a channel supplied by the kingdom of Judah. If they had been largely composed after the severance of the ten tribes from the two, would they not have presented some more definite indication of that severance? The name of Israel is the name under which in the Psalms the chosen people are described. It occurs 26 times. The name of Judah occurs ten times, but never in that paramount sense, always locally or tribally (Ps. 76, 1; 114, 2; 60, 7; 108, 8). He asks also why, if of post-exilic date, the deliverance from Egypt, not that from Babylon, is the one which is continually referred to (Psalms 68, 72, 80, 81, 105, 106, 114, 135, 136)? cp. Matt. 22, 43; Rom. 4, 6; Heb. 4, 7.

TAHTIMHODSHI (p. 173).—An emended reading of the text based upon the Septuagint, εἰς γῆν θαλασσῶν ('Ebasōn'), transforms the unintelligible Tahtim-hodshi into 'the Hittites of Kadesh, a city which long continued to be their chief stronghold in the valley of the Orontes.' The Amorites were an older nation. The Hittites (Heth, Khiti; Egyptian, Kheta; Assyrian, Khathu) partly displaced and partly mingled with them. Later the name the land of the Hittites became, on the Assyrian monuments, synonymous with Syria; but Egyptian artists depict Hittites with yellow skins, Syrians (Arameans) with red.

HORNS (p. 184).—In a simple volute, terminating in a pillar below, resembling a horn nailed up against a wooden post, found in the fourth Lachish city (900 to 1100 B.C.), Petrie sees the origin of the 'horns of the altar.'

TITLES OF PSALMS.—On the words 'of' and 'to' in the Titles Taylor remarks that 'of' need not necessarily imply authorship, but may mean 'written in the character of David, or with allusion to some particular occasion' e.g. Ps. 3 (Absalom); that 'to' may imply authorship or merely assignment to a precentor for performance. This remark applies to the title of Ps. 72, 'For' (marg. 'of' (so R.V.); Var. 'by') 'Solomon' (p. 196).

ARGOB IN BASHAN (1 Kings 4, 13; p. 202).—Edrei (Og's capital) has a population of 5,000. The basalt stones, remnants of cyclopean masonry, are elaborately carved. There is an underground city of rock-hewn streets, houses, shops, stairs, cisterns, pillars, air-holes, a market-place, and plenty of water. —(James Wells, D.D., 1896.)

PHœNICIA (1 Kin. 5, 1, note, pp. 205, 241).—Similarity of language constituted doubtless one strong bond of union betwixt Jews and Phœnicians, which, on other grounds (Ex. 23, 30), did not operate in the case of the kindred Canaanites proper. [Both Phœnicians, on their coins, and Carthaginians called themselves Canaanites—August, Expos. ad Rom.] The names and order of Phœnician and Hebrew letters are almost identical; so also are the forms of most, derived mainly, in both languages, from the forms of visible objects, the names of which begin with that letter. That many nouns and verbs in common use, also numerals, are the same in both languages is shown by extant inscriptions chiefly on gravestones and votive tablets. In Isa. 19, 18 we find Hebrew styled 'the language of Canaan'; and in Isa. 23, 11 the Hebrew for 'the merchant city,' i.e. Phœnicia, is 'Canaan.'

1 KINGS 5, 11 (p. 208).—MEASURES OF WHEAT.—The professional measurer is (so Nöl) a recognised institution in Palestine. When the year's store is laid in, he accompanies the seller. His wooden tinnoch resembles a shallow bushel. From time to time he shakes it, and puts it strongly with his hands. When the cone, which he raises in the centre, will no more hold together, then 'good measure' (Luke 6, 38) is certified. The process adds 30 p.e. to the quantity. [The cor, (κόρος, Luke 16, 7) = 8 bushels = 1 homer = 10 ephabs = 100 omers. The seah (σάτον, Luke 13, 21) = 1 peck]. He certifies quantity, not purity. To separate, later, straw, pebbles, bearded darnel (= tares; lohum tennitentum), is the duty of the women of the household, using a sieve (cf. Amos 9, 9; Luke 22, 31). Possibly there may be allusion to this picking out of the minute stones (tzeroar) in Hushai's hyperbolic language (2 Sam. 17, 13).

JACHIN (1 Kings 7, 21; p. 221).—Ben Zakkai, founder of Talmudic Judaism, when dying was visited by his scholars. Seeing him weep, they said 'O Light of Israel, O Pillar at the right hand! O mighty Hammer, why weepst thou?' His answer is interesting, clearly indicating, as it does, that he regarded the judgment to take place at death as a final judgment, that there was no atonement to be looked for beyond the grave, that the prayers of his scholars whom he left behind on earth could be of no service to him in another world. He died shortly after the destruction of the Temple by Titus.—(C. H. H. Wright.)

THE PERFECT HEART (p. 235).—'Shalam = entirely surrendered; islam = religion, as entire submission; moslem = religious man, as entirely devoted.'—Lamby.

STORE-CITIES (1 Kin. 9, 19, p. 241).—An illustration of the character of such cities and of their use has recently been furnished by the discovery and excavation of one of the treasure cities (Var. R.V. store-cities), viz. PITNOM, built by the Israelites for Pharaoh (Ex. 1, 11). A Greek inscription testifies that the ancient name of this city was Ileropolis, or the city of Ero; a name derived from the old Egyptian Ara = 'a storehouse.' Such cities were required by the two great kings of the 19th dynasty, Seti I. and Ramesses II., for two purposes,—to store the tribute brought home from their Asiatic wars and to form commissariat stores for the large armies going to and returning from Syria (see notes 'Gifts,' &c., below, and 'Hittites,' p. 735).

The exploration of the city area showed that it consisted almost entirely of store-houses, massive buildings with walls twenty-two feet thick. Like the Egyptian granaries represented in the paintings, the only opening was at the top, where the corn was poured in. The whole was constructed of brickwork, and in the large store-houses were compartments formed by walls from eight to ten feet thick, built of sun-dried bricks without straw.

1 KINGS 9, 28 (p. 243); 10, 22 (p. 248).—SHIPS OF TARSHISH.—Milton, led by Josephus (Ant. i. 6, 1 and viii. 7, 2), identifies Tarshish with Tarsus in Cilicia, and understands by this expression a navy putting out from 'the Sea of Tarsus' and trading with the isles of Greece (peopled also by Javan, Japheth's son, Gen. 10, 4) and with Spain (Cadiz):—

'Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for the Isles
Of Javan, or Gadier.'—Sums. Agon.

The Septuagint (Isa. 23, 1; Ezek. 27, 12) reads Carthage for Tarshish (πλοία Καρχηδόνας . . . καρχηδόνοι έμποροι); but Carthage was not founded till (traditionally) 853 B.C., or (according to Josephus) 861 B.C. Theodoret accepts Carthage; Eusebius, Tartessus in Spain. Psalm 72, of which Solomon is the subject, while prophetically pointing out the extent of the kingdom of the 'Greater than Solomon,' indicates (v. 10) the two directions which Solomon's navies took, 'Tarshish and the isles,' 'Sheba (Arabia) and Saba' (Herod, Jos. Ant. ii. 10, 2).

GIFTS, PRESENTS, TRIBUTE (1 Kin. 10, 25; p. 249).—The wealth of ancient Syria.—The wealth and luxury of David and Solomon and of later kings, e.g. Ahab, may be illustrated and explained from the annals of the great Egyptian subjector of Syria, Thotmes III. (cir. 1500-1450). His annals are full of detail, and give a most graphic view of the state of Syria in his time; from them Professor Petrie infers that the civilization of Syria was then equal or superior to that of Egypt. This Pharaoh records, from his 23rd year onwards, that he took as spoil, or received as propitiatory offerings, as tokens of submission or of loyalty, or as annual tribute, the best products and manufactures of each part of the country, viz. of N. Syria (Naharina = the neighbourhood of Aleppo), of the mountains or hill-country of Syria (Retennu), of Phœnicia (Zahi), and of the cities of the coast (e.g. Aruta = Arvad).

Generally, he describes in Zahi (Phœnicia) 'its orchards full of their fruit . . . their wines abundant in their wine presses, as water flows down, their corn on the threshing-floors . . . more abundant than the sand of the shores.'—'The army (he says) was satiated with their shares . . . the soldiers of His Majesty were drunk and anointed with beg oil every day, as in the festivals in Egypt';—he records that 'by the tribute of Netennu (Central Syria) every station to which His Majesty came was supplied with good bread and common bread, with oil, incense, wine, honey, fruits, more abundant than anything known to the soldiers of His Majesty without exaggeration'—and that by the tribute of Naharina (N. Syria) 'the forts' (cp. Solomon's store cities in Lebanon, 1 Kin. 9, 19, and in Hamath, 2 Chr. 8, 4) 'were provisioned with all sorts of things according to the rate of the yearly tax.'

Specifically, Thotmes III. describes the natural produce of Syria, viz. corn of various sorts—in one year he carried away 150,000 bushels—'from the fields of Maketa (Megiddo)' in addition to that cut and consumed by his soldiers—wine, oil, dates (from Zahi), honey, incense; choice woods and fragrant woods of the country, including beams of cedar: flocks of sheep and goats—at Megiddo in his 23rd year he took 20,500 sheep (cp. the tribute of Mesha, king of Moab, to Ahab, 2 Kin. 5, 4); bulls, oxen, and small cattle; horses, mares, and fillies; asses. He also records the receipt of precious metals and of precious stones and materials (perhaps only partly of the country, as ivory is included), and of the best manufactures of the country, including works of art, and even of the artists and craftsmen (cp. 2 Kin. 5, 6, &c., and 7, 13). Gold and silver in rings, native copper, lead, emery, alabaster, lapis lazuli, malachite, are mentioned. Lapis lazuli in the rough, and fashioned like the head of a ram; heads, in gold, of a deer, a bull, a lion, a goat; dishes, two-handled vases, cups, and other vessels of gold and silver, sometimes inlaid with lazuli; vases of bronze and copper with silver handles, besides personal ornaments, such as earrings and bracelets of gold and silver. Statues of silver with heads of gold and of ebony inlaid with gold. Wooden staffs with human heads of ivory, ebony, and kharub wood inlaid with gold, a staff used as a chief's sceptre, inlaid with gold; tables of ivory and kharub wood inlaid with gold and with all precious stones; chairs and footstools (cp. Solomon's throne, 2 Chr. 9, 17-19, There was not the like made in any kingdom, and Ahab's 'ivory-house,' 1 Kin. 22, 39; cp. Ezek. 27, 6). Chariots of State and coats of mail, hitherto unknown on the Egyptian monuments, hereafter appear on them: gilded chariots at first, for the use of royalty only. In the annals above quoted, Thotmes III. records the capture of two gold-plated chariots in his 23rd year; the receipt of ten chariots, half wrought with gold, and with poles of gold, and half wrought with electrum, and with poles of aget, as part of the tribute of the Retennu in the next year, and later, forty adorned with gold and silver and painted, and nineteen adorned with silver and provided with their weapons; later, others form part of the tribute of Zahi and Naharina also to the amount of seventy in a single year.

Of military equipment, tent-poles are mentioned, plated with silver or 'adorned with bronze as if inlaid with precious stones,' suits of bronze armour and weapons of bronze inlaid with gold, helmets and spears of bronze, falchions, and shields, and bows. Many of the above objects were deemed worthy to be depicted on the walls of the temple of Karnak. — Petrie's History of Egypt, 1896.

THE KINGS OF THE HITTITES (pp. 250, 375).—After the expulsion of the Hyksos or Shepherd-kings of Egypt (cf. Gen. 46, 34) had been completed by Ahmes (Amosis) the founder of the 18th dynasty, Egypt under Thotmes III., the greatest king of that dynasty, re-established its suzerainty over the petty principalities of Canaan and Aram (A.V. Syria) as far as the Euphrates—and beyond it, for the Tel-el-Amarna tablets (cir. B.C. 1500-1450) contain despatches to the reigning Pharaoh from Mesopotamian princes. But as the dynasty became weakened by internal dissensions—and such was periodically the case in Egypt—the Kheta appear in the valley of the Orontes as a power able to resist Egypt and even to ally itself with the Pharaoh on equal terms. These Kheta seem to have been invaders from Asia Minor—the Tel-el-Amarna tablets record their gradual advance and occupation of N. Syria—who partly mingled with and partly displaced the older Amorites. They had dominated and united under their leadership the principalities of the upper part of the Euphrates Valley, and of Asia Minor also, for their army contained contingents even from the shores of the Egean Sea, viz., Lycians, Teucrians, Dardanians, and Lydians.

With this confederation a new and powerful Egyptian dynasty, the 19th, long waged war in annual campaigns, having found that almost all Egypt's Asiatic provinces had been lost during her weakness. Seti I., the founder of the dynasty, had for his special object the capture of Kadesh in the upper valley of the Orontes, apparently the southern stronghold of the Kheta. His monuments depict him in his chariot drawn by his favourite pair of horses called 'Big with Victory' and engaged in a campaign described as 'the going up of Pharaoh to conquer the land of Kadesh in the territory of the Amorites.' Another inscription records that 'he has struck down the Kheta, he has slain their princes.' Ramesses II., the Great, of the same dynasty, regarded the defeat of the Kheta in the Orontes Valley near Kadesh as his greatest achievement. But the battle was hard-fought and left the Hittites so strong that Ramesses was glad to make a treaty of peace with the king Kheta-sira and to marry his daughter as part of the bargain. This treaty, engraved on a plate of silver, is the oldest (cir. 1350 B.C.) whose terms are recorded, but apparently was only one of a series between the Kheta and Pharaoh; the poem of Pentaur describing the battle which is inscribed on the walls of the Temple of Karnak, of which Ramesses II. built the greater part, was reputed one of the most valuable historical memorials of the Egyptians. Ramesses is represented as returning from the war in his chariot surrounded by his prisoners, who are depicted by nations, and thus furnish the types of the neighbours of the Hebrews. The Kheta have a type of face distinct from any other race of W. Asia, but their features resemble those of the warriors upon the Hittite monuments of Hamath and Carchemish (see below). Their principal characteristics are a straight nose and a receding forehead and chin; the plaiting of the hair in pig-tails, Tartar fashion, is distinctly shown. A head upon an inlaid tile from the palace of Ramesses II. at Tel-el-Yahudieh also gives the type clearly. The Egyptian artists depict the Kheta as beardless but with a thin wire-like moustache, black haired, with brown eyes, and of a yellowish-white complexion; and these data, combined with their short stumpy and thick-limbed figures, have caused them to be classed with the Mongol race. The type may yet be seen among the Tartars of Turkestan, and even amongst the Turkish peasants of the Taurus (Conder). Some associate them racially with the Hyksos ('Turanians of a Mongol type related to the Hittites') by a comparison of the faces of the statues and sphinxes discovered at Zoan (Sân = Tanis) and Bubastis (Tell Basta). Lenormant points out that they had all the characteristics of a Caucasian tribe. On their own monuments (see below) their dress comprises a high conical cap with the brim turned up in horn-shaped points, surmounted by the crescent moon and the solar disk (apparently the emblems of the Hittite Ash-toreth), boots with upturned ends, and long fingerless gloves. Such boots and gloves are still worn by the mountaineers of Cappadocia, and indeed of Asia Minor and Greece, for protection against frost and snow; and hence it is inferred that the original home of the Kheta was in the range of Taurus, N. of the Gulf of Antioch, and that they extended their power thence both westward and eastward.

The identification of the Kheta with the Hittites, i.e. the non-Aramaic communities of Upper or Hollow Syria, was made in 1879 by Professor Sayce, who discovered that the peculiar archaic sculptures and inscriptions found in 'a continuous chain from Lydia in the west to Kappadokia and Lykaonia in the east,' and including the sculptured figure in the Pass of Karabel near Sardis, identified by Herodotus with the Egyptian conqueror Sesostris (i.e. Rameses II.), bore hieroglyphics corresponding with those upon the monuments at Hama (Hamath) discovered by Burckhardt in 1812, and those upon the monuments recently disinterred from the site of the Hittite capital Carchemish by Mr. George Smith and Mr. Skene. Similar inscriptions discovered since 1879 on the sitting figure carved out of the rocks of Mt. Siplyos in Lydia, which the Greeks as far back as the time of Homer fancied was the Niobe of their mythology, show that this famous figure is also Hittite, being that of the great goddess of Carchemish, the Babylonian Ishtar, the Syrian Ashtoreth; cut upon it was found in 1882 the cartouche of Rameses II., showing that this conqueror penetrated to the Ægean Sea. Amongst other ideographs, that of the double-headed eagle, brought to Europe by Crusaders and adopted by Russia and Austria, appears on Hittite sculpture, and probably, in common with the rest of Hittite art, had an early Babylonian, i.e. Akkadian, origin.

The connexion of the Hittites with the Hebrew history may date from David's reign, for it is possible that Hadadezer's expedition (2 Sam. 8.3) to recover his border at the River Euphrates, was directed against the chief Hittite centre, Carchemish, for 'he had wars with Toi, king of Hamath, which seems from its monuments to have been also a Hittite city. However, the Hittites appear on the scene later as barring the westward advance of Assyria under Tiglath-pileser I.; but Shalmaneser II. (or III.) extended the authority of Assyria to the Mediterranean by 35 years of war. Rezon's new kingdom of Damascus (1 Kin. 11. 23-25), under Hadadidri or Hadadezer, i.e. Ben-hadad II., was the chief object of his attack. Shalmaneser records that in his 6th year he overthrew at Karkar the confederate army of Hadadezer of Damascus and of 10 or 11 other kings, including a contingent from Ahab, king of Israel (Sirlâ, cp. 1 Kin. 20.34), and that he then penetrated to the Orontes; also that, in his 18th year, he defeated Hazael, king of Syria-Damascus, and other confederates at Senir or Shenir (the Amorite name of Mt. Hermon, Dent. 3. 9) and penetrated to the Mediterranean near Beyrout by the old road from Damascus (see The Black Obelisk below). At this time he claims to have received tribute from Yahua (Jehu) the son of Khumri (Omri), i.e. the representative of Omri's kingdom of Samaria.

The Kheta, who had successfully resisted the advance of Egypt, found the Assyrian advance comparatively well organized and persistent, and, as stronghold after stronghold was captured by them (cp. Isa. 10. 9 & 36. 19), the Hittite confederacy was gradually shattered. In B.C. 745 Pul, i.e. Tiglath-pileser II. (or III.), the founder of the new Assyrian Empire, captured Arpad, and overran the kingdom of Hamath. Periodically, vassalage to the Assyrian was repudiated, and confederacies of the Kheta with their neighbours were formed and suppressed by the Assyrian kings, especially by Shalmaneser II. (or III.), until finally the vigorous Sargon II. put down a rebellion in Arpad and Hamath which apparently had had the support of Uzziah, king of Judah, and put Hamath under an Assyrian viceroy. Then, by the conquest of Carchemish in B.C. 717, and the deportation of its inhabitants, he put an end to the Hittite power. The Hittite nation 'thus disappears from monumental history within a century of the latest notice of its kings (Ahab's reign) in the Old Testament.'

It is interesting to notice that a Hittite seal, lately (1895) obtained by the British Museum, which represents Ashtoreth, has a curious adjunct, the meaning of which can only be guessed at. On one of its eight faces an eagle-headed, pig-tailed figure, with finger pointing to a crescent moon above, is pouring out a libation before a double-faced goddess (Pallas and Aphrodite combined.—Professor Gardner, Hellenic Soc. Jour. vol. ii.). Beneath is an equilateral triangle, supposed to indicate the name of the deity, or to be a symbol representing her divinity. It appears also on the obverse of this side. There a bent cord (2 or stream), taken elsewhere by Dr. Hayes Ward to pictograph influence emanating from a deity, depends from a bowl held by two eagle-headed pig-tailed figures. This indicates, it is thought, that the benign influence of the triangle-goddess turns aside the stream of evil influence flowing from the reservoir of malignity above. The combination of offices in one deity is met with frequently, e.g.—

LACHISH (pp. 264, 492).—Bliss (1894), to some extent, but not conclusively, confirms Petrie's identification (1890) of Lachish with Tell el Hesry, 16 miles E. by N. of Gaza, 23 miles W. of Hebron, 3 miles S.W. of Umm Lakis. The Amorite city (from 1600 to 2000 B.C.) stood 60 ft. above the stream. On its ruins ten successive cities were built, each at a higher level than the last, the last being dated about 400 B.C., and standing 130 ft. above the stream. [The same thing occurred at Troy, where seven superimposed cities were discovered (Schliemann). Below the surface of London are found brickbats, relics of the Great Fire; then fragments of Norman mouldings; then a coin or two of Alfred, or a bit of Saxon wall; then Roman tiles, concrete, and Samian ware; below all a bronze sword, or other such British relic, at a depth perhaps of 30 ft. (Petrie).] The Amorite walls, of sun-dried bricks, appear to have been as remarkable for thickness (28 ft.) as for height (Num. 13, 28; Deut. 1, 28). Between the second and third cities from the bottom, or above the Amorite, a bed of ashes (3 ft. to 7 ft. deep) is found, betokening alkali burning (Petrie), or a series of furnaces (Bliss). The buildings above that (up to City vii.) represent cities existing during the reigns of the kings of Judah to the Captivity. Speaking generally, the pottery found below this bed is of Amorite, that found above it is of Phœnician or Greek ware. The first city above this bed (i.e. City iv.) may (Petrie) date about 900 B.C., or earlier. The received date for Rehoboam's 'cities of defence,' of which Lachish was one (p. 264), is 975 B.C. City vi. would appear, from Phœnician and Greek inscriptions found, to have been a buried ruin by 500 B.C., and to have been founded between that date and 800 B.C. Below this city none of the polished red and black Greek ware (dating 550 to 350 B.C.), so abundant in Cities vii. and viii., is found. City vii. was built of fire-burnt, instead of sun-burnt, bricks. Granaries, 3 ft. or 4 ft. deep, are there; also burnt grain of various kinds, and other tokens that this city was destroyed by fire. Petrie supposes the Jews, after the Captivity, finding themselves unable to capture the old site of Lachish, to have settled at Umm Lakis, three miles off. He understands that name to mean 'her mother was Lachish' (cp. Judg. 1, 27, where 'towns' = daughters), and in that district the name Abu Selim is found, meaning 'his father is Selim'; but commonly elsewhere (Bliss), Abu and Umm, so used, are understood the other way, 'father, mother of.' Further investigation may lead to the positive identification of Tell el Hesry with Lachish, and of Tell el Nejlch, 3½ miles off, with Eglon; but at present the evidence appears insufficient. ['A Mound of Many Cities.']

1 KINGS 12, 31 (p. 266).—'The gods of the inhabitants (nominally Moslems) are practically buried saints. Their high places are crowned with domed, whitened tombs or sanctuaries (Arab. mukam, Heb. māgôm = place), used as hallowed receptacles, as wishing-places, and places of accepted prayer. The saint is styled webi (= friend), or nebi (= prophet), or schech (= chief). The adjoining trees are covered with rags, in memory of vows made, which are supposed to acquire healing and magical powers.'

THE DAN-CALF (p. 266).—Cyril does not accept the Jewish tradition followed in the note, but says that it had been sent to Pul by Menahem (2 Kin. 15, 19), and that the northern Israelites comforted themselves with the idea that the area of its worship would hereby be enlarged; but that they were disappointed, because Pul ordered the image to be broken up; and that hence the Bethel priests were in despair when a like fate threatened their calf (Hos. 10, 5).

POINTS OF CONTACT BETWEEN HEBREW AND EGYPTIAN HISTORY (2 Kin. 14, 25, p. 274).—In the Contemporary Review for May, 1896, Professor Flinders Petrie points out how few and late are those which can be 'solidly established. . . . Although the geography of Palestine has been illustrated by the (Egyptian) Monuments, yet absolutely not a trace of the Israelites or Jews has been discovered in any form on them. In Egypt, Pithom and Goshen were identified—Necho, Tirhakah, So, and Shishak were identified, but little of their doings in Palestine are recorded. Of Shishak, the list of conquered towns showed many names known in Palestine, but no Jerusalem is amongst them, and the supposed Kingdom of Judah is now known to refer to a small village, Yehud, belonging to the king. This year, however, an inscription specifically naming the people of Israel, and recording their defeat by king Merenptah, the son of Ramesses the Great, has given us at once the only Egyptian mention of the race, and the earliest certain allusion to any historical connexion with them on any monument or record outside of the Old Testament.' This inscription, 'the historical prize of the year, 1895-6,' was discovered by Professor Petrie in the site of the temple which he identified as belonging to Merenptah, at Thebes, and has been translated by Mr. Griffith. It closes as follows:—'For the sun of Egypt has wrought this change; he was born as the fated means of revenging it, the king Merenptah. Chiefs bend down, saying, "Peace to thee"; not one of the nine bows raises his head. Vanquished are the Tahennu (N. Africans); the Khita (Hittites) are quieted; ravaged is Pa-kanana (Kannu) with all violence; taken is Askadni (Ashkelon); seized in (?) is Kamezi; Yenu (Yanoh) of the Syrians is made as though it had not existed; THE PEOPLE OF YISRAEL IS SPOILED, IT HATH NO SEED; Syria has become as widows of the land of Egypt; all lands together are in peace.'... 'The recital of the conquests of the king passes from Libya to Syria, and refers to a war of which very few traces have yet been recovered. Beginning with the Hittites in the north, the king next names I'a-kanana, which was a fortress of the Canaanites; this appears most likely to be the modern Deir Kanun, five miles south-east of Tyre, or else the village of Kana, a little further south-east. Next comes Askadni, which is not known in this form; and perhaps by error of the sign d for that of l it should read Askalni or Askelon. The following name of Kazmel is also unknown; and here again a very likely error of the sculptor may have confused two bird hieroglyphics, so that it should read Kazal, the ancient Chesulloth or modern Iksal in the plain of Esdraelon, thirteen miles north-east of Taanach. Yenn of the Amn, or Syrians, is generally agreed to be Yanuh, east of Tyre. Then comes the long-sought name of the people of Israel, which is thus placed in connection with the north of Palestine. They were spoiled, and had no seed. This has just the same range of meaning as in English; seed being generally used for seed-corn, but poetically used for posterity, as we say "the seed of Abraham."... That the name here is that of the people Israel, and not of the city Jezreel, is shown by the writing of it with s and not z, and by its being expressly a "people," unlike the other names here, which are those of "places."

1 KINGS 17. 1 (p. 311).—DEW (Heb. tal) is very frequently mentioned in Scripture. Extreme importance is attached to it (Gen. 27. 28; Deut. 33. 13; Prov. 19. 12; Mic. 5. 7) beyond anything known to ourselves, which would specially not belong to it in Palestine, where it forms only in winter, the time of abundant heavy rains. From April to October, the rainless season, the ground, baked by a cloudless sun, and at times a scorching shirocco (Ezek. 17. 10; 19. 12; Hos. 13. 15), never cools sufficiently to create dew. Nor would 'The clouds drop down the dew' (Prov. 3. 20) be a correct statement anywhere. Probably (so Neil) what is meant is the night-mist, which, rising from the Mediterranean, sweeps along at a low level, moistening all before the sun is up (Hos. 6. 4). Thomson speaks of it as 'dense, low-lying fog... waves of vapour.'

1 KINGS 18. 4 (pp. 314, 317, &c.).—Note, that the PROPHECIC OFFICE had no place originally under the Law. 'Every other office was defined, and its duties were described. Further, the persons who were to perform those duties were appointed, even down to those who carried the minutest parts of the Tabernacle, down to the hewers of wood and drawers of water for the service of the Lord; but there was no place for the prophet. And if Israel had walked in the way of God's commandments, if man had proved faithful to the trust committed to him (as he never has been faithful), there would never have been any need for prophets to be raised up. But the priestly party of that day did exactly what the priestly party of every age has done (whether in false religions or the true). Human nature has ever used the influence and position which religion has given for its own advantage. The priests of Israel were no exception. They soon became absorbed in the means, they were soon involved in controversies as to the right mode of dividing the sacrifices, and as to their performance of their various priestly duties. Hence the prophets were raised up, and this was the constant theme of their testimony [cp. Hos. 6. 5, 6 (Matt. 9. 13; 12. 7); 1 Sam. 15. 22; Mic. 6. 6, 8; Isa. 1. 11-20; Amos 5. 21, 22]; this it was that caused them always to be specially regarded as the opponents of the priestly party.'—Bullinger.

1 KINGS 18. 5 (p. 314). LOSE.—The Cambridge Bible reads leese, now obsolete, from the Dutch lesen.

'Who buyeth it sooner the more he shall leese.'

—Tusser.

'No cause, nor client fat, will Cheveril leese.'

—Jonson.

'How in the port dear time our fleet did leese.'

—Donne.

'Flowers distilled leese but their show.'

—Shakespeare.

1 KINGS 19. 15 (p. 322).—This verse found strange application when quoted in the Pope's prayer at Napoleon's coronation: 'Dieu tout-puissant, qui avez établi Hazael pour gouverner la Syrie, et Jehu roi d'Israel, en leur manifestant vos volontés par l'organe du prophète Elie... repandez par mes mains les trésors de vos grâces et de vos bénédictions sur votre serviteur Napoleon.'

2 KINGS 10. 25 (p. 324): MASSACRE OF BAALITES.—A similar massacre rid Arcadius (A.D. 399) of the regiment of Goths, who took refuge in the Arian Church at Constantinople; and Mehemet Ali of the Mamelukes (A.D. 1811). Comp. the massacre (B.C. 425) at the temple in Coregra.—(Schmitz: Greece, p. 388).

STREETS (p. 327).—The 'bazaar' is a feature common to all Oriental cities. Still 'in Bagdad the trades have their separate localities. The traveller has a whole alley of contiguous shops, devoted to the sale of the same article, to choose from.'—Bishop's Persia. 'Socrates' flight from the pigs was down Chestmakers' street (a chest is often the only article of furniture in poor Greek houses). Shoemakers' street is still common in Greek towns.

THE BLACK OBELISK (p. 323).—This famous Monolith, now in the British Museum, was discovered at Nimrud, the ancient Calah, the royal city of the Middle Assyrian Empire. It is inscribed with a long record of the campaigns of thirty-one years of the reign of Shalmaneser III., king of Assyria, B.C. 860-824. In the eighteenth year of his reign, that is B.C. 842, the king made war against Hazael, king of Damascus. The record of this on the obelisk is very short; but a longer account is given on one of the pavement slabs from Calah. It reads as follows:—

In the eighteenth year of my reign for the sixteenth time I crossed the Euphrates; Hazael of Damascus trusted to the strength of his armies; and mustered his troops in full force. Senir (Hernon), a mountain summit in the approach to Lebanon, he made his stronghold. I fought with him, his defeat I accomplished, 6,000 of his soldiers with weapons I slew; 1,121 of his chariots, 470 of his horses, with his camp, I took from him. To save his life he retreated; I pursued him; in Damascus his royal city I shut him up. His plantations I cut down. As far as the mountains of the Hauran I marched. Cities without number I wrecked, razed, burnt with fire. Their spoil beyond count I carried away. As far as the mountains of Baal-rôsh, which is a headland of the sea (at the mouth of the Dog River), I marched; my royal likeness upon it I set up. At that time I received the tribute of the Tyrians and Sidonians, and of Yahua (Jehu) the son of Khumri (Omri).

On the obelisk we see a representation of the embassy of Jehu, 'the tribute of Jehu the son of Omri, bars of silver, of gold, basons of gold, bowls of gold, cups of gold, flagons (lit. buckets) of gold, bars of lead, a royal sceptre, and spear-shafts (?).'

I KINGS 22, 6 (p. 334).—A similar ENIGMATIC PROPHECY occurs in the story of Rufinus, the cruel minister of Theodosius the Great and his successor Arcadius. He approached Arcadius (A.D. 395) expecting to be nominated Augustus, for prophecy assured him 'that he should come back that day with his head higher than all.' He was slain by the Gothic guards and beheaded, and his head was carried around on a pole.—(Farrar, 'Gathering Clouds.')

MOABITE STONE (p. 339).—This remarkable object was discovered (1868) at Dhibân, the ancient Dibon, by the Rev. F. Klein, in August 1868, and is one of the most important historical and literary monuments in connection with Hebrew history. The inscription is written in the Phœnician character, and in a language which approaches Hebrew nearer even than Phœnician. The inscription throws great light upon the history of the period of the reigns of Omri, Ahab, Jehoram, and Jehoshaphat. At the end of the reign of Ahab, Mesha, king of Moab, who had been obliged to pay Israel a tribute of the wool of 100,000 lambs and 100,000 rams, revolted and refused his tribute, and the allied kings of Israel, Judah, and Edom marched against him and compelled him to flee to Kir-harasseth, where Mesha offered his son in sacrifice. The monument was erected by this king Mesha, and furnishes many details in agreement with the Hebrew account, as shown by the following extracts for the better rendering of the sense, than of the inscription are not observed):—

I am Mesha, son of Chemosh [Melech], king of Moab, the Dibonite;

My father reigned over Moab thirty years, and I reigned after my father;

And I made this bāmāh (= 'high place') for Chemosh at Korkhah,

A b[amāh] of salvation, for he saved me from all the kings, and made me look on all my enemies.

Omri was king of Israel, and he oppressed Moab many days, for Chemosh was angry with his land.

His son succeeded him, and he also said, 'I will oppress Moab.'

In my days he said [thus]; but I looked on him and on his house, and Israel perished for ever.

Omri took [all] the land of Medeba, and [Israel] dwelt in it during his days, and [half] the days of his son, even forty years;

But Chemosh [captured] it in my days.

And I rebuilt Baal-Meon and made therein the gûl (?).

And I [rebuilt] Kirjathain. The men of Gad had dwelt in the land of Ataroth from of old, and the king of Israel rebuilt Ataroth for himself (or, for them);

But I made war against the town and took it;

And I slew all [the people of] the town for the pleasure of Chemosh and Moab, and I carried off thence the altar of Dodah, and dragged it before Chemosh in the city.

And I settled therein the men of Sharon and the men of Macharoth.

And Chemosh said to me, 'Go, seize Nebo upon Israel!' and I went in the night, and fought against it from the break of day until noon, and I took it;

And I slew in all seven thousand men and boys and women and girls and damsels: for unto Ashtor-Chemosh I had devoted them.

And I took thence the altars of Jehovah and dragged them before Chemosh.

And the king of Israel had built Jahaz; and he dwelt in it whilst he waged war against me; But Chemosh drove him out before me.

And I took of Moab two hundred men, all its chiefs; and I carried them to Jahaz, which I took to add it to Dibon.—(Copyright).

It is at once apparent how important a document this is to the Bible student. It affords an apparently independent contemporary record of the border-wars between Moab and Israel, and also throws considerable light upon topography.

On the language of the Moabite stone, Robertson Smith remarks: 'It is practically the Hebrew of the O.T. All three (Moabite, Jewish, Phœnician) are Canaanite dialects; and as neither Moab nor Israel acknowledged kinship with the Canaanites, while the latter did count kin with the Aramaeans, whose language was much more remote from Hebrew, it is to be concluded that the Hebrew nations (Israel, Moab, Ammon, Edom) adopted the speech of the Canaanites after their immigration into Palestine. But the change of language probably dates from the time before the descent of Israel into Egypt, when the ancestors of all four peoples still lived side by side.'

REWARD (p. 348).—Cf. 'Sin and the guerdon of sin.'—Longfellow.

PSALM 83, 13 (p. 349). Cf. Milton's—
'My God, oh make them as a wheel,
No quiet let them find;
Giddy and restless let them reel
Like stable from the wind.'

RAPTURE OF ELIJAH (p. 353).—Cf. Romana pubes credebat Patribus, qui proxime steterant, sublimem raptum (Romulum) procellâ.—Livy, i. 13.

CHAMBER (p. 363).—See picture of such an one in Thomson's 'Land and the Book,' p. 160. Luther and Coverdale have 'a little chamber of boordes.' Geneva adds a note, 'separate from the rest of the house, that he might more commodiously give himself to study and prayer.'

2 KINGS 4, 23 (p. 364).—It is an interesting fact (which Girdlestone notes) that the word SABBATH is to be found on the oldest cuneiform inscriptions discovered in Mesopotamia, the cradle of the human race. Long before Moses' day the people of Ur of the Chaldees had a day which they called 'the rest-day of the heart.'

2 KINGS 5, 25, 26 (p. 370).—A.V. marg. 'Went not hither or thither.' R.V. marg. seems to suppose Elisha to repeat ironically Gehazi's lie; 'Went not! My heart (i.e., prophetic consciousness) went not from me (= did not desert me).'

BURDEN (p. 388).—Sept. λῆμμα = summary of contents; Vulg. onus. The use of the word was, later (Jer. 23, 38; p. 632), forbidden, because the Jews had used it in a jeering sense.

CHRONOLOGICAL DISCREPANCIES. — 2 CHRON. 22, 9 (p. 389). — In this year (884 B.C.), for the first time since the Disruption (975 B.C.), the kingdoms receive simultaneously new sovereigns. The period is 91 years, with which the duration of the several reigns summed up does not exactly correspond. Thus Rehoboam 17 + Abijam 3 + Asa 41 + Jehoshaphat 25 + Joram 8 + Ahaziah 1 = 95. And Jeroboam 22 + Nadab 2 + Baasha 24 + Elah 2 + Zimri, Omri, Tibni 12 + Ahab 22 + Ahaziah 2 + Jehoram 12 = 98. The Hebrew custom of reckoning a portion of a year as a whole year to both the deceased monarch and his successor accounts for the discrepancy.

It may be noted here also, that from this year to the Captivity of the Ten Tribes (721 B.C.) is a period of 163 years, to which the sum of the reigns of Judah's kings approaches sufficiently near—Athaliah 6 + Joash 40 + Amaziah 29 + Uzziah 52 + Jotham 16 + Ahaz 16 + 6 years of Hezekiah's reign (2 Kin. 18, 10) = 165. The sum of the reigns of Israel's kings falls short of this by 21 years—

Jehu 28 + Jehoahaz 17 + Joash 16 + Jeroboam 41 + Zechariah, Shallum 1 + Menahem 10 + Pekahiah 2 + Pekah 20 + Hoshea 9 = 144. It may be that this deficiency is to be accounted for by an interregnum of 11 years between Jeroboam and Zechariah, and of 10 years between Pekah and Hoshea.

2 KINGS 10, 25 (p. 394).—RUNNERS. Trecentosque armatos ad custodiam corporis, quos Celeres appellavit, non in bello solum sed etiam in pace, habuit (Romulus).—Livy, i. 12.

SOLOMON'S STABLES (p. 399).—A single course of great stones was found from the south-eastern angle to the Double Gate. The so-called Solomon's stables were proved to be a comparatively modern construction. The oldest portion of the wall is at the south-east and south. Solomon's palace stood at the south-east; Herod's at the south-west; the Temple in the middle. As to this, Jewish, Christian, and Moslem tradition agree.—Besant.

JONAH 4, 11 (p. 410).—DISCERN, &c. Σύναεν γὰρ ἔξετε δεξιὰν καὶ ἀριστεράν (Didache, 12) is paraphrased in Apostolic Constitutions (vii. 28), 'are able to discern the right hand from the left, and to distinguish false teachers from true teachers.'

THE MINOR PROPHETS (p. 430).—The 'Minor' Prophets certainly vindicate their title, in everything but length, to a better name, if 'testimony of Jesus' is to be the measure of 'the spirit of prophecy.' They are more frequently quoted by the Apostles in the Acts, when speaking to Jews, than the 'Greater' Prophets. The text of the first Christian sermon (Acts 2, 17) is taken by St. Peter from Joel. St. Stephen (Acts 7, 42) gives emphasis to his argument by a quotation from Amos, by quoting whose words also St. James (Acts 15, 16) decides the question discussed at the first Christian Council. It is Joel who teaches us the momentous facts of a future resurrection and a general judgment, and of that outpouring of the Spirit upon all flesh, without which those doctrines would be a terror to us. It is Micah who reveals to men the place of our Lord's birth; Zechariah His crucifixion; Jonah His resurrection, though veiled beneath a sign. The earliest and the last who left written memorials of their work, were 'Minor Prophets.' It is Malachi, the nearest in time to the Divine Prophet Himself, who foretells the approach of Christ's immediate forerunner and the coming of days when from the rising of the sun even to the going down of the same, no victim should bleed upon an altar but the meat (meal) offering, 'the type of Christian worship' (Payne Smith), be offered everywhere unto Jehovah's name.—Probably five of the Minor Prophets preceded Isaiah. Chronologically, those of the Assyrian period should probably stand thus—

Jonah, Obadiah, Joel (Cox places him first; Cheyne and Davidson consider him post-Exilic), Hosea, Amos, Nahum, Habakkuk and Zephaniah belong to the Chaldean period. The other four are post-Captivity Prophets.—Hosea, of the tribe of Ephraim, and Jonah the Galilean, of the tribe of Zebulun, are the only two of the sixteen prophets who certainly belonged to the N. kingdom; yet it produced Elijah and Elisha, and schools of the Prophets flourished in it. Amos addressed the dwellers in the N. kingdom in terms as strong as those of Hosea, but he was of Judah. In Hosea we have a native of the N. kingdom denouncing its wickedness, in the days of its political decadence, with startling plainness, but with no suspicion of unfriendliness, indeed with a yearning tenderness. 'The great truth which Hosea has to teach is the love of Jehovah to Israel (the ten tribes). His voice, when addressing his countrymen, is always choked with emotion; his speech is little else than a succession of sobs' (A. B. Davidson).—Joel addresses himself almost wholly to Judah. We gather that his home was Jerusalem, and that, like Jeremiah and Ezekiel, he was Priest as well as Prophet. That he prophesied before Amos several quotations show; cf. Amos 1.2 & 9.13 with Joel 3.16, 18. 'His words did not fall on dull ears. He did not, like Amos, hear the words of worldly prudence telling him that he had better ply his trade elsewhere. He did not feel, like Hosea, the madness of failure rising in his spirit, as he beat in vain against the closed doors of a nation's heart. He spoke; the people heard' (Boyd-Carpenter). This Prophet of rebuke and repentance teaches spiritual principles rather than the mere forsaking of specific sins, principles that are not for an age, but for all time. He bids 'blow the trumpet' (ch. 2), which ushered in the Day of Atonement, and therefore suggested penitent confession; and, after comparing together the devastating unswerving approach of the Assyrian army and that of the locusts, specially exhorts to 'rend the heart and not the garments' merely, for so only might God be induced to 'spare His people,' and to drive their plague to die and rot in the Dead Sea, to give them again 'the former and the latter rain,' 'full floors,' and 'overflowing vats,' and greater things besides, an 'out-pouring' (which we know to have received striking fulfilment at Pentecost) of 'His Spirit.' If it is asked, What special evil-doings were they to turn from? Were the fast proclaimed, what sins were they specially to confess? Joel gives no answer. But a call to turn to God may be very practical, when the voice of the teacher points to no specific offences, even when the conscience itself is awake to none. 'A dull mechanical temper of mind, obedience to mere custom, this is that turning away from God, that implicit denial of His presence, which makes it a most useful thing that the call should go forth from some human lips, and be echoed by unwonted natural calamities, and

'be received as coming straight from the mouth of the Lord—Repent and be converted' (Maurice). In language which suggests to the modern reader Matt. 23.29; Rev. 6.12, Joel depicts 'the great and terrible day of the Lord,' not forgetting even then to promise safety to 'whosoever (though it might be but a chosen few, a remnant) shall call on the name of the Lord' (cf. Rom. 10.13); and describes how God will take his people's part. He reminds them how (perhaps a hundred years before), in the Valley of Berakah (Blessing), Judah, under Jehoshaphat, had (2 Chr. 20) by God's aid overcome Edom, Ammon, and Moab; so, hereafter, in the Valley of Jehoshaphat (Jehovah judgeth), the valley of decision, the Lord shall own who are His, avenge for ever the people whose hope and strength He has been, and take up His abode with them for ever.

THE LATTER RAIN (p. 432).—God's promise in Joel 2.23 is, that He will send (in the days of Israel's restoration) the former and the latter rain, the rain of seed-time and harvest, type of preventing and perfecting grace, 'in the first' (rashôn). In all other places (Gen. 8.13; Num. 9.5; Ezek. 29.17; 45.18, 21), where 'month' is the word to be supplied, it is indicated in the text; nor would there be any need to tell Jews that the latter rain fell in September. Perhaps, therefore, the meaning is 'presently' or 'primarily,' i.e., when Israel accepts Messiah and as a prelude to the day when the Spirit shall be fully outpoured, not merely on a few as at Pentecost (Sept. καθὼς ἐμπόρουν; Vulg. sicut in principio). The withholding of the latter rain was token of rejection by God; its enjoyment, of His favour (Deut. 11.14; Jer. 3.3; 5.24). It would seem as though Zech. 8.7 and 10.1 were now receiving some fulfilment. After a withholding, more or less, for near 2,000 years, and consequent agricultural desolation, of late the autumn rain has fallen regularly and copiously. Jewish colonists are returning at the rate of 10,000 yearly; and this in spite of the Sultan, on finding it stated in the Koran, that Israel's return would be followed by the overthrow of the Turkish empire, issuing a firman prohibiting immigration of the Jews (Ezek. 34.11-30).

OF WHOREDOMS (Hos. 2.2; p. 434).—Compare 'of Belial' (p. 10, note). Often the GENITIVE has no other force than that of a qualifying adjective; man of bloods (1's. 5.6) differs in nothing from bloody man; so woman of quarrels is rightly rendered (1'rov. 27.15) contentious woman; cf. Isa. 53.3. A wife and children of such inclinations is what is here meant. Of a wife faithless as Israel to her God (cf. Isa. 54.5), children of like evil disposition might naturally be expected, for sin is ever hereditary, unless the entail be cut off by grace. Idolatry not only symbolised such sin, but actually involved it (Hos. 4. 13, 14). The Poet thus describes the bystander's view of Hosea's conduct:—

They wondered at my choice, and whispered words—

The prophet woo'd the harlot!—told their scorn.
They saw in me the poor, weak victim-fool
Of Beauty's power to bow the strongest will,
To taint the purest, drive the wisest mad.

PLUMPTRE.

THE PENTATEUCH (p. 434).—Commenting on Hosea, Drake remarks: 'Special note should be taken of the numerous references to the Pentateuch, more particularly to Leviticus and Deuteronomy, as they prove beyond dispute that the prophets had in their hands the Law of Moses in the same form as we have it. The dates of Hosea, Amos, and Micah are undisputed and indisputable; and therefore they supply a convincing proof that parts of Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy cannot have been compiled (as has lately been asserted) in the days of Ezra after the Captivity.'

BY THE LORD (Hosea 1. 7, p. 435).—The meaning of this expression is well caught by Byron:—

'The tents were all silent, the banners alone,
The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown;
The might of the Gentile, unsmeared by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord.'

The promise received further fulfilment, perhaps, in God's moving the heart of Cyrus; and spiritual fulfilment in the Person of God the Saviour, Jesus. It is receiving and awaiting yet further fulfilment now (Rom. 9. 25, 26).

ISAIAH (p. 441).—Viewing the 'prophet' as one who not merely sees a Vision or writes a Book, but as one who also, foreseeing and warning (cp. Dem. de Corona, c. 73), moulds a nation's political and religious life, Isaiah stands pre-eminent. No one approaches more nearly than Isaiah to Milton's description of prophets:—

'Men divinely taught, and better teaching
The solid rules of civil government
In their majestic, unaffected style,
Than all the oratory of Greece and Rome.
In them is plainest taught and easiest learnt
What makes a nation happy, and keeps it so;
What ruins kingdoms and lays cities flat—
These only with our Law best form a King.'

His daring eloquence reminds of Latimer (at Paul's Cross), of Luther (at Worms Diet), of Knox (before the Popish Queen), of Savonarola (in Florence), of Wesley (in the field), of Burke (defender of justice, laws, institutions); in a word, Isaiah as prophet is type of all that is noble and outspoken, scathing or pathetic. There is truth in Niebuhr's remark:—'The old prose writers wrote as if they were speaking to an audience; among us prose is invariably written for the eye alone.' We connect melodiousness with speech. Burke's has been described as 'perfect oratory—half poetry, half prose.' Pitt could not refrain from beating time to the artificial but harmonious cadence of the periods of Grattan's first speech. In Hebrew poetry the rhythm of thought and images takes the place of the rhythm of syllables and sounds; line answers to line, and word to word, each bringing out the depth and force of the other. It is repeatedly noticeable in Isaiah that the imaginative, not the logical, faculty determined the laws of Hebrew grammar. Future certain events are habitually spoken of in the past tense. It hath come to pass 'always refers to the future in the first line; and 'shall be,' in the second, is equivalent to the ἐγένετο of the historians. The Apostrophe of Isaiah's first chapter has its counterpart, it is worth noting, in the best writers of all lands; e.g. 'Ὁ δῖος αἰὲρ καὶ . . . παμμύτιός τε γῆ,' Æsch. Pr. v. 88: Esto nunc Sol testis, et hæc mihi Terra vocanti, Virg. Æn. xii. 176: 'O all you host of heaven! O earth!' Shaks. Ham. i. 5, &c. Shakespeare may also be quoted in illustration of the fact that not even an Isaiah's fervour can melt a nation's stubbornness:—

'When we in our viciousness grow hard,
The wise gods seal our eyes,'—Ant. and Cleo. iii. 11.

'O what form of prayer can serve my turn?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?'—Ham. iii. 3.

ISAIAH 1. 8 (p. 442).—COTTAGE. 'An abour of boughs perched at a height of seven or eight feet upon four poles,'—Bishop's Persia.

SERAPHIM (Isa. 6. 2; p. 445).—Literally the burning ones. The word is used elsewhere only of flying serpents with burning bite (Num. 21. 6; Dent. 8. 15; Isa. 30. 6), and figuratively (Isa. 11. 29) of Assyria, both which also are God's messengers in another sense. We may not identify the seraphim with the cherubim (cf. 1 Kin. 6. 23, note, p. 216), or with the ἄγγελοι of St. John, or the chayyoth of Ezekiel, or with angels, yet we cannot attempt to define the difference between them in form or function. Cheyne's poetic suggestion that clouds, whether of storm or sunset, are the 'extra-biblical, popular, mythic cherubim, and that by consequence serpent-like lightning is the seraphim, receives indeed some countenance from the Psalmist's statements (104 & 18) that light is God's garment, heaven His canopy, clouds His chariot, winds His angels, flaming fire His servants (cp. 2 Sam. 22. 9-15); but it hardly agrees with Isaiah's picture here. These seraphim are beings with hands, mouths, voices, pure lips, and obedient wills, guardians of God's court, messengers in His service, ministering to that holiness, that glory, which are the Godhead in its essence and its manifestation. They are described moreover as having six wings.

 'Two silver wings, with golden feathers tipped, Veil every face; for what created eye
 Can view El Shaddai's glory? Clothed upon
 Are they with other two, down drooping low;
 For not the very purest of the pure (Job 4. 18)
 Are utter purity, and know no shame
 For error or short-coming; e'en the star
 Of ray serenest needs robe nebulous.
 When His keen gaze, Who is the source of light,
 The fountain of all purity, is turned
 To look upon it. And with other two, Outstretched unweariedly, they poise themselves,
 Hovering, like golden flashes, o'er the throne;
 So shifting, as the jewels on a train
 With every movement of the wearer's form;
 Waiting the bidding of the Will Supreme,
 Knowing no freedom but the right to serve,
 Craving no pleasure save to do their Lord's.'

THE PROPHECY OF IMMANUEL (p. 453).— Isaiah's prophecy of Immanuel, in its historical associations, has been variously interpreted. (1) Some commentators hold that it was necessary to the reality of the 'sign' that a child should be born and named, and that a son was actually born and named, according to the conditions of Isaiah's oracle (to a wife of Ahaz, or to a second wife of Isaiah, or to an unnamed and obscure mother), and that the 'sign' thus coming to pass proved Isaiah's supernatural knowledge and confirmed the promise that the scheme of the confederates should fail disastrously. Immanuel would then be another Shear-jashub (c. 3 & ch. 8. 18, notes)—some even identify the child (c. 16) with Shear-jashub; and, generally, the natural birth of a child and the selection by his mother of the name Immanuel would be to the prophet and his generation a pledge and earnest of the abiding presence of God with His people, and, therefore, would involve also a promise of deliverance from the Assyrians. But, according to this view, Immanuel remains unconnected with the Messianic expectations of Isaiah (9. 6, 7 & 11. 1-10), or of Micah (5. 3-6), and so the 'sign' loses a great part of its significance (cp. Gen. 24. 43; Ex.
 2. 8; Cant. 6. 8). (2) Others hold that both the persons and events are ideal, and the prophecy
 'a picture of the future painted upon the lines of the prophet's own present,' the 'sign' being a promise only, committed as a mysterious hope to the custody of the Faithful (ch. 8.
 16-18), those 'who waited for redemption in Israel.' Thus the oracle would be a confirmation of the promise to Eve in the form of a new and clearer definition of the promise to David, whereby a concrete personality was first substituted for the Davidic kingdom as the national hope of Israel. The 'Son' would then be a perfect 'Lord's Anointed' (Heb.
Messiah), the ideal King of David's line (cp.
 2 Sam. 23. 3-5, notes, p. 172), who, after reforming the political and religious shortcomings of Judah, should realize the highest possibilities of earthly monarchy, and worthily represent Israel's heavenly King, Jehovah, and deliver Judah from all her foes (cp. Mic.

5. 2-6, 9-15). Though nothing is said in the text as to Immanuel growing up to be a King and a deliverer, nor even as to his being of Da-vidic origin (until ch. 9. 7), the land of Israel is spoken of as his in ch. 8. 8 (cp. the Lord's land, Hos. 9. 3), and his name thus kindles the highest emotion in Isaiah (ch. 8. 9, 10).
 'The text is here thoroughly individual in its reference' (Delitzsch). (3) As to the scope of the prophecy, some, quoting Matt.
 1. 23, hold that Isaiah realized fully the mystery of the Incarnation, and that this revelation coloured his whole after-work: that he had received a vision of the Virgin-mother of the God-man, and made the growth of her child a measure of time for the events of his own generation. Yet neither Isaiah elsewhere nor any later prophet makes any allusion to the Virgin-birth, nor can it be proved (cf. Pearson,
 i. 89, 367) that this was ever included in the Jewish expectation of Messiah, though St.
 Matthew's language might lead us to infer that it was so. 'The virginity of our Lord's mother is not fully proved by the words of the prophet taken alone; but the manifestation of its fulfilment casts a radiance back on the prophecy, and discloses its full meaning' (Bengel). Others, quoting 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, hold that Isaiah's view was much more limited, and that Isaiah projects Immanuel's figure as of a real living person upon the shifting future—upon the nearer future in ch. 7, upon the remoter future in ch. 9; that Isaiah and his successors expected the ideal king to 'burst in upon the stage that was filled with the forms of Assyria, Syria, Ephraim, Judah,' just as the Apostles looked for the early return of their Lord. It may be that in this divergence of opinion is found part fulfilment of Simeon's words, 'a sign which shall be spoken against' (ἀντιλεγόμενον). It is scarcely probable that Virgil had, even indirectly, any knowledge of Isaiah's prophecy when he wrote (Ecl. iv.)—

Puer, quo (na-cente) ferrea primam
 Desinet, ac toto surget gens aurea mundo.

SILVERLING (p. 454).—Wielif has sylnuer
penys here, and Tyndal and Cranmer (cf.
 Judg. 17. 2; Acts 19. 19) sylnuerlynges. This is far from being the only word which it is surprising to find retained in R.V., e.g. bolled, reneward, bruit, tabering, daysman, helve, neesings, ouch, tray (for frighten), away with (for tolerate), liketh you (for is what you like), captivity (for captives).

BESTEAD (p. 457).—The use of qashdh elsewhere (2 Kin. 17. 14; Jer. 7. 26) is rather in favour of Kay's interpretation, 'hardened, sullenly steeling his soul against the misery that has befallen him'; and certainly Milton uses 'bested' in a wholly different sense:—

'Hence, vain deluding joys,
 The brood of Folly, without father bred!
 How little you bested (profit),
 Or fill the mixed mind with all your toys.'

Still, the derivation may be correct; Spenser frequently uses 'stead' for 'place'; 'in his stead' is common; 'steady' and 'steadfast' mean 'remaining in one place.' But 'to stand' commonly means 'to help,' 'to advantage,' in Shakespeare. Hooker and Locke use 'stand in stead' (without 'good') for 'be of service.' To 'stud and bestud,' 'stir and bestir,' 'strew and bestrew,' 'deck and bedeck,' have identical meaning; so Milton uses 'bestead' for 'stead' in Shakespeare's sense; but the connection between that use of either and the derivation is not easy to trace.

PRINCE OF PEACE (p. 458).—Some interesting light has, quite recently, been thrown on the position of those who in earlier days bore this title, which, more than once, is used with prophetic or typical signification. The clay tablets found at Tel-el-Amarna in Egypt in the Babylonian language (date, a century before the Exodus.—Robertson) contain letters from one of Melchizedek's successors, Ebed-Tob, king of Uru-Salim, vassal of Egypt, who yet boasts, that he did not owe his throne to Egyptian favour or to royal descent—he was 'without father, without mother' (Heb. 7. 3)—but was made king-priest by an oracle of God. A full abstract of Sayce's remarks upon this in the Expository Times may be read in Lias' Principles of Biblical Criticism, Note D, p. 248.

ISAIAH: Summary of Chaps. 9 to 14 (p. 467), and 20 to 35.—Chapters 9 to 14 speak in varied tone—wrath and blessing, shame and glory, mingled. Naphtali, Galilee of the Gentiles, should be recompensed (ch. 9. 2) by the manifesting forth (John 2. 11) of Messiah's glory. No gloom (v. 1) is there in the day to come to her that was distressed; contempt once, honour then; darkness once, then the shining of a great light. The prosperity of the days of Solomon and Uzziah (v. 3) ended only in a yoke, bondage to a secular, worldly, idolatrous spirit; but Immanuel (Judg. 6. 13) shall 'Come to break oppression, To set the captive free' (Luke 11. 21). Then armour and blood-stained garment shall be burnt, and the kingdom of the Prince of Peace begin—the Prince who is earth-born Child, Son of Man, yet the Paradox of God, the Wisdom of God, the Power of God, the Essence of God. Returning to the nearer future, Isaiah warns Israel's pride of approaching downfall (enemies without, strife and injustice within); and the Assyrian king of kings (ch. 10. 8) no less, for he is only God's temporary instrument. God's people therefore need not fear; the invading tide may cover place after place (ch. 10. 28) threatening the hill of Jerusalem itself, but in a moment the Voice of God shall stay it. Passing again (ch. 11) to Messiah, he foretells the springing of a Branch, fresh and tender, from the hewn-down stem of Jesse, a netser out of Natsoreth, an ephrath (fruitful one) from Ephraim; and the dawn of a day of righteousness and peace, of Divine knowledge and thankfulness. He closes ch. 12 with his refrain Immanuel. Next (chs. 13 & 14) he tells the story of Babylon's capture by Cyrus and her desolation. Then, in the year that Ahaz died, he pours forth the doom of Philistia, Moab, Dananuscus, Ethiopia, and Egypt (chs. 14 to 19). In ch. 20 he speaks of 'captivity' (which, in Ps. 68. 18 and elsewhere, usually means a 'band of captives') led by Assyria from Egypt, to which (otherwise unrecorded) event there is allusion in Sargon's inscription, 'I received tribute from Pharaoh, King of Egypt,' and in Sennacherib's scornful appellation 'bruised reed.' Disappointed of aid from thence Israel, or all Palestine, asks 'How shall we escape?' The answer is a second vision (ch. 21), of the sea-like desert, Babylonia (Schrader reads 'king of the sea' as a title or description of Merodach in the inscription of Tiglath), vast, surging with peoples, overrun by Medo-Persian armies, and all her graven images broken by a people who had learnt from captive Israel to abhor idols. The doom of Edom and Arabia follows, and a warning (ch. 22) that Samaria's day of grace is drawing to a close. He calls her 'Valley of Vision,' a name that was a warning in itself, for the name of their own (2 Kin. 5. 3) prophet's servant, Gehazi (one highly privileged, yet not escaping punishment) has the same meaning. He describes her spoiling and her captivity, a foreshadowing of that of Judah (p. 491, note). Under (if the figurative interpretation of the passage be accepted) the name of Shebna (= profit-seeker) he personifies that spirit of greed (Wisd. 14. 2) which led to much sin, and made the nation hateful in God's sight; Shebna's removal is foretold, and the substitution of another better servant, called allegorically Eliakim (= God will raise up), son of Hilkiah (portion of Jehovah); HE should open the kingdom of heaven, God's church, God's dwelling (Rev. 3. 7 & 1. 18), and hold the keys of Hades. Then follows (ch. 23) Tyre's doom, to be succeeded, after 70 years, by another period of probation. Whereupon the portion of Isaiah's prophecy which specially belongs to the Jewish nation and their neighbours closes. The remainder, so far as it is prophecy, concerns the world. Nevertheless, Israel is still the central figure in the picture, and it is her recovery which is as life from the dead to the nations (chs. 24 to 27): it is a new Jerusalem which is the strong city of God's people, whose walls and bulwarks are salvation, whose new Sovereign is (greater than Solomon) a Prince of perfect peace: it is (ch. 28) in Zion that the Foundation Stone, tried, precious, sure, is to be laid. Woe there may be, and there shall be (he repeats it, for it is drawing nearer) to the drunkards of Ephraim—to Ariel (= lion of God), the city of David (ch. 29)—to the rebellious children, ever professing, ever failing, loving to lean on human arms (chs. 30 & 31): yet Immanuel—El shall be heard again, a God-Man shall reign as king in righteousness (ch. 32), as a Hiding-place, a Covert, a Stream to refresh, a Rock to shade, for God's people; and Woe shall pursue all their enemies (chs. 33 & 34): it is to Zion that the Highway, the Way of holiness shall lead—to Zion that the ransomed of the Lord shall come with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads (ch. 35).

ISAIAH AND THE EGYPT-PARTY IN JUDAH (p. 467).—Isaiah saw clearly the intrinsic weakness of Egypt. He publicly names Egypt (in ch. 30, 7, 8; cp. ch. 8, 1). 'Their-Strength-is-to-sit-still, or Turbulence-and-Inactivity' (Rob. Smith). In ch. 28 (probably delivered during Shalmaneser's reign), after foretelling Samaria's destruction (cp. Mic. 1, 6, p. 449), Isaiah describes the opposition of scornful rulers in Jerusalem, i.e. the Egypt-party, who boasted that by their policy Judah could defy repeated Assyrian invasions (the overflowing scourge, cp. chs. 8, 7, 8 and 10, 24); and he foretells that revolt would only strengthen the bands of Judah's servitude, because the Assyrian domination was a judgment from Jehovah (vs. 2, 22). Acquiescing apparently in the Assyrian protectorate, and convinced that, even with effective support from Egypt (which could not reasonably be relied upon, see p. 468, note), none of the local leagues could successfully resist Assyria, Isaiah urges Judah to hold aloof ('in quietness and confidence shall be your strength', ch. 30, 15), and to rely in hearty faith on its Covenant-God only.

DID SARGON INVADE JUDAH? (Isa. 14, 21-27, p. 467).—Sayce and other Assyriologists (not without some monumental evidence) hold that Sargon, during the siege of Ashdod, overran Judah, and even captured Jerusalem. Accordingly, they ascribe to this period not only chs. 10, 5 to 11, 16, but chs. 1 & 14, 29-32, & 22 & 29 to 32, and regard Judah as having suffered exactly as during Sennacherib's invasion ten years later, interpreting ch. 10, 28-33 (usually regarded as an ideal picture) as a description of this invasion. Dr. Schrader, however, its author, abandoned this view; Prof. Robertson Smith also rejects it, and his criticisms are replied to by Canon Cheyne in his 'Prophecies of Isaiah' (third edition, 1884), vol. 2, 183-5, who concludes 'I will agree to leave it an open question, provided it be admitted that there is at least some evidence for it, and that to accept the view throws a bright light on some very important prophecies'; again ('Introduct. to Micah, 1889) he writes: 'It is possible that Sargon invaded Judah to punish Hezekiah for joining the same coalition of which Yavan, the unfortunate king of Ashdod, was a member. If we might accept this as a proved fact, it would illustrate not only the first chapter of Micah, but several prophecies of Isaiah (viz. chs. 10, 5 to 12, 6, and 14, 21 to 27, and probably ch. 22).'

KUORSABAD EXCAVATIONS (p. 482).—It is interesting to note that a foundation deposit, almost precisely similar to that found under Sargon's palace (dating 722 B.C.), was recently (1894) unearthed by Petrie at Coptus (30 miles N.E. of Thebes), in the Ptolemaic Temple, viz. representations of the materials used in the construction of the temple—pitch, alabaster, basalt, ingots of copper and lead, bricks, plaques of red glass, and small gilded limestone plaques evidently representing gold.

HALAH (p. 483).—'The wretched village of Saripul is the Calah of Asshur, the Halah of the Israelitish captivity. It gave to the surrounding country the name of Chalontes. In the 5th century it became a Metropolitan See.'—Bishop's 'Persia.' See Gen. 10, 11; 1 Chr. 5, 26; and Rawlinson: 'Journal of Royal Geographical Society,' vol. ix, pt. 1, p. 26. Its obelisk (in British Museum) depicts Jehu's ambassadors presenting offerings to Shalmaneser. It was after a rising in Calah that Tiglath-pileser II. (Pul), a military adventurer, seized the crown. It was made, with Carhemish, Arpad, &c., a satrapy under his sovereignty.

ISAIAH 30, 7 (p. 490).—'Your (true) Rahab (the only reliable Helper) is TRUST.'—An apt illustration of this idea, reliance on a present God the only safety, is furnished by a legend of St. Felix of Nola, priest and confessor. Pursued by soldiers during Decius' persecution, he had barely time to hide in a cave. Instantly a spider spun its web over the entrance. Seeing it, the soldiers passed on. 'Ubi Deus est' (said Felix), 'ibi aranea murus; ubi non est, ibi murus aranea.'—(Farrar, 'Gathering Clouds').

THE BIBLICAL AND THE ASSYRIAN ACCOUNTS OF SENNACHERIB'S CAMPAIGN (2 Kin. 18, 13, p. 491).—While in substantial agreement, these accounts are both imperfect, and may be combined in different ways. The essential difference between them is that while the one narrates the entire campaign—viz.: (1) the subjection of the Phœnician cities; (2) the conquest of Ashkelon; (3) the successes against Ekron and the Egyptian forces; (4) the hostilities against Judah—the other deals only with the stage affecting Judah, and dwells principally upon two episodes (2 Kin. 18, 17 to 19, 7 & 19, 8-36) belonging in fact to a fifth and subsequent stage, upon which the Assyrian account is silent. Professor Driver adopts the following combination (Isaiah, pp. 66-85), which rests upon the close general coincidence of the fourth stage in the Assyrian account with the verses 2 Kin. 18, 13b-16:—As Sennacherib's army starts from Phœnicia for the South, Isaiah utters the prophecy contained in chs. 10, 5 to 12, 6. After Sennacherib's successes in Philistia and Judah, Hezekiah offers his submission to Sennacherib at Lachish, which Sennacherib accepts, imposing terms (2 Kin. 18, 13b-16); meanwhile, perhaps, Isaiah utters the prophecies of chs. 14, 24-27 & 17, 12-14. But for some unknown reason, described by Isaiah (ch. 33, 8) as a breach of faith, Sennacherib demands the unconditional surrender of Jerusalem; an embassy sent promptly to negotiate returns and reports that Sennacherib was obdurate. Isaiah seeks to allay the consequent dismay in Jerusalem by uttering the prophecy contained in ch. 33; but Sennacherib sends the Rabshakeh from Lachish to induce the inhabitants to rebel against Hezekiah and open the gates (chs. 36, 16 to 37, 37). Schrader combines otherwise, supposing that in the Assyrian account the order of events has been altered, that the concluding stage (the tribute of Hezekiah) might give the appearance of an issue favourable to Assyria; but to Professor Driver this supposition seems unnecessary.

ISAIAH 10, 14 (p. 494).—As a nest:—Sennacherib says, 'They had set their dwellings like birds' nests in fortresses on the tops of the mountains.'—Oppert, Inscrit. des Sargonides, p. 46. Xenophon says (Hellen. vii. 5, 10) of Epaminondas' attempts to surprise Sparta, 'Ελαβεν ἀντὶν πόλιν ὥσπερ νεοττίαν παντάσιν ἐρήμον τῶν ἀμυνομένων.

ISAIAH 10, 28 (p. 496).—THE ASSYRIAN ADVANCE.—The places named lay in succession between the north frontier of Judaea and Jerusalem; and the remains of a square tower and large hewn stones found by Robinson and Smith at Jeba opposite to Mukhmès, and supposed to be Gibeah of Saul, and the like marks of Mukhmès itself having been once a place of strength, taken in connection with 1 Sam 13 & 14, and 1 Macc. 9, 73, mark this as a route which Isaiah might reasonably expect the invaders to take. Of the passage at Michmash, Robinson says:—'The road neither is through these deep and difficult ravines nor ever could have been.' This Strachey questions, because, though the route from the N. along the watershed is more practicable, it runs through a land never desirable for houses or cultivation. Grote says, of Xenophon's route from Sardis to Iconium, 'Straight roads, stretching systematically over a large region of country, are not of that age. The communications were probably all originally made between one neighbouring town and another, without much reference to saving of distance, and with no reference to any promotion of traffic between distant places.'

The military topography of this district, as shown in the history of Joshua's advance, Saul's campaign against the Philistines, and Sennacherib's march here, is wonderfully accurate (Tristram). The plateau south of Bethel is cut up on the east by the gorges containing the Ai (?) 'Aiath' route from Jordan which Mukhmès (Michmash) covers; the routes from the V. of Ajalon up the gorges and ridge of Beth-horon are covered by Gibeon. In the six miles between Michmash and Gibeon are Geba, Ramah, and Adasa (1 Macc. 7, 40-45), these five posts forming a line of defence that was valid against the Ajalon and Ai ascents as well as against the level approach from the north.—(G. A. Smith.)

ISAIAH 10, 33 (p. 496).—LOP THE BOUGH.—With this poetic figure may fitly be compared Warwick's description of his own fall:—

'Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,
Whose top-branch over-peered Jove's spreading tree,
And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.'—Shakespeare, 3 K. Henry vi. 5. 2.

ISAIAH 38, 18, 19 (p. 500).—To assume from these words that O. T. saints had no knowledge of a RESURRECTION and a FUTURE LIFE, would be to ignore several passages of not very obscure meaning, such as 'He will swallow up death in victory' (Isa. 25, 8); 'Shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt'; 'Shall shine as the stars for ever and ever'; 'Thou shalt stand in thy lot (i.e. in the Better Land) at the end of the days' (Dan. 12, 2, 3, 13); 'Thy dead men shall live' &c. (Isa. 26, 19); Gen. 25, 8; 37, 35; Ezek. 37, David's 'I shall go to him' was the language of a joyful hope. Christ spoke of 'the resurrection of life' and 'life eternal' as an idea not foreign to Jewish minds. 'Thy brother shall rise again' was (as she understood it) no news to Martha. If the Sadducees only erred through ignorance of Scripture (Matt. 22, 29), and ought to have learnt from God's utterance at Horeb that 'He is not a God of the dead but of the living,' we may assume that others did learn it, and were influenced in life by their eternal hope, though not till Gospel days were life and immortality brought to full light; nay, even now we do but see through a glass darkly. Hezekiah would merely say that all opportunity of glorifying God on earth, of uttering praise here in his present sphere would be taken away by death. Cp. 'The souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and there shall no torment touch them. In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die; and their departure is taken for misery, and their going from us to be utter destruction; but they are at peace; for though they be punished in the sight of men (1 Cor. 4, 9), yet is their hope full of immortality' (Wisd. 3, 1-4); and compare Wisd. 9, 15 with 2 Cor. 5, 4. On the question how far this hope acted as a motive in O.T. times, see 'Belief in a Future Life,' Camb. Comp. to the Bible, p. 167; and also p. 405, note 'Sheol.'

STRINGED INSTRUMENTS (p. 501).—Regarding the largest, the V-shaped, Egyptian, kind of harp (nebel-azor), the sambuca of Persius v. 95, there is doubt whether 'ten-stringed' is to be understood literally in Ps. 33, 3 & 92, 3 & 144, 10, or whether 'ten,' the number of the fingers, merely represents perfection of harmony, somewhat as 'cube' is applied to the Holy City (Rev. 21, 16). Cp. 'Cui cubus additur, et sonus editur a decachordo' (Rhythm of Bernard of Cluny). Azor is sometimes used simply as a round number (Job 19, 3). Josephus (Ant. vii. 12, 3) says that the largest harp had twelve strings.

SILOAM TUNNEL (p. 502).—The Siloam inscription (referred to on pp. 501-2, note) is in the purest Biblical Hebrew: '[Behold] the excavation! Now this is the history of the excavation. While the excavators were still lifting up the pick, each towards his neighbour, and while there were yet three cubits to [excavate, there was heard] the voice of one man calling to his neighbour, for there was an excess (?) in the rock on the right hand [and on the left]. And after that on the day of excavating the excavators had struck pick against pick, one against the other, the waters flowed from the spring to the Pool for a distance of 1,200 cubits. And (part) of a cubit was the height of the rock over the head of the excavators.* At present this tunnel varies in height from 16 feet (at the Siloam end) to 2 feet.

MERODACH (pp. 504, 505).—Mr. T. G. Pinches, in a Paper recently read at the Victoria Institute, remarks: 'One paragraph on the Babylonian Tablets speaks of the creation of mankind as the work of Merodach, and gives a reason for it strangely agreeing with that given by Caedmon in "The Fall of the Angels," and Milton in "Paradise Lost." Merodach is expressly identified with 13 other gods. In fact, these gods were all manifestations of Merodach. As indicating the comparative popularity of the various gods, it may be noted that 179 names are found containing the name of Nebo; 47 that of Merodach; 73 that of Bel; 22 that of Sin, the moon-god; 59 that of Samas, the sun-god; 34 that of Hadad or Rimmon (cf. pp. 300, 369); 70 contain the element ya, which, however, may be simply the possessive pronoun of the first person singular.'

NEBO (p. 505).—Nebo or Nabū (the Prophet) was the Babylonian god of learning and the special patron of the scribes. He was the great god of Borsippa, the principal seat of learning in Babylonia. The titles of Nebo are interesting. He is called 'the master of devices,' or 'skilled in (artistic) designs'; 'the All-knowing'; 'the broadcaster,' i.e. widely receptive, intelligent (elsewhere 'the open-eared'); 'the wielder of the writing-reed'; 'holder of the measuring-rod'; 'He whose it is to make to know and to divine (aright)'; 'without whom no counsel is taken in heaven.' The wife of Nebo was Tasmit, 'hearing,' evidently in the sense of the 'pupil' or 'student.' In the prophecy of Isaiah 46, 1, 2, the god Nebo represents the scribe and priest caste, as Bel represents the civil powers.

2 KINGS 19, 23 (p. 518).—SENNACHERIB'S BOASTFUL LANGUAGE, in his own record, represents him as doing the very things that Isaiah said he should not do:—'Hezekiah himself I shut up like a bird in a cage in Jerusalem, his royal city. I built a line of forts against him, and I kept back his heel from going forth out of the great gate of his city.' The great disaster that befell him he does not record.

* The words within [ ] are supplied by conjecture, this important inscription the earliest and the longest of the time of the Jewish Monarchy being, unfortunately, illegible in many places.

ESAR-HADDON AND TIRHAKAH (p. 519).—A monolith discovered in the ruins of Singiri, north of Antioch, in the Taurus range, which represents the ancient city Sam'al, the capital of a Hittite, and afterwards of an Aramean, kingdom, bears upon its front a representation of Esar-haddon in his royal robes, with two figures at his feet. The first of these is a negro, whose hands and feet are bound with fetters, and who kneels in a suppliant attitude before the king. This, the inscription informs us, is TIRHAKAH, king of Egypt and Ethiopia (2 Kin. 19, 9); the standing figure is probably the king of Sam'al. In front of the king's head are a number of figures of the gods invoked in the inscription—Bel, Rimmon, Merodach, and the goddess Ishtar, represented as standing on the backs of animals.

The inscription is of great importance, as it relates the defeat of Tirhakah by the Assyrians, and the siege and capture of Memphis, and enables us to identify Esar-haddon with the 'cruel lord' and 'fierce king' of Isa. 19, 4. The description which the king gives of the campaign is short but graphic. 'As for Tirhakah, king of Egypt and Ethiopia, the favourite (lit. protégé) of their great deity, from Iskharu to Memphis, his royal city, a march of fifteen days, daily without ceasing great numbers of his warriors I slew; and himself five times with arrow (and) spear I struck with deadly stroke. Memphis, his royal city, in half a day with war engines I besieged, captured, wrecked, razed, burned with fire.' The Babylonian Chronicle informs us that the capture of Memphis took place on the 13th Tammuz (June-July), in the 10th year (i.e. B.C. 670).

In this inscription Esar-haddon styles himself 'king of Egypt (Masur), Pathros (Paturisa), and Cush (Kāsu)'; compare Isa. 11, 11.

The monument supplies an interesting illustration of the custom referred to in Isaiah—'Therefore will I put my ring in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips' (Isa. 37, 29). This cruelty to captives of distinction was much practised by the Assyrian kings, especially Sargon, Sennacherib, and Esar-haddon. On account of his conquest of Egypt and assumption of the throne of the Pharaohs, the king is represented with an Egyptian sceptre in his hand.

NISROCH, 2 Kin. 19, 37 (p. 519).—The eagle-headed figures of the Assyrian sculptures have been by many considered to be representations of the god Nisroch; but for this identification there is no ground whatever. No such name as Nisroch is known in the inscriptions; and the most tenable explanation is that Nisroch is a textual error, possibly for Nergal, as there was a temple of Nergal at Nineveh. The Septuagint variants Asrach, Asarach, however, suggest that the original name was that of the god Ashur.

2 KINGS 19, 37 (p. 519).—SENNACHERIB'S DEATH. The circumstances are mentioned in the MS. of Nabonidus (the last of the Babylonian Kings, B.C. 555-538) recently (1895) discovered by Father Scheil in the Munjelibeh mound just outside Babylon. Sennacherib's assassination would appear to have been a welcome event in Chaldea. The cause of it was probably jealousy on account of favour shown to EAR-HADDON, Sennacherib's will, now in the British Museum, bequeathed enormous treasures to him. He defeated his brothers and their Armenian helpers in Cappadocia, and was saluted 'king' on the field of battle. Humann discovered (1888) in northern Syria a broken colossal statue of him with inscriptions narrating his Egyptian wars (Isa. 19). The Assyrian empire reached its furthest limits under him. Babylon (2 Chr. 33, 11; p. 528) and Nineveh were, from policy, his twin-capitals. The monuments state that Manasseh paid tribute both to him and to Asshur-bani-pal the Magnificent (=Sardanapalus), his son and successor, the conqueror of Egypt.

THE FOUND BOOK (p. 539).—Ryle, while quoting this narrative as 'containing the first assured proof of the recognised authority of Scripture over the nation,' questions whether 'the Book' was the Pentateuch. Noting, however, that the first direct citations from 'the Law of Moses' found in Kings (written about 50 years after Josiah's death) are from Deuteronomy (e.g. 1 Kings 2, 3; Deut. 29, 9; 2 Kings 14, 6; Deut. 24, 16), he concludes: 'We may safely assume that the Deuteronomic "law," or some form of it, was treated as a sacred and authoritative Scripture in the last days of the Kingdom of Judah.' See, further, Sinkler's remarks in Cumb. Comp. to the Bible, p. 30.

JEREMIAH 27, 13 (p. 598).—'The true PATRIOTS of those days were the PROPHETS, whose teaching was as wise policy as it was sound theology. But it was not the popular course. The national pride of the Jews would not permit them to accept the place which God had assigned them. Consciousness of sin had not brought them humility and submission. They could not understand that the mission of the Jewish race was, about this time, intended to undergo a change. Instead of being lords over other nations, as they had been under David and Solomon, they were now to become their teachers and examples; first as a nation undergoing God's just punishment, and learning penitence in the school of affliction; and then (from the days of Cyrus till Christ's coming) by showing the pattern of a nation who worshipped God alone. The Captivity was a necessity, to teach the Jews that their political supremacy was not essential to their position as the people chosen to be witnesses for God.'—Waller.

EZEKIEL'S ODE OF THE SWORD (p. 615).—On the words in Ezekiel 21, 10, 'Should we then make mirth?' Davidson's note in the Cambridge Bible is as follows:—'These words with the rest to the end of the verse appear to have little meaning in the connexion. R.V. renders the whole: "shall we then make mirth? the rod of my son, it contemneth every tree." This is a literal rendering, the last words meaning probably that the rod (the sword of Babylon) with which Jehovah now chastises his son (the prince, or, people) contemneth (exceeds in severity) every tree, or, all wood, i.e. all rods of chastisement which are mere wood, for it is glittering steel. Some ingenuity is needed to extract the meaning, which, however, when extracted is difficult to harmonise with v. 13. The words "shall we then make mirth?" still appear meaningless. For "or" or "then" Frd. Del. would find some coheratative particle after the Assyrian,—ha! let us make mirth! the words being those of God (cf. v. 17), and the following words "contemneth every tree" meaning that in comparison with the rod he now uses all other rods of chastisement are only despisable, and useless for their purpose (Zeit. f. Keilschriftforschung, II. 4 p. 385). The text appears to be in disorder, and though many emendations have been proposed none of them is satisfactory. Ges., . . . "glitter, against the prince of the tribe of my son (Judah), which despiseth all wood"—prince for "should we rejoice" (nasi) for (nasis), and the idea being expressed that as Judah has hitherto despised all ordinary chastisements with the rod of wood the sword shall now be drawn against the prince. Ew., "no weak rod of my son, the softest of all wood"—the words "rod of my son" being a phrase from the mouth of fathers and meaning a gentle rod. Apart from the unnatural constructions and the strong Aramaisms assumed, the sense is feeble and improbable. Smend, "woe O prince! thou hast despised the rod, contemned every tree (all wood)"—rod and wood being used of chastening as before. LXX. reads: "ready (=furnished) for paralysing (enfeebling); slay, despise, set at nought every tree"! The imperatives are addressed to the sword. The words "for paralysing" may be a rendering of present Heb. read with Aramaean sense; but "for" is read for "or." It is by no means certain that LXX. found imperatives, because it renders v. 9 also in the imperative. Partly following Sep. Coru., "for men who slay and plunder (lit. men of slaughter and plundering) who despise every stronghold"—viz. the Chaldeans, into whose hand the sword of the Lord is to be given. (Cf. Isa. 33, 8; Hab. 1, 10). This really gives a meaning, though it is gained at considerable cost, for some of the words assumed do not occur, the constructions are far from probable, and the changes of the text are serious. Further, in all the passage it is the sword itself that is dwelt upon and those whom it shall slay; those who are to wield it are only alluded to. Scholars almost unanimously assume that there is ref. in the clause to former chastisement, hence "rod" and "all wood" are read in that sense. But such an idea seems little in place in the connexion; and the word rendered "rod" may mean sceptre or almost ruler (19, 11, 14), and "every tree" may be taken of other sceptres. The assumption that "contemneth every tree" (all wood) means: exceeds in severity of punishment every rod, or looks down on every other chastening rod, feeling its own superiority as an instrument of punishment, is a very far-fetched one. It is certainly possible that the word "prince" (princes) lurks in the strange "shall we then rejoice?" (Ges. Sm.). The prince and royal house are alluded to repeatedly in the chapter, e.g. vv. 14, 25-27, 29. The rendering: "against the prince (princes), the sceptre of my son (that) despiseth all wood" (i.e. other sceptres, or royal powers, 19, 11, 14), is not very natural. The expression "my son," whether applied to the king or the people, has something unexpected about it in Ezek., though "my people" is used in the passage also (v. 12), and an undertone of pity, or at least a deep feeling of the terribleness of the coming calamity, runs through the passage. The words "shall we then make mirth?" can hardly stand in any case, even in this form: "or shall we make mirth (saying). The sceptre of my son contemneth all wood!" i.e. defies every other sceptre or royal power (La Bible Annotée). Any reference in the passage to Gen. 49, 9 or 2 Sam. 7, 14 is without probability.

JER. 23, 6 (p. 629).—JEHOVAH-TSIDKÊNŪ. This name is one of an instructive series. The changing names revealed mark the progressive knowledge of God. For Adam, knowing himself God's creature, calling to mind how short a time ago he himself had no being, it was enough to know 'God is,' to speak of God as JEHOVAH simply (Gen. 2, 15), the great I Am, the self-existent and eternal. Then, as the world advanced upon its course, and events multiplied, and life's paths became tangled, it was comfort to learn further JEHOVAH JIREH, God is providence (Gen. 22, 14), in every moment of difficulty He will show Himself. Later, when God's people mingled with the other peoples of the earth, they learnt new lessons. JEHOVAH NISSI (= banner, Ex. 17, 15), God is war, JEHOVAH SHALOM (Judg. 6, 24), God is peace, the God 'whose is the victory' (1 Chr. 29, 11), the God who 'maketh wars to cease' (Ps. 46, 9), and crouches His people with 'the blessings of peace' (Ps. 29, 11; Rom. 16, 20; Isa. 9, 6). This title, TSIDKÊNŪ, and one other, JEHOVAH SHAMMAH (Ezek. 48, 35), God is present, complete the roll of the titles which belong of right to Emmanuel, give to them a more spiritual meaning, connect them more closely with Jesus, as being to His people their everlasting Righteousness and everlasting Home. That this passage is Messianic promise, that each and all of these titles do belong to Jesus, N.T. supplies abundant proof; for did He not call Himself 'I Am' (John 8, 58); speaking of the ceaseless work of Providence, did He not declare 'My Father worketh hitherto, and I work' (John 5, 17), as well He might, seeing that 'by Him all things consist' (Col. 1, 17), and He 'upholdeth all things' (Heb. 1, 3); have we not learnt to know Jesus as 'the Captain of our salvation' (Heb. 2, 10), and faith in Him as our 'shield' (Eph. 6, 16); did not peace herald His coming, was not peace His dying legacy, comes not 'peace with God' through 'our Lord Jesus Christ' (Rom. 5, 1); is it not of Jesus we are told that the Lord hath 'made Him righteousness' to us, and made us 'the righteousness of God in Him' (1 Cor. 1, 30; 2 Cor. 5, 21); and is not the death we have been taught to look for to 'depart and be with Christ,' and an ever-present Saviour, the best idea of an heavenly city we can frame? There is no more may be learnt concerning Him till we shall 'see Him as He is' and 'know even as we are known.'

2 KINGS 25, 24 (p. 695).—KING OF BABYLON.—If the sacred historians call the oppressor of Israel alike king of Assyria, king of Babylon, and king of the Chaldees (2 Chr. 36, 17, and Berosus), probably he called himself, or was called, by all three titles. Similarly, historians of the last century called the occupier of the throne of Timour king of Delhi, while the natives called him simply the King. 'Babylon, though at this time inferior to Nineveh, as Nineveh was the seat of government, seems to have been at this time the right arm of the Assyrian king, its palaces inhabited by his chief princes, its vast population recruiting his armies, and consequently sharing largely in the treasure and the captives of the countries they happened to conquer—what Pasargade was when Cyrus made Ecbatana his capital, or Ecbatana when Darius resided at Susa, or Delhi when Mogul emperors lived at Agra—the York of our forefathers' days, the Edinburgh or Dublin of our own.'

DRINK-OFFERING (p. 709).—In Jer. 44, 19 mention is made of 'pouring out drink-offerings' as a custom among Israelite women in Egypt in connection with the worship of 'the queen of heaven.' It is thought (Ganneau and Reuau) that an inscription found in the sixth Lachish city may further illustrate the prevalence of such libations; that the word therein occurring (of which, however, only the first and last letters are certainly decipherable) may mean ad libandum. Various other renderings have been suggested; e.g. 'belonging to Sanech,' cf. 1 Chr. 26, 7 (Sayce and Neubauer); 'your health' (Conder),

NOTES ON 1 SAMUEL I.—VII.

[These may be of service to those students whose subject is not merely the period of the MONARCHY but the entire BOOKS OF SAMUEL.]

CHAPTER I.

1. Mount. R.V. the hill country of, cf. pp. 4, 22.—Ramahaim-zophim. Cf. p. 4, and v. 19.—Ephrathite. R.V. Ephraimite. Elkanah, though not of the priestly family, was akin to it, being also a descendant of Kohath, the 2nd, but pre-eminent, son of Levi. The Kohathites settled in 'Mount Ephraim' (Josh. 21, 20); Zuph must have removed to the neighbourhood of Ramah (1 Sam. 9, 5), in Benjamin. Cf. p. 255.

2. Two wives. 'Grace' and 'Coral' (or 'Pearl' = Margaret); sanctioned by patriarchal example, and, 'for the hardness of men's hearts,' by the Law (Deut. 21, 15). This alone of the three laws of Paradise (Labour, Sabbath, and Marriage) was temporarily relaxed.—No children. And therefore no hope of being Messiah's progenitor—ever regarded as a condition of 'humiliation' (v. 11; Luke 1, 25, 48; Ps. 113, 7-9; Isa. 4, 1) by Jewish wives.

3. Fearfully. Vulg. statutis diebus. It may mean 'thrice each year' (Deut. 16, 16), or at the Passover only (Luke 2, 41), or for an annual family celebration (ch. 20, 6).—Shiloh. Cf. pp. 1, 288.—Of hosts. Cf. p. 35.—Were there. Rather there....were the priests. In the fact that Eli was past fulfilling his duties, and his sons negligent (and worse), and the times lax, we find the ground of Samuel's appointment (although not of Aaron's family), and of Israel's ready acquiescence (ch. 3, 20).

4. Offered. R.V. sacrificed, as v. 3; a voluntary thank-offering, of which alone the worshipper had power to distribute portions, and to eat (Lev. 7, 15-18). Hannah's portion was 'a double' one (v. 5, R.V.; cf. Gen. 43, 34), but she had no heart to eat (v. 8); she quickly left the feast (v. 9), only returning when her heart felt assured that her prayer was heard (v. 18).

5. Shut up. For 'children are an heritage of the Lord,' and those 'given in youth' His special 'reward' (Ps. 127, 3, 4).

6. Adversary. R.V. rival; one who opposes, persecutes, distresses (here with taunting comparison); Heb. tsārāh; the verb tsārar is rendered 'vex' in Lev. 18, 18.

9. Seat. At once the cathedra of the H.P. and the throne of the Judge, at the Tabernacle (Ps. 5, 7, note, p. 129) inner-court gate

(ch. 4, 18; Ezek. 46, 3). For Eli's genealogy, see p. 130.

11. Vowed. Apparently Elkanah also (v. 21).—All...his life. On the ordinary duration of Levitical service see p. 163. His Nazirate also (like Samson's and the Baptist's) should be life-long, which was unusual (Num. 6). According to Jewish Law it might not last less than a month. Nazir means one that is separate, i.e. pledged to self-denial, the dedication of all human powers to God's service, and purity.

12. Continued. Vulg. multiplicaret preces, which is literal; cf. 2 Kin. 21, 16; 2 Chr. 36, 14 ('very much').

16. Belial. Cf. p. 10. R.V. wrongly continues (with Milton, P. L. i. 490) to take Belial as the name of an evil spirit. As in the similar expressions 'daughters of music' (Eccles. 12, 4), 'of screaming' (= ostriches Isa. 13, 21), 'of wickedness' (2 Sam. 7, 10), &c., 'of worthlessness' simply = worthless; cp., however, 2 Cor. 6, 15.—Grief. R.V. provocation, any perturbation of mind.

18. Was no more. Probably we should supply as it had been; Vulg. cultusque illius non sunt amplius in diversa mutati (in the changefulness of unrest): Sept. οὐ συνέμεσεν ἐν. Cp.

Lord, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make,
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take,
What parched grounds refresh as with a shower!
We kneel, and all around us seems to lower;
We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
Stands forth in sunny outline, brave and clear;
We kneel how weak, we rise how full of power!
—Trench.

20. Wherefore. R.V. and; so Sept. Vulg.—When, &c. Lit. And post circumdierum.—Asked. 'And been answered' is the thought in her mind. Josephus interprets the name by Θεαίττος, but its derivation is shama, to 'hear'; cp. Gen. 16, 11.

22. Weaned. Certainly not over three (2 Macc. 7, 27); there were women in attendance (ch. 2, 22), who would take charge; such early dedication was rare (v. 24). Vulg. adhuc infantulus.—For ever. Vulg. jugiter = continually and to his life's end (v. 28; cp. Ch. Cat.).

23. His word. Sept. has thy, but the wish may have been father to the thought that El's words (v. 17) were Divine promise, even if Eli did not so intend.

24. Three bullocks.] Sept. and Syr. 'a bullock of three years old'; but an ephah would more than suffice (Num. 28. 12) for three, a burnt, vow, and voluntary peace-offering (Num. 15. 3). If the 'bottle' was a goatskin, the wine would be considerably in excess of the Law's requirement, viz., 2 qts. per bullock (Num. 28. 14).

25. A.] R.V. the, viz., the one specially connected with Samuel's dedication, the other two probably previously.

26. Soul liveth.] The asseveration 'By thy life,' even 'By the life of Jehovah' (cf. p. 38), seems to have been regarded as very solemn, but not irreverent. The earliest recorded use of such an expression is in Gen. 40. 'By the life of Pharaoh': which a papyrus roll in the Louvre, translated by Chabas, shows to have been a phrase which none but those of highest rank might utter. Some would render it 'By the Ka of Pharaoh,' the Ka being the fourth constituent in man, who consists, according to Egyptian belief, of Body, Soul, Intelligence, and Ka, i.e., either the vital principle, which includes the other three parts, or more probably the appearance, the individuality, of the man, that which distinguishes him from all other men, and makes him himself. Cp. the use of nephesh (p. 64).

A coloured drawing by Miss Pirie (1896) represents the Ka of a dead man adoring a tree-goddess. The façade of his tomb in the mountain is visible behind. His Ba bows before the tree accepting food from the goddess, while the Ka receives the drink she pours out.—The Times, July 6th, 1896.

27. Given.] Rather granted (nāthan) as v. 27, though gave suits better vs. 4, 5, 11.

28. Leut.] Not a satisfactory rendering; for shāl does not point to that which is reclaimable, in Samuel, or Ex. 12. 36; neither, however, is R.V. grant, for it cannot be retained, in ch. 2. 20. The prime meaning of the word is to dig, excavate, hence to seek, ask, obtain by asking, the participle meaning that which is so obtained; perhaps yield nearly approaches the meaning here; her vow asked Samuel of her; but present, or some other substitute, is required for ch. 2. 20; a rendering which shall there preserve at once the play of words and the true meaning, has yet to be found.—He worshipped.] Vulg. adoraverunt: cf. Eph. 5. 23. Hervey renders she (in v. 7 also).

CHAPTER 2.

1. Prayed.] With perhaps the primary meaning of the word (pālal) = Lat. arbitror, that mental revolving which issues in a judgment, a prayer, or a song of praise, according to circumstances; cf. Hab. 3. 1; Ps. 72. 20. Here, as in all similar outbursts of feeling (cp. the songs of Miriam, Deborah, Moses, David, Hezekiah, and especially the Magnificat), the speaker's horizon becomes much wider than the bounds of mere personal circumstances. Consciously, or unconsciously, Christ's kingdom is referred to. His Church's praises are fore-uttered. Kirkpatrick beautifully remarks that the Virgin's song is "an echo rather than an imitation" of Hannah's.—Rejoiceth.] R.V. exulteth.—Exalted.] So the free, escaped, buffalo or stag raises its proud head in conscious strength. The 'horn' occurs in scripture as the emblem of strength, defence, dignity, courage, and pride; classically of courage: Amphora addit cornua pauperi (Hor. Od. 3. 21. 18); it is as inspirer of courage that Horace and Tibullus describe Bacchus as horned. The horns still worn by Druse women have no symbolic meaning, being merely an exaggeration of a head-adornment (see Thomson, L. and B., p. 73).—Enlarged.] Opened wide; their scorn and my shame can no more keep me silent: the word is used of freedom of step in 2 Sam. 22. 37.—Salvation.] i.e., in this proof that it is divine help which is on my side.

3. Knowledge.] The minutest and the widest; Vulg. scientiarum, as Heb.—Actions.] His own are well balanced, just (so Sept. Vulg. Theod. Keil); or (better) men's are justly estimated (so Targ. Syr. Ewald) by a God.—Rock.] This expression (among others) induces comparison with Deut. 32. and 2 Sam. 22. (p. 152). To an Oriental the 'rock' brings the idea of security and shade and unchangeableness.—Arrogancy.] Self-assertion, the haughtiness of supposed superiority; āthaq = to be removed; then restraint removed induces license, impudence. Jehovah is greater than men's hearts and knoweth all things, misjudgeth the merits of none. Enripides (Herac. 609) assigns the like power of raising and abasing to Fate. Cf. Ps. 113. 7-9; Dan. 4. 17; Ps. 75. 78. 79; Ph. 2. 8-10. The Lat. termination -tia becomes -ce or -cy frequently, but rarely both: cf. Ps. 73. 13.

5. Ceased.] i.e. there ceased to be any that hungered; cf. Judg. 5. 7; Deut. 15. 11; chādhal = to leave off, rest from, this or that (ch. 12. 23); shā'ath is similarly used (Isa. 33. 8).

6. Grave.] Sheol, see pp. 68, 405, 499.

8. Pillars.] Here and (?) ch. 14. 5 (A.V. situate; R.V. rose up) only. Another word (= support) is frequent (Job 9. 6, &c.). This word may mean rulers (2 Ps. 75. 3); more probably the idea is that the universe is God's temple, and He the sole foundation and stay of it. Vulg. Domini sunt cardines terre et posuit super eos orbem; so the see of Rome was styled the church's 'hinge,' and thence the Roman clergy cardinales.

9. Saints.] Whether we read with Sept. δικαίων (so the C'thib, or written text), or with Vulg. sanctorum sanctorum, the meaning is the same; Christ and his people (of whom the Fathers see in Hannah a type) are one, their strength is His (2 Cor. 12. 9), and His divine (cp. Luke 1. 69-71; 2 Sam. 22. 3). Germ. seiner Heiligen. 'Hannah prayed in the spirit of prophecy' (Targum of Jonathan).

10. Anointed.] The Christ is a royal Saviour.

12, Belial.] Cf. ch. 1. 16.—Knew not. Neither His character, nor His purposes (so far as yet revealed); their service was perfunctory and utterly unspiritual; cf. John 17. 3; Tit. 1. 16; 1 John 2. 4; and a fortiori they did not 'know Jehovah' in the sense of ch. 3. 7; John vouchsafed to them no communications from Himself.

13, Priest's.] So Sept., but Vulg. rightly sacerdotum.—Sacrifice. i.e. peace-offering, Lev. 7. 28. The law allowed no choice to the priests, nor might they take their portion till the fat had been burnt upon the altar, and till their rightful portion, the breast and right shoulder (R.V. thigh), had been consecrated, the former, which was common to all the priests, by being 'waved' to and fro; the latter, which was appropriated by the officiating priest, by being 'heaved' or elevated. Hengstenberg calls attention to the repeated reference to the law and phraseology of the Pentateuch in this Book.—See the. Cf. p. 549.—Struck. Cf. p. 415.

15, Also.] R.V. yea; so outrageous was their conduct.

16, Presently.] Vulg. primum, Sept. πρῶτον; speedily (Prov. 12. 16), or at once; Geiz. heute is literal.

18, Ministered.] Resuming from v. 11, after describing, in contrast, the unfaithfulness to duty of Eli's sons: and again at ch. 3. 1 after recounting how doom was pronounced on Eli for his wicked weakness. Shdrath has wide meaning; either ordinary (but honourable rather than servile) service; Levitical, or priestly: Sept. λεειτουργίαν. Doubtless Samuel was Eli's personal domestic attendant, but he was a Levite as well, and 'before Jehovah' points to his sharing in that service, as also does his dress.—Ephod. Cf. p. 21.

19, Coat.] Heb. mēl; cf. p. 38. Vulg. tunicam; Sept. διπλοῖδα; cf. Ex. 28. 31; Ecclus. 45. 8; ch. 15. 27; 28. 14; 3. 20 and 1. 3, note.

20, Loan.] Cf. ch. 1. 28, note; Amer. petition... asked of.

21, Grew.] In the value that God set upon him, and spiritually; v. 26 (Amer. increased in); ch. 3. 19; Luke 2. 52.

22, Assembled.] R.V. did service. We have the same expression in Ex. 38. 8; but there is no distinct mention of any class of female ministrants, except idolaters (2 Kin. 23. 7). The prime meaning of the verb is restrain, and so the noun = a day restrained from ordinary avocations, set apart for religious service, a devotional assembly. Cp. Luke 2. 37. 'Came to worship God' (Josephus).—Congregation. Cf. p. 226.

24, Make, &c.] Cf. Matt. 18. 6; Mal. 2. 1-10. Sept. μὴ δουλεύειν.

25, If, &c.] To the obscurity always attending the terseness of proverbs is here added the difficulty of rendering the play on judge and intreat, both parts of the verb pālat (= to judge, arbitrate, and not rendered intreat elsewhere), and also the uncertainty as to whether Elohim here means judge (A.V.

Germ., Fr., Ex. 21. 6; Deut. 1. 17; Ps. 82. 6; John 10. 35), or God (R.V., Ital., Wordsworth, Kirkpatrick). The former meaning seems the more likely, for there is nothing to require a change in God's name from Elohim to Jehovah, and the argument so is plainer, and (?) the necessity for any play of words avoided. In the case of an ordinary transgression of man against man judgment follows; penalty may be mitigated by intercession or the judge's favourable view of his case; anyhow, recompense made, all is over. In the case of sin against Jehovah none of these things occur; in the day of doom intercession comes too late, there can be no extenuation, the punishment is everlasting. Sept., προσεύχονται ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ προς Κύριον... τίς προσεύξεται ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ; Vulg., placari ei potest Deus... quis orabit pro eo?

—Would. Vulg. voluit. Sept. βουλόμενος ἐβούλετο; Jehovah's will was to. God's will, where man is concerned, is, like His promises (v. 30), conditional, God 'willeth not that any should perish' (2 Pet. 3. 9), unless their will is fully set in opposition to His, and warning and long-suffering have proved in vain. Let Pharaoh continue in his hardness, the Amorites in their iniquity, Saul in his rebelliousness, Israel in their idolatry, Hophni and Phinehas in their rejection of rebuke, and at length God 'can no longer bear, and so sluply ceases to influence; they are 'let alone'.

27, Appear.] Open revelation had now temporarily ceased (ch. 3. 1, 21); cf. Ex. 12. 1, 42.

—Father. Aaron.

29, Kick.] Cp. Dent. 32. 15, where, however, the reference is to the ox rebelling against the yoke in the pride of his strength; here to his trampling under foot his despised, because too plentiful, provision, Eli's conscience would measure what share in the rebuke belonged to himself. He, it may be, was not discontented with his priestly portion, but in foolish fondness for his sons he had preferred indulging them to the honouring of God and so proved himself 'unworthy' (Matt. 10. 37). Conscience silenced him (ch. 3. 18).—Habitation. Vulg. in templo (v. 32 also).—Chiefest. Lit. the beginnings, the first parts.

31, Arm.] The symbol of strength; cp. Zech. 11. 17.

32, Enemy.] Rather rival as ch. 1. 6, one whom they would regard with jealous eye as a usurper. R.V. affliction of, as A.V. marg.; cf. ch. 4. 18 and p. 53. Vulg. amulum tantum in templo in universis prosperis Israel.

33, In the flower.] Lit. men. Vulg. cum ad virilem aetatem venerit.

34, Two sons.] In them he had both troubles named in v. 33, grief in their life and in their premature death.

35, A faithful priest.] Cf. 1 Kin. 2. 27, 35; 2 Sam. 7. 11. The reference may be to the house of Zadok (1 Chr. 6. 8-15); but more probably (so Wordsworth and Kirkpatrick) to that of Samuel (ch. 3. 20); with perhaps a further reference to the 'Priest after the order of Melchisedec,' of Whom, as regards his non-Aaronic descent, Samuel might be considered typical. If the expression 'sure house,' and r. 36 seem rather in favour of the former supposition, it is to be noted that the same word here rendered 'faithful' and 'sure' is used of Samuel (ch. 3. 20, established).

CHAPTER 3.

1. Child. Aged 12 (Jos. v. 10, 4); ep. Luke 2. 42.—Precious. Valued because scarce is the meaning of the word. The race 'man of God' was becoming almost extinct, till revived by Samuel's Schools of the Prophets, which perhaps entitled him to be reckoned father of the prophets, Acts 3. 24; Heb. 11. 32.—Open. R.V. marg. frequent, or (which is more literal) widely spread, but came abroad in 2 Chr. 31. 5, i.e. was published. God had no acknowledged spokesman or seer (1 Chr. 9. 22) in Israel.

2. Laid down. Rather was sleeping; (r. 3 also.)—And his eyes. R.V. (now his eyes had begun... see).—Wax. Sax. = grove, in which sense it fingers in the phrase 'wax and wane.' In the sense of become (as here) it is common: 'Do afterward wax otherwise' (Hooker); 'Adder waxen deaf' (Shakespeare).

3. Ere, &c. Towards morning, for the lamps in the seven-branched candlestick would not 'begin to go out' till then (Ex. 27. 21; 30. 8).

7. Not yet. Did not yet receive direct communications from God, as later (ch. 9. 15).

10. Came and stood. That he actually saw something ('the glory of the Lord,' Targum) is implied by 'vision' (r. 15); cp. Acts 9. 17; 22. 14.

11. Both ears. Cf. 2 Kin. 21. 12; Jer. 19. 3; Hab. 1. 5.

12. Perform. Lit. make to stand; contrast suffer to fall (r. 19); the stability of Samuel's words was the only 'sign following' which established his mission, for (except ch. 12. 18) he wrought no miracle.—When, &c. R.V. from the beginning even unto the end.

13. Made vile. Vulg. indigne agere; Sept. καταλογίζεσθαι ὀνείδην; but R.V. did bring a curse upon themselves.

14. Not be purged. It is not meant, that sacrificing with intelligent faith, and due ritual (both the zebach and minchah), no sinner of Eli's house might cherish hope of pardon, having opportunity; only that the temporal consequences should not be transitory, and that the brief opportunity would not be grasped; cp. Heb. 12. 17.

15. Doors. If the tabernacle is called temple, the curtain may well be called door: cf. ch. 1. 9; r. 3; Ps. 5. 7.

17. Do so. Cf. p. 82.

18. Whit. Sax. wiht = thing, and hence, in general, the ideally smallest of all things, a point, bit, jot; 'Disclosed every whit' (Spenser); 'No whit enumerated' (Milton).—It is Jehovah. 'And who am I that I should murmur (he would add): shall not the Judge of all the earth do right, and has He not right to do?' We cannot but admire the spirit that prompted this utterance: it is the redeeming point in Eli's character; nevertheless duty done would have better stamped him 'man of God' than mere acquiescence; to obey is better than the sacrifice even of hope or affection or pride.

19. With him. Ever a very present help; cf. Gen. 21. 22; 28. 15; 39. 2; Ex. 3. 12; Josh. 1. 5; Judg. 6. 16; ch. 16. 18; 18. 14; Matt. 28. 20. God could give no stronger pledge of success in any calling than this.

20. Dan. i.e. the later northern settlement of the tribe, Judg. 18. 29.—Beer-sheba. Cf. p. 319.—Established. Cf. ch. 2. 35, note.

CHAPTER 4.

1. And the word, &c. In R.V. this forms rightly the close of ch. 3 (Vulg. event is literal); the direct narrative (20 years later) continues at ch. 7. 2, when the fulfilment of Eli's doom and all its consequences has been related in (probably) an extract from some other source. If the 40 years of Philistine oppression (named in Judg. 13. 1) closed then (ch. 7. 15), and Samson's nominal judgeship lasted 20 years 'in the days of the Philistines' (Judg. 15. 20; 16. 31), the days of lawlessness (Judg. 17. 6; 18. 1; 19. 1; 21. 25) were the days of Samson's bondage, Eli's weakness, and Samuel's infancy.—Philistines. Cf. pp. 25, 429.—Ebenezer. So called later (ch. 7. 12); the Writer would naturally use the name known at the date of writing even had he himself not bestowed it, cp. Josh. 4. 19; 5. 9; that it lay west of Mizpeh (p. 16) is all that is known of its position.—The Aphek. = The fortified place; there were several (pp. 69, 326); cp. le Havre, o Porto.

2. Army. Vulg. acies, rightly, for the word means army set in battle array (rs. 12, 16).

3. People. The survivors from the battle.—Elders. Cf. p. 1.—Wherefore, &c. Where, they would ask, is the covenanted victory? (Num. 10. 35) forgetful that they, as parties to the covenant, had failed, that only the 'righteous' might look to 'rejoice' over a routed enemy (Ps. 68. 1-3).—Ark. Cf. p. 180. In their present low religious state the symbol was to them no better than a fetish; the holy nation were placing themselves on the idolaters' level (r. 7; 2 Sam. 5. 21). Constantine's Cross and Bruce's heart are examples of a not altogether dissimilar materialism. cp. 2 Sam. 15. 25; David had a clearer and a better faith.

4. Dwelleth between. R.V. (not marg.) sitteth upon, which may be more literal, but is less true; the verb means to seat oneself; the ark-lid was the Mercy-seat on which the Shechinah rested; the cherubim were over it (Ex. 25, 20; κατακλιθήσεται, Heb. 9, 5); Vulg. super cherubim, de medio (Ex. 25, 22), inter (Num. 7, 89).

5. Rang.] Cf. p. 184.

6. Hebrews.] Cf. pp. 19, 22.

7. God.] Sept. renders Elohim, οι θεοι, here as r. s.

8. All the.] R.V. all manner of; smote ... smiting would be literal, but plagued ... plagues better; they refer however only to the climax at the Red Sea, 'in the edge of the wilderness,' which specially had struck awe into 'the inhabitants of Palestina' (Ex. 15, 14; Josh. 2, 10).

9. Quit.] Fr. quitter, discharge a debt or obligation. 'Omittance is no quittance' (Shakespeare), and so a duty; cp. Nelson's signal.

10. Tent.] Cf. p. 16.—Ark.] The emblem of God's strength and glory; Ps. 78, 61; v. 21.

12. Ran.] This, as their name implies, would be part of the duty of the guard in attendance. Cf. pp. 33, 394; 2 Sam. 18, 19. Mizpeh to Shiloh would be under 20 miles.—(clothes, &c.) Cf. 2 Sam. 1, 2. Hervey aptly quotes Virg. Æn. xii. 607.

13. Scat.] Cf. ch. 1, 9, note.—Cried out.] Cf. 'A murmur long and loud, And a cry of fear and wonder Bursts from out the heaving crowd.' So it was in Shiloh, but not (as Aytoun pictures) in Edinburgh, when news of Flodden arrived. Scottish courage and confidence in God only rose. A proclamation at once forbade crying in the streets, and bade repair to the churches; but Israel's confidence in God was gone. Scott's 'Raise the universal wail' (Marmion, vi. 34) is equally inexact.

15. Ninety and eight.] Cf. r. 1, note.—Dim.] The word in ch. 3, 2 means failing, this set, as is the case in extreme old age (1 Kin. 14, 4).

17. Is taken.] This was the climax: now, at any rate, God's honour was dearer to his heart than aught besides. Archbishop Whitgift's dying words were 'Pro ecclesiâ Dei.'

21. Ichabod.] 'No Glory' (cf. Rom. 9, 4), for where should it rest, now that the Mercy-seat was gone? All natural personal feeling (such as Rachel's, Gen. 35, 18) was swallowed up in a higher one. Vulg. Translata est gloria ab Israel. Sept. Ὁσιαπαγαβῶθ (a wailing cry). The whole scene recalls the death of Margaret of Scotland:—'Lying on her dying bed, she saw her second son, who had escaped from the fatal battle of the Standard, approach her bed, "How fares it (she said) with your father and with your brother Edward?" The young man stood silent. "I conjure you (she cried) by the Holy Cross, and by the duty you owe me, to tell me the truth." "Your husband and your son are both slain." "The will of God be done," answered the Queen, and expired with expressions of devout resignation to the pleasure of Heaven' (Scott).

CHAPTER 5.

1. Ashdod.] Cf. 429.

2. Dagon.] The first god (= Little Fish), naturally, honoured in a seaside town. As the national god he had temples also elsewhere (1 Chr. 10, 10). On the Eastern monuments the form is half man half fish (Layard). The image at Ashkelon was half woman (Diod. Sic.); possibly Horace alludes to this (Ars Poet. 3). 'Ut turpiter atrum Desinat in pisces mulier formosa superne. The ruins of this Beth-dagon were visited by Ptolemy Philometor (1 Macc. 11, 4; 10, 83).

3. Fallen.] So the expectation, which Milton puts into Samson's mouth, began to have fulfilment:—

'This only hope relieves me, that the strife
With me hath end, all the contest is now
'Twixt God and Dagon; Dagon hath presumed,
Me overthrown, to enter lists with God.
He, be sure,
Will not connive, or linger, thus provoked,
But will arise, and His great Name assert.'

The same acknowledgment of the superiority of 'the living God,' it was foretold, should occur in Egypt later (Isa. 19, 1).

4. The stump of Dagon.] Rather the dagon, i.e., the little fish, the lower portion of his form. Sept. the back; Vulg. solus truncus, whence no doubt A.V.

5. Therefore.] Cp. Gen. 32, 32. Sept. adds to this verse ὅτι υπερβαίνοντες υπερβαίνοντες, which Hervey (not so Gaudell and Kirkpatrick) takes to be a quotation from Zeph. 1, 9, and to show that the custom prevailed at later date and in other towns. Dagon-worship, however, 'does not appear ever to have fascinated the Jews' (Pusey), to leap on is not to leap over. Zephaniah seems rather to speak of the crowd of satellites haunting the gates of the rapacious rich in order to 'ravish the poor' (ἐκδικῶσιν ἐν τῇ πρόπυλῃ).—Priests.] Heb. cohen, used of God's priests also; kosem, added in ch. 6, 2, is used only of false or unworthy prophets.

6. Emerods.] A corruption of hæmorrhoids (bleeding piles), but (Speak. Comm.) the Heb. = tumours simply, and so R.V. here and Deut. 28, 27, marg.

8. Gath.] Cf. pp. 48, 264.

9. Destruction.] R.V. discomfiture (r. 11 also); rather consternation.—They had, &c.] R.V. tumours broke out upon them. Probably, if sáthar = to hide, the meaning is that the piles were, in the case of some, internal.

10. Ekrón.] Now Akir, a squalid mud-village in a rich plain; northernmost of the Philistine Pentapolis; cf. Josh. 15, 11; 19, 43; 2 Kin. 1, 2.

12. Cry.] Cf. Ex. 2, 23; 12, 30.

CHAPTER 6.

3. Offering.] 'Wherewith shall I come before the Lord?' (Mic. 6, 6) whether to propitiate or to thank, is a question ever rising naturally in the human mind. Revelation alone furnishes a satisfying answer (c. 8); cp. Gen. 20, 14-18.

4. Mice.] Josephus says of Ashdod: 'As to the fruits of their country, a great multitude of mice arose out of the earth and hurt them, and spared neither the plants nor the fruits.' With this the Sept. (ch. 5, 6, and c. 1) agrees. 'Akhar probably corresponds to Arab, farah, and includes the 23 rodents found in Palestine, jerboa, marmot, rat, dormouse, &c., many of which the Arabs eat (Lev. 11, 29; Isa. 66, 17). These would be field-mice. The name means 'corn-eater.' Similar plagues have occurred in Spain and Italy (Tristram, Nat. Hist., p. 122). Both Aristotle (H. of An., 6, 37) and Pliny (Nat. Hist., x, 65, 85) speak of their rapid multiplication and destructiveness.

5. Images.] Similarly, in some churches on the continent are placed waxen images of an arm, a leg, or other afflicted member, accompanying, or taking the place of, prayers for their restoration to soundness. In many cases these are afterwards replaced by gold or silver offerings by the thankful. The Philistines' purpose here was both to acknowledge the supremacy of Jehovah (cf. Ex. 8, 7, 8), and tacitly to invoke His aid (Give glory . . . peradventure, &c.).

6. As, &c.] So lasting is the instruction of God's teaching; cf. ch. 4, 8.

7. Nec.] In reverence (cf. 2 Sam. 6, 3; Mark 11, 2; Luke 23, 53).

8. Jewels.] Lit. things; Sept. σκεῦη; Vulg. vasa.—Coffer.] Saxon, a chest. An instinctive feeling of reverential awe, and perhaps also the number (c. 18) and the size of their offerings (for the ark measured only 3½ x 2½ x 2½ feet) prevented their attempting to place them within the ark. Sept. omits 'five' before 'mice' at c. 4. Probably the contents of the ark remained intact; cf. p. 227.

9. If, &c.] Nature would lead them back to their calves, unless Divine influence counteracted; this should be a sign, cp. ch. 14, 9; 19, 2-7.—His own.] R.V. its own (ch. 5, 11 also). Throughout A.V. his is constantly used for its; cf. 'Unfix his earthbound root' (Shakespeare); 'Opium loseth his poisonous quality' (Bacon). But 'he' should not be 'it,' as A.V. marg.; Vulg. ipse.—Coast.] R.V. border, as c. 12; cf. p. 72.—Bethshemesh.] Cf. p. 424.

12. Lorring.] Named as proof of the preternatural influence upon them; their calves were not forgotten, yet they did not return to them.

13. Wheat-harvest.] i.e. May. They had 'sowed in tears' over deaths and calamity and shame, they were thus for God's great Name's sake, after seven weary months, enabled unexpectedly to 'reap in joy.'—Valley.] It stands on a low tell with a valley on either side. Higher up wheat would not be ripe yet.

14. Offered.] It was a priest-city (Josh. 12, 16); cp. 2 Sam. 24, 22; 1 Kin. 19, 21.

15. Lerites.] The name was occasionally thus given to priests, from Aaron onward (Ex. 4, 14; Deut. 24, 8; Josh. 3, 3).—Sacrifices.] Not content, in the thankfulness of their hearts, to offer only the kine which had 'cost them nothing.'

18. Even unto, &c.] No satisfactory analysis of this sentence, as it stands, seems possible. Probably abel should be aben = stone (as rs. 14, 15); so Sept.; Vulg. ad Abel magnam; and perhaps the meaning is, that as many as were the towns and villages betwixt Ekron and 'the Great Stone,' so many were the mice.

19. Looked into.] The word has not necessarily that meaning; in a priest-city they would assuredly know better. Sept. (ἐνέειν) and Vulg. (vidissent) point to an irreverent inquisitive gaze on that which was wont to be screened by the Vail.—Fifty thousand and.] There can be little doubt that somehow these words have wrongly crept in. A likely suggestion as to how may be seen in a very full note in Speak. Comm., ii, 272. 'Struck 70 persons dead, who, not being priests and so not worthy to touch the ark (which, indeed, none might do, not even the bearers, Ex. 25, 12; cf. 2 Sam. 6, 7), had approached it' (Jos. vi, 1, 4).

20. Before, &c.] Before Jehovah this holy God.—He go.] Sept. καθὼς Κυρίου. Mentally they regard God and the token of His presence as one.

21. Kirjath-jearim.] The Baale of 2 Sam. 6, 2 (cf. p. 94); a 'high place' (of Baal, possibly of Jehovah now), hence 'come down'; cf. 'on the hill' (ch. 7, 1 which should be attached to this chapter). Probably Shiloh was in the hands of the Philistines, and finally rejected for the sins it had witnessed (Is. 78, 67), and Israel generally idolatrous and indifferent, till 20 years later, Samuel was able to arouse them to amendment, taking advantage of a yearning after God (lit. a waiting cry, ch. 7, 2) which arose.

CHAPTER 7.

1. Abinadab.] 'By birth a Levite' (Josephus).—On the hill.] Wrongly rendered 'at Gibeath,' 2 Sam. 6, 4.—Sanctified.] 'As curator of the ark' (Josephus); not as priest; cf. 1 Chr. 15, 12.

2. Long.] Near 50 years.

3. If, &c.] If your yearning be genuine and hearty.—Gods.] Vulg. Baetim (as c. 1) and no doubt that is the meaning. The sun was worshipped under various titles. Ash-taroth is plur. of Ashtoreth (the moon); cf. p. 13.—Prepare.] i.e. Let your hearts be fixedly established in this your present right desire.

5. Mizpeh.] Cf. pp. 9, 300.—Pray.] His 'collective fervent prayer' was ever ready on their behalf (ch. 12, 23; Ps. 99, 6; Jer. 15, 1); cp. Ex. 32, 30; Deut. 9, 26; 1 Kin. 18, 37; Ezra 9, 5; Isa. 33, 12; Heb. 7, 25.

6. Water.] 'Aquam pro lacrymis effundebant' (S. Gregory). It may be meant that they fasted even from water, so thorough was their penitence; or that they symbolised the pouring out of their hearts; but we have no certain knowledge of any such custom.—

Judged.] Prophet he had long been (ch. 3, 20), H. P. (irregularly) since Eli's death. It may mean that from that date till now there had practically been no civil judge or military leader; or, perhaps, it may be intended to mention, not that he now entered on office, but now made Mizpah the centre of government; or again, possibly, simply to name the fact that Mizpah was as yet, and had been (Vulg. judicavit, Sept. ḥikāṣe), such centre (cf. vs. 16, 17). He stands first among the prophets of whom it says, in Eccles. 46, 12, 'Let their bones flourish out of their place, and let the name of them that were honoured be continued upon their children,' and this day's deeds are specially named (r. 16).

9. Offered.] We need not look, under such exceptional circumstances, for any exact adherence to particular legal ordinances.

Wholly' indicates perhaps total self-dedication, and its extreme youth that their purpose was to begin life altogether anew. The exact word for lamb is not found in the Law, but there is no prohibition (Lev. 22, 27).

—Heard.] R.V. answered, by thunder (lit. voice, r. 16) and victory. It may be that it was in order to recall this day, on which God's choice of leader was so plainly indicated, that Samuel asked for thunder as a sign in ch. 12, 17. Cp. Ps. 18, 13, 14; Josh. 10, 11.

11. Beth-car.] The site of this and of Shen cannot be identified.

12. Eben-ezer.] i.e. Stone of help (cf. ch. 4, 1, note). It has formed the key-note to countless Christian hymns, e.g. Newton's song of tranquil confidence:—

'He, who has helped me hitherto,
Will help me all my journey through,
And give me daily cause to raise
New Ebenezers to His praise.'

13. Subdued.] Cf. ch. 4, 1, note.—Days of Samuel.] i.e. Days of his sole supremacy as judge, including the time when his sons shared his civil duties. Prophet and H.P. he continued till he died, and those offices and the memory of the past led to his being spoken of as judge 'all the days of his life,' (r. 15).

16. Beth-el.] Cf. p. 268.—Gilgal.] Cf. p. 8.

17. Ramah.] Thus he made his native place (whether the Tabernacle was there or not, is unknown) what Shiloh had been. It had never been the one sole 'sanctuary' (the name which Sept. uses for these three places). The Law on that point continued in abeyance. We read of a sanctuary in Joshua's day at Shechem (Josh. 24, 26), and of sacrifices offered in Samuel's day at Bethlehem and elsewhere (ch. 14, 35; 16, 2).

APPENDIX C.

OBADIAH.

Thus saith the Lord God <sup>a</sup> concerning Edom;

<sup>b</sup> We have heard a rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent among the heathen, Arise ye, and let us rise up against her in battle. <sup>2</sup> Behold, I have made thee small among the heathen: thou art greatly despised. <sup>3</sup> The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts <sup>c</sup> of the rock, whose habitation is high; <sup>d</sup> that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? <sup>4</sup> <sup>e</sup> Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the LORD. <sup>5</sup> If <sup>f</sup> thieves came to thee, if robbers by night, (how art thou cut off!) would they not have stolen till they had enough? if the grapegatherers came to thee, <sup>h</sup> would they not leave some grapes? <sup>6</sup> How are the things of Esau searched out! how are his hidden things sought up! <sup>7</sup> All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border: <sup>i</sup> the men that were at peace with thee have deceived thee, and prevailed against thee; they that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee: <sup>k</sup> there is none understanding in him. <sup>8</sup> <sup>l</sup> Shall I not in that day, saith the LORD, even destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau? <sup>9</sup> And thy <sup>m</sup> mighty men, O <sup>n</sup> Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that every one of the mount of Esau may be cut off by slaughter.

<sup>10</sup> For thy <sup>o</sup> violence against thy brother Jacob shame shall cover thee, and <sup>p</sup> thou shalt be cut off for ever. <sup>11</sup> In the day that thou stoodest on the other side, in the day that the strangers carried away captive his forces, and foreigners entered into his gates, and <sup>q</sup> cast lots upon Jerusalem, even thou wast as one of them. <sup>12</sup> But thou shouldest not have <sup>r</sup> looked on <sup>s</sup> the day of thy brother in the day that he became a stranger; neither shouldest thou have <sup>t</sup> rejoiced over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; neither shouldest thou have spoken proudly in the day of distress. <sup>13</sup> Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, thou shouldest not have looked on their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor have laid hands on their substance in the day of their calamity; <sup>14</sup> neither shouldest thou have stood in the crossway, to cut off those of his that did escape; neither shouldest thou have delivered up those of his that did remain in the day of distress. <sup>15</sup> <sup>u</sup> For the day of the LORD is near upon all the heathen: <sup>v</sup> as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head. <sup>16</sup> <sup>w</sup> For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been.

<sup>17</sup> <sup>x</sup> But upon mount Zion <sup>y</sup> shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions. <sup>18</sup> And the house of Jacob <sup>z</sup> shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the LORD hath spoken it. <sup>19</sup> <sup>aa</sup> And they of the south <sup>cc</sup> shall

NOTES ON OBADIAH.

1. The vision (Heb. châzon, for this nâbi was chozeh as well, cf. 1 Sam. 9. 9, note) of Obadiah (= worshipper of Jehorah) is more intimately connected with Judah than its title, 'concerning Edom,' might lead us to suppose. In Hebrew history it certainly can claim a place; whether or not in the history of the Hebrew monarchies, remains an undecided question. The dates assigned range over 600 years, from Shishak's capture of Jerusalem, in Rehoboam's reign (970 B.C.), to that by Ptolemy Lagus in 301 B.C.; for the question of date rests mainly on which capture is referred to in v. 11, or whether the Edomite conduct there described took place in the Writer's day, after it, or (as A.V. requires) before it. Without attempting to decide this question, it may be enough to say—(1) that its position in the Canon shows the Jewish view of the date of the prophecy, but proves no more; (2) that resemblances between Obad. vs. 1-9 and Jer. 49. 7-22, and between Obad. vs. 10-18 and several verses in Joel, may prove a common origin, or that one Writer had the other in his mind, but do not decide which was the earlier Writer; (3) that of the captures of Jerusalem most commonly supposed to be referred to, that by Joash in Amaziah's reign seems precluded by the words 'strangers' and 'foreigners' in v. 11; while that by the Philistines and Arabians in Jehoram's reign seems hardly an event of sufficient magnitude to suit the language used; and those by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar in the reigns of Jehoiachin (598 B.C.) and of Zedekiah (586 B.C.) have this in their favour, that both Ezekiel (ch. 35) and Jeremiah (Lam. 4. 21), when speaking unquestionably of them, used similar language to Obadiah, while the Psalm (137. 7) of the returned exile plainly states that Edom's conduct then was such as Obadiah describes, and, further, within a few years of that date the double conquest of Edom, alluded to by Obadiah, actually began to take place, viz.: by the very nation lately 'confederate' (c. 7) with them (for Nebuchadnezzar when subduing Ammon and Moab must have overrun Edom, Jos. Ant. x. 9. 7; Mal. 1. 3), and by Israel (v. 18) when (164 B.C.) Judas Maccabeus fought against the children of Esau in Idumaea at Arabatime because they besieged Israel' (1 Macc. 5. 3); and (4), lastly, that (literally rendered) vs. 11, 12 express nothing whatever as to time. The word 'vision' would scarcely apply as well to something past as to something future. It is at least permissible to allow Obadiah's prophecy a supplemental place in this work, as illustrating events which do belong to the period of the Hebrew monarchy, as fitly accompanying the dawn of Judah's darkest day, not without allusion to a golden evening sky after all, in a passage (vs. 17-21) which to Jewish ears tells more of future triumph than perhaps any other.

1. We.] Sept. ἡκουσα, as in Jer. 49. 14.—Rumour.] R.V. tidings; strictly the cognate accusative, a hearing.—Ambassador.] Rather, herald (so Meyrick); Sept. reads roundabout.—Heathen.] Rather, nations, vs. 2, 15 also; so R.V.; God summons the nations as his instruments; in the following verses (2-9) the causes occasioning this doom are stated.

2. I have.] I will in Jeremiah.

3. Pride.] Terribleness in Jeremiah, i.e. those supposed impregnable strongholds, which (like Rhine castles) made thee a terror to neighbours or to an invader.—The rock.] R.V. marg. Sela (2 Kin. 14. 7), capital of Edom (later Petra).—High.] Alluding perhaps to Bozrah (40 miles N. of Petra), which has a lofty position.

4. Exalt.] R.V. mount on high.

5. How, &c.] = how terrible is thy desolation!—Have stolen.] Rather, steal, so R.V. Her spoilers shall be insatiable and leave nothing un plundered.—Grapes.] Marg. gleamings; R.V. gleaming grapes.

6. Things of Esau.] R.V. marg. men; but Jer. 49. 10 seems to point rather to hiding-places in the rocks.—Hidden things.] R.V. treasures.

7. Brought thee.] Supply (so Variorum) on thy way; so R.V.; but marg. drive thee out, which admits of our understanding by 'confederates' the Chaldees, lately their allies against Judah; and this perhaps presents fewer difficulties than to suppose that Moab and all others named in Jer. 27. 3 as then desirous of leaguings with Judah and Edom against the king of Babylon, later proved false friends to ('deceived') Edom, and (of which there seems no evidence) sided with him.—Bread.] Cp. Ps. 41, 9.—Wound.] Very many would render snare; so R.V. (not marg.); but in Hos. 5, 13 it can only mean wound.—In him.] Marg. of it; so R.V. marg.; but the meaning seems to be He is at his wit's end (cp. Jos. B. J. vi. 8, 4; 1 Sam. 14, 15); yet Edom had been famed for wisdom (cf. Baruch 3, 23).

8. Mount.] i.e. Mount Seir.

9. Teman.] Fifteen miles from Petra (Eusebius), the birth-place of Eliphaz (Job 2, 11), named after an Edomite duke, Esau's grandson (Gen. 36, 15).

10. Violence.] Cp. Joel 3, 19.—Brother.] Amos (1, 11) also reminds of the relationship, to mark the ingratitude (cf. Deut. 23, 7), alluding probably to their hostility in Jehoshaphat's day (2 Chr. 20, 1, 10).

11. That thou stoodest.] Rather, of thy standing.—On the other side.] R.V. marg. aloof.—Carried . . . captive.] Rather, of the strangers carrying away.—Forces.] Rather, substance, as in r. 13; so R.V.; but Sept. δυνάμεις, Vulg. exercitum.—Ereth thou.] Cp. the 'Tu quoque, Brute!' of Caesar.

12. Shouldst not, &c.] Rather, do not (so marg. Sept. and Vulg.) feast thine eyes; throughout rs. 12, 13, 14 the future tense is used; R.V. look not thou; and similarly in rs. 13, 14, all past forms are removed.—Day that, &c.] R.V. day of his disaster.

13. Laid.] There is (so McGrick) an intensive force in the form of this Hebrew word, = 'Do not, pray.'

14. Delivered up.] Marg. shut up; Sept. ἀπέδωκεν; Vulg. et non concludit; i.e. hedge up their road of escape.

15. Thy reward.] Rather, thy dealing; or, Variorum, that thou hast accomplished; cp. Ezek. 35, 15.

16. Drink.] In judgment for their drunken revelry in Jerusalem, the cup of God's fury, cf. Ps. 75, 8; Lam. 4, 21; Rev. 18, 3, 6; Ezek. 35, 5, 6.—Swallow down.] 'A full, large, maddening draught' (Pusey).—R.V. marg. talk foolishly.—Be as though, &c.] 'For whoso cleaveth not to Him who saith I am, is not' (Gloss, quoted by Pusey).

17. Deliverance.] R.V. those that escape; the expression is a similar one to 'captivity' (r. 20). Cp. Joel 2, 32; a remnant shall return, rebuild the habitation of God's holiness, regain their inheritance. The connection between these verses and Amos 9, 11-15 may be the occasion of Obadiah's position in the Canon. The remainder of the prophecy has a peculiar significance for Jews; for them Edom has one meaning only, viz., Nazarenes; it is over Christians, and specially over Rome, the destroyer of the Temple, the centre of Christianity, that God's original people shall triumph. Abubaker argues that Bozrah is unquestionably Rome, because its Hebrew consonants Beth, Tzade, resh, he, taken inversely, represent 5292, and it is A.M. 5292 that the desolation of Rome shall be complete! He comments on r. 8, 'There shall not be found counsel or wisdom among the Edomite Christians when they go up to that war'; Zarephath is France, Sepharad is Spain (Spanish Jews are still styled Sephardim, German Jews being called Ashkenazim, Germans of Japheth); the 'Saviours' are the Jewish Messiah and his chieftains, who are to 'judge.'

18. House of Jacob.] Plainly this title means here (though perhaps not in Ps. 77, 15) the kingdom of Judah (cf. Zech. 10, 6; Amos 5, 6); and plainly the returning remnant represents the whole nation; the ten tribes are no more 'lost' than the two.—Kindle in.] R.V. burn among.—Not any remaining.] The work of destruction and expulsion from the land of Judah, which they had occupied, commenced by Judas Maccabaeus (1 Macc. 4, 61 and 5, 3, 65), was carried on by John Hyrcanus, whose policy was to absorb them in the Jewish people; therefore they ceased to be a nation; the remnant of them perished in the Roman siege of Jerusalem, after which their very name disappears from history.

19. South.] i.e. the Negeb.—Plain.] i.e. the Shephelah. The literal meaning of r. 19, 20 appears to be that the Negeb and Shephelah are left vacant by their occupiers' migration into subdued Idumaea and Philistia, and into all the land of Israel and the trans-Jordanic district; the language, however, must not be too closely pressed, the meaning is rather general, there shall be national extension toward all the four quarters of the compass, Gen. 28, 14 shall begin to have its fulfilment; and, further, into this vacated land shall press those captive Israelites who had inhabited the extreme north, and those Jews who, having been dwellers in Jerusalem, had been carried captive to Sepharad.

20. Captivity.] Rather, captives; Heb. shbi, cf. Ps. 68, 18.—Shall possess, &c.] R.V. which are among . . . shall possess, &c. unto Zarephath (cf. 1 Kin. 17, 9, note).—Sepharad.] Of the many suppositions as to what place is intended, these are the most likely: (1) Sardis (so Winer and Pusey); (2) Ionia (so Groze, founding it on Joel 3, 6); (3) Jerome supposed it to be connected with an Assyrian word signifying 'boundary,' and to mean the dispersed beyond the bounds of Palestine (Jas. 1, 1); (4) it may be the name of a district in Babylonia unknown to us (so Schultz).

21. Saviours.] No new expression to his hearers; all ages of their history had known them (cf. Neh. 9, 27; Judg. 3, 9, 15; 2 Kin. 13, 5); such were Zerubbabel and the Maccabees, and in them the promise might receive a first fulfilment, not to be completed till the Saviour should come, not indeed altogether till His second coming, when the saints (the officers of the spiritual Zion) shall judge the world (Edom), all the realms of heathendom and unbelief, when Rev. 11, 15-17 shall be accomplished.

SECOND EDITION, WITH MEMOIR OF THE AUTHOR,

BY THE

REV. ROBERT SINKER, D.D.,

Librarian of Trinity College.

Size, small 4to., cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, price 12/-

THIS Handbook aims at treating the poetry and theology of the Psalms in such a manner as shall benefit not only the student of the Hebrew, but also the English reader who takes an intelligent interest in the controversies of the day, and finds in the Psalms the daily food of devotion.

The work will be of use to students for theological degrees, and to all who adopt the purpose of St. Paul: "I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also."—1 Cor. 14. 15.

SOME OPINIONS.

The Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge, the Rev. Dr. Robert Sinker, D.D., writes:—"I trust the new Edition (Student's Handbook to the Psalms) will have a very wide circulation. It deserves it."

The Times.—"Very useful to students and devout readers."

The Church Times.—"We thoroughly commend it to our readers."

Literary World.—"Dr. Sharpe has taken infinite pains to place his subject as clearly as possible before the English reader."

Record.—"Dr. Sharpe is to be warmly thanked for his book. It is good to find a scholar referring to the 'old paths' and confessing that 'continued study ever demonstrates more fully' their superiority."

The Christian World.—"It is full of useful information."

Sunday School Chronicle.—"The book is one which Sunday School Teachers will find exceptionally useful."

The Irish Times.—"This handbook to the Psalms will be invaluable to every earnest Christian student. Dr. Sharpe lays the Christian communities under an obligation everywhere."

The Scotsman.—"The book will be highly prized by those who 'stand in the old paths' and is one which those who are seeking to advance will find worthy of their consideration."

Western Morning News.—"A scholarly and valuable book, which should be found in all theological libraries."

SOME OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Times.—"Lex Mosaica" is a sustained and reasoned criticism of the Higher Criticism conducted by a variety of competent hands."

Church Times.—"The deliverance of fourteen able men speaking at their best."

Record.—"We fully believe that this book will be of great use in this time of unrest."

Churchman.—"This important work is a thorough exposition of the crude and arbitrary guesses of the theoretical school of criticism, and contains a powerful defence of the traditional view."

Tablet.—"An important contribution to the literature of the subject."

Expository Times.—"The most serious effort that has yet been made to stem the advancing tide of Old Testament criticism."

Church Family Newspaper.—"The volume is one of great interest, which must command the earnest attention both of Biblical Students and critics."

Sunday School Chronicle.—"We very gladly welcome this book. It presents a mass of clear and precise information of priceless value to the Bible students."

The Methodist Times.—"The writers of 'Lex Mosaica' deserve the grateful thanks of all who believe in the Old Testament as a revelation of God, given through men who were guided in all their work by the operation of the Divine Spirit."

Oxford Journal.—"No student of the Old Testament time should omit to read these Essays."

Cambridge Chronicle.—"Lex Mosaica" is one of the most elaborate expositions of the historical part of the Bible that has ever been produced."

Irish Times.—"The volume of the year."

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE.

THE East has ever been the land of surprises, and year after year the explorer and the decipherer are bringing to light treasures which for centuries have been buried beneath the dust of ages. The discoveries in Egypt, Assyria, and Babylonia have restored to us the inscribed records and monuments of great civilisations which preceded or existed concurrently with the Hebrew people and held contemporary intercourse with them. The History of the Hebrew people as recorded in the Old Testament has been found to be a part, and an important part, of the wider study of Oriental history.

The discovery of Babylonian versions of the Creation, the Fall, and the Deluge, and the story of the beginnings of civilisation, instituted a series of comparisons between monumental records, of admitted antiquity, and the Hebrew writings, a process the importance of which was beyond question.

In this work I have placed before my readers the Babylonian and Assyrian versions of those traditions which are found in the early chapters of Genesis, and such comparisons are instituted as seemed to me to be within the range of fair criticism, and I have endeavoured to conduct this inquiry in as unbiassed a manner as possible. My object has been to place before my readers those monuments and inscriptions which seem to bear upon the early traditions of the Hebrew people, in order that they may have before them documentary evidence which has hitherto only been accessible to specialists.

Some Opinions of the Press.

The Times.—"An able attempt to bring the Primitive Hebrew Records into relation with the Babylonian and Assyrian versions of the same traditions. It is well illustrated."

Daily Chronicle.—"A useful contribution to the literature of the subject."

Church Quarterly Review.—"A more interesting and lucid account of ancient inscriptions we have never read, and Mr. Boscawen has transmuted his learning into popular forms of speech with conspicuous success."

Churchman.—"Mr. Boscawen has rendered important service in the sphere of Biblical criticism in the publication of his important volume on the Primitive Hebrew Records in the Light of Modern Research."

Literary World.—"Mr. Boscawen belongs to the school that places truth before prejudice, and his contribution to an intelligent appreciation of the Old Testament will be welcome not least by those who still preserve their reverence for it intact."

Observer.—"Mr. W. St. Chad Boscawen, the well-known Assyriologist, has earned the thanks of all scholars by the production of this work, in which the latest results of Assyriology and Scriptural criticism are given. The learned author has spared no pains to make this usually difficult subject one of the greatest interest to his readers. The book is beautifully illustrated."

The Christian.—"A work of great usefulness."

Western Morning News.—"The book will really supply a need. Mr. Boscawen's industry and thorough acquaintance with the subject are very conspicuous."

THE object of the author of this volume is to lay before his readers the external history of the Bible, to show how and when the several books were written, and how they have been preserved to us. It is especially intended for those who study the Bible in English, but will also be found useful by students who are beginning to make acquaintance with the textual criticism of the Septuagint or New Testament in their original language.

The Plates, of which the work contains 26, illustrate the peculiarities of the manuscript in question, or some important detail of textual criticism. With a view to giving a better idea of the general appearance of the manuscripts, and more examples of the sources of error or of confusion in them, the whole, or a very large part, of the original page is shown. In each case the size of the original is given.

Some Opinions of the Press.

The Times.—"Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts' is an account at once lucid, scholarly, and popular in the best sense, of the transmission and translation of the text of the Holy Scriptures. The plan is an excellent one, and is very skilfully executed."

The Daily Chronicle.—"Dr. Kenyon is specially qualified to deal with the textual or external history of the Bible, and in this beautifully printed and neatly bound volume, he tells the story of the transmission of the sacred writings with scholarly conciseness and power. The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the twenty-six beautiful illustrations, consisting of reduced facsimiles of the most famous Bible MSS."

The Daily News.—"The author has related the history of the text of our Bible and its translations in a simple and concise, though not meagre, style and method."

Athenæum.—"It is with great pleasure that we notice the interesting and remarkable book 'Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts.' Dr. Kenyon has compiled the matter in one book in useful form for those who are not professional Biblical students. The twenty-five plates of various writings in inscriptions and MSS. are decidedly successful."

The Academy.—"We shall be surprised if the whole mass of Bible-readers be not grateful to Mr. Kenyon for his timely and valuable help. The plates by which he illustrates his subjects are very clear and beautiful bits of reproduction."

Church Times.—"Mr. Kenyon's book deserves nothing but praise, no Bible student can afford to be without it."

The Guardian.—"Theological Students have good reason for gratitude to Dr. Kenyon. He has produced a book of which they stood sorely in need. All is plainly told in a style which is full of interest and free from exaggerations; the book is dominated by common sense, and by a just appreciation of the requirements of those to whom it is addressed."

The Record.—"We congratulate the Queen's Printers on adding 'Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts' to their Variorum Bible, and we urge all who want a textual guide, which has authority, sympathy, and a limpid style to commend it, to purchase and master this one. It is not likely to be superseded these many years."

The Speaker.—"Dr. Kenyon describes with scholarly care, and with clearness as well as brevity of statement, the transmission of the sacred text. The book is an able epitome, and the fact that it is based to a large extent on the works of such authorities as Davidson, Driver, Scrivener, Hort, Skeat, and Westcott of course adds to its value as a record which is thoroughly abreast with contemporary scholarship."

The Literary World.—"We call attention to 'Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts' with much pleasure. It is a book to buy—the author has carefully performed his by no means easy task."

The Church Standard.—"To the student who is often vexed by references to manuscripts with which authors presume their readers to be acquainted Dr. Kenyon's work will be invaluable."

Expository Times.—"Written with scholarship and grace. Beautifully printed and illustrated."

Sunday School Chronicle.—"A very complete survey of the history of the Bible, from the earliest MSS. down to the Revised Version of 1881. We should like to see this very cheap work in the hands of all our Sunday School teachers. We can unreservedly recommend it."

Western Morning News.—"Dr. Kenyon's book is one of the most valuable aids to the unlearned towards understanding Biblical criticism that has ever been published."

Volumes I.-IV. Others in preparation.

THIS Series of Volumes, popular in style and moderate in size and price, is designed to meet the needs of the ordinary Bible Student, a large and increasing class of practical students of the Bible, as well as the requirements of more advanced scholars.

Much light has been thrown in the course of the present century on almost all branches of Biblical Inquiry, and it is very desirable that such results as are surely ascertained should be placed within the reach of all in a systematic manner. Difficulties will always remain, owing to the extreme antiquity of the Sacred Books, and to the peculiar nature of their contents. On these questions experts must be heard upon both sides, but the multitude which is so deeply interested in the results has neither the time nor the training for battling over technical details.

Accordingly, the preparation of these volumes is entrusted to men who have patiently considered the drift of modern inquiry so far as it concerns their own special branches of study, and who are not lightly moved from their carefully formed convictions.

Their aim is to set forth as clearly and accurately as possible the literary position of the Books of the Old and New Testaments and their contents in relation to Theological, Historical, and Scientific questions.

The series is mainly constructive and positive in tone, and will tend to check that bewilderment as to the very foundations of sacred truth which, if allowed to spread, will seriously affect the work of the Sunday School Teacher, the Bible Class Leader, the Home and Foreign Missionary, and the devotional student of Scripture.

SOME OPINIONS.

Guardian.—"Written in a reverent spirit."

Theological Monthly.—"Any one who takes up the book will be led, we think, to peruse and ponder till he arrives at a sound conclusion on what is, and must remain, one of the most important matters within human ken."

Church Review.—"An invaluable work."

Rock.—"Canon Girdlestone as an expert gives us the results of his own personal research. We are taken into the very workshop and shown the methods and processes."

Churchman.—"It is worthy to become a text-book in a theological assembly."

Christian.—"Will assist many to gain a firm foothold with regard to the verity of Holy Writ."

Literary Churchman.—"This is a book of exceeding breadth of learning, and quite exceptional value. We desire to give an unusually emphatic recommendation to this valuable treatise."

Literary Opinion.—"The style throughout is clear, elevated, and forcible."

Globe.—"A mine of strength to the holders of the ancient faith."

Quiver.—"We can heartily commend it."

Baptist.—"Canon Girdlestone's arguments will command general respect."

National Church.—"Precisely the kind of work wanted in these critical times."

Evening News.—"A perfect armoury of argument and scholarship."

Yorkshire Post.—"Shows results as interesting as they are valuable."

Church Bells.—"The various topics involved are put in a very interesting way."

British Weekly.—"It has a calm and dignified style—with a splendid courtesy to opponents, and altogether it is a pleasant book to read."

THE LAW IN THE PROPHETS.

REV. STANLEY LEATHES, D.D.,

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE.

The late Dr. LIDDON wrote: "How I wish you could see your way to writing a book on, say, 'The Law and the Prophets,' putting the Law back into the chronological and authoritative place from which the new criticism would depose it, and so incidentally reasserting in the main, and with the necessary reservations, the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch."

This book is partly the result of that suggestion.

SOME OPINIONS.

Church Quarterly Review.—"A careful work."

Guardian.—"Deserves wide circulation.... It was an excellent idea thus to collect these allusions."

Church Times.—"Most valuable."

Spectator.—"Proves the antiquity of the Mosaic Law, by the references that are made to it in the books of the Prophets, books that are conceded on all hands to have at least a considerable relative antiquity. The contention of the extremists, that the whole legal ritual is post-exilian, certainly lays itself open to hostile criticism. The appeal of the Prophets to the Hebrew people seems founded on the fact that there was a covenant which the people had broken."

Church Review.—"If Dr. Stanley Leathes had never done any other good thing than he has done in writing this most valuable book, he would be fairly entitled to rank as one of the most successful defenders of Holy Scriptures of our day."

Baptist Magazine.—"Dr. Leathes has set an example which all who are opposed to the method and result of modern Biblical criticism would do well to follow. He brings the question to a sound and religious test."

Chancellor of Llandaff Cathedral; formerly Hulsean Lecturer, and Preacher at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall.

 Cloth Boards, Red Edges. Demy 8vo. Price 3s. 6d.

---

MR. LIAS, who is well known as a writer on theology and literature, in this book offers a historical view of the two chief lines of criticism, which have been directed against the Old and New Testaments, and points out that the wave of adverse criticism, after failing when levelled against the Christian Scriptures, the New Testament, has now for its object the disintegration of the Hebrew Records of the Old Testament. He brings to the task an easy style of an unfettered mind; takes his own line in discussing such subjects as Inspiration, and tests the results of modern critical analysis in the light of good sense, whilst passing under review the historical and prophetic writings of the Old Testament.

On the whole, for a beginner in critical studies there are few books which are so likely to put the student on the right line.

 SOME OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Church Times.—"We have seldom seen in so small a compass so admirable, and withal temperate, exposition of the ingenious puzzles which German criticism has been weaving under the guise of truth. We gratefully recognize the value and importance of this volume; and a reverent investigation carried on, on the lines here suggested, cannot fail to be profitable to the Biblical student."

The Record.—"The book is one that we can very cordially recommend; it is both reverent and scholarly, the discussions are temperate and logical, and the style attractive. It is likely to do good service."

Church Quarterly Review.—"Mr. Lias is entitled to the gratitude of churchmen."

The Churchman.—"Will prove of real and lasting service. We hope it will be very widely circulated, as it deserves."

Expository Times.—"Exceedingly useful as a storehouse of facts."

Spectator.—"Perhaps the most important chapter is that of 'The Evidence of the Psalms.' Mr. Lias knows that the controversy turns largely on the date of these."

The Baptist Magazine.—"Mr. Lias has a masterly chapter on the genuineness of the Pentateuch, he is fair and courteous in his methods, and knows that argument must be met with argument."

The Christian World.—"Deserving of the highest praise we wish it a wide circulation."

A REPLY TO WELLHAUSEN.

BY THE

Cloth Boards, Red Edges. Demy 8vo. Price 6s.

THOUGH specially designed for Bible Students, this volume demands no attainments in Hebrew scholarship for its appreciation. Its main aim is to guide and strengthen an ordinary reader, with his English Bible in his hand.

In particular, the dismemberment of the Mosaic legislation into three antagonistic Codes is shown (taking Sanctuary and Sacrifice as conclusive tests) to be quite at variance with a fair and comprehensive survey of the legal, historical, and prophetic Records of the Old Testament.

While exposing the views of Wellhausen (the applauded pioneer of "Higher Critics"), the author seeks at every turn to give a positive presentation of Bible truth on the topics handled. Mere destruction is not his aim, but to instruct and re-assure. A special helpfulness characterises his constructive surveys of the prophecy of Ezekiel and of the so-called Priestly Code.

Some Opinions of the Press.

The Morning Post.—"Dr. Baxter has shown in his reply a wide knowledge of the subject discussed, and has rendered a powerful support to the opponents of that dogmatic criticism of which Wellhausen is a prominent example."

The Daily Chronicle.—"Dr. Baxter is always interesting, and he certainly tries to be fair. Wellhausen's answer will be awaited with much interest."

The Record.—"We suggest that any reader who is somewhat cowed at the long list of learned names hurled at him should work patiently through Dr. Baxter's book, argument by argument. He will find one sweeping piece of destructive theorising (we refuse to say criticism) after another toppling over. It is impossible to devote to this remarkable book the space which the importance of the subject and its striking handling calls for. It is the most vigorous attempt which we have yet seen to carry the war into the enemy's country."

The Speaker.—"An effective answer to the German Professor's attack, and well deserves the high praise given it by Mr. Gladstone and Professor Sayce."

Church Quarterly Review.—"The book must be read to understand its force; the new theory is destroyed. Dr. Baxter has not been answered, and that simply because he is unanswerable."

The Church Times.—"We are sincerely grateful to the publishers for this valuable addition to the Bible Student's Library. A book like this will form a rallying point for those who had begun to think that the possession of common sense was a thing to be ashamed of, and unwavering tradition on any point rather a source of weakness than of strength."

The Churchman.—"We strongly recommend those who have not done so to read, mark, and inwardly digest the 'Sanctuary and Sacrifice.'"

The Christian World.—"It is an honest and serious discussion of important questions. Those who differ from Dr. Baxter may learn from his criticisms."

The Christian News.—" 'Sanctuary and Sacrifice' should be possessed and studied by all those who are interested in such subjects, and especially by ministers, who have to be able to defend the Bible as the Word of God. It is an able, spirited, and masterly refutation of the contentions of the school of modern critics."

The Methodist Times.—"This is by far the most telling challenge to the higher criticism that has yet appeared in English."

The Critical Review.—" 'Sanctuary and Sacrifice' is able and interesting."

The Primitive Methodist.—"Those who have been unsettled in their faith in the Old Testament by the speculations of some modern writing would do well to make the acquaintance of this volume."

The Year 1893 will be remembered by Bible Readers for the Publication of NEW Editions of the various TEACHER'S BIBLES, but most particularly for the ### Completion of the New Edition of the Variorum Reference Bible.

The VARIORUM Edition of the Authorised Version has a great and independent value, whether for daily use or as a standard work of Reference. It meets the wants of every grade of student, from the intelligent reader to the learned reviser.

In its style and appearance the VARIORUM REFERENCE BIBLE has been studiously assimilated to the ordinary 8vo. Reference Bible to make its utility no less universal.

This Edition is distinguished from all other Reference Bibles by the addition, on the same page as the Text, in Foot-notes, of a complete digest of the chief of the various Renderings and Readings of the original text from the very best Authorities. The sources from which the Annotations are taken comprise, in the

The VARIORUM Notes, together with the "New Aids to Bible Students" (see pages 15-17), give to the ordinary reader of Scripture an amount of information hitherto confined to great scholars and owners of a very costly Library, and comprise the quintessence of Biblical Scholarship in the most convenient form.

The Commentary here is strictly textual (with Brief Explanatory Notes); and the names of the Editors—Professors CHEYNE, DRIVER, SANDAY, the late Rev. P. L. CLARKE, and the Rev. C. J. BALL—are sufficient guarantees for its accuracy and completeness.

The numerous Commendations of the completed Work include:—

The Rev. Dr. Wace, Principal of King's College, London:—

"It is a work of incalculable usefulness, for which the warmest gratitude is due alike to the editors and yourselves."

The Rev. Canon W. J. Knox Little:—

"It is a beautiful and valuable work. I think it the most satisfactory copy I have ever had. I like it more, the more I make use of it."

SOME OPINIONS.

Academy:—

"Excellently adapted to its purpose: there does not exist a commentary upon the Apocrypha which is at once so concise and so helpful."

Athenæum:—

"A difficult task satisfactorily accomplished, it will be a great help to those who write on Apocrypha literature."

Guardian:—

"Mr. Ball has worked through a large number of authorities—forty-nine; he has not however confined himself to quoting their opinions, but has added throughout many suggestions of his own, both critical and explanatory."

"The information which he has given is judiciously selected, and the advance marked by his work, on previous works upon the Apocrypha, is exceedingly great."

Record:—

"The study of the Apocrypha is gaining ground, and it is a great convenience to have the interpretations of the commentators in so handy a form. Lovers of ancient Jewish literature must heartily thank the editor for placing in their hands so convenient and trustworthy a summary of recent criticism."

Globe:—

"The editor has done his work carefully and with knowledge. He contributes an informing preface, and his annotations are to the point."

Church Review:—

"This volume, which completes the 'Variorum Bible' is a fitting crown to a task which has done more to explain the littera scripta of the Holy Scriptures than any other publication of its kind."

"Mr. Ball's scholarship and researches have brought much light to bear on many obscure passages."

"The number of commentators, versions, and MSS. consulted by the editor is a guarantee of the thoroughness with which he has discharged his task; his name guarantees the ability with which he has done it."

Expository Times:—

"Possessors of the 'Variorum Bible' will understand what the Variorum Apocrypha means. There was great need for such an edition of the Apocrypha. The work has been done with patience and good judgment."

Public Opinion:—

"Furnishes the general reader with the quintessence of modern and ancient learning bearing on the text."

Literary World:—

"Mr. Ball gives us a 'Variorum' edition, embodying not only different readings, but in some cases his own happy emendation of corrupt passages. He gives the poetical parts in metrical form. His edition will be prized by the student, and will stimulate the appetite of the English reader."

Ecclesiastical Chronicle:—

"To have all the best renderings focussed, as it were, for ready use, is a privilege every student of the book should appreciate."

Rock:—

"It is most convenient for the requirements of the student. It should find a place in every clergyman's library."

Church Quarterly Review:—

"One of the greatest difficulties in dealing with the Apocrypha consists in the endeavours to restore the lost original text of books which, for the most part, once existed in the Hebrew tongue. In his preface Mr. Ball points out numerous instances where confusions of similar Hebrew letters have made sheer nonsense of the Greek text.

"The book is a welcome addition to the well-known Variorum Reference Bible."

Saturday Review:—

"The books of the Apocrypha, containing as they do much splendid literature, should have the long standing neglect they have suffered removed, by such an edition."

Queen:—

"A valuable work."

Church Times:—

"Most complete, containing everything having an important bearing on the text."

Professor E. NESTLE, the distinguished Septuagint Scholar, writes:—

"Eine Ergänzung zur Variorum Bible, die nicht genug empfohlen werden kann."
—Theologische Literaturzeitung, Leipzig, 20 Januar, 1894.

"How splendidly has Ball restored the corrupt text of Judith xvi. 2 (3) by inserting a single letter, ὁ τοῦ. Many more examples might be quoted from Ball's Variorum Apocrypha."—From Professor E. Nestle's Paper on The Cambridge Septuagint (Transactions of The Ninth International Congress of Orientalists).

NEW LARGE TYPE EDITION.

Bourgeois 8vo. (Size,  $9\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$  inches). 1950 pages.

THIS novel and comprehensive Edition of the Authorised Version—the climax towards which the Queen's Printers have consistently developed their Series of Teacher's Bibles during nearly 20 years (1875–1894)—combines—

I.—The VARIORUM Reference Bible. (See p. 14.)

II.—The “AIDS to the Student of the Holy Bible.” (See pp. 19, 20.)

To the completed Variorum Edition of the Reference Bible, the appended “Aids to the Bible Student” adds a compendium of Biblical information admitted to be not only the largest and fullest work of the kind, but also the best. The most competent judges have drawn attention to the compass and thoroughness of the “Aids”—none of which are anonymous,—and to the eminence and authority of the contributors.

THE ADVANTAGES OF THE VARIORUM

For the Variorum TEACHER'S Bible, see page 17.

1. It contains a collection of foot-notes, vastly superior to any that can be found in any one-volume portable Bible.
2. THE GENERAL READER unacquainted with the original languages, Hebrew and Greek, is enabled to arrive at a truer, fuller, and deeper meaning of Scripture than he could obtain from any other published work. The VARIORUM foot-notes correct, explain, unfold, and paraphrase the text; indeed, the alternative versions of obscure or difficult words and phrases often render further note or comment needless.
3. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER will find the use of the VARIORUM foot-notes of the utmost value to him in the preparation of his lessons. And, whilst teaching, a glance at the foot of the page will enable him to give the best alternative reading or translation of the original text, or to explain phrases or special words in the A.V.

REV. DR. PARKER says that it is quite as valuable for preachers and hearers as for teachers and scholars. It is a library in itself, containing everything that is immediately needed for the elucidation of the sacred text.

4. THE MODERN PREACHER finds every passage ear-marked of which the text or the translation is considered by scholars defective, and in the corresponding foot-notes he finds the evidence, for and against alterations, judicially digested from the most authoritative Versions and Editions, including the readings and renderings adopted in the Revised Version and its margin. This discrimination of sources and of authorities saves him infinite time and labour. Where all scholars agree upon a rendering the names of authorities are omitted.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY says: "It is so useful that no apology is, I am sure, needed for commending it."

5. THE PROFESSIONAL STUDENT of the original texts will find in this conspectus a more careful selection of critical data, especially as regards the Old Testament and authorities, than is elsewhere accessible. He will have at hand the very essence of textual criticism, extracted from the most reliable sources, ancient and modern.

DR. WESTCOTT (LORD BISHOP OF DURHAM) says: "I constantly use the Old Testament, and find it a great help to have at hand a brief and trustworthy summary of facts and results. Nothing could be better done than the Psalms." He also informed the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Conference at Lambeth that he considered that this VARIORUM Edition of the Authorised Version "was much the best edition of the kind."

THE Queen's Printers were the FIRST TO ISSUE what was known as the Sunday School Teacher's Bible in May, 1875. It was not until 16 MONTHS AFTERWARDS that a Bible issued from the Oxford University Press, bearing on its title page "The S. S. Teacher's Edition," and closely following the model of the Queen's Printers' Teacher's Bible; this brief statement is necessary to remove misunderstandings.

The success which attended the publication of the Queen's Printers' Teacher's Bible has been unprecedented. Over One Million Copies have been sold.

This is no doubt due to the fact that "The AIDS to Bible Students" were from the outset prepared with the utmost care, in order that the Student might have at his disposal the BEST and SUREST information from the pen of the most Eminent Authority on each of the various subjects treated.

The cordial approval of the principle and contents of former editions by eminent Biblical Scholars, and by the representatives of all classes of Teachers throughout the World, has led to the enlargement of each successive issue, in order to give to the Student THE BEST, MOST RELIABLE, and MOST RECENT information that could be obtained.

In the present issue, very considerable improvements and additions have been made. The Articles have undergone a careful and thorough revision, and, pursuant to recent discoveries, new matter has been added and the whole volume brought up to date. The AIDS will therefore be found more than ever PRACTICALLY USEFUL, EXHAUSTIVE IN TREATMENT, and COMPLETE in their character. Several new Articles have been added.

The Publication of the VARIORUM Bible, and of the Revised Version which followed it, called popular attention to the sources from which we have received the Sacred Text, and the quotations in the VARIORUM Notes of Manuscripts, Versions, Ancient Fathers, etc., have aroused a spirit of enquiry as to their relative importance. To meet this, the Rev. Professor Swete has written for these AIDS a new Article entitled,

The Bible: its History.—In this Article, the Rev. Professor Swete places before the Student a summary of the most important results which have been reached by competent enquirers on such questions as the formation and transmission of the original Text, its Versions, Ancient and Modern, etc., etc.

The Bible and its Contents:—OLD TESTAMENT, a valuable summary and analysis of each Book by the Rev. Professor Stanley Leathes, has been further expanded by Canon Girdlestone.

„ THE APOCRYPHA has been summarised and analysed by the Rev. Dr. Wright.

„ THE NEW TESTAMENT Article by Prof. W. Sanday will be found to contain the best results of modern New Testament Scholarship, and his Analyses of the Gospels and Epistles are simply invaluable.

OPINIONS OF THE CLERGY.

THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY (DR. BENSON):—

The Archbishop said, at a Diocesan Conference:—"I should like to call the attention of the Convocation to the New Edition of the 'Variorum Reference Bible,' published by Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode. I will just read an account of what it contains. The whole book has been revised. It was laid, I may say, before the Lambeth Conference—the promise of it—and now it is finished. The old edition forms the basis of the new edition: it is printed in larger type; and every passage which has been disputed by great scholars as to its correct translation or rendering, is marked by a figure before and after the sentence or word, these figures referring to the foot-notes, which give the alternative renderings or readings, together with the authorities for the same, abbreviated to save space. The collection of these notes from 69 commentators for the Old Testament, and 73 for the New, has occupied many years close study and preparation. The New Edition is much amplified as compared with the old one, and you may like to know that the opinion of Dr. Westcott is that it is much the best edition of the kind that has appeared."

THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK (DR. THOMSON):—

"The names of the authors guarantee its excellence. A miniature library of illustrative matter. If such a book is carefully and generally used, there must be a great improvement in Bible knowledge in this generation. The critical matter at the foot of the columns is remarkably complete. The last feature gives it special value."

THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF ARMAGH:—

"I have carefully examined the 'Variorum Teacher's Bible' published by Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode. The varied and valuable amount of information it contains is most remarkable. There are few subjects connected with the Bible left unelucidated. The Student of the Bible will find the Variorum Edition a treasury replete with instruction."

THE BISHOP OF DURHAM (DR. WESTCOTT):—

"Admirably done. I constantly use it."

THE BISHOP OF LIMERICK:—

"The Variorum (Teacher's) Bible, with its References, Concordance, Various Readings and Renderings, and supplemented by its Aids to Students, serves as a Biblical Encyclopædia, useful by its compactness and the value of its contents, to Biblical Students of all grades."

THE BISHOP OF EXETER (DR. BICKERSTETH):—

"I am much gratified with it . . . eminently fitted for teachers, and all who desire in a clear and compendious form very full information respecting the sacred Scriptures."

"A most valuable work, and will greatly enrich the library of Biblical Students."

THE BISHOP OF LLANDAFF:—

"An immense amount of information, a great help to Teachers, and to Bible readers generally."

"The names guarantee the value of the information. I trust it will be largely circulated."

THE BISHOP OF ST. DAVID'S (DR. W. BASIL JONES):—

"I have delayed . . . until I could find more time to look into the volume; it contains so large an amount and variety of matter in a very small space. But its contents appear to me of the highest value and admirable in arrangement. I would refer especially to the various Readings and Renderings in the foot-notes."

GREAT NEW STREET, LONDON, E.C.

THE BISHOP OF GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL:—

"A very valuable work, well suited for those for whom it is designed, and for all earnest students."

THE BISHOP OF LIVERPOOL:—

"I admire it very much, and think it a most valuable edition of the Holy Scriptures. I shall be glad to recommend your work."

THE BISHOP OF WAKEFIELD (DR. WALSHAM HOW):—

"I have carefully examined the (Variorum) Teacher's Bible published by Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode, and I consider it a most valuable work. Believing that the Bible is its own best interpreter, I am sure that the aids to an intelligent understanding of the text itself, together with the assistance given to students who desire to have an accurate conception of the purest form of that text, will prove of inestimable service to all Bible readers."

THE BISHOP OF DOWN AND CONNOR:—

"I consider the Variorum Teacher's Bible highly useful both to Teachers and Students. The various readings in the foot-notes largely increase its usefulness, placing before the professional Student an amount of information and research which to many would otherwise be inaccessible."

THE BISHOP OF CORK:—

"The eminent names of those who have contributed Articles to the Teacher's Aids are a guarantee for the accuracy of the information, which will be found most valuable to those who wish to understand or teach, or first to understand and then to teach, and help to provide that skilled and accurate teaching, which is not only the true antidote to prevalent unbelief, but the great preventive of it."

THE BISHOP OF KILLALOE (DR. FITZGERALD):—

"I find it to be a most perfect compendium of information on almost every Biblical matter that could be comprised within such a compass, and it seems marvellous how much has been introduced and how varied the topics. It will, I am sure, prove a most important aid to Clergymen, Sunday School Teachers, and many others, and I hope to avail myself of it yet in that direction."

THE BISHOP OF TUAM:—

"I admire greatly the most valuable contents."

THE BISHOP OF KILMORE (DR. DARLEY):—

"I have looked through it carefully . . . a most valuable edition of the sacred Scriptures. The Variorum foot-notes represent much critical research, very carefully arranged; the Aids to Bible Students contain a mass of interesting information in a convenient form; useful alike to Teachers and Students."

THE BISHOP OF OSSORY:—

"I feel pleasure in bearing my testimony."

"An invaluable aid both to Clergymen and Teachers, and a marvel of cheapness. The more I have examined it, the more thoroughly have I been satisfied and pleased."

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP BARRY:—

"For the study of the Text is invaluable."

THE DEAN OF SALISBURY:—

"I am fully sensible of the great boon you have put within the reach of Bible students and it will be my endeavour to promote the knowledge of this valuable edition."

THE DEAN OF ELY:—

"I hope to make use of it, with its various adjuncts of Notes, Readings," &c., &c.

THE DEAN OF LINCOLN:—

"The work will be extremely useful."

THE DEAN OF ROCHESTER (late Master of Balliol College, Oxford):—

"A great achievement of toil and thought."

THE (LATE) DEAN OF ST. PAUL'S (DR. CHURCH):—

"A wonderful digest of learning. The names of the various scholars are, of course, warrant of care and accuracy, and certainly nothing so complete and comprehensive, in such a compass, has ever before been attempted."

THE DEAN OF PETERBOROUGH:—

"Your Bible strikes me as admirable in every respect. The Various Renderings considerably enhance the value of the work. It will give me very great pleasure to do all in my power to promote the circulation. I know of no one volume to be compared to it for the amount of information it conveys."

THE DEAN OF NORWICH (DR. W. LEFROY, D.D.):—

"There is no work of the kind comparable to this work. It is invaluable."

THE VERY REV. DR. VAUGHAN, Dean of Llandaff, and (late) Master of the Temple:—

"I use the Variorum Teacher's Bible with pleasure and profit."

THE DEAN OF LICHFIELD:—

"I am both surprised and delighted at the fulness and accuracy of information to be found in it."

"I will gladly mention it with the approbation which it so well deserves."

THE VERY REV. DR. BUTLER, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge:—

"A great achievement."

THE VERY REV. DEAN FARRAR:—

"It lies always on my desk. I place a high value upon it."

THE LATE VEN. ARCHDEACON HESSEY:—

"Students of the sacred volume will owe a deep debt to the projectors and producers."

THE REV. CANON BODY:—

"Very well done."

THE REV. CANON KNOX LITTLE:—

"Most useful and helpful."

THE REV. DR. WACE, of King's College:—

"A work of incalculable usefulness."

THE LATE REV. DR. EDERSHEIM:—

"It is certainly the best, most complete and useful which has hitherto appeared."

THE REV. DR. SAMUEL G. GREEN:—

"As a companion to the Revised Version it is invaluable."

DR. SALMOND, of Free College, Aberdeen:—

"I trust it may secure a very wide circulation. The former edition has come to be a familiar book among our students."

THE REV. HUGH PRICE HUGHES:—

"Incomparable and invaluable."

DR. GREENWOOD, Victoria University (Owen's College), Manchester:—

"Its merits and remarkable features are already known to me."

THE REV. JOSEPH PARKER, D.D.:—

"I have examined your Bible with great care. It is quite as valuable for preachers and hearers as for Teachers and scholars."

"It is almost a library in itself, containing everything that is immediately needed for the elucidation of the sacred text."

THE BISHOP OF ONTARIO:—

"My opinion of it is nothing so good has hitherto appeared. It is admirably adapted for its purpose of assisting Teachers, and cannot fail to be appreciated by all who are really anxious to find the best instruction in the sacred volume."

THE REV. J. H. VINCENT, of Chautauqua:—

"The book is indeed a marvel, a library of learning, a book of books, concerning the 'Book of Books,' and deserves a wide circulation in Europe and America."

POPULAR EDITION OF

THE STANDARD BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, 1662.

THE ANNEXED BOOK IN TYPE,

WITH APPENDICES.

An exact copy, in type, of the Manuscript Book of Common Prayer which was annexed, as the authoritative record, to the Act of Uniformity of 1662.

In 1891, by special permission of the House of Lords (now the custodians of the MS. Book), H.M. Printers produced by photolithography a facsimile of this "Annexed Book," but the work was necessarily too costly for the majority of Churchmen.

To the Type-Edition are appended (I.) A List of Erasures and Corrections in the MS. Book. (II.) A Collation of the MS. Book with "the Convocation Copy" from which it purports to be fairly written. (III.) A Collation with the Authorised Version of Quotations therefrom inserted in the Annexed Book.

Royal 8vo., Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Red Burnished Edges, price 10s. 6d.

THE HISTORICAL PRAYER BOOK:

BEING THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER WITH THE SOURCE OF EACH COMPONENT PART AND THE DATE AT WHICH IT WAS INCORPORATED IN THE BOOK STATED IN THE MARGIN.

Edited by the Rev. JAMES CORNFORD, M.A.,
